289,525 Gallons of Beer, Ale, Spirits and Wines Brought Into Quincy by Expressmen in 1911

Report of Liquor Officer A. W. Goodhue for Year 1911

ALFRED W. GOODHUE, Liquor Inspector

Just think of it, Quincy, the banner no-license city of the state consumed 289,525 gallons of intoxicating liquor during the year 1911. Assuming the population of the city to be 33,000 it means 9 1-2 gallons for each man, woman and child. These figures are astounding yet they are true according to the report of the police. This amount however only represents the amount transported by expressmen who held permits to transport liquor granted by the City Council. As there was doubtless many gallons of liquor brought into the city by individuals, of which no return was made the amount per capita was probably nearer ten or eleven gallons.

Under the conditions in which liquor permits are granted the expressmen are obliged to send to the police every day transcript of their shipping bills showing the amount of

NEW PIANO IS DEDICATED

In order that their handsome piano might have its first tunes played under most favorable auspices, members of the Ave Maria Council, Knights of Columbus, held forth in their commodious quarters, Saturday evening in an affair which took the form of a dedication. The new instrument had been selected and installed through the efforts of a committee composed of Councilman John J. Mahoney and J. Edward Reinhalter and the manner in which the tones responded to the touch of the keys, proved conclusively that the endeavors of the committee had been fully realized.

John Mahan, organist at the Church of St. John the Baptist, officiated at the piano and was accorded prolonged applause for his work. Fred McDonald, the popular comedian and monologue artist of the west section of the city entertained those present and needless to say he acquitted himself in his usual style.

Guests were present from Quincy Council and other councils of the Knights of Columbus. James E. Grant, the popular minstrel singer of Quincy Council rendered a few of his favorite selections in a manner that forced him to respond to repeated encores.

Others who contributed to the program, and who came in for their full share of well merited applause included Leo Kenney, pianist, William Teasdale, Jr., Russell Sullivan, B. O'Neil, Timothy Shea, the well-known song writer, Michael Crowley and Alfred LaCroix, Edward D. Barrett, Grand Knight of Quincy Council and School Committeeman Joseph McPherson.

The affair concluded with a splendid repast served by Burleigh & Martin. The committee in charge was Edward Monahan, John Monahan, A. Bizzozzero, Steven Connors, J. Edward Reinhalter and William Teasdale.

TO CHRISTEN THE HENLEY

Miss Constance Henley Kane Will Name New Destroyer

LAUNCHING WEDNESDAY

The torpedo boat destroyer Henley will be launched at the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., yards Wednesday at 12 o'clock noon. The launch will be in the nature of a private one and will be witnessed by a few naval officers from the Charlestown navy yard and a few friends of the sponsor. The Fore River Co., will serve a lunch to the guests after the launch.

The sponsor will be Miss Constance Henley Kane of Park avenue, New York, a direct descendant of Capt. Robert Kane for whom the vessel is named and also a niece of Col. Kane the commanding officer of the marine barracks at Charlestown. Her name was suggested to the Navy department by Admiral Luce of Newport, R. I.

Capt. Robert Henley, for whom the vessel is named, was born in Williamsburg, Va., Jan. 5, 1783. He received his education at William and Mary college, and entered the Navy as midshipman, April 8, 1799. He was midshipman on board the Constellation under Capt. Truxton, during her combat with LaVengance, Feb. 1, 1800, and won the approbation of his commander for bravery displayed in the encounter.

Returning to Williamsburg he attended a course of lectures on navigation and naval science and, upon reentering active service, was made Lieutenant, Jan. 29, 1807, and was placed in command of a gunboat at Norfolk, Va. He was promoted Commander, Aug. 12, 1814, and was second in command to Commodore Macdonough in the battle of Lake Champlain, Sept. 11, 1814, in which engagement he commanded the Eagle. For his gallant conduct on that occasion he received the thanks of Congress and a gold medal, and was promoted to Master Commandant.

In 1821 he was sent to the West Indies to cruise for pirates and, as Master of the sloop-of-war Hornet, he captured the schooner Moscow on Oct. 29 of that year. He was appointed Captain, March 3, 1825, and, after his return to the United States, he served in the home squadron. He was stationed for some years in North Carolina and was then placed in command of the naval station on Sullivan's Island South Carolina, where he died Oct. 7, 1828. His brother, John Dandredge Henley, (1781-1835) was also a distinguished naval officer in the United States service.

—Mrs. Minerva A. Saunders, who died March 20 in Pawtucket, R. I., had the distinction of having read more than 6000 novels during her thirty-four years as librarian of the Pawtucket Public Liibrary. She was seventy-four years old. She read every novel which came into the library before allowing it to be placed on the shelves.

HELD UP IN DORCHESTER

While waiting for a Quincy bound car on Neponset avenue near Mill street, Dorchester, late Saturday evening, Charles Nohlstrom of this city was held up and beaten by three young men, who deprived him of his money and a number of bundles, which included his Sunday dinner and some clothing. The police apprehended two young men early this morning, after a most sensational chase. They gave their names as Harry Whelan, 17 years, of 17 Taylor street and Willis Beechin, 19 years of 8 Water street. They are charged with larceny.

According to the story of Nohlstrom, he was attacked suddenly by a number of young men. When he tried to defend himself he was beaten about the face, knocked down and his bundles taken from him.

—That's a pretty impressive showing, $10,500,000 added wages for the operatives in cotton and woolen mills in New England. But of course it does not mean that this increase is going to be just so much clear gain to them. Those who think so, in their ignorance of political economy, will have the fact brought home in due course of time.—Salem News.

MOOSE CLASS INITIATION

The first and second degrees were worked on 18 candidates at the class initiation held Sunday afternoon in Faxon hall by the local lodge of the Order of Moose. Of this number, two were members of the Brockton lodge.

The degree work was performed by the Brockton lodge degree team and great applause greeted the various manoevres from time to time. There was a large attendance of members, also a large delegation came from Brockton. It was announced at the meeting that the charter would be closed Wednesday.

The principal address of the afternoon was delivered by Mayor Eugene R. Stone, who talked most forcibly on the benefits to be derived from such a large organization as the Moose, and the influence as well, that its fraternal unity should have upon the city at large, thus assuring a citizenship of the highest type.

An entertainment, provided by members of the local and Brockton lodges, was received by all in an appreciative manner and the serving of refreshments brought a most successful affair to a close.

The lodges represented were Taunton, Malden, Boston, Brockton and Salem.

Percy N. Hovendon, vice-dictator of Brockton lodge 562, also delivered a stirring address. The members of the degree team which performed the work, were Louis Peloquin, captain; W. E. Norris, past dictator, Leslie T. Adams, dictator, Percy M. Hovendon, vice dictator, John Carlson prelate, George Rice sergeant-at-arms. Eric Carlson, inner guard. The degree team was assisted by a corps of 12 members of the Brockton lodge.

KATHARYN CRANE CLUB SALE.

Friends of the Katharyn Crane Memorial club will be interested to know that its sale held Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Emery L. Crane, Whitney road, was most successful, as the day was ideal, the contributions exceedingly attractive and plentiful, and the patronage most liberal. As a result they have been able to add $100 to their resources, with which they may carry on their work of loving helpfulness in the community.

Norma Johnson, chairman of the fancy and household table was assisted by Harriot Barbour and Alice Miller. The chairman of the doll and May-basket table, Dorothy Hall, was assisted by Florence Mead and Natalie Saville. Doris Sampson, chairman of the candy table, was assisted by Lillian and Roxana Schenkelberger.

A pretty feature was the gift of a bunch of violets to each club member and Mrs. Crane from Delcevare King, a kind friend of the club.

It was most gratifying to reap such splendid results, as the little girls had worked hard and interestedly to make it a success.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Many "rump" conventions are being held, but the people will make sausage meat of them next November.

Even a soap-box would have seemed a good substanial platform in the mix-up of the New York primaries.

Apparently the delegate from Alaska will have to decide who shall belong to the Chicago convention, as all the other seats are contested.

Three million workers idle in Great Britain on account of the coal strike. Nothing like it ever happened in this country except in the base ball season.

The new battleship Florida is the fastest in the world, and also the swiftest in getting away with the tax payers' money.

We noticed two peanut men discussing prices yesterday, but it does not seem much use to prosecute them as long as the packers went free.

Although no one is reported to be a candidate for the vice presidency, it is too soon to assume that no one will take the job unless the pay is raised.

The hats are going to be so big and fluffy this summer that the Suffragettes will find them mighty inconvenient and expensive to throw into the ring.

John Wanamaker says President Taft has never followed will 'o the wisps and rainbows, but he has searched extensively for golf balls, which is equally discouraging.

This was no time of year to try to jail the packers anyway. Next fall they might have been reconciled to being put away with free lodging through the cold winter.

Although we had expected to take no end of trouble to visit the packers in jail and offer them sympathy and spiritual consolation, it is doubtful now if the second girl would let us get beyond the vestibule of their houses.

ANTI-TRUST CAMPAIGN.

Having fruitlessly pursued Brer Packer about the tree trunk for ten year, it is fair to assume that when Uncle Sam resumes the chase, he will at least run around the other way to avoid being dizzy, or possibly will cut down the tree.

It is likely that the final solution of the trust problem will not be based on the size of the corporation, or on agreements about prices, so much as on the question whether the prices are reasonable or not.

Public condemnation has always been visited on people who take advantage of exclusive opportunity to ask an unfair price for the service. The hotel keeper who in time of some great crowd doubles his prices because he can get them is always blamed.

As the law now stands, the trusts may be able to fix prices to suit the ambitions of the managers. But it will be suicidal in the long run to pursue a course so clearly hostile to the prosperity of the country.' In so far as the disposition to fix unreasonable prices exists, the people sooner or later will find some way to meet it. The less opposition is confronted, the less of a social convulsion it will take to get it.

GRADE CROSSING BILL.

It is to be hoped that the bill assessing the entire expense of grade crossing elimination on the railroads involved will be defeated. There is no justice in it. Merely because the company is a corporation gives no just cause for soaking them. The company is not to blame for its original location and the community and other interests are the chief beneficiaries of abolishment, so it would seem as if the railroad company did its full share in paying 65 per cent.—Waltham Free Press.

PERSON PROPERTY TAX.

Whenever the question of personal property taxation arises it is very likely to lead to discussions that go far afield. At present the main point is whether or not Massachusetts will approve a constitutional amendment providing for the laying of a flat rate of taxation on personal property throughout the state. The committee on taxation of the Legislature has agreed to recommend such an amendment. It is set forth that the result aimed at is that of putting an end to "tax dodging," so-called, or the alleged practice on the part of many wealthy residents of Massachusetts of seeking assessment of their personal holdings in some small town where the tax rate is low instead of in one of the communities where the tax rate is high by comparison.

There will not be lacking arguments and some very forceful ones, in defense of the system which permits the residents of a community conducted on economcal lines to escape the burdens of taxation assessed against those who reside in communities where, for any reason, the tax rate is high; but in this, as in other instances where fears are entertained of sharing in public responsibilities, experience would be almost certain to show that an equitable system of taxation applied to all would work hardship to none. The personal tax is abhorred, generally speaking, because it is not laid equitably. Many insist that there are powerful reasons why it can never be so laid, and they point, in support of this contention, to selfishness, cupidity, dishonesty, even to the law of self- protection. It is generally conceded that the poor pay taxes out of all proportion to the rich on personal property. This is not the case in Massachusetts only; it is, in the United States at least, an almost universal condition. Everywhere the abuses to which the levying and collection of the personal tax give rise have been the subject of corrective legislation, and it would not be true to say that no progress has been made in the right direction. Even personal taxes are levied more intelligently and more equitably than they were ten years ago. In many places an earnest and a successful effort has been made to uncover hidden property and to compel it to bear its proper share of the public burden. Boards of review, also, have been created for the purpose of preventing wrongful impositions upon wealthy persons and corporations. Where the efforts have been made along right lines, the abuses of the personal tax system have been minimized, even if they have not remedied the faults that are inherent in the system itself.

Few things have been more clearly demonstrated in the experience of these latter days than the fact that the square deal works no harm to anybody. If any person or any community is escaping a fair share of responsibility or obligation to the state, either through the operation or violation of the law, through favoritism or evasion, that person or that community is in the long run a loser by the system that permits it. It may be that some Massachusetts town might escape higher taxation than it would have to meet were a flat rate enforced, but if this flat rate were enforced properly, impartially, thoroughly, equitably, there is more reason to believe that taxation in general would be lowered.

The proposed amendment to the constitution, if adopted, will not remedy the fundamental defects in the taxation system, but it is a move in the right direction. The operation of such a provision should be to convince the people that they have it in their power to go farther and to adopt a taxation system based on real and immovable property, not upon the fruits of intellect, effort, enterprise and industry!—Christian Science Monitor.

THE VOICE OF SPRING.

The voice of spring comes stealing
on the ear,
Telling of life from winter, cold and drear;
Nature rejoices in buds and blossoms
fair,
Shedding their fragrance in the balmy air.
The Robin-red breasts, their cheerful voices raise,
Caroling gleefully their Maker's
praise;
Frogs from the brooks, at sunset raise their song,
The tree toads help to pass the word along;
The bleating lambs, the lowing of the kine
All remind us the sun has crossed the line,
Giving new life to the verdure that lay
Wrapt in the mantle of winter's decay:
Making the landscape with beauty abound,
And scattering blessings to all around.
Fit emblem of the resurrection morn
When sleeping saints shall wake in that fair dawn,
Rising in all their beauty, glorified
Bright in the radiance of the Crucified.

ANTONIO WAS NOT A PEEPER

Was Looking for Home of His Lady Love in Atlantic

HIS LOVE SPURNED

Muttering some words in Italian, which in English might have been, "Never again for me" Antonio Augusilio was released by the police by whom he had been apprehended on suspicion that he was a Jack the peeper, and told that he might hike it to his home in Weymouth. It had been a night of experience for Antonio, for not only had he fallen into the hands of the police but a lovely daughter of Italy had given him the cold shoulder and said, bestow your affections elsewhere.

It was all a mistake however. Last fall Antonio made the acquaintance of a young lady in Atlantic and it was his custom to wander from his fire side Sunday evenings and spend the evening with the young lady. Then the wintry storms came and the icy blasts sent the shivers creeping up Antonios spinal column and his ardor becoming somewhat chilled he remained at home.

Sunday was a day very spring like and the warm sun evidently warmed his heart for he decided to again call upon the friend of last fall. Unfortunately however he did not know just how to find the young lady and when he arrived in Atlantic, Sunday evening he was somewhat mystified. He found no one on the street of whom to make inquiry so he did the next best thing, went looking for the house which he knew by sight. To do this it was necessary for him to get close to the houses.

He was seen to approach several houses and the neighbors becoming suspicious that he was either a Jack the Peeper or a burglar, telephoned the facts to the police. Chief Burrell sent the auto to Atlantic with a squad of officers and in due course of time Antonio was gathered in. He told the police that he was innocent of any wrong doing and finally was able to locate the house he had been trying to find.

The young lady admitted that Antonio had called upon her a number of times last fall but that, any love she might have had for him at that time had cooled and she wanted no more to do with him. It was a bitter pill for Antonio but as he had convinced the police that he was innocent of wrong doing and they gave him a ride to City Square in the auto, he did not take his rejected love much to heart, and declared that there were just as pretty Italian girls in Weymouth as in Atlantic.

From these reports it appears that for the year ending Dec. 31, 1911 the number of transactions was 3,713, the number of packages 55,422, gallons of beer and ale, 258,481; gallons of spirits, 2,325; gallons of wine 28,719. For the corresponding period in 1910 the total number of packages was 47,761, gallons of beer and ale, 236,263, gallons of spirits, 1,940 gallons of wine 27,626.

Early in January 1911 the police found that some liquor was being shipped by liquor houses in Boston without being labeled as required by law. Some prosecutions were made in these cases with the result that a reduction was at once noticed in the amount being shipped. The following table gives the number of gallons of ale and beer, spirits and wines shipped each month of the year 1911. It might be added however that the larger part of the wine came in 25 and 50 gallon barrels.

ON NEW CHARGE OF CONSPIRACY

Wise to Expedite Prosecution of Officers of Sugar Trust

JURY OUT FOURTEEN HOURS

Fails to Agree After Being Reminded That It Could Not Convict on Anything That Had Taken Place Prior to July 1, 1906—Report That Ten Were For Acquittal and Two For Conviction of Accused Men

New York, April 1.—Henry A. Wise, United States attorney, announced that he will speedily take steps for a new trial in the case of the four officers of the so-called sugar trust, the jury failing to agree on a verdict and being discharged at 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning.

Only one question seemed to cause the jurors to hesitate about returning a verdict of guilty. That is the statute of limitations, which, Judge Hand had reminded the jurors would bar conviction for anything that happened prior to July 1. 1906.

Every other point raised by the defense was ignored by the twelve men, who for three weeks have been hearing evidence submitted by the government on its indictment of four of the biggest men in the sugar trust on the charge of restraining interstate trade and commerce, in preventing the operation of the Philadelphia sugar refinery owned by Adolph Segal.

They are John E. Parsons, aged 83, for more than a generation a leader of the American bar; Washington B. Thomas, who succeeded the late Henry O. Havemeyer, founder of the giant combination, as its executive head; Arthur Donner, until recently treasurer of the company; George H. Frazier, a director with the other three at the time the alleged conspiracy to restrain trade was formed and executed through a loan of $1,250,000 to Segal.

Both De Lancey Nicoll, counsel for the defense, and Mr. Wise regard the outcome of the long trial as a victory.

"The questions asked by the jury show they were unable to agree on account of the statute of limitations," explained Wise.

"We consider the disagreement a victory for the defense," was Nicoll's comment.

When the jury, which had been out nearly fourteen hours, sent a note to Hand announcing its inability to agree, the judge promptly sent for them. When the foreman repeated in court that the jury was deadlocked, Hand discharged the jurors. All the defendants except Parsons were in court when the jury filed in.

It is understood that ten jurors voted for acquittal, while two were for conviction.

The importance of the conspiracy trial had attracted many to the federal building, and throughout the night the corridors of the building were filled with lawyers and representatives of corporations, anxiously awaiting word from the jury room. At midnight the crowd thinned out when it seemed there was no prospect of the jury agreeing.

Twice during the afternoon the jury had asked for instructions from Hand, and each time the defense brightened when the tenor of the questions was made known. The jury was informed that it could not convict on anything that had taken place prior to July 1, 1906.

The questions each time had a bearing on the intent of the loan of $1,250,000 to Segal by the American Sugar Refining company—whether it was made to bring about a restraint of trade and whether the criminal intent had been shown.

Man Who Quit Hub Police Force Seventy-Eight Years Ago Is Dead

West Royalston, Mass., April 1.—Daniel Davis, the oldest ex-member of the Boston police force, who celebrated his 103d birthday Feb. 4, died at his home here after an illness of about two weeks. His wife died last February at the age of 96.

Mr. Davis was born in this town. Early in life he went to Boston, where he was appointed to the police force. When he was 25 years old he was ordered by the doctors to at once return to the country and was informed he had only a few months to live. Davis returned to Royalston, where he had since resided. He traveled for a pail manufacturer for many years and had farmed and held several town offices in Royalston.

BEATEN BY AMUNDSEN

Scott Was 150 Miles From the South Pole on Jan. 3

London, April 1.—The Daily Mail prints a Central news dispatch from Akaroa, N. Z., dated April 1, 9:20 a. m., saying the Terra Nova, Captain Scott's Antarctic ship, arrived there early this morning and anchored.

She did not bring Scott nor any member of the expedition, but fetched a brief message from the explorer, sent to the base at McMurdo sound, to the effect that he would remain another winter in the Antarctic to continue and complete his work.

Apart from this message the latest received from Scott at the base was that on Jan. 3 he was 150 miles from the South Pole and advancing.

The lack of news as to whether Scott reached the pole raises the assumption that if he did he could not get the news to the base before the freezing of Ross sea obliged the Terra Nova to sail away.

As Captain Amundsen reached the pole Dec. 14, and Scott on Jan. 3 was still 150 miles away, even if he did reach the goal the Norwegian beat him out by at least a month.

CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD

Prominent Promoters of Philadelphia Trust Company Are Convicted

Philadelphia, April 1.—Homer L. Castle of Pittsburgh, a former candidate for governor on the Prohibition ticket; H. F. Aspinwall of Freeport, Ills., formerly state senator from that state, and Dr. C. J. Massinger of Collingswood, Pa., were found guilty of conspiracy to defraud in promoting the Standard Title and Trust company here in 1907.

Henry Cohen, a promoter who had already pleaded guilty to the charge, was the principal witness against the defendants, who were accused of making false statements regarding the company's financial condition.

President—Arthur B. Hillman.
Clerk—Clarence Hutton.
Treasurer—Charles E. Barker.
Directors—Arthur B. Hillman, Chas. E. Barker, Clarence Hutton, H. H. Albee and C. H. Baker.

BRIEFS

Miss Josephine Kelley of Atlantic, with friends from Medford, is at Old Point Comfort for over Easter.

Mrs. Theodore Ruggles Kitson of Merrymount road is in Fitchburg, arranging the detail of a piece of sculpturing.

William E. Hingston of Wollaston park, the well-known handwriting expert has been named as an alternate delegate on the Roosevelt delegation from the tenth district.

The yacht Wawenock will probably sail under Quincy colors the coming season as Herbert D. Gearwar the owner and member of the Squantum yacht club will be out of town during the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Theophilus King of Adams street have returned from a visit in the West. They visited Dr. E. N. Hardy and family and attended Dr. Hardy's church, finding them very delightfully situated.

—Dr. Maurice H. Richardson in a recent lecture at the Harvard Medical school declared that while vivisection should be condemned when needless, it had a necessary function in the study of disease and its remedies. He said that the surgeon always thinks first of conservation and second of destruction. A generation ago practically everyone who was a victim of appendicitis died. Now if one dies from this disease it is the exception. The science of surgery is ever progressing, and is not to be stayed by prejudice, sentimentalism or the forces of unreason.

MINE SUSPENSION WILL END SOON

Workers Are Expected to Return Within a Month

NEW CONFERENCE ARRANGED

Anthracite Operators to Meet Employes at Philadelphia on April 10, When Miners Will Submit New Demands Which Will Permit of Concessions From Operators—Bituminous Miners Secure Increase In Pay

New York, April 1.—With the operators and the leaders of the miners agreeing to meet in conference at Philadelphia on April 10, there is a general feeling that the suspension of work at the mines will be short and that there will be no strike of the 170,000 anthracite miners who suspended work yesterday.

This hope came when, after an exchange of messages, George F. Baer, president of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad and the Reading Coal and Iron company, agreed to the renewal of negotiations. The power of certain great financial interests is said to have been brought to bear upon the operators to bring them and the miners together again.

The new conference will be held in Baer's offices in the Reading terminal. It is expected that as a result of this new meeting that the suspension of work in the collieries will not last more than a month. The miners are expected to formulate and submit new demands which will permit of concessions from the operators. It is expected that the 20 percent increase of wages demanded by the miners will be modified, but that there will be some increase granted.

In explaining his position Baer said: "You may say that I will do all in my power to avert a strike, since the operators surely do not wish any such action."

John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America, in speaking of the position the miners will take at the conference, said:

"The outcome of the negotiations in Cleveland removed any excuse the anthracite operators may have had heretofore in refusing the demands of the miners. The anthracite miners are really more entitled to an advance in wages and in improved conditions of employment than the bituminous men.

"We are convinced that the anthracite operators can pay an advance and are determined that no contract will be agreed to in the anthracite fields unless such is done. The anthracite operators must make such reasonable concessions as the situation warrants."

Sunday was a holiday in the Pennsylvania coal fields, every man, except those needed to keep the mines from being damaged, leaving their work. Several collieries not affiliated with the coal carrying railroads will attempt to keep their mines working and have offered a 10 percent increase to their men if they will return. They also offer to abide by whatever new agreement is reached ultimately by the union.

The bituminous miners, after eleven days' conference with the operators at Cleveland, secured an agreement which will give them a slight increase in pay. As their agreement, however, must still be ratified by the union's policy committee and then by a referendum vote of the union, a suspension in the bituminous mines has begun, pending the result of the final vote. Reports to the heads of the United Mine Workers of America indicated the bituminous wage agreement will be accepted generally.

It is stated that the suspension in all the mines involved will cause a loss in coal production to the country of 41,900,000 tons a month, and the men will lose in pay $1,000,000 every day they remain out.

The advance in pay to the bituminous miners secured by their new contract will amount to more than $15,000,000 a year increase over their present pay.

BRITISH MINERS RETURNING

Malcontents Are Expected to Speedily Swing Into Line

London, April 1.—If there was not quite a rush of striking miners back to the collieries, reports from the coal centres show that something very like it has taken place. Notices are posted everywhere that the miners are ready to go to work as a result of the ballot.

Another very favorable symptom is that at the collieries in Flintshire the men are preparing to return to work, and still better is the news from the Mold and Buckley districts, where the surfacemen, who at first appeared dissatisfied that the minimum wage schedule did not apply to them, are busy preparing the pits for work.

The North Wales districts show a very large preponderance of votes in favor of an immediate resumption, and hence it is fully expected that the malcontents in Lancashire and elsewhere, seeing work in other districts starting up, will soon come into line.

WIELDS A JACKKNIFE

Boston Man Inflicts Injuries Upon Daughter Which Prove Fatal

Boston, April 1.—Seventeen-year-old Ellen Donovan was stabbed by her father, Daniel J. Donovan, in their home at 433 East Sixth street, South Boston. The father is locked up. Mrs. Donovan was in the room when the stabbing took place.

Ellen had a cold and had a bottle of smelling salts. She stole up behind his chair and playfully placed the bottle of smelling salts under his nostrils.

Donovan swayed and wheeled about in his chair. His hand clutched an open jackknife with which he was cutting plug tobacco. As he swung his arm around the blade wounded the daughter. She screamed and dropped to the floor.

Dr. Tracy was called. Ellen was unconscious when he arrived. An ambulance rushed her to the Carney hospital, where she died.

SHERIFF IS HELD ON BRIBERY CHARGE

Ali Kennebunk Turns Out at the Emery Hearing

Kennebunk, Me., April 1.—On a charge of attempting to bribe County Attorney Asa P. Richardson to protect liquor sellers, Sheriff Charles O. Emery of York county was held for the May term of the grand jury in $10,000 bonds after a hearing before Trial Justice Bourne here. Emery furnished bail.

So great was the interest in the case that business in town was suspended while the hearing was in progress. Every store in the village was closed and nearly 1000 people crowded into the town hall, where the hearing took place.

Richardson told of conferences with Emery at Richardson's home and office. At these conferences he said Emery promised to pay him $50 a week if he would refrain from prosecuting liquor dealers in the principal cities and towns in the county. He also alleged Emery paid him five $20 bills as the first installment.

Three witnesses testified that when the conference between the sheriff and the county attorney was held at the latter's home, they were in the cellar and plainly heard the conversation through a furnace pipe. The defense offered no evidence.

Strikers Try to Prevent Finished Goods Leaving Lowell Mills

Lowell, Mass., April 1.—This morning the army of striking textile workers assembled about the big plants in force and maintained a rigid picket line.

Word that a shipment of finished goods is to leave the Hamilton mill led to an order from the strike headquarters to keep an eye on that plant.

On account of the shipping of goods at the Hamilton mill it is made the main point.

YOUNG MARIANO BREAKS DOWN

Admits Having Caused the Death of William Mather, Jr.

CLAIMS IT WAS ACCIDENTAL

Pathetic Story of Events Following Dislodging of Large Stone Which Fell on Head of His Playmate—Kissed Him as He Lay Dying and Prayed For Forgivenness When Friend Was Beyond Earthly Aid

North Providence, April 1.—After confessing to the police that a stone dislodged by his foot had accidentally killed his schoolmate, William Mather, Jr., on the afternoon of Feb. 29, Antonio Mariano, 14 years old, who was arrested Saturday night after a fierce fight between the members of his family, relatives and the police, told a pathetic story of the events that took place on the night of the tragedy.

Young Mariano, after being on the rack for ten hours, subjected to a cross-fire of questions, broke down and cried bitterly.

He told how he had accidentally pushed a large stone off the top of a great boulder on Moses Angel hill on top of "Billy" Mather's head. Mariona says he jumped down from the boulder to where the boy lay unconscious and moaning. He took "Billy's" head in his lap, patted the boy's head and cried bitterly with sorrow for his act.

"Billy" Mather, unconscious and his body racked with pain, rolled his head from right to left on Mariano's lap. Mariano tried to wake him and, seeing it was of no avail, got up and, placing his playmate's head on the ground, took the Mather boy by the legs and dragged him into the brush.

Weeping as if his heart would break Mariano then described how he knelt beside his dying playmate and kissed him many times, calling the unconscious boy by name and asking him to speak to Antonio, his schoolmate.

When he found that it was of no avail and realized that his friend had passed beyond all earthly aid, Mariano then prayed, he said, for a long time for forgivenness for the act of killing his playmate.

Mariano will be arraigned in the Sixth district court of Providence, charged with murder. His 16-year-old brother, Ralph, who took an active part in the attempt to prevent his arrest Saturday night, will be arraigned, charged with resisting a police officer.

While the police were scouring the surrounding country for evidence, the funeral of Mather took place from his home on Mineral Spring avenue. Five thousand men, women and children thronged the streets in front of the house, while the service was being conducted by Rev. Whitman Woods.

As the white hearse, drawn by white horses, passed along the road, the thousands gathered uncovered and bowed their heads. The body was buried in Pawtucket. Six schoolmates of the murdered boy's own age acted as pall bearers.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

"The Influence and Power of Personality" was the subject of the sermon preached by Rev. Carl G. Horst and he took the words found in the 4th verse of the 15th chapter of John for his text: "I am the vine and ye are the branches, he that abideth in me and I in him, the same beareth much fruit; for apart from me ye can do nothing."

"We are all parts of one great whole" said the preacher, "and the interdependence of each and all is a fact to be reckoned with in our daily lives. The influence emanating from different persons defies analysis or explanation, it is often a help or hindrance to some one's life, touching ours, when we least realize that either good or evil has gone out from us. And this wonderful, unseen, yet powerful force which we call personality evermore preaches over our heads, and inspires or depresses those with whom we come in contact. Our serious desire should be leave courage and cheer in the hearts of our fellow men, as we pass along our way."

Previous to the sermon Rev. Mr. Horst, as is quite customary with him in his morning service, read a poem—this time his selection being "The Tapestry Weavers."

The Social service committee held a meeting at the home of Arthur Rohn yesterday and discussed plans for next winter.

Many from our church attended the service of song and inspiration at Channing church, Dorchester, yesterday and heard the brilliant young minister of the Church of the Messiah in New York, the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, speak on the Work of the Modern Church.

The Junior Lend-a-Hand club meets with Ruth Sanborn, 162 Warren avenue, Tuesday, April 9, at 4 o'clock.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Alliance will be held in the vestry, Wednesday April 3 at 2.30 o'clock. Reports from the various officers and committees wil be presented and officers for the ensuing year will be elected. There will be music and tea served as usual.

The last in the series of special Lenten services for the deepening of the moral and religious life will be held Wednesday, at 7.45. The Rev. Julian C. Jaynes of West Newton, one of the ablest of New England preachers, will preach the sermon and Miss Marion Moorhouse, the well-known cellist, will render two selections. There was a large attendance at the last service, showing that these services of worship are appreciated by all who know the value of the quiet hour and would live in the spirit. Remember this will be the last service.

The Unitarian Church-Helpers will hold their annual meeting for the election of officers for the ensuing year in the vestry, Thursday, at 2 o'clock.

The study class, which is devoting this season to a study of the Gospel of Matthew, meets at the minister's home, Friday at 3 o'clock.

As is customary in our church a collection for the good of the Wollaston Unitarian church will be received on Easter Sunday at both the morning and afternoon services of worship.

The services next Sunday will be appropriate to Easter. At the morning service there will be special music rendered by a double quartet, assisted by a cellist; a sermon appropriate to the day, followed by the Memorial Communion service including the Canticle of Commemoration by minister and choir; and elaborate floral decorations. In the afternoon at 4.30 the Quincy Commandery Knights Templars in full Templar regalia will attend divine service. The regular choir will be assisted by a male quartet.

The Rev. James Harry Holden, pastor of the Roxbury Universalist church, will occupy the pulpit Sunday morning, April 14. Do not fail to hear him.

The annual Unitarian Minister's Retreat will be held in the First Parish at Chestnut Hill, Tuesday, April 16.

BETHANY CHURCH.

Dr. Asher Anderson occupied the pulpit of Bethany church, Sunday morning and preached a very eloquent and forceful sermon, which was in the form of a benediction. The text was 2d Corinthians, 13-14: "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all." Dr. Anderson said in part: "No argument for Christian religion is found in the Bible. The Bible is a book of religion; it teaches religion, and the clearest revelation of God is found in the lives of men who take Christ for their example.

"What made Jesus Christ the character he was? Transformed above all others, He infinitly reveals to us His Holy spirit that we may be enlightened. He is our refuge, our guide, our inspiration. The character we call Christ comes by intuition, by knowledge, and by faith in God.

"The religion of Jesus Christ is for God's Divine Fatherhood. Isolation and solitude, man cannot endure. He feels the need of companionship, conscious of his weakness, conscious of his dependence, he cries, Lord save me or I perish; bring him to the edge of the grave and he trembles at the unknown.

'Ultimately he is brought to the realization of God's love of His actual existence and the vision of the Christ life is made so clear that comfort and happiness radiates his soul. Christianity is the fullest possible response of the human heart. It is the truth, peace, joy and righteusness of life eternal. Jesus Christ can lift every burden, lift every ill, lift every sorrow. The Gospel of the Saviour dominates the earth.

"Christianity is progress because it is knowledge. No man can be a christian and not bring a better spirit of religion into the community. I may never stand in this pulpit again but remember you need the companionship of God. You need God's guidance: the church is God's home, God needs you in His home, you need God. The choir rendered appropriate music. Dr. Anderson has preached for so long a time in Bethany church that he has became deeply attached, to the people and the people to him. He very feelingly thanked all for the friendly relations and cordial greetings that had been extended to him.

ATLANTIC M. E.

Rev. Harvey Emmonds Dorr, on Sunday morning preached on "The Attractiveness of the Cross;" text: "And I if I be lifted up from the earth will draw all men unto myself." John 12.32. He said in part:

"These words were spoken at the last public discourse of Jesus just before the last supper. The words that men speak do not always impress us at the time, for we do not always see the significance, but afterwards they recur to us again and again. Our minds instantly go back to the last words. They ring in our ears, they occupy the chief place in our thought. No matter what you do you cannot put them away from you.

"This was the last public address of Jesus. He was speaking to some that he would never speak to again, to those who had been drawn toward him by his wonderful life. They had just given him the highest honor they could accord to him when they had marched into the city waving the branches of the palm trees the emblem of victory and singing those wonderful words 'Hosanna, blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, even the King of Israel.' Jesus must have looked out over that audience and marveled at their failure to comprehend the depth of his mission. Nevertheless they had lived with Him and they loved Him, he had won their hearts. The sinless life of the Divine Son of God had come to act with power, and Jesus said at the reply of those who asked him to rebuke them, 'I tell you that if these hold their peace the very stones will cry out.' Here was the climax of his life.

"Next came the supreme deed of all history an act of his own free will, namely his death. He stood up before that audience made up of Greeks and Jews, the circumcised and the uncircumcised, representative of all mankind and he said: 'and I if I be lifted up will draw all men unto myself.' The world had been attracted by his wonderful life, the multitudes had thronged about him until even his enemies were forced to say: 'Behold how ye prevail nothing for the world has gone after Him.' Surely here was the climax of his life. But listen, hear Him speak: 'My hour is come.' But he has no reference to the triumphal procession in which he had been proclaimed as their king. He meant something entirely different. He had reference to the real climax of all his ministry. He referred to the cross. It was in view of this that in his last public address he said: 'And I if I be lifted up shall draw all men unto myself.' He had drawn men irresistibly by his life, he was to transfix them by his death. On one day the scene is a bright one, the palm branches and the shouts of praise of the people, on another the bright tints begin to be shaded into darkness and he lifts up His voice and says 'My hour is come.' Nothing but shame awaits Him. His enemies curse Him. His disciples forsake Him. Yet this the saddest story of all history is the most attractive. The cross of Christ is the very center of our Christianity.

"The cross of Christ is the sceptre of His kingdom. Dwight L. Moody once invited the London clergy to meet him in Freemasons' Hall. At this meeting some one asked him why he did not publish his view of the gospel. He replied: 'It is already published and you will find it in the 53d chapter of Isaiah.' The life of Christ wonderfully gets hold of our lives and gives us a great longing to be like Him, the cross of Christ transfixes us, it transforms us into his image. His life makes us desire to be Christlike, His death makes our desires a reality.

"The cross attracts men because it reveals God's love applied to a definite end. I might proclaim my love for my friend and to prove it I might jump from the top of the highest building in Boston. People would look at my mangled body and proclaim my folly. But Jesus Christ died to meet the need of mankind. His coming to earth was determined by man's disobedience. We have no reason to think that God did not plan for Christ to come to earth from the very beginning, but man's waywardness made it necessary for him to descend all the way down to the cross. If mankind had never sinned Christ's coming might have been a continuous march of triumph. It is so today. If there were no sin in the world there would be no need of sacrifice.

"Paul said when he was writing to the Corinthians: 'I am determined to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ and Him crucified.' That was Paul's message of the gospel and all of the world is being attracted by it. The ages have told and retold the story with wonderful effect, it is the story that never grows old. It is attractive because it changes the sinner into a Son of the living God. There is coming a day when every knee shall bow to Him and the song of that great throng which shall wave the palms of victory shall be one of praise to the Lamb that was slain—the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world:! 'And I if I be lifted up from the earth shall draw all men unto me.' It is so and it shall be so. The Prince of this world has been conquered at the cross, and sinful man is transfixed as he gaxes at the sublime figure of his crucified Lord."

ATLANTIC MEMORIAL.

At Memorial church, Atlantic, yesterday morning, the pastor, Rev. T. W. Davison spoke on 'The Royal Entry." Mr. Davison said in part: "The emotion of the multitude and the enthusiasm of the disciples came because Christ was recognized as the Messiah of Hebrew prophesy. His miracles of raising the dead and giving sight to the blind, unstopping deaf ears and enabling the lame to walk had made Him an object of interest. But His popularity stirred the prejudice and hatred of the Jewish officials.

"Emotion in religion has its place. Emotional conversions are not apt to be permanent, because of the lack of convictions. Conviction with deep feeling lead to definite results. They lead to enthusiasm which may be abiding. Enthusiasm for the cause of Christ makes men follow in Christ's steps, do the works of Christ and think his thoughts.

"The Royal entry need not be looked for in the past. The royal entry we want today is Christ's coming into the heart of humanity. This will give us a Christianity not of mere creeds, but of good deeds,—a church that not only preaches Christ on Sunday, but a people that will live for Christ the rest of the week. Malaria, yellow fever and bubonic plague have been almost stamped out in places where they used to ruin lives because men have seen the cause. When will we arise in our might and stamp out sin? We see the common desolation and ruination of men.

"Christ's royal entry into humanity will make us go against every social malady, and He only is recognized in aggressive activities for the good of all."

In the evening Mr. Davison spoke on the Three Crosses on Calvary. "One cross being the symbol of Divine love sacrificing for the good of the race. The central figure crucified because He dared tell men that God was their Father, that malice, selfishness and wicked schemes were wrong. Yet that central figure is the most attractive power in the world today. He is drawing and attracting men as no other can do.

"The second cross shows the impenitent and cynic rejecting love and mercy. The person shows the penalty of sin in callousness and indifference—in a person close to Christ even in communication and privilege, but destitute of love and faith—lost.

"The third cross shows penitence and pardon. A soul turning at the eleventh hour and finding mercy. Let this not lead us to eleventh hour repentance."

REFUSES TO "BUTT IN"

Taft Says He Has No Jurisdiction In Settling Strike

Philadelphia, April 1.—President Taft was in an optimistic frame of mind when he faced several hundred members of the Philadelphia chamber of commerce in the bourse here. He told them he believed the people were on the eve of better times; that things were growing better, and that he believed there would be no great coal strike.

He said he had no jurisdiction in settling strikes, and that he knew enough to wait to see if one is welcome before "butting in" to a matter between parties who knew their rights.

The president said he was not a reactionary, but was progressive; that he was not a pessimist, but an optimist.

GORE IS ATTACKED BY A CRAZED POLE

Judge's Quick Action Saves Blind Senator From Injury

Waukesha, Wis., April 1.—Senator Gore of Oklahoma narrowly escaped death when a crazed Pole, Charles Schomulla, attacked him with a club while the senator was speaking.

The Pole was sitting near the stage, and in the middle of Gore's speech suddenly leaped to the platform, drew a club from under his overcoat as he jumped, and swung it instantly at the senator's head.

One of the men on the stage, Judge Hamlin, was quicker than the maniac, however, and knocked Schomulla off the stage before his blow landed. The senator, who is blind and who therefore could not see his danger, was unaware of the incident until later.

A TEN PERCENT RAISE

Employes In Rhode Island Textile Mills Are Given More Pay

Providence, April 1.—Rhode Island mill owners in the cotton trade are inclined to bring about uniform rates for various departments, so that in the future there will be no misunderstanding as to changes in wage lists when they are considered necessary by business conditions.

Senator Lippitt has joined the other leading cotton factory owners and made the popular 10 percent increase in wages. There are 4500 operatives in the five mills of the Manville company, of which Lippitt is the head.

On the board of trade it is said that every cotton mill in this state will have to pay the increased 10 percent in wages if the concerns expect to keep their help.

JUSTIFIED IN SHOOTING

Love, Who Was Charged With Murder, Is Discharged by Court

Great Barrington, Mass., April 1.—Sylvester Love, charged with the murder of Luigi Cardelli, was given a hearing in the district court here, at the conclusion of which he was ordered discharged by Justice Sanford.

The evidence showed that Love shot Cardelli in self defense in an altercation over Cardelli's attentions to Mrs. Love.

In summing up the case District Attorney Callahan said that Love had done no more than he was justified in doing according to law.

ROOSEVELT'S COMPLAINT

Thinks He Is Not Treated Fairly by Newspapers of New York

Oyster Bay, N. Y., April 1.—After an all-day ride Theodore Roosevelt reached home last night from his campaign trip through the central states, which began last Tuesday night. He spoke in eight states. He said that he was well pleased with his trip, and believed it would have practical results.

Mr. Roosevelt gave out a statement in which he said that a majority of the New York newspapers suppressed news relating to his campaign, and that on this account people in New York did not realize "how deeply stirred the country has been by the infamy of the so-called primaries on Tuesday last in this city."

He asserted that "the men who had Mr. Taft's interests in New York in their keeping in the most barefaced manner cheated the people out of their right to an honest vote."

UPHOLDS THE HEIRS OF "LUCKY" BALDWIN

Cal fornia Court Decides Against Beatrice Ani'a Turnbull

San Francisco, April 1.—By a unanimous decision of the supreme court here the heirs of Elias J. "Lucky" Baldwin are confirmed in the possession of his estate, estimated to be worth about $11,000,000, and the claims of Beatrice Anita Baldwin, or Turnbull, are dismissed.

The suit was a development of the legal fight started sixteen years ago to obtain recognition of an alleged common law wife of "Lucky" Baldwin and to establish the rights of her and her daughter as his heirs.

Miss Lillian A. Ashley of Winchester, Mass., brought suit for recognition as Baldwin's common law wife. It was won by the defense.

Baldwin died in 1909. Miss Ashley meanwhile had married Dr. William B. Turnbull of Brookline, Mass. Mrs. Turnbull started litigation to have her daughter, Beatrice Anita, get a part of the Baldwin millions on the ground that the girl was a child of Baldwin.

That case ended on March 8 of last year, the judge instructed the jury to return a verdict for the defense.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barony. The place is to be sold, and its history and that of the owners, the Quintards, is the subject of discussion by Jonathan Crenshaw, a business man, a stranger known as Bladen, and Bob Yancy, a farmer, when Hannibal Wayne Hazard, a mysterious child of the old southern family, makes his appearance. Yancy tells how he adopted the boy.

CHAPTER II.—Nathaniel Ferris buys the Barony, but the Quintards deny any knowledge of the boy. Yancy to keep Hannibal. Captain Murrell, a friend of the Quintards, appears and asks questions about the Barony.

CHAPTER III.—Trouble at Scratch Hill, Yancy's home, when Hannibal is kidnaped by Dave Blount, Captain Murrell's agent. Yancy overtakes Blount, gives him a thrashing and secures the boy.

CHAPTER IV.—Yancy is served with a warrant for assaulting Blount. Yancy appears before Squire Balaam, and is discharged with costs for the plaintiff.

CHAPTER V.—Betty Malroy, a friend of the Ferrises, has an encounter with Captain Murrell, who forces his attentions on her, and is rescued by Bruce Carrington, who threatens to whip the captain.

CHAPTER VI.—Betty sets out for her Tennessee home. Carrington takes the same stage. Yancy and Hannibal disappear, with Murrell on their trail. He overtakes them in the mountains of Tennessee. Murrell gets Yancy drunk and stabs him in a fight that followed. Hannibal escapes in a canoe.

CHAPTER VII.—Hannibal arrives at the home of Judge Slocum Price.

CHAPTER VIII.—The Judge recognizes in the boy, the grandson of an old time friend. Murrell arrives at Judge's home. Hannibal hears of the finding of Yancy's body. Price arrested as counterfeiter.

CHAPTER IX.—Cavendish family on raft rescue Yancy, who is apparently dead. Price breaks jail.

CHAPTER X.—Betty and Carrington arrive at Belle Plain.

CHAPTER XI.—Hannibal's rifle discloses some startling things to the Judge. Hannibal and Betty meet again.

CHAPTER XII.—Murrell arrives in Belle Plain. Is playing for big stakes.

CHAPTER XIII.—Yancy awakes from long dreamless sleep on board the raft.

CHAPTER XIV.—Judge Price makes startling discoveries in looking up land titles. Charley Norton, a young planter, who assists the judge, is mysteriously assaulted.

CHAPTER XV.—Norton informs Carrington that Betty has promised to marry him. Carrington bids Betty good-bye. Norton is mysteriously shot.

CHAPTER XVI.—More light on Murrell's plots. He plans uprising of negroes.

It had occurred to Betty that she had done little or nothing for the child; probably this would be her last opportunity.

The state of the judge's feelings was such that with elaborate absence of mind he poured himself a second drink of whisky; and that there should be no doubt the act was one of inadvertence, said again, "My best respects, ma'am," and bowed as before. Putting down the glass, he backed toward the door.

"I trust you will not hesitate to call upon me if I can be of any use to you, ma'am—a message will bring me here without a moment's delay." He was rather disappointed that no allusion had been made to his recent activities. He reasoned correctly that Betty was as yet in ignorance of the somewhat dangerous eminence he had achieved as the champion of law and order. However, he reflected with satisfaction that Hannibal, in remaining, would admirably serve his ends.

Betty insisted that he should be driven home, and after faintly protesting, the judge gracefully yielded the point, and a few moments later rolled away from Belle Plain behind a pair of sleek-coated bays, with a negro in livery on the box. He was conscious of a great sense of exaltation. He felt that he should paralyze Mahaffy. He even temporarily forgot the blow his hopes had sustained when Betty spoke of returning to North Carolina. This was life—broad acres and niggers—principally to trot after you toting liquor—and such liquor!—he lolled back luxuriantly with half-closed eyes.

"Twenty years in the wood if an hour!" he muttered. "I'd like to have just such a taste in my mouth when I come to die and probably she has barrels of it!" he sighed deeply, and searched his soul for words with which adequately to describe that whisky to Mahaffy.

But why not do more than paralyze Solomon—that would be pleasant but not especially profitable. The judge came back quickly to the vexed problem of his future. He desired to make some striking display of Miss Malroy's courtesy. He knew that his credit was experiencing the pangs of an early mortality; he was not sensitive, yet for some days he had been sensible of the fact that what he called the commercial class was viewing him with open disfavor; but he must hang on in Raleigh a little longer—for him it had become the abode of hope. The judge considered the matter. At least he could let people see something of that decent respect with which Miss Malroy treated him.

They were entering Raleigh now, and he ordered the coachman to pull his horses down to a walk. He had decided to make use of the Belle Plain turnout in creating an atmosphere of confidence and trust—especially trust. To this end he spent the best part of an hour interviewing his creditors. It amounted almost to a mass-meeting of the adult male population, for he had no favorites. When he invaded virgin territory he believed in starting the largest possible number of accounts without delay. The advantage of his system, as he explained its workings to Mahaffy, was that it bred a noble spirit of emulation.

He let it be known in a general way that things were looking up with him; just in what quarter he did not specify, but there he was, seated in the Belle Plain carriage, and the inference was unavoidable that Miss Malroy was to recognize his activities in a substantial manner.

Mahaffy, loafing away the afternoon in the county clerk's office, heard of the judge's return. He heard that Charley Norton had left a will; that Thicket Point went to Miss Malroy; that the Norton cousins in middle Tennessee were going to put up a fight; that Judge Price had been retained as counsel by Miss Malroy; that he was authorized to begin an independent search for Charley Norton's murderer, and was to spare no expense; that Judge Price was going to pay his debts. Mahaffy grinned at this and hurried home. He could believe all but the last; that was the crowning touch of unreality.

The judge explained the situation.

"I wouldn't withhold hope from any man, Solomon; it's the cheapest thing in the world and the one thing we are most miserly about extending to our fellows. These people all feel better—and what did it cost me?—just a little decent consideration; just the knowledge of what the unavoidable associations of ideas in their own minds would do for them!"

What had seemed the corpse of credit breathed again, and the judge and Mahaffy immediately embarked upon a characteristic celebration. Early candle-light found them making a beginning; midnight came—the gray and purple of dawn—and they were still at it, back of closed doors and shuttered windows.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Betty Leaves Belle Plain.

Hannibal had devoted himself loyally to the judge's glorification, and Betty heard all about the letter, the snuffing of the candles and the reward of five thousand dollars. It vastly increased the child's sense of importance and satisfaction when he discovered she had known nothing of these matters until he told her of them.

"Why, where would Judge Price get so much money, Hannibal?" she asked, greatly astonished.

"He won't have to get it, Miss Betty; Mr. Mahaffy says he don't reckon no one will ever tell who wrote the letter—he 'lows the man who done that will keep pretty mum—he just dassent tell!" the boy explained.

"No, I suppose not—" and Betty saw that perhaps, after all, the judge had not assumed any very great financial responsibility.

"He can't be a coward, though, Hannibal!" she added, for she understood that the risk of personal violence which he ran was genuine. She had formed her own unsympathetic estimate of him that day at Boggs' race-track; Mahaffy in his blackest hour could have added nothing to it. Twice since then she had met him in Raleigh, which had only served to fix that first impression.

"Miss Betty, he's just like my Uncle Bob was—he ain't afraid of nothing! He totes them pistols of his—loaded—if you notice good you can see where they bulge out his coat!" Hannibal's eyes, very round and big, looked up into hers.

"Is he as poor as he seems, Hannibal?" inquired Betty.

"He never has no money, Miss Betty, but I don't reckon he's what a body would call pore."

It might have baffled a far more mature intelligence than Hannibal's to comprehend those peculiar processes by which the judge sustained himself and his intimate fellowship with adversity—that it was his magnificence of mind which made the squalor of his daily life seem merely a passing phase—but the boy had managed to point a delicate distinction, and Betty grasped something of the hope and faith which never quite died out in Slocum Price's indomitable breast.

"But you always have enough to eat, dear?" she questioned anxiously. Hannibal promptly reassured her on this point. "You wouldn't let me think anything that was not true, Hannibal—you are quite sure you have never been hungry?"

"Never, Miss Betty; honest!"

The Kitchen Cupboard

WHEN DUCKS ARE COOKED.

WHEN you select a duck try to get one under a year old. The windpipe should break when pressed. The fat is soft and white, and on tame ducks the feet should be yellow. Wild ducks have red feet. It is now too late in the season for them.

Some tests for a young duck are to examine the skin on the leg to see if it is smooth. If smooth the duck is young. The webbing on the feet should be soft and the breast plump and hard. The wings also should be tender.

Preparing the Fowl.

Have the dealer clean the duck, if he will, but you must look over it yourself to see that it has been picked clean, that the crop, all the entrails and oil bags have been taken out. Then singe, wash inside and out and rinse in water to which a teaspoonful of baking soda has been added. Wipe, truss, dredge with salt, pepper and flour after the dressing has been stuffed inside. Bake in a hot oven for half an hour. Serve with green peas.

Those who do not like the strong flavor which some ducks have should stuff the craw with apples cut into small pieces. The apples are not eaten. They absorb the flavor.

A covered roaster is the best for cooking the duck. Unless the fowl is young and tender fifteen to eighteen minutes to the pound should be allowed for roasting. Pour a cupful of boiling water over the duck when putting into the pan.

While cooking baste the duck with gravy from the pan. Rub with butter, sprinkle with flour and allow to brown.

The Dressing.

To make gravy set the pan in iced water after removing the duck. This brings the fat to the top. Skim off, strain the gravy, add the cooked giblets chopped fine. Thicken with browned flour, color with herbs, boil for a minute, add pepper and salt as needed and serve in a gravy boat.

A plain bread stuffing is made for the duck in this way. Take enough dry bread crumbs to fill the inside of the duck. Mix with it a teaspoonful each of onion juice and minced parsley, a saltspoonful each of sweet marjoram, sage and summer savory and pepper and salt at discretion. Do not wet the stuffing, but soften it with a little melted butter.

Apple sauce should always be served with roast duck and currant jelly is also in place. So are green peas, onions or celery.

Celery or onions are often placed inside of duck which is to be roasted. This is supposed to improve its flavor.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

WOLLASTON M. E.

At the Wollaston M. E. church, Sunday, large audiences were present at all of the services. In the morning, Rev. Wesley Wiggin, the pastor, took for his subject. "The triumphant King." J. A. Sedgwick, superintendent took charge of the Sunday school and conducted the review lesson; Miss Nevers, the deaconess, had charge of the Junior League meeting and a large number were present. The Queen Esther Circle had charge of the Epworth League service with Miss Mary Cleveland and Miss Florence Bennett taking the principal parts.

F. G. Bennett led the praise service at seven o'clock service, after which Rev. F. H. Morgan read the scriptures and led in prayer. Mrs. F. H. Morgan spoke from the subject, "What is Worth While?" Mrs. Morgan said in part: "Some think that life is business or life is meat, raiment and riches. That is not the true view of life, life is more than meat, Life is worth while.

"We who are living in this age do not realize our privileges. Life is worth living because of its author. God is its author. God is not forgetful of any one. Only one life is worth living. Life is brief and uncertain. Life is worth while because of the opportunities that are ours which will never be ours again. Life is worth while because of the privileges. Life is love and love is worth while. True life begins and ends in God. God is love.

"True life is faith. Faith moves the world. Faith dispels doubt, sees the invisible and realizes eternal realities. True life is hope, and hope is faith in God. Hope gives courage and gives light in dark places. Life is character. Character is more than fame or honor. Character may be a blessing or a curse. Character is eternal, reputation is what people say of us, but character is what we are. At the conclusion she urged all to seek the life that was worth while.

DEATH OF SENATOR TAYLOR

Tennesseean Achieved Popularity as Governor and Lecturer

Washington, April 1.—Robert L. Taylor, senior United States senator from Tennessee—"Fiddling Bob" to all the south—died Sunday, unable to withstand the shock of an operation for gall stones, performed last Thursday.

Senator Taylor was born in Happy Valley, Tenn., in 1850, and was educated at Pennington academy in New Jersey, and signalized his 28th birthday by marrying, winning admission to the bar and defeating for congress, in a district ordinarily Republican, A. H. Pettibone.

In that campaign for congress Senator Taylor won the title of "Fiddling Bob," which stuck to him through life.

His pleasant voice, eloquence and personal charm won him more than $250,000 on the lecture stage, where he was most popular during the half-dozen years he devoted to such tours between the end of his second term as governor of Tennessee, in 1891, and his return to that office by unanimous choice of the Democratic state convention, indorsed by the popular vote in 1897. He was elected to the senate in 1907.

QUINCY POLICE TO PLAY BALL

Have Organized a Strong Team for Coming Season

WATCH OUT FOR THEM

Although previous attempts to get the local police authorities to consent to give any information in the matter have proven fruitless, the report was given out this morning that a number of the officers connected with the force, after managing to escape the ever pursuing allurements of the covered sphere for a long period, have at last been forced to yield to the influence of the National pastime and will from time to time this summer be seen to cavort in full baseball regalia, with a bat on their shoulder displacing the shining badge that usually adorns their manly breast. Yes, indeed, the Quincy Police department is to have a baseball team, a real baseball team and if any reader doubts this statement, he may readily be convinced by travelling to Merrymount park diamond any afternoon and there he will see the squad in action.

Cricket was indulged in during the winter months and the adoption of that game gave rise to many rumors concerning the baseball season. But now those rumors have been dispelled and with diligent practice Quincy's fair guards of the law should be represented by one of the best combinations of policemen to be found. Those who are to compose the team have already acquired reputations in the past and this fact alone is sufficient to augur for what may be expected this season.

Michael F. Canavan, who is too well-known to need any mention, will be on the firing line and his benders will break in the mit on George Fallon. The two will surely make a most formidable battery.

"Jerry" Dinneen will cover first base, Riley will be on second and Duane will hold down third. Doran will look out for the right outer garden, Thorne will be seen at centre and Duffy will chase the rollers in left field. Whalen, who is noted for his adaptability to bring things to a quick standstill, irregardless of the outcome, will be placed in the short stop position. Sergt. Hanson wil be the official umpire, and the subs who by the way are trying hard to obtain permanent berths, include Connolly, who recently loomed into the limelight for his capture of a would be burglar at Wollaston, Milford and Farrell. It is said on good authority that the chief will act as coach and that inspector Good hue will interpret the rule book in case there is necessity.

Dr. Harvey Wiley, the celebrated pure food expert, is said to have suggested that a help in solving the intemperance evil would be to license drinkers—the license to be revoked for cause overindulgence and the like. Isn't it hard enough for some of the chaps to raise the price of a drink without adding this heavy burden? Following the custom of the fish and game commission, we suppose it would be necessary to keep a few game wardens around the saloons to examine licenses, unless perhaps every licensed man carried a number, as in the automobile game.—Spencer Leader.

NOVELTIES FOR EASTER

What Local Stores are Showing in Hats and Gowns

OPENINGS

THE LADY'S SHOP.

It is a very important event to select the Easter hat; there must not be a clash of color between the hat and the Easter suit or gown. Should the busy woman and mother need a suggestion, where correct styles and distinctive taste may be found for herself, the wee tot and the winsome maiden, the Lady's Store on Maple street, has an uncommon and unusually splendid assortment of trimmed millinery, no two hats made alike in beautiful combinations of colors and two toned effects, dressy, brilliant and exclusive. A very choice line of derby hats to be worn with tailored suits are displayed also very handsome black hats. A splendid variety of flowers in the latest Parisian novelties, flowers which cannot be duplicated; to be seen to be admired. Ostrich feathers and plumes in all of the fancy shades and black;; numundies, very exquisite, giving a dash of piquancy to a hat unequaled.

The Lady's Store also carries a line of real Irish lace stocks and the Dutch collars; hand embroidered linen collars; Irish lace novelties. Ribbon flowers are made to order in any shade desired also silk velvet bows. If ribbon is purchased at the Lady's Store bows will be made free of charge and all hats, with materials bought at this store are trimmed free of charge.

All the women of Quincy and neighboring towns will be courteously received at the Lady's Shop and are invited to inspect the Easter hats.

WADSWORTH'S OPENING.

Saturday was grand opening day at Wadsworth's, of their enlarged store and of a beautiful line of Easter novelties.

Mothers who need new outfits for the little folks will do well to pay a visit to this store to see for themselves the dainty frocks and coats, which are made so stylishly and include many charming little effects impossible to attain at home. These little dresses can be bought to suit the purse of any customer, and the most fastidious cannot fail to be satisfied. They may be found in the new extension which has a large window and admits plenty of light. On one side is a large case with sliding glass doors, where the white dresses are hung free from dust. On the opposite side are drawers in which are kept the Standard patterns, and shoppers can sit very comfortably and make a selection. There are house dresses for misses and women; one-piece tub dresses and this store is noted for its fine line of shirt waists. The suits and coats are very exclusive and of superior quality.

The little bonnets and caps are exuisite, also the infants' slips. A very pretty assortment, of soft kid shoes in blue and pink, is also shown.

A specialty is made of corsets and cotton underwear, and this department is well worthy of inspection and represents perfection in fabric and design. Ribbons in all the new shades, laces, embroideries, neck wear, gloves, hosiery, notions are found in abundance, and also very dainty white table linen.

The art needlework department is exceptional and appeals directly to the shopper, who may find there everything to suit the most refined taste

The Wadsworth Co., is certainly to be congratulated upon the very attractive and commodious addition to their store and also upon their willing and obliging clerks who looked very sweet in their immaculate white dresses Saturday afternoon. George White of Walker, Stetson & Co., Boston and Henry H. Poor of Boston sent beautiful bunches of pinks and roses to the store on Saturday and pinks were given each customer.

SPIRIT THAT COUNTS

YOUNG GIRL LEARNED LESSON AS TO TRUE HOSPITALITY.

Sparsity of Fare Need Never Be a Deterrent to a Cordial Invitation to Sit at Table With the Family.

It was Monday noon. Old Martha, grumbling, was hanging the last of the wash on the line. She really enjoyed washing, and would have been insulted had her mistress suggested sending it out; but being of a pessimistic temperament, she grumbled upon principle.

In the house, Miss Elizabeth and her niece Muriel, who was visiting her, were setting the luncheon on the table. It was a "pickup" luncheon Mondays, Miss Elizabeth explained, as she set two pieces of custard pie and a saucer of snow pudding on the sideboard. Muriel nodded. The family to which she belonged knew all about "pickup" meals. But suddenly a look of consternation swept across her face.

"Aunt Elizabeth!" she cried, "if here isn't a visitor—getting out of a carriage!"

Miss Elizabeth looked over Muriel's shoulder. "It's Mrs. Stacey Reed!" she declared. "Put the tea on the table, child. I'll bring her right out."

"Bring her out?" Muriel repeated; but her aunt was already opening the door, and Muriel, in an agony of embarrassment, knew that she had not even taken off her green-checked apron. She gave a hasty glance over the table. A little warmed-over fricasseed chicken, left from Sunday's dinner, and some quince preserve from supper, bread and butter and dried beef, radishes and tea—and the two pieces of custard pie and one portion of snow pudding! It could not be that Aunt Elizabeth would bring a visitor out! But she was interrupted by Aunt Elizabeth's voice, cordial and full of pleasure:

"Come right out, Mrs. Reed. We were just sitting down to luncheon This is my niece, Muriel Hastings Muriel, will you get Mrs. Reed a plate?"

Muriel set a plate for Mrs. Reed. She could not talk, it all seemed so embarrassing. At home they would have put off luncheon forever rather than ask anyone out—so. She waited in a torture of anxiety for her aunt's excuses. Then slowly she began to realize not only that there were no excuses, but that both ladies seemed to be enjoying themselves. Aunt Elizabeth only laughed when she offered the guest her choice of custard pie or snow pudding.

That evening Muriel suddenly said: "Aunt Elizabeth, I never knew one could have company like that. We never do at home."

Miss Elizabeth's eyes dwelt kindly upon the young face, which already had its tired lines of worry. "Do you like to 'put folks out,' Muriel?"

"Why, no, of course not," the young girl answered.

"Well, then," Miss Elizabeth answered, smiling.

"But it would work only with real ladies," Muriel persisted.

"Well, then," Miss Elizabeth answered again.—Youth's Companion.

Natural Result.

"We tried that new play on the dog."

"Had it good effects?"

"Sure; licked it into shape."

Lace and Fur.

Macrame is one of the laces which is smart and practical in combination with fur. It is better than the finer laces for this purpose, and looks very effective when mounted over satin of a brilliant color. One very lovely little set recently seen has more of the macrame than the fur. It is a three piece set of muff, fancy tied stole and turban. The lace is over gold colored satin and there is just a border of skunk on each of the three articles.

VERY POOR ACTORS.

Mrs. Kidder—The play is very realistic. The actors are actually shooting at each other.

Mr. Kidder—It isn't realistic enough.

Mrs. Kidder—How so?

Mr. Kidder—None of the actors are getting killed.

TUBERCULOSIS DRAINS RESOURCES.

An actual money loss in wages and institutional care of $500,023.00 was sustained by the City of Boston and by 500 male consumptives studied by Dr. Edwin A. Locke and Dr. Cleaveland Floyd of the Out-Patient Department of the Boston Consumptives Hospital. This is but one of many interesting conclusions presented by these physicians in the March Journal of the Outdoor Life, (New York), the official organ of The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

In order to ascertain the actual economic loss from tuberculosis, Drs. Locke and Floyd selected at random 500 male cases, men who had visited the dispensary during the last five years. 244 of the cases studied were dead when the investigation was begun and 256 were living. Over 41 per cent of the men were between the ages of twenty and thirty-nine.

It was found on May 1, 1911, the date of the investigation, that the 244 dead men had each lost on an average of 58.03 weeks of work from the time of the onset of their disease until death. The average weekly rate of wages of these men was $11.89 and their total loss in wages amounted to $170,965. The 256 living cases each lost on an average 89.3 weeks of work at an average wage of $11.38 or a total loss of $255,074, making $426,039 lost in wages alone by both groups.

In addition to this large sum, it cost the City of Boston $73,984 to care for these 500 men in its public hospitals and other institutions. This community loss is exclusive of the large sums that were spent by private organizations on 406 out of these 500 cases.

422 of the 500 men had families with an average of 4.32 members. Commenting on this phase of the problem, the investigators say:

"The direct result on the family income of the disability of the chief bread winner is well shnown by the comparison of the total and average weekly income of the 422 families before the onset of illness and after the beginning of the stage of complete disability. In the first instance the total weekly income from all sources was $6807.29 or an average of $17.50, while in the latter the total weekly income was only $3055.69 or an average of $7.86, a decline of 65 per cent. One hundred and sixty-one families were without income of any sort during the period of complete disability of the patient, while the total weekly income previous to this stage was $1777.75."

If to all of these losses were added the "capitalized value of earnings cut off by death," Drs. Locke and Floyd estimate that the loss of the 244 dead cases alone would bring the total up to nearly $2,000,000. And if to these 500 cases actually studied were added the 15,000 living cases in Boston, they estimate the loss to the individuals and the city would amount to many millions of dollars.

These figures of the economic loss caused by tuberculosis, they conclude, present the most complete justification for the money Boston has spent in tuberculosis work, and show why other communities should not hesitate for fear of expense to attack the tuberculosis problem.

TODAY'S COURT.

It was an unusual busy session of the district court this morning, the most of the cases being for drunkenness

Michael W. Barry of Quincy was fined $5, Thomas Griffin of Quincy $15, John Coughlin of Quincy $15, Patrick Murphy of Quincy $3, Duncan McClennan, of Quincy $10, Thomas J. Ritchie of Quincy $10. Thomas J. Morley of Quincy $5 and Cornelius O'Neal of Weymouth $5 for drunkenness.

Daniel O'Nera was sentenced to three months in jail and ordered to make restitution to Officer Duffy for damages of $7 for drunkenness at Quincy.

George Fothergail and Alfred Pechey were fined $15 each for drunkenness on a railroad train at Quincy and ordered to pay the railroad company fifteen cents each for fare which they had evaded.

Ernest Pratt was fined $10 for hunting muskrats at Quincy.

Everett S. Perry, John Orr, John J. Mainati, Thomas Harnish, and John Donahue were fined $5 each for track walking at Braintree.

—The gift to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology of $2,500,00 is a splendid one and comes at an opportune time when that institution is about ready to go to its new location on the Charles river. It relieves the financial difficulties which were preventing more rapid growth, and will enable her to carry out certain plans long desired but never before possible. The work this Massachusetts institution has done in the past has been most valuable, she being one of the few great technical colleges of the country, and her graduates are recognized as among the leaders of their professions.—Old Colony Memorial.

MAYOR'S REQUEST THAT BUDGET BE CUT $11,000 REFUSED BY COUNCIL

His Statement That if Passed as Reported by Committee He Would Veto Order Has No Effect

The Special Financial Investigation Committee Recommends a New Auditing System

Although told point blank, by the Mayor, that if the Council passed the budget for the amounts recommended by the Finance Committee, he should have to veto the order and that the departments would be crippled, the Council with but little debate passed the order without a dissenting vote thus putting it up to the Mayor to approve, veto or allow it to become a law without his signature.

The situation is a unique one, for if the Mayor returns the order without his approval, the Council is powerless to amend the order. The only question that can be considered is the passing over the veto or sustaining the veto. In the latter event it will be necessary to go over the entire matter again which would1 mean some time in May before the budget would finally be passed.

The Mayor in a communication said that he had given the budget careful attention and he finds that the figures would compel a tax rate of $22.50 per thousand, "even if we allow for an increase in the city's valuation greater than was shown last year." To obviate the necessity of such a high rate he recommended that the budget be reduced by making the following changes, which were reductions from the original amounts from his original estimates.

Board of Health,	$3,000
Public Burial Places,	250

GIVES BIRTHDAY DANCING PARTY

There was a happy gathering at Colonial hall Monday evening when Miss Beatrice Morrison of Spear street entertained her friends at a dancing party in observance of her birthday. The electric lights were shaded in green crepe paper with bunches of pink roses and pink was the prevailing color, the hostess herself being gowned in a very delicate shade of pink and carrying an armful of pink pinks and roses, the gift of friends while the same flowers were banked on tables back of the receiving line.

The guests were received by Miss Morrison, her mother Mrs. Isabelle Davis and her two aunts, Mrs. McFall of Matoon, Ill., and Mrs. Sprague of Boston, all beautifully gowned and making up an attractive group.

After the guests had been received dancing was enjoyed, and thoroughly, the catchy selections of the pianist and the rhythm with which he played calling forth repeated encores from the dancers. Beside the numbers on the dance order there were several extras and Germans, one German being especially pretty, the dancers being showered with pink rose leaves and entangled in pink and white streamers. In a previous dance the dancers had donned tall pointed caps; white with pink rosettes and pink with white rosettes, so that the effect of the confetti shower was almost like a scene from fairyland.

Frappe was served throughout the dance, which came to a close at about half past eleven.

Miss Morrison was the recipient of beautiful gifts from her people, also of flowers and other tokens from many friends. The twenty-first milestone in life's journey was assuredly a happy one for Miss Morrison and her friends and one to look back to with pleasure.

—It has been an argument since automobiles came into general use that they wore the roads out to such an extent that it was impossible to keep them in repair with the money received from the license fees. The highway commission now comes forward and says it can't spend all the money raised in that manner. It would seem the automobilists have good reason to ask why, under such a condition, the license fee should be increased.—Brockton Enterprise.

John O'Brien, O. M. I., the eloquent Oblate father from Lowell, will be the preacher at the Church of the Sacred Heart.

PRACTICE FOR CANDIDATES

Candidates for the Quincy High school baseball team will be given their first outdoor practice at Merrymount park next Thursday afternoon, a call to that effect having been issued this morning by Coach Staff. During the past three weeks the battery candidates have been holding practice in the gymnasium and have worked out to great advantage. Players who are to try for the other positions will be given their first test on Thursday and from the large number that have already signified their intentions of contesting for places, a fast team should be developed.

The success of the football and basketball teams, which was due largely to the fine work of Coach Staff, has enflamed the student body with an enthusiasm of the highest type and with the proper support, both morally and financially, forthcoming, there is no reason why the Granite City players should not rank among the leading interscholastic teams when the season is drawn to a close. A fine schedule of games has been arranged and those who attend will be afforded every opportunity to witness a first-class article of playing.

TODAY'S COURT.

George Varney and William Oswald were fined $15 each for drunkenness at Quincy.

AUTO AND TRUCK EXHIBITION

Fine Display of Cars Shown at Wollaston Garage

MANY PRESENT

A large number of people took advantage of the opportunity to witness the Quincy Automobile and Truck Show, which was in order from 10 o'clock yesterday morning to a late hour in the evening at the Wollaston Centre Garage. The affair, which proved a source of especial pleasure to hundreds of visitors, was the best of its kind ever witnessed in local circles and in fact it was the first real show of its nature that has ever taken place in this city.

Not only was the display of horseless vehicles something that was interesting and highly instructive, but the serving of refreshments and the providing of an entertainment of a high class order added greatly to the enjoyment of the day. Windsor's popular orchestra rendered music during the day and a repertoire of numerous selections brought great charm to a most successful event. The greatest attention was given to every visitor and all the cars were explained in detail by competent demonstrators who used every effort to make all feel perfectly happy.

And the efforts to sell cars was crowned with success for at the close the management was enabled to announce that sales had been realized for three Rambler cars, seven Metz roadsters and two Commerce trucks. The affair was at its height in the evening, when all the members of the City Council, together with Mayor Stone, were the guests of the manager. All were highly elated with the show and pronounced it the best ever.

The talent of the evening included one of the best trios of singers in the country, a combination of vocal artists who have frequently turned down fabulous sums to adopt the stage career, the latest inducements being extended by those in charge of Keith's circuit. They were William McDevitt, deputy sheriff of Suffolk County, Harry McDevitt, president of the Dartmouth Glee club and George McDevitt, all brothers, who reside in Dorchester. Their work elicited such great appreciation on the part of those in attendance that they were compelled to respond to repeated applause. The management certainly is to be commended in securing such artists.

The members of the Council were conveyed to the garage at the adjournment of their meeting in Rambler automobiles. Five of these machines were at the disposal of the city fathers and an extra trip of two automobiles was required to bring all of the Solons to the scene of the greatest automobile show ever seen in the "City of Presidents." The cars that were conspicuous during the day included the Metz Roadster, Rambler Tourer, Commerce Delivery Truck and Lauth Juergens Truck.

THE Y. F. K. CLUB.

The Y. F. Ks club met Monday evening with Miss Neimerskern on Willard street at which time arrangements were made for a dance to be held at Alpha hall, May 3. The committee in charge of the affair will be Miss Olive Berry, Miss Mary Doyle, Miss Anna Mullen, Miss M. S. Lyons. After the business session there was a social hour during which refreshments were served.

—Was Lent intended simply that those who have chased aesthetic butterflies might have a breathing spell? It is well to remind ourselves rather sharply, perhaps, that its significance is beyond that of a hiatus in the frivolities of Vanity Fair. It is a time to think over what manner of a man one may be. It is a time to assail again the stronghold of the world, the flesh and the devil established in our own natures. Then the coming of Easter will mean more than novel millinery and radiant apparel; it will be a day of rejoicing as in a certain moral victory.— Philadelphia Ledger.

ACCIDENT TO A DOWNS CAR

What might have been a serious accident, had it not been for fortunate conditions, was narrowly averted on the Norfolk Downs loop on Sunday afternoon when the Neponset bound car leaving Quincy square at 4 o'clock left the rails on Elm avenue. The car was coming down Elm avenue at its ordinary speed with the rocking motion customary on this line. On passing Kemper street a rail, evidently undermined by the recent rain, gave a little, causing the forward truck to rise and jump the track.

The car with its dozen or more passengers ploughed a furrow for 15 or 20 yards and before it could be stopped the forward portion was well out upon and embedded in the roadway.

Eyewitnesses state that had it not been for the upcurve of the road at this point an overturn would have been imminent. As it was the occupants of the car escaped with a severe shaking up.

The efficient wrecking crew were soon on the job and in less than an hour had the car on its way to the repair shop. Passengers suffered but little inconvenience transfers being made in both directions.

With the exception of having the fender torn off and a few minor damages the car was uninjured.

MEETING OF EPWORTH LEAGUE

The regular business meeting of Epworth League of the Hall Place M. E. church was held in the vestry Monday evening. The first vice president presiding. It was voted that the league take care of the church grounds during the summer, a committee of six being appointed with Miss Helen Martin as chairman.

A committee of six was also appointed to decorate the church for Easter. A vote of thanks was extended C. N. Woodbury of Neponset for leading the devotional meeting on March 24.

Miss Pauletta Kristofferson, Miss Edna Burke and Camille Fuller were appointed to bring in a list of nominations for officers for the coming year.

Two names were recommended by the cabinet for membership and accepted. The meeting adjourned at 9.30 after which a social hour in charge of Miss Helen Martin was enjoyed.

As four of the New Mexico legislators have already been charged with accepting bribes, it is clear that the state was fit to be admitted to the union.

INTERESTING TALK ON CANADA

Bay View lodge L. O. L. held an open meeting Monday evening at Wilson's hall which was largely attended. There were a number of visitors at the meeting and addresses were made by several. One of the principal speakers of the evening was John D. McKay, Esq., who gave the members the lecture on Canada, which he delivered recently before Clan McGregor. As many of those present have relatives who reside in Canada the lecture had an added interest.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

STATE TREASURER TO GIVE ADDRESS

The meeting of the Board of Trade Wednesday evening promises to be an unusual interesting one as the members will be addressed by Elmer A. Stevens, State Treasurer. For this reason the meeting will be held in Colonial hall and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance of members. As this is to be an open meeting members are privileged to bring their friends with them.

☞Hungry children relish PRATT'S BREAD and good butter. It makes them grow.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Spring will soon appear on the cover pages of magazines.

Now, what will April do to prove that it is worse than March was.

Dr. Wiley goes, but secretary "Jim" Wilson can't be pried from his job.

Until she has her preferential fuss over with, North Dakota will feel that everybody's eye is on her.

If the high cost of living is world-wide perhaps the Hague Tribunal should be asked to arbitrate.

Massachusetts has fired a shot that will be heard around Cape Cod. It has approved the preferential primary.

Harvard voted for Taft as against their own T. R. They will never win the foot ball game if they keep on this way.

Virginia mountaineers may be trying to attract immigration from among those who complain that the west is growing too tame.

Taft will not allow his literary bureau to attack Roosevelt. The president is acting with considerate dignity in a trying situation.

Germany is going to form Government monopolies to fight the trusts; perhaps we will try a little of that game over here soon.

As the women will no doubt get suffrage when the majority of them want it, they should smash women's mirrors instead of men's shop windows.

This vacation week just before Easter is much needed, especially by the children. It has been a long term and most of the little brains are very tired and will prove they can do better work after the week's intermission. May the pupils all return with the strong determination to make the last term the best of the whole year, which fact will be in evidence by their grade promotions in June.

The Massachusetts Civil Service Association headed by Charles W. Eliot, president, and numbering a long list of representative men, among its vice presidents and directors, is strenuously opposing the Spanish War Veterans preference bill, and they voice the sentiments of many organizations and thinking people. Their objections are as follows:

About 12,000 Massachusetts men enlisted.

Who is a Spanish War Veteran? Bill does not state.

Why are soldiers who served in China and the Philippines and the State Militia discriminated against?

No state holding competitive examinations for appointments to its civil service gives Spanish War Veterans any preference.

Commission now, under its Rules, Sec. 96, gives credit for military service. Why add 5 per cent. more?

Bill is evidently in interest of inefficient veterans.

Applies not only to original appointments, but to promotions and transfers.

Covers veterans who never left Massachusetts.

Were not men whose applications for enlistment were refused equally patriotic?

Applies to all positions, high grade and low grade.

In effect an absolute preference, marks are so close.

Press universally opposed.

No demand for such legislation except from veterans themselves, and many of them are opposed.

Competitive examinations are held for promotion in Boston fire department. This bill is destructive of system. Five per cent. added will carry to the top man now No. 29 on the list.

Fire Commissioner Cole is strongly opposed in so far as bill would affect promotions.

Police Commissioner O'Meara is strongly opposed.

Previous employees, temporarily discharged, will be discriminated against.

Adjutant-General Pearson expressed himself as satisfied with rule of Commission adopted last year.

Preferential legislation was vetoed by Governors Wolcott, Guild and Draper.

In addition to Federal pensions the Commonwealth already provides Military and State Aid for needy veterans.

WHO DRANK IT?

Nine and one-half gallons of liquor for each inhabitant brought into our city the past year is a record not much to the credit of a no-license city. It emphasizes the fact that has been called to our licensing board and City Council, year after year, that there are too many expresses conducting bar rooms on wheels. Many of them do an express business only in liquor.

Think of it—about ten gallons for each man, woman and child brought in each year by the consent of the people to say nothing of the great quantities brought in individually. It is common knowledge that it is not hard to get liquor in Quincy notwithstanding the vote for no-license year after year.

Our people are lax; there is a deplorable indifference as a whole that is alarming to those who know the situation. A handful of citizens put up a good fight just before election, but they do not receive the help and support they should from the people at large, neither are they backed up in their good work by those in authority at City Hall.

The Ledger has always stood for no-license; is opposed to the granting of almost unlimited express privileges. The Ledger refuses, and always has, liquor advertising. It means the turning down of lots of money, but it firmly believes it is no loser for a clean paper and clean business can succeed without catering to wrong principles. But probably if some of the expres companies looked at it in the same light they would have to go out of business.

STUNG!

How many looked out the window Monday morning to see a robin that was conspicuous by its absence, or stooped to pick up a handkerchief that really had not been dropped, or perhaps tasted a chocolate with the expectation of having a dainty refreshment only to find that it had been refilled with cotton batting, or how many were in perfect disgust at the toughness of the griddle cakes for breakfast just because they could not succeed in cutting through the cheese cloth that had been fried with the batter? Come now! All who were "stung" please manifest it by saying, "I."

"A little fun now and then is relished by the best of men."

Perhaps it is well that April first comes only once a year just the same.

THE FLOOD SEASON.

"Ole Mississippi" is beginning to roll in his bed like a restless sleeper. The Lowlanders all the way to the Gulf will hear with apprehension the news that the Kentucky levees at Hickman are in imminent danger of giving way, and that the worst floods for years are reported in the Platte, Loup, Elkhorn and other tributaries.

The Lowlander knows the river as the sailor knows the sky and the wind. He tells its moods by its sediment and color, from which he can locate the trouble, and form some idea of the reserves of uprising 1000 miles away.

A slight change in the lunge and tone of the water, and the Lowlander with the instinct of the migrating bird, runs for his household effects. "He's sho comin' this mornin".

He has keen instinct for even the slightest elevation of land in his apparently floor-like bottom, and a crest of six inches looks to him like a Canaan of refuge.

The Indians knew better than any one else the temper of the great tawny tiger. Tradition has not handed down the story of Indian sufferings in times of flood. But you can find in the Yazoo and other swamps, mounds containing human remains, implements of war and cookery, and evidences of fire. To this day these are like the ark of refuge to many a Lowlander.

The levee system of the Mississippi is estimated to have cost the United States about $60,000,000. The restless shift of the river bed constantly renders part of this expenditure futile. The chief hydrographer of the United States geological survey has urged a plan to control the Ohio river by building 100 reservoirs near head waters.

This would cost $125,000,000, but the Ohio floods of 1907 alone cost $100,000,000. It is claimed that such reservoirs would provide salable power yielding a net revenue of about $7,000,000 a year, and the rivers would become more navigable.

BRAINTREE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

The last meeting of the Braintree People's Forum for this season was held last Sunday afternoon with a large and interested audience in attendance.

The speaker was George W. Coleman of Boston, the founder of the famous Ford Hall meetings of that city.

Mr. Coleman gave a clear cut and convincing address on "The present social crisis and one step on the way out."

He considers that the people of this country are facing a real crisis in affairs and that according to one eminent authority, present day conditions are much the same as those obtaining in the days directly preceding the French revolution or the downfall of the Roman empire.

He cited Woodrow Wilson, then president of Princeton University, as saying that unless America learned to steady herself she would be compelled to walk through seas of blood.

Mr. Coleman related the humorous negro story of "Potiphar's Parable" and said that present social conditions were much the same as the old darky's jumble of the scriptures, as "an unholy combination of good things.

According to the speaker, two thirds of the people of the United States are outside the church and one tenth of the population of the country owns nine tenths of the property. He spoke of the thousands of foreign immigrants coming to our shores, told how exceptionally bright and smart are the children of these people, dwelling especially on the ability of the Jewish pupils in our public schools.

He said that in former years the question was asked by thinking people in the church, what shall we do with the masses? Now in view of the reversal of many old theories we are saying to ourselves, what are the masses going to do with us? Mr. Coleman said that Americans are far from being a homogeneous people in thought or action and are separated socially, racially, industrially and religiously.

It is a fact he said, that ninety per cent of the public school pupils leave at the age of fourteen and that from then on, there is great danger of their absorbing political, racial or social beliefs which will conflict with established ideas and may tend to make them into undesirable citizens.

He praised the public school as being one of the few places in this land today where Jew, Gentile, Catholic, Protestant, Black or White could meet on an equal footing and enjoy the same privileges.

Mr. Coleman thinks the greatest danger to this country lies in our indifference to matters of great moment, due in a great measure to absorption in our own concerns and to the mad rush for wealth.

He says that because of the growth of great monopolies and trusts that competition is past and that our greatest hope lies in co-operation.

He thinks we must have democracy, using the term in its broadest sense, and that we must have more democracy or else lose what we already have.

He says the country is passing from an era of competition to one of co-operation, from an era of division on vital questions to one of unity.

In ohter words we will shake off the spirit of greedy commercialism to a greater degree and will consider the welfare of men, women and children as being of more importance than the mere accumulation of stocks, bonds and dividends.

Mr. Coleman is optimistic, takes a philosophic view of the situation and thinks that good results will ultimately come from the present confusion of conditions.

He answered many questions from interested listeners and commended the forum and its managers for the work accomplished.

It was voted that the surplus from the collections, after payment of expenses, should be used for the financing of next year's meetings, and if the forum should not be in existence next year that the money be donated to the "Friendly Aid" work. The meeting and this present series closed at 5 o'clock.

LONDON CLOSE TO MOURNING

Great Disappointment at Scott's Failure to Reach Pole

COUNTED UPON HIS SUCCESS

Much Valuable Geographical and Other Data Expected as Result of Decision to Spend Another Winter In the Antarctic—English Explorer Has Experience of Two Previous Expeditions to Fall Back Upon

London, April 2.—London is almost in a state of mourning at the news that Captain Scott did not reach the South Pole or, if he did, reached it only after Amundsen had been there.

London had builded strong on Scott. The news that he has, in a measure, failed them, has cast an atmosphere of gloom over the entire nation.

The long and impatiently awaited news of Scott's expedition brings the keenest disappointment to the cherished hopes of all Englishmen that the British expedition might after all prove to be the first in the race for the South Pole. Since the news of Amundsen's successful attempt, Englishmen have built great hopes upon Scott's emulating, if not surpassing the Norwegian's achievements. It was known that Scott had chosen the longer route and, as Amundsen's experience proved, the more difficult one, but, presuming that he was favored by the same exceptional weather conditions as Amundsen, few doubted his success.

Another winter, which the advices from New Zealand say Scott has decided to spend in the Antarctic, will make two years that the Scott party will have worked in the south polar region. It was on June 1, 1910, that his party, consisting of five lieutenants in the British navy, twenty-three scientists and twenty-seven picked sailors, sailed on the old whaler Terra Nova from London.

Captain Scott joined the expedition in New Zealand the following fall, and Nov. 19, 1910, the pole hunters sailed from Port Chalmers, N. Z., for the Antarctic. They thought at the time that they were the only party headed for the southern goal, made the more coveted by England because of the American discovery of the North Pole.

Captain Scott had spent many of his 43 years in study of the polar regions, and when he set out for the south this time he had the experience of two previous expeditions to fall back upon. In one of them he reached his farthest south at 82 degrees 16 minutes and 33 seconds, in 1902, but he was obliged to but back on account of the failure of the dog teams.

Profiting by that experience and by the success which Sir Ernest Shackleton had later in getting further south, Scott took twenty Siberian ponies and three motor sledges on the present expedition, as well as dogs. The sledges had been tried out in Norway and found practicable.

The original hope was to reach the pole by Christmas, 1911, and to return to civilization in March of this year. The old whaler landed the party in McMurdo bay, in the ice regions, in January, 1911, and after Scott and twelve men had started for the pole, and a smaller party had gone to explore King Edward VII. Land, Lieutenant Pennell took the Terra Nova back to New Zealand. On the way he discovered that the Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen, had started south in the Fram in an effort to beat the Scott party to the pole.

Because of the fact that the Scott expedition is better equipped for scientific work than any of the many which have penetrated the Antarctic, much valuable geographical and other data is an anticipated result of the exploration, whether the party reaches the pole or not.

CHICAGO CARPENTERS OUT

Fourteen Hundred Demand Increase to Sixty-Five Cents an Hour

Chicago, April 2.—Building operations aggregating expenditures estimated at from $30,000,000 to $50,000,000 are expected to be affected in Cook county by a strike of 14,000 carpenters, who were ordered to suspend work yesterday.

Contractors and carpenters consider that construction work on at least 500 buildings will come to a stop. The carpenters are demanding 65 cents an hour, an increase of 5 cents.

POTATOES FROM ABROAD

Shipment Valued at More Than $230,000 Arrives at New York

New York, April 2.—Six thousand tons of potatoes, the largest shipment ever received in New York, arrived from London on the steamship Minnehaha.

Roughly, there are enough of them to supply 24,000,000 meals for an adult. As potatoes are quoted here at $3.25 per bag of 168 pounds, the shipment is valued at more than $230,000. The government collected $50,000 in duties.

MISUSE OF FLAG.

Editor Ledger:

My attention was called to an article in the Quincy Ledger, which states that at the annual Masquerade Party of Manet Encampment I. O. O. F. on Friday evening last, at Alpha hall, a prize was given to the "Best dressed—Miss Liberty, a lady, whose gown was made of the American flag."

It hardly seems possible that such an article can be corerct. If true, such a costume should have been excluded from the hall. Such a costume is a distinct violation of the Flag law of Massachusetts, which is punishable by a fine of "not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars."

The American Flag may not be mutilated and made into an article of clothing, and as it seems this costume was made up and publicly worn in ignorance of the law, the purpose of this letter is to call public attention to it, and prevent anyone else in the future from thus publicly desecrating the American flag.

AFTER SEVEN YEARS

New Evidence In Hackett Murder Case Presented to Grand Jury

Augusta, Me., April 2.—The cord used to strangle Mattie Hackett, the 18-year-old girl murdered at Readfield seven years ago, may furnisn the clue that will bring the slayer to justice. Officials who have reopened the investigation of this mysterious tragedy declare that the cord, which was of a peculiar kind, could have been purchased in but one place in the town of Readfield. By tracing the purchase they hope to locate the slayer or slayers of the girl.

New evidence in possession of the authorities was presented to the grand jury today.

"I am glad the case is going to be opened up again," said Levi Hackett, father of the murdered girl.

SOME USELESS LEGAL RELICS

Words and Legal Phrases That Have Become Obsolete

RECALL A FAILURE

An interesting meeting of the Men's club of St. Chrysostom's parish was held in the parish rooms Monday evening, when Melvin M. Johnson of Boston, spoke on "Some legal relics."

The lecture primarily intended to touch upon some of the curious practices in law, by questions and interest of those present branched out to include the whole legal situation. Representatives from leading men's clubs were among those attending.

To show some of the antique phases with which the law is fettered the speaker instanced the letters "s, s," found in affidavits and other legal papers.

Hardly any one knows what this means and no one did until one man spent six months in looking it up. It is an abbreviation of the Latin verb, subscripsum—meaning I subscribe myself or I am writing this at a certain place.

The man who signs his name to this doesn't know he has been signing anything of the kind. Why under the sun should we use it.

The seal, required by the laws of our state is another practice which is out of date. This comes down to us from olden times when the majority were illiterate and had to use this for a means of identifioation.

The speaker believed that the time was coming when we would return to this custom and would use the manual dob, classified by the Bertillion or other system for the prevention of forgery.

The plea of "nolo contendere" is another legal relic coming down to us from the year 1410, when a translator of the Norman French laws made a mistaken translation.

Following writers took the translator's word for it and the mistake has stood. When in 1895 the Supreme Court was called upon for a decision it was thought best to let it stand as everyone had thought it so for so long. Thus it is that custom often makes laws.

Mr. Johnson did not believe in the free use of the referendum, initiative and recall. Every time these have been put into general use they have proved a failure.

What was the French revolution but recall run riot? In the Salem witchcraft trials we find the same thing true regarding initiative. The court, without a lawyer on the bench, simply bowed to the will of the people.

Human nature is the same now as then. We need what they have on every engine. A governor to hold steady against fluctuations one way or the other. The people need something to steady them until they get back to the normal.

The speaker was not in favor of the referendum, believing that the people in general did not have sufficient time to study the questions involved.

In conclusion Mr. Johnson paid a glowing tribute to the present day which he believed the best in all history.

Just Honeymooning.

"To fill a hive with honey, an apiarist has figured, a colony of bees has to make flights totaling a greater distance than from the earth to the moon," said the young bride.

"Is that really so?" exclaimed the young groom.

"Would you do that much for your 'honey,' dear?"

—Towns with the right ideas and outlook as to the future might even go a step beyond the plan of making welcome men who come into the community, by going to seek new citizens. A citizens' committee might be named to take steps to get in touch with those desiring country homes and farms, and to endeavor to bring in desirable additions to the towns citizenship by exhibiting the strong points of the town, making evident its friendliness to newcomers and demonstrating that it was a live community where one would make no mistake in locating.—Milford Gazette.

AUDITING SYSTEM.

The Special Committee on Financial investigation in a partial report said that "It is the belief of your Committee that many errors, or abuses, in the conduct of the city's business in the past, may have come about through lack of accurate information regarding the city's true condition. The City's business should be conducted in such a way that a glance at the monthly balance sheet will show more completely than it does at the present time just the financial condition.

"We feel confident that the system of accounting as recommended by the State Bureau of Statistics will prevent a repetition of past errors and will give the city officials, in a convenient form, information which should continually be before them.

"A proper system of accounting is essential to the conduct of any successful business, and we believe that city's financial condition would be strengthened if the facts were more readily obtainable. We therefore recommend the adoption of the accompanying order."

The order as recommended was as follows:

"In accordance with the provisions of Chapter 598 of the Acts of 1910 entitled 'An Act Relative to the Auditing, by the Director of the Bureau of Statistics of Municipal Accounts' it is hereby ordered that this Council hereby petitions the Director of the Bureau of Statistics to oversee the installation of a system of accounts approved by him as provided by said chapter."

BUDGET.

The annual appropriation order took its second reading and the rules were suspended.

The items for the several departments were taken up separately and acted upon.

It was at this time that Councilman Studley tried to have the order amended in accordance with the recommendations contained in the communication of the Mayor.

The first item to come up was that for the Board of Health. He then moved to cut the amount for contagious diseases from $8,000 to $5,000.

Chairman Teasdale of the Board of Health was called before the Council and asked if he thought $5,000 would be sufficient. He replied no.

The motion of Councilman Studley was refected.

Mayor Stone at this point addressed the Council. He said he believed that by economy that the departments could get along with the lesser amounts. Last year there was an unusual large expenditure by the Board of Health owing to scarlet fever. If no cuts are made the order will have to come back. He had been over the matter carefully and found that if passed the tax rate would be $22.50 per thousand and if passed as it now was he should have to veto the order.

Continuing, the several amounts were taken up, and each of the motions of Councilman Studley to make cuts were rejected by voice vote, and without practically any debate.

The order was then put on its final passage and on roll call was passed to be ordained, 22 voting in the affirmative and none in the negative.

Adjourned at 8.44.

Moody Boynton was present during the Council meeting looking for an opportunity to talk on his bicycle railroad. The Council however took no steps to invite him to speak. After adjournment however he mounted the president's platform and talked at length to the audience on his railroad plan.

In the meantime, however, word had come that automobiles were in waiting at the door to take the Councilmen to the automobile show at the Wollaston Central Garage and practically all of the City Council and many of the City officials went down, leaving Mr. Boynton in possession of the hall.

PENURIOUS POLICIES.

Commissioner Edwards of New York, discussing the penurious policy of a western city, said to a reporter:

"It reminds me of Grimes. Grimes, you know, was a rich Pike county farmer. One dreadful winter day he was discovered on a lonely mountain path digging away like mad in the frozen snowdrifts. Though it was zero weather, Grimes was stripped to his undershirt, and amid the white snow clouds flying from his shovel he could be seen all red with effort and dripping with perspiration.

"What in the world is he doing?" a traveler asked, as he looked with awe at the great holes and tunnels cut by Grimes in the snow.

"'H-sh,' said a bystander, 'he's lost a nickel.'"—Washington Star.

Dr. Cupid.

He kissed the girlie once or twice,
With expedition,
And said: "I do this on advice
Of my physician."

Too Much for Him.

"Allow me," said the fresh young man in the Pullman dining car, as he passed the sugar bowl to a shy young girl; "sweets to the sweet, you know."

"Allow me," said the girl, as she handed him a plate of crackers; "crackers to the cracked, you know."—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Debutante.

"What could you do to support yourself if your father lost his fortune? You society butterflies know nothing about earning money."

"There's where you do us an injustice. Didn't I earn $30 selling Red Cross stamps Christmas week?"

Theatrical.

Mrs. Willis—There seems to be a big crowd over at Mrs. Waypupp's wedding. Strange, too! She has been married nine times already.

Mrs. Gillis—That's it! This is going to be a grand souvenir performance.—Puck.

Domestic Trim.

First Omaha Man (in surprise)—What! Back already? Why, I thought you were going to see Europe!

Second Omaha Man (cheerfully)—So did I, but it seems that New York saw me first.—Puck.

It's Leap Year.

"Gee, but it's tough to have to tell a bright, pretty, attractive fascinating girl, the fervor of whose proposal shows how undying her affection is, that you can only be a brother to her!"

Force of Habit.

"Your friend has such cultivated manners."

"Naturally. He manufactures plows."

At This Season.

"What is this price of peace they talk so much about?"

"Just now it is a set of furs."

POINTS OF VIEW.

Abbie Farwell Brown.

I'm thankful for so many things
'Tis hard to name them all:
I'm glad that I am not grown up,
But still am nice and small.

I'm thankful that I live today,
And not long, long ago
Before my dear mamma was born,
And all the friends I know.

I'm thankful for my little pets,
For every doll and toy.
And, oh, I'm thankful I'm a girl,
And not a horrid boy!

I'm thankful that it doesn't rain,
So I can go and play;
I'm thankful that I'm growing big,
And bigger every day.

I'm thankful for a holiday,
For football, dogs, and skates,
For candy and all sorts of things,
For our United States.

I'm thankful for my rubber boots
And that my hair won't curl,
And, oh, I'm thankful every day
That I am not a girl!

PLEA FOR UNITED CHINA

Public Ceremony on Sun's Retirement as Provisional President

Nanking, April 2.—The public ceremony connected with Sun Yat Sen's resignation from the office of provisional president of the Chinese republic took place in the hall of the national assembly yesterday afternoon. Speeches were delivered by the speaker of the assembly and by a number of assemblymen.

Sun Yat Sen bade the national assembly a dignified farewell. Amid many evidences of devotion and enthusiasm he urged that every effort should be made to secure a united China and to achieve the higest ideals of the republic. He reiterated his confidence in President Yuan Shi Kai as well as in the cabinet formed by Premier Tank Shao Yi and in the national assembly.

—One of the latest ideals of Postmaster-General Hitchcock is to have the government insure safe delivery of registered mail, or else reimburse its full value. Under the present system the fee guarantees nothing but extra care in handling the registered letter and package and limits the government's liability to a sum which may cover only a small fraction of the value of the registered package. The practical result is to give notice to everybody through whose hands such mail passes that it contains something worth stealing. The Postmaster-General's idea that the Government should give a full guarantee if it is to do this business at all ,seems to be reasonable.—Taunton Herald.

CUTTING NAVAL PROGRAM

Negotiations Entered Into by Great Britain and Germany

London, April 2.—One of the most important, interesting announcements in the history of European foreign relations came from First Lord of the Admiralty Churchill in the house of commons when he told the members that Great Britain and Germany have entered into negotiations with a view to effecting a naval program that would effect curtailment of the battleship building plans of the two nations.

This was the first intimation that the two powers have met on common ground for the purpose of bringing to an end the race for superior naval armaments, although an indication of this action was given in parliament a fortnight ago by Churchill during debate upon the naval estimates when he said that if Germany would consent to a curtailment of battleship building England would follow suit.

APRIL FOOL'S DAY COMEDY

Girls Faint as Dummy Drops From Twenty-Fourth Story of Building

New York, April 2.—Hundreds of pedestrians, crowded in narrow Nassau street in the financial district, shrank back in terror yesterday when the form of a man came hurtling down from the twenty-fourth story of the Liberty tower building.

Several stenographers in windows on the opposite side of the street fainted at the sight, and someone turned in an ambulance call. Police officers rushed up to the spot where the body fell and found it a dummy stuffed with hay, with a broomstick for a backbone and a false face to make it realistic.

The ambulance surgeon did not appreciate the April Fool's day comedy and drove away, leaving a street cleaner to gather up the debris.

PREDICTIONS NOT TO BE RELIED UPON

Much Interest In Presidential Primaries In Illinois

Washington, April 2.—With the date of the Illinois presidential primaries fixed for April 9, the attention of the politicians will be focused upon the state in the belief that the Roosevelt candidacy either will gain new impetus from the result or that the result will leave Taft so easy a winner in the country that there will be no fun thereafter.

Illinois will send fifty district and eight delegates-at-large to the Chicago convention. No one's prediction will be accepted at its face value until after the ballots are counted.

The Wisconsin primaries will take place today and a sweeping victory for La Follette is expected. Roosevelt's name will not appear on the ballot and the Taft men will contest only two or three districts. They have made no general campaign in the state.

MANSLAUGHTER IS CHARGED

Slayer of Schoolmate Insists That Killing Was an Accident—Retells His Story to Police Chief, Who Says There Are Many Changes In Important Details—Mutilation of Body Evidently Made by Degenerate

North Providence, April 2.—Charged with a murder, the sordid details of which equal the famous Durant "belfry murders" of San Francisco, or the notorious Jesse Pomeroy murders and mutilations of Boston, 14-year-old Antonio Mariano was arraigned in the Sixth district court here.

When asked to plead to the charge of murdering his schoolmate, William Mather, the accused Italian sullenly declared "it was an accident."

Judge Ruckert accepted a plea of not guilty to the charge of manslaughter, which had been brought against the boy, and held him in $2000 bonds for a hearing on April 11. The lad was taken to the Sockanosset reform school, where he will be kept a prisoner.

The crowd in the courtroom obtained a glimpse of one additional phase of the case. A few minutes after the conclusion of the hearing the Mariano boy's brother Raphael, 17 years old, was brought in to answer to a charge of resisting an officer in the alleged effort made by the family to prevent the arrest of Antonio. He pleaded not guilty and was held for a hearing on April 12.

Just before taking the boy into court Chief of Police Willis tried to get him to change his story told at midnight, Sunday, when Antonio was led to the spot where the Mather boy's nude and terribly maltreated body had been found. Antonio retold his story, but there were many changes in important details, according to Willis.

"The story is a clever one," said Willis, "and really worthy of an older head, but every bit of positive evidence we have unearthed refutes it. Mather was killed after a terrific struggle, as the ground near where the body was found shows. His clothes were taken off after he was dead, for they were bloody and the body was not.

"Physicians who examined the body tell me that the body was often outraged in death—which was plain to me, and I am no physician. It had been said some of the mutilations were caused by animals. In the first place no animals but a possible stray dog inhabits those woods. In the second place, the mutilations could have been made in only one way—at the hands of a degenerate."

Chief Willis frankly declared that there is a chance that the police will aid the authorities in placing the murderer of the Mather boy in an institution for mental treatment, if it is found that it will be to the best interest of the state.

WITHDRAWS HIS CLAIM

Elmer Swope Admits He Is Not Son of Millionaire Philanthropist

Kansas City, April 2.—Elmer Swope of Martinsburg, W. Va., has withdrawn his claim to the estate of the late Thomas H. Swope and admitted that he was not the son of the millionaire philanthropist. Judgment was then entered in the circuit court in favor of the heirs designated by Colonel Swope's will.

Depositions read revealed a romance of Colonel Swope's early life. It was brought out that he courted a St. Louis girl in 1861, and that he was jilted by her, then became a bachelor for life.

AFTER BAY STATE VOTE

Clark Notifies Foss That His Name Will Go on Primary Ballot

Boston, April 2.—Governor Foss has received a letter from Champ Clark of Missouri notifying him that the latter intends to go on the ballot as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president in this state.

George Harlow, political secretary to Foss, declined to make the letter public. It is stated, however, that the letter was written by the speaker after a conference with Congressman Curley of Massachusetts, and refers to the recent developments in the Democratic party in this state.

GENERAL GRANT

Commander of the Department of the East

ON LEAVE OF ABSENCE

General Grant's Whereabouts Kept Secret to Assure Him a Rest

New York, April 2.—Major General Frederick D. Grant, U. S. A., commander of the department of the east, has left his post at Governor's Island on leave of absence for four months and gone south to recover his health. Announcement to this effect was made by Lieutenant Howze, Grant's aide-de-camp. The announcement follows:

"General Grant was run down in health and not feeling strong. Upon advice of his physicians he took a leave of absence and has gone south to obtain a rest. He purposely left no address so that he would not be bothered with mail."

The departure of General Grant with his family from Governor's Island gave rise to reports that he was seriously ill.

DINOSAURS FOUND IN QUARRY IN UTAH

Monsters of Ages Ago Probably Overwhelmed In Flood

Pittsburgh, April 2.—Dr. W. J. Holland, director of the Carnegie institute museum, who is accounted the highest authority in this country on the diplodoeus and dinosaur, has just received news that strippings in a quarry near Jansen, Utah, have revealed the existence of three or four fossil dinosaurs of huge size, which appear to be lying undisturbed.

The work of excavating has disclosed nearly a dozen skeletons, one-half of which are practically perfect, all the bones lying in place. Holland says it is the greatest collection of sauropod dinosaurs which has ever been found in the history of paleontology.

The quarry is under the supervision of Holland. The bone level now reached is in the bed of an old river, where cobblestones and shells abound with the sand covering. It would seem that the mammoth animals laid down in the river and a flood blanketed them with stones and sand.

WILL PROBE EMERY CASE

Maine Legislature Convenes Again In Special Session

Augusta, Me., April 2.—The Maine legislature, convened in special session March 20 to pass new election laws, authorize a good roads bond issue and redistrict the state for congressmen, met again today, after a week's recess, to elect a United States senator and receive a communication from Governor Plaisted asking that the legislature investigate the charges against Sheriff Emery of York county and, if guilt is found, to prepare an address for his removal from office.

The recess was made necessary by the federal statutes, which prescribe the exact procedure which must be followed in the election of a United States senator.

400,000 MINERS ARE OUT

Head of Union Predicts Speedy Adjustment of Difficulties

Indianapolis, April 2.—With only one or two exceptions, the suspension in the coal mining industry is general today. Approximately 400,000 miners are out of work, the country will miss more than 1,000,000 tons of coal, and the miners are out about $1,000,000 in wages.

President White of the miners says that he expects the bituminous men to ratify the Cleveland agreement and return to work probably by April 20. He also predicts a speedy adjustment of a wage contract in the anthracite field, when the miners and operators meet in Philadelphia on April 10.

CONFESSES TO KNABE MURDER

Sailor Dispels Mystery Which Long Shrouded Tragedy

A DESERTER FROM THE DIXIE

Gives Details of Killing of Noted Woman Doctor, For Which He Says He Was Paid $1500 by Man Named Knight—Has Been Wandering From Place to Place, Prepared to Kill Himself If Captured

Portsmouth, N. H., April 2.—The mystery surrounding the murder of Dr. Helene Knabe, one of the best known of women physicians in the United States, who was found dead, throat slashed from ear to ear, last October in Indianapolis, has been solved.

Seth Nichols, a deserter from the U. S. S. Dixie, who was arrested here last Friday, has confessed to Chief of Police Entwistle that it was he who murdered Dr. Knabe, and that he had been paid $1500 by a man named Knight to desert from the navy and put the doctor out of the way.

The man seemed a nervous wreck. The confinement of the two or three days had broken down his nerve, and he trembled like an aspen during the recital of his confession.

Although the man had been arrested for intoxication and was charged in court with carrying a loaded revolver, he seemed to think that back of these charges was some hint of the Knabe murder.

When he was asked why he carried a revolver he broke down and said that he carried it to commit suicide in case he was caught.

"I do not care what happens to me," Nichols said, the cold sweat standing out on his forehead in great beads. "Ever since I got out of that house, my hands sticky with the blood of a woman I had never seen before, I have been scared I would get caught, and I have been tormented, skipping from city to city to escape detection.

"But I've got to get it off my mind, or I will go crazy. I was drinking the night it happened, so that some of the things are not yet clear. But I know what I did, and I am willing to pay any penalty to get shut of the torments.

"I got $1500 for the job. It is about all gone now, and most of it was used in getting from one place to another. I was in Indianapolis, some time between Oct. 23, when I murdered the woman, visiting my sister, Mrs. Grace Blackman, at 243 East avenue.

"I was around the skating rink, and the barrooms a good deal, and ran into this Knight. I do not remember what his first name is. He was a good dresser, and spent lots of money, and bought lots of drinks.

"Shortly after that I met him in New York, in the Y. M. C. A. there, when the Dixie was in port. It was then that he put it up to me to desert, and skip back to Indianapolis and do the trick for him.

"He told me there was no danger, he would take care of everything but the murder, and he would give me $1500 cold cash. He gave me enough to square the petty officer on the watch, so that they would not chase me and spoil the job.

"I was in Indianapolis a short time when Knight showed up. That night, Oct. 23, he loaded me up pretty well with booze and then together we went to Dr. Knabe's house.

"It was about 2 in the morning. We got in by a back alleyway and, so far as I know, no one saw us. After we got into the house—Knight seemed to have it all fixed so that we could get in—we had to go from room to room till we found the one in which the woman was.

"Knight was right there with me. When we found her, asleep, Knight passed me a light, sharp knife, like a razor, but I don't think it was a razor.

"Then the woman woke up and yelled. Before she could yell more than once or twice I had opened her throat. She struggled some, and had kicked off most of the bed clothes before she finallly became quiet. Then we got out, and I remember wondering how it was that none had heard the woman yelling.

"I did not jump Indianapolis till the next day. I did not know who the woman was till I saw in the papers that the murder had been committed and that the police were after a clue. Then I jumped. And I have been jumping ever since, from place to place, expecting every moment to be pinched and brought up for it.

"I guess it is better to tell all about it and pay whatever penalty is right than to worry myself insane. I might better be dead than crazy, and that is why I carried the gun. I was going to blow my brains out the moment all my cash was gone."

As far as can be ascertained, Nichols' story, much more complete in the official confession, has been borne out by the wires from Indianapolis.

Details of the confession that might give away the case against the man who is implicated have been withheld by the police here.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FRESH FRUIT SHERBETS.

SHERBETS make nice desserts for the special luncheon or dinner. They look so pretty and taste so delicious that a sherbet is just the dainty to finish off the Easter feast.

Some persons boil the sugar and water to a sirup and then add the fruit juice. A tablespoonful of gelatin soaked and dissolved adds to the smoothness of the sherbet. So does the white of an egg added after the sherbet has been frozen.

Sherbets may be made with the juices from canned fruits or with fruit sirup.

With Timely Fruits.

Cranberry Sherbet.—Wash and pick a quart of cranberries. Put into a saucepan with three cupfuls of boiling water and boil five minutes. Mash and boil ten minutes without a cover, then add three cupfuls of sugar and boil five minutes.

Strain, cool and freeze the same as ice cream. After churning ten minutes add the whites of two eggs beaten until stiff, then churn five minutes.

Pack the freezer with alternate layers of ice and salt, two parts ice and one part salt. Serve in ice cream or sherbet cups.

Pineapple Sherbet.—Take a pint of grated pineapple, a pint of sugar, one and a half pints of water. Boil sugar and water until sugar is thoroughly dissolved.

When cool add grated pineapple and juice of two lemons; freeze fast. When partly frozen add beaten whites of two eggs, mix thoroughly, take out dasher, pack and let stand for an hour or more.

Freezing fast makes it light.

With Grapes and Flowers.

Grape Sherbet.—This sherbet may be made with malaga grapes or, better still, with grape juice. Boil two cupfuls of sugar with the grated rind of one lemon and two cupfuls water for five minutes. Soak half a tablespoonful of gelatin in a fourth of a cupful of cold water and pour over it the boiling sugar.

Add a cupful of grape juice and the juice of two lemons. Strain and freeze, adding the beaten white of an egg when the mixture is of the consistency of mush.

Violet Sherbet.—Boil together for five minutes a pound of sugar and a pint of water; add the juice of two lemons. When icy cold add a pint of grape juice and freeze. When frozen stir in a meringue made from the white of an egg and a tablespoonful of powdered sugar and repack. Let this stand one or two hours. Serve in punch or wine glasses garnished with fresh violets or with candied violets.

NOW SHRIMPS ARE IN SEASON.

SHRIMPS are in season from March 15 to June 1 and may be served in many novel ways. Canned shrimps may be bought almost anywhere, and if you care to try them do not deprive yourself of these little crustaceans because you cannot get them fresh from the ocean.

Shrimps are very much like lobsters, only much smaller. If you are fond of lobsters you will probably like shrimps.

Fresh shrimps have the head and shell removed before cooking. They are boiled in salted water for five to ten minutes.

Served In Salads.

Plain Shrimp Salad.—Shell a quart of boiled shrimps. Lay them on lettuce leaves in a salad bowl. Chill some mayonnaise dressing, pour over the shrimps and serve.

Shrimp and Asparagus Salad.—Cut some asparagus stalks into short lengths so that the hard ends may be dispensed with. Add a small can of shrimps that have been drained and rinsed in cold water. Put in a saucepan on the fire. Toss in a little butter and onion juice, but do not allow to brown. Serve with mayonnaise or boiled dressing, using a few chopped capers, a little dry mustard and minced parsley. Garnish with lettuce.

Ways of Cooking.

Creamed Shrimps.—Take a can of shrimps and after removing the refuse melt four teaspoonfuls of butter, add one tablespoonful of flour and stir till smooth. Add one-quarter of a cupful of cream and the shrimps and stir very gently until they are heated. Then add the beaten yolks of two eggs, stirring all the while. As soon as the eggs are in, season with salt and pepper and serve on toast.

Fried Shrimps.—Fried shrimps are nice for luncheon. They may be prepared quickly. Open a can of them and after washing and removing the shells dip in egg, well beaten, and roll in cracker crumbs. Put butter into the frying pan, and when it is hot drop in the shrimps and fry quickly. Serve with tartar sauce.

A Novel Dish.

Shrimp Croustade.—With a big biscuit cutter stamp out as many rounds of bread as there are persons to be served, and with a smaller cutter stamp a round out of the center, leaving a hollow, but not cutting the bread clear through. Fry the cases in a basket in deep, hot fat and fill the center with shrimps picked into pieces and mixed with white sauce.

SOMETHING NEW IN GAS

Enough to Light House a Month May Be Carried In Bottle

Pittsburgh, April 2.—Camping parties and bungalow residents will soon be able to have lighting plants of their own. Dr. Snelling, consulting chemist of the bureau of mines and of the Panama canal commission, now doing laboratory work in the testing station here, has developed a liquid gas of which a little steel bottle will carry enough to light a house for a month.

Snelling puts 2000 cubic feet of gas into a steel container four feet high and six inches in diameter.

Earthquake In Syria

Beirut, Syria, April 2.—A series of severe earthquake shocks were felt throughout the interior of Syria. Buildings were wrecked in many towns, and it is feared that there has been heavy loss of life.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barony. The place is to be sold, and its history and that of the owners, the Quintards, is the subject of discussion by Jonathar. Crenshaw, a business man, a stranger known as Bladen, and Bob Yancy, a farmer, when Hannibal Wayne Hazard, a mysterious child of the old southern family, makes his appearance. Yancy tells how he adopted the boy.

CHAPTER II.—Nathaniel Ferris buys the Barony, but the Quintards deny any knowledge of the boy. Yancy to keep Hannibal. Captain Murrell, a friend of the Quintards, appears and asks questions about the Barony.

CHAPTER III.—Trouble at Scratch Hill, Yancy's home, when Hannibal is kidnaped by Dave Blount, Captain Murrell's agent. Yancy overtakes Blount, gives him a thrashing and secures the boy.

CHAPTER IV.—Yancy is served with a warrant for assaulting Blount. Yancy appears before Squire Balaam, and is discharged with costs for the plaintiff.

CHAPTER V.—Betty Malroy, a friend of the Ferrises, has an encounter with Captain Murrell, who forces his attentions on her, and is rescued by Bruce Carrington, who threatens to whip the captain.

CHAPTER VI.—Betty sets out for her Tennessee home. Carrington takes the same stage. Yancy and Hannibal disappear with Murrell on their trail. He overtakes them in the mountains of Tennessee. Murrell gets Yancy drunk and stabs him in a fight that followed. Hannibal escapes in a canoe.

CHAPTER VII.—Hannibal arrives at the home of Judge Slocum Price.

CHAPTER VIII.—The Judge recognizes in the boy, the grandson of an old time friend. Murrell arrives at Judge's home. Hannibal hears of the finding of Yancy's body. Price arrested as counterfeiter.

CHAPTER IX.—Cavendish family on raft rescue Yancy, who is apparently dead. Price breaks jail.

CHAPTER X.—Betty and Carrington arrive at Belle Plain.

CHAPTER XI.—Hannibal's rifle discloses some startling things to the Judge. Hannibal and Betty meet again.

CHAPTER XII.—Murrell arrives in Belle Plain. Is playing for big stakes.

CHAPTER XIII.—Yancy awakes from long dreamless sleep on board the raft.

CHAPTER XIV.—Judge Price makes startling discoveries in looking up land titles. Charley Norton, a young planter, who assists the judge, is mysteriously assaulted.

CHAPTER XV.—Norton informs Carrington that Betty has promised to marry him. Carrington bids Betty good-bye. Norton is mysteriously shot.

CHAPTER XVI.—More light on Murrell's plots. He plans uprising of negroes.

Betty gave a sign of relief. She had been reproaching herself for her neglect of the child; she had meant to do so much for him and had done nothing! Now it was too late for her personally to interest herself in his behalf, yet before she left for the east she would provide for him. If she had felt it was possible to trust the judge she would have made him her agent, but even in his best aspect he seemed a dubious dependence. Tom, for quite different reasons, was equally out of the question. She thought of Mr. Mahaffy.

"What kind of a man is Mr. Mahaffy, Hannibal?"

"He's an awful nice man, Miss Betty, only he never lets on; a body's got to find it out for his own self—he ain't like the judge."

"Does he—drink, too, Hannibal?" questioned Betty.

"Oh, yes; when he can get the licker, he does." It was evident that Hannibal was cheerfully tolerant of this weakness on the part of the austere Mahaffy. By this time Betty was ready to weep over the child, with his knowledge of shabby vice, and his fresh young faith in those old tatterdemalions.

"But, no matter what they do, they are very, very kind to you?" she continued tremulously.

"Yes, ma'am—why, Miss Betty, they're lovely men!"

"And do you ever hear the things spoken of you learned about at Mrs. Ferris' Sunday-school?"

"When the judge is drunk he talks a heap about 'em. It's beautiful to hear him then; you'd love it, Miss Betty," and Hannibal smiled up sweetly into her face.

"Does he have you go to Sunday-school in Raleigh?"

The boy shook his head.

"I ain't got no clothes that's fitten to wear, nor no pennies to give, but the judge, he 'lows that as soon as he can make a raise I got to go, and he's learning me my letters—but we ain't a book. Miss Betty, I reckon it'd stump you some to guess how he's fixed it for me to learn?"

"He's drawn the letters for you, is that the way?" In spite of herself, Betty was experiencing a certain revulsion of feeling where the judge and Mahaffy were concerned. They were doubtless bad enough, but they could have been worse.

"No, ma'am; he done soaked the label off one of Mr. Pegloe's whisky bottles and pasted it on the wall just as high as my chin, so's I can see it good, and he's learning me that-a-way! Maybe you've seen the kind of bottle I mean—Pegloe's Mississippi Pilot; Pure Corn Whisky?" But Hannibal's bright little face fell. He was quick to see that the educational system devised by the judge did not impress Betty at all favorably. She drew him into her arms.

"You shall have my books—the books I learned to read out of when I was a little girl, Hannibal!"

"I like learning from the label pretty well," said Hannibal loyally.

"But you'll like the books better, dear, when you see them. I know just where they are, for I happened on them on a shelf in the library only the other day."

After they had found and examined the books and Hannibal had grudgingly admitted that they might possess certain points of advantage over the label, he and Bety went out for a walk. It was now late afternoon and the sun was sinking behind the wall of the forest that rose along the Arkansas coast. Their steps had led them to the terrace—where they stood looking off into the west. It was here that Betty had said good-by to Bruce Carrington—it might have been months ago, and it was only days. She thought of Charley—Charley, with his youth and hope and high courage—unwittingly enough she had led him on to his death! A sob rose in her throat.

Hannibal looked up into her face. The memory of his own loss was never very long absent from his mind, and Miss Betty had been the victim of a similarly sinister tragedy. He recalled those first awful days of loneliness through which he had lived, when there was no Uncle Bob—soft-voiced, smiling and infinitely companionable.

"Why, Hannibal, you are crying—what about, dear?" asked Betty suddenly.

"No, ma'am; I ain't crying," said Hannibal stoutly, but his wet lashes gave the lie to his words.

"Are you homesick—do you wish to go back to the judge and Mr. Mahaffy?"

"No, ma'am—it ain't that—I was just thinking—"

"Thinking about what, dear?"

"About my Uncle Bob." The small face was very wistful.

"Oh—and you still miss him so much, Hannibal?"

"I bet I do—I reckon anybody who knew Uncle Bob would never get over missing him; they just couldn't, Miss Betty! The judge is mighty kind, and so is Mr. Mahaffy—they're awful kind, Miss Betty, and it seems like they get kinder all the time—but with Uncle Bob, when he liked you, he just laid himself out to let you know it!"

"That does make a great difference, doesn't it?" agreed Betty sadly, and two piteous tearful eyes were bent upon him.

"Don't you reckon if Uncle Bob is alive, like the judge says, and he's ever going to find me, he had ought to be here by now?" continued Hannibal anxiously.

"But it hasn't been such a great while, Hannibal; it's only that so much has happened to you. If he was very badly hurt it may have been weeks before he could travel; and then when he could, perhaps he went back to that tavern to try to learn what had become of you. But we may be quite certain he will never abandon his search until he has made every possible effort to find you, dear! That means he will sooner or later come to west Tennessee, for there will always be the hope that you have found your way here."

"Sometimes I get mighty tired waiting, Miss Betty," confessed the boy. "Seems like I just couldn't wait no longer—" He sighed gently, and then his face cleared. "You reckon he'll come most any time, don't you, Miss Betty?"

"Yes, Hannibal; any day or hour!"

"Whoop!" muttered Hannibal softly under his breath. Presently he asked: "Where does that branch take you to?" He nodded toward the bayou at the foot of the terraced bluff.

"It empties into the river," answered Betty.

Hannibal saw a small skiff beached among the cottonwoods that grew along the water's edge and his eyes lighted up instantly. He had a juvenile passion for boats.

"Why, you got a boat, ain't you, Miss Betty?" This was a charming and an important discovery.

"Would you like to go down to it?" inquired Betty.

"'Deed I would! Does she leak any, Miss Betty?"

"I don't know about that. Do boats usually leak, Hannibal?"

"Why, you ain't ever been out rowing her, Miss Betty, have you?—and there ain't no better fun than rowing a boat!" They had started down the path.

"I used to think that, too, Hannibal; how do you suppose it is that when people grow up they forget all about the really nice things they might do?"

"What use is she if you don't go rowing in her?" persisted Hannibal.

"Oh, but it is used. Mr. Tom uses it in crossing to the other side where they are clearing land for cotton. It saves him a long walk or ride about the head of the bayou."

"Like I should take you out in her, Miss Betty?" demanded Hannibal with palpitating anxiety.

They had entered the scattering timber when Betty paused suddenly with a startled exclamation, and Hannibal felt her fingers close convulsively about his. The sound she had heard might have been only the rustling of the wind among the branches overhead in that shadowy silence, but Betty's nerves, the placid nerves of youth and perfect health, were shattered.

"Didn't you hear something, Hannibal?" she whispered fearfully.

For answer Hannibal pointed mysteriously, and glancing in the direction he indicated, Betty saw a woman advancing along the path toward them. The look of alarm slowly died out of his eyes.

"I think it's the overseer's niece," she told Hannibal, and they kept on toward the boat.

The girl came rapidly up the path which closely followed the irregular line of the shore in its windings. Once she was seen to stop and glance back over her shoulder, her attitude intent and listening, then she hurried forward again. Just at the boat the three met.

"Good evening!" said Betty pleasantly.

The girl made no reply to this; she merely regarded Betty with a fixed stare. At length she broke the silence abruptly.

"I got something I want to say to you—you know who I am, I reckon?" She was a girl of about Betty's own age, with a certain dark, sullen beauty and that physical attraction which

"You Needn't Be Afraid, I Got Something Important to Say."

Tom, in spite of his vexed mood, had taken note of earlier in the day.

"You are Bess Hicks," said Betty.

"Make the boy go back toward the house a spell—I got something I want to say to you." Betty hesitated. She was offended by the girl's manner which was as rude as her speech. "I ain't going to hurt you—you needn't be afraid of me. I got something important to say—send him off, I tell you; there ain't no time to lose!" The girl stamped her foot impatiently.

Betty made a sign to Hannibal and he passed slowly back along the path. He went unwillingly, and he kept his head turned that he might see what was done, even if he were not to hear what was said.

"That will do, Hannibal—wait there—don't go any farther!" Betty called after him when he had reached a point sufficiently distant to be out of hearing of a conversation carried on in an ordinary tone. "Now, what is it? Speak quickly if you have anything to tell me!"

"I got a heap to say," answered the girl with a scowl. Her manner was still fierce and repellant, and she gave Betty a certain jealous regard out of her black eyes which the latter was at a loss to explain. "Where's Mr. Tom?" she demanded.

"Tom? Why, about the place, I suppose—in his office, perhaps." So it had to do with Tom. . . . Betty felt sudden disgust with the situation.

"No, he ain't about the place, either! He done struck out for Memphis two hours after sun-up, and what's more, he ain't coming back here tonight—" There was a moment of silence. The girl looked about apprehensively. She continued, fixing her black eyes on Betty: "You're here alone at Belle Plain—you know what happened when Mr. Tom started for Memphis last time—I reckon you-all ain't forgot that!"

Betty felt a pallor steal over her face. She rested a hand that shook on the trunk of a tree to steady herself. The girl laughed shortly.

"Don't be so scared; I reckon Belle Plain's as good as his if anything happened to you?"

Disposition of Arbuckle's Estate of $20,000,000 Is In Doubt

New York, April 2.—The most careful search through the papers and effects of the late John Arbuckle, the coffee merchant, who died last Wednesday, leaving an estate conservatively estimated at $20,000,000, has failed to turn up any will, and neither his relatives nor his lawyers know of any.

Arbuckle left neither children nor widow. His nearest relatives are his sisters, Mrs. Robert Jamieson and Miss Christina Arbuckle, and the children of Mrs. Jamieson, one of whom, William Arbuckle, some time ago succeeded to the managership of the mammoth business.

Favorite charities of Arbuckle's are in the balance if no will is found. Several well known charities not only were founded by him, but were practically supported by his philanthropy.

DONOVAN IS SET FREE

No Charge Against Boston Man Who Fatally Stabbed Daughter

Boston, April 2.—Daniel J. Donovan, who stabbed his daughter, Ellen, at his home, was brought to the South Boston court and a warrant for murder was asked for by the police, but Judge Fallon would not grant a warrant on any charge. Donovan was dismissed from custody.

Judge Fallon was convinced by what the members of Donovan's family told him at a private conference that the tragedy was the result of an accident and that there was no malice or intention on the part of the accused father.

Donovan was sitting in the kitchen of his home, cutting tobacco for his pipe. His daughter placed a bottle of smelling salts under his nose. Choked and angry, Donovan thrust at the girl with his knife, stabbing her in the abdomen. The girl died a few hours later.

FOUR INDICTED IN EVERGLADES CASE

Result of Charges Made to Secretary of Agriculture

Washington, April 2.—Indictments growing out of the Florida Everglades investigation in the department of agriculture were returned by the federal grand jury here against C. G. Elliott, A. D. Moorhouse, R. P. Teele and F. E. Singleton.

The defendants are charged individually with having approved or presented false vouchers against the government.

Elliott formerly was chief of drainage investigations in the department of agriculture; Moorhouse was assistant chief; Teele was formerly an assistant chief of irrigation investigations, and Singleton an accountant.

The charges against the men were made to Secretary Wilson by J. O. Wright, formerly an assistant to Elliott in the department, but now chief drainage engineer of the state of Florida.

HOUSE PASSES WOOL BILL

Twenty Progressive Republicans Vote With the Democrats

Washington, April 2.—The Democratic wool bill was passed by the house by a vote of 189 to 92, with twenty progressive Republicans voting for it. Representative Rucker of Colorado and Representative Francis of Ohio were the only Democrats who did not line up with the majority.

Representative Payne moved to recommit the bill with instructions to the committee to report the Republican substitute, but that was lost by a vote of 169 to 108.

Supporters of the bill said it would not cut the government's revenue, but would save more than $50,000,000 a year to consumers because of the readjustment of rates. All efforts by the Republicans to amend the bill to increase the rates were lost.

SUPT. PARLIN SHORN OF POWER

Cambridge School Committee Curtail Power of Supt.

LIVELY SESSION

What is said to be a movement on the part of the minority of the members of the Cambridge school board to oust Supt. Frank E. Parlin took place, Monday when the board, after organizing, passed new rules after vigorous opposition, during which Supt. Parlin's name was frequently mentioned.

After organizing, when John W. Bradley, one of the New Democratic members who defeated Prof. Beale, for the chairmanship the question of changes in rules came up. The discussion was a lively one.

Heretofore nominations and appointments of teachers has been made directly by the superintendent. There has been much disatisfaction with this method which resulted in thousands of Cambridge women registering for the election and practically all of them voted.

Under the new rules as adopted it is said that Supt. Parlin is shorn of his power of appointment of teachers.

An evening paper in reporting the meeting of the Cambridge School board says:

After a stormy session at which it organized for the year, the school committee, after electing James B. Vallely, democrat, chairman, passed a set or rules under which Supt. of Schools Parlin, though not yet ousted from his office, is almost entirely robbed of his powers.

The democrats on the board are Chairman Vallely, John F. Gadsby and John W. Bradley, while the opponents are Mrs. E. A. Whitman and C. A. Reynolds

The fight commenced when Bradley moved that Vallely's election should be made unanimous. Reynolds stated that such a motion should come from the opposition, instead of from the majority.

Gadsby then offered a motion to change the rules in such a manner as practically to remove nearly all the powers of Supt. Parlin, whose administration was one of the principal issues of the campaign between Bradley and Prof. Beale of Harvard, whom he succeeded. It would make his exercise of the powers subject to a subcommittee of three of the school committee. This would remove nearly all his power over the appointment of teachers, selection of text books, courses of study, etc. Parlin being unable to do much of anything without the approval of the sub-committee of the board.

Parlin would, of course, have a right of appeal to the full board.

On this measure the minority put up a strong fight, terming an attempt to "railroad through" such rules an "outrageous act which would lead to public condemnation." They tried to get the time for considering the rules extended.

At one time Bradley called Reynolds, who opposing the measure, an obstructionist, and said the majority should rule.

The opposition raised several points of order, but on each Chairman Vallely ruled in favor of the majority. The minority then endeavored to delay the consideration of the measure, and to have each change in the rules considered separately, but was defeated.

Supt. Parlin is well known in Quincy, where he was Superintendent of schools for several years, resigning to accept the position at Cambridge.

OPIE DILDOCK.

Dr. W. G. Kendall of Atlantic, the veteran Boston terrier breeder of the country, having been prominently and actively identified with that breed for over 30 years, believes he has in Opie Dildock, his latest championship prospect, one of the best terriers he has ever bred. First and last, Dr. Kendall has introduced into the show ring and to the members of fancy a number of seemingly invincible animals, and it is believed by the Doctor and his friends that Opie Dildock will eventually become one of the biggest of all his winners.

"He will take a lot of beating," was Dr. Kendall's only comment when asked how he regarded Opie Dildock. He is a rich dark color with blaze, clean-cut head, cobby body, straight back and short screw tail, so typical of the breeder and of Dr. Kendall's strain.

CURRENT WIT and HUMOR

A Natural Bent.

"Professor," said Miss Skylight, "I want you to suggest a course in life for me. I have thought of journalism—"

"What are your own inclinations?"

"Oh, my soul yearns and throbs and pulsates with an ambition to give the world a life work that shall be marvelous in its scope and weirdly entrancing in the vastness of its structural beauty!"

"Woman, you're born to be a milliner."—Tit-Bits.

Easily Won.

"The truth is," said the young man after he had beaten about the bush as long as he dared to, "I want to marry your daughter."

"I rather suspected it. You will pardon me if I ask you frankly what your prospects are."

"Well, I own a third interest in a cow that produces nearly two pounds of butter a day when she is at her best."

"God bless you, my children—I mean my son."

A Prize.

Little Wife—See what I have bought you for a birthday present—I got it at an auction—a genuine, antique, old fashioned bootjack, such as your colonial ancestors used.

Husband—I haven't worn boots for twenty years.

Little Wife—I know. Won't it look lovely when it's decorated and hung up?

DIDN'T UNDERSTAND.

Visitor (looking at painting)—Why, that's an old master you have there.

Mr. Parvenew—Yes, but the frame is new.

Truth.

Down at the bottom of the well
Lies truth—an adage old.
Yet truth, forsooth, is like a bell
That's very seldom tolled.
—Judge.

A New List.

Teacher—How many zones has the earth?

Pupil—Five.

Teacher—Correct. Name them.

Pupil—Temperate zone, intemperate, canal, horried, and o.—Life.

His Use for Soap.

"Lady," said Meandering Mike, "would you lend me a cake of soap?"

"Do you mean to tell me you want soap."

"Yes'm. Me partner's got de hiccups an' I want to scare him."

Perhaps.

Her husband boldly aviates,
She seems to that inured.
Perhaps, as Madam Rumor states,
He has his life insured.

Sure to Guess Wrong.

It was the busy hour in the quick lunch establishment. The overworked waitress hurried up to the waiting customer.

"Tea or coffee?" she demanded.

He smiled pleasantly upon her.

"Don't tell me," he whispered. "Let me guess."

The Invalid.

"You know that ball player who had a glass arm, a weak knee and a game ankle—the one who only finished in five games during the season?"

"Yes; what about him?"

"He's going to work in a stoneyard through the winter."

The Mightier One.

"Pop, what is the female of the species?"

"It's the lady on the silver dollar, my son."

NEW YORK GLEANINGS.

In Fashions Field—Latest Blouses—Cuts—Colors—Materials and Accessories.

There seems to be no season of the year when a shop or department with a display of pretty new blouses does not prove attractive, and this is especially so at this time when one wants a smart top to freshen up a worn suit or go well with the new "tailor-made." There is no end to the variety shown in these useful and becoming garments—the only novel feature is the "Coatee" or peplum below the belt line. This assumes various forms. It may be continuous all round extending down from six to nine inches for slight girlish figures, or it may be as long but appear only at front and back which is becoming to people who wish to increase the length of the waist or it may be cut away from the front and gradually increase in length to the back in regular coat fashion.

LINGERIE WAISTS.

Lingerie waists are made in this style quite as much as darker ones, and, where length of line is desired, trimmings are continuous on waist and peplum. More waists are shown in the shops with sleeves set in than cut in one, but the imported garments and most exclusive showings still cling to the Peasant cut. The strictly mannish shirt or washable silk with soft turnover collar held by a link button and cuffs similarly fastened is a favorite for run about and school wear, and in this there is usually no attempt to match the suit in color, but all other waists are selected to match the dress and often have a little of the dress material carried up on the waist in bib or shoulder strappings to give that continuity of effect that improves any costume.

THREE OR MORE MATERIALS.

Three or more materials are often used in such waists and net linings are increasingly popular since these last well, are light, and permit of elaborate effects with little work. The outer material is usually chiffon-cloth—heavier than chiffon and wearing better—Marquisette or net in the color of the skirt. The gamp and cuffs or ruffles that finish the sleeve are either plain net, Point d'esprit, or shadow lace; at any rate of some very thin transparent material. Trimmings of velvet ribbon caught down with pearl, gilt or silver buttons are new and pretty. Patchy pieces of heavy, effective lace are put on the net lining and show stylishly through the thin outer material, or handsome heavy lace in Macrame or other weaves is put on bretelle fashion over the chiffon.

TAFFETA COATEES.

Taffeta coatees are very fashionable especially in shot or changeable weaves, and may be worn as real little outside coats over a frock or as tops to the tailor-made skirt. Failles are included among silk suiting and Armures and a host of other old-time weaves are back again for favor.

LONG COATS.

Long coats of serge and silk are very much in the running and bib and apron effects are on all sorts of garments.

TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYER HENLEY LAUNCHED THIS NOON

Is Christened by Miss Constance Henley Kane a Descendant of Capt. Robert Henley

Official Party are Entertained at Lunch After the Launch

Torpedo Boat Destroyer Henley was successfully launched at 11.33 o'clock noon today at the Fore River Ship yard in the presence of a small party of officials of the Argentine navy, the officials of the Fore River Ship Building Co., and a party of friends of the sponsor, Miss Constance Henley Kane, from the Charlestown Navy yard.

The launch was a private one yet none the less interesting for there is always something new about the launch of a naval vessel. Miss Kane, whose home is in New York arrived in Boston, Tuesday evening and came to Quincy this morning on the train leaving Boston at 10.45. With her as her official party were, her father Danbridge Henley Kane, her brother John Danbridge Henley Kane, her uncle Lt. Col. Theodore Porter Kane, U. S. M. C. commander of the marine barracks at the Charlestown Navy yard and his aid, Lt. Charles A. Osteman.

The party were met at the Quincy depot on the arrival of the train a few minutes after 11 o'clock by the automobile of the Fore River Co. and taken direct to the ship yard where they were met by Admiral Bowles who presented Miss Kane with a handsome bouquet of American beauty roses.

After greetings the party were escorted to the launching stand, that had been erected about the bow of the vessel. Work knocking away the shores and driving home the wedges which lifted the Henley onto her cradle was immediately commenced. The launching party were much interested in the making ready of the ves-

OFFICE FORCE HOLD BANQUET

Employees of Boston Gear Works Held Annual Gathering

UNION HALL

The annual banquet of the office force and superintendents of the Boston Gear Works was held Tuesday evening at Union hall attended by about seventy. The banquet was served promptly at 6.45 by caterer Beaudry, the menu being as follows:

Mongul Soup
Olives Green Peas Radishes
Escalloped Oysters Corn Fritters
Fried Chicken Maryland Style
Delmonico Potatoes
Harlequin ice cream Frozen pudding
Cheese, Crackers Coffee

Dinner over and the tables removed seats were arranged in a semi circle, for the postprandial exercises and social hour, with J. H. E. Binnean as toast master. Vocal selections were given by Ruth Cahill, C. W. Sayco, and Edna Fowler and there were brief remarks by many of those present who confined themselves largely to the work of the Boston Gear Works, among them being G. L. Colburn, Paul Frailand, James L. Visitte, C. B. Grant, A. Stowles, Charles F. Austin, F. B. Miller, C. E. Hallquist, George Rantall, J. A. Horton, Charles Burgess, George Martineau, Arthur Bellow and William Lee.

In addition to the speaking and vocal selections there was a piano duet by Miss Clara DeCoste and Miss Margaret Dondere, whose efforts received a well deserved encore.

Original poems, that had to do with several of the employees at the gear works were read by Charles Burgess and William Lee. A piano solo by J. H. E. Riinmur was followed by stereopticon views and illustrated songs.

Late in the evening a buffet dining table and six chairs were presented to Miss Ida J. Williams, one of the office clerks who is about to become a bride. She was asked to give her ideas on matrimony and in reply said that owing to her nerves being somewhat unstrung by the most pleasing gift she begged to be excused.

Medals for the best speeches were awarded, the first going to Arthur Stowell while C. E. Hallquist received the dumb prize, as it is called. This brought the evening, which had been one of pleasure to all, to a close.

QUICK RUN OF AUTO CHEMICAL

An alarm from box 151 at 5.05 this morning called the fire department to the home of C. J. MacDonald at 128 Davis street, Wollaston Park.

On their arrival a small blaze was discovered in the poultry house in the rear which was extinguished with slight damage.

The fire was caused by the defective lamp of a brooder and as the blaze had not gained headway when discovered a fine lot of white Plymouth Rocks was saved. The recall sounded at 5.20.

The residents of the vicinity are loud in their praises for the speed of the new auto chemical which arrived at the same time as the Wollaston apparatus.

SALARY TO BE INCREASED

The Ways and Means committee has reported favorably upon a bill introduced by George L. Mayberry, which provides for a raise in salary for the judge of probate and insolvency for Norfolk County. The salary of the position is now $4000. per annum, and the new bill establishes it at $4500. per annum.

This is a slight modification of the original bill which sought to establish the Probate judges salary at $5000. but the Ways and Means committee thought that was a bit more than the county should stand at this time.

DECORATIONS WERE PRETTY

Bohemian Supper and Sale, Park and Downs Church

THE COMMITTEES

The novelty of a Bohemian supper was enjoyed at the Park and Downs church Tuesday evening, being served in conjunction with an Easter sale of linens and other articles by the Women's Guild.

Individual tables were attractively distributed around the vestry and the would be diners purchased their food from prettily decorated booths in the supper room.

One of the attractions of the food booths was the jovial chef in the person of Lieutenant Wilson who kept every one in good humor.

The supper committee was composed of Mrs. James D. Wilson, Mrs. L. I. Mosman, Mrs. Charles Richardson, Mrs. George Baxter, Mrs. H. B. Letson, Mrs. A. R. Muir, Miss Fannie Fraser and Mrs. C. A. Boynton.

The linen table was most artistic, wisteria with a background of green, forming the decoration. It was in charge of Mrs. Charles F. Bryant, assisted by Mrs. E. M. Brown, Mrs. Charles Chase, and Mrs. William S. Kershaw.

Under a canopy of green, Mrs. Fred MacMulkin and Mrs. Fred Robinson, presided with candy on sale.

The gingham booth was in charge of Mrs. W. S. Wood, and old rose formed an effective decoration.

In a corner of the vestry an obliging goose was stationed which, upon payment of a small fee, distributed grabs to children, young and old. In charge of the bird were Mrs. Celia McKay and Mrs. Frank C. Knowlton.

Although weather conditions were not of the best, the supper and sale was attended by a goodly number and was a success in every way.

LADIES' NIGHT.

Sixty-five or more people are to attend the ladies' night at the Y. M. C. A. on Thursday, April 11. A good program has been arranged, the artists including Mrs. Spooner and Mrs. Albert Vaile who will sing and recite. This ladies' night will be the general wind up of the local gym and should prove to be a great success.

After the entertainment prizes for the senior trophy and bowling tournament will be given out. The committee has arranged for everybody to be well taken care of and the affair should be a pleasant windup of the season.

Daughters of St. George Holds its Annual Affair

ELECTA HALL

An entertainment and dance, the memory of which will be retained for a long time by those who attended, took place Tuesday evening in Electa hall, under the auspices of English Ivy Lodge, 116, Daughters of St. George. The affair is held annually and this occasion eclipsed any held in previous years, the hall being taxed to its capacity.

An entertainment, which proved a source of special enjoyment, consumed the early part of the evening. It was opened by a piano solo by William Wilson.

Songs were rendered by John Grant George Davey, Dorothy Low and John Norris. All of these singers acquitted themselves in a manner that evoked prolonged applause.

A reading by Miss Louise Moyle was greatly appreciated, while a duet by Thomas and Arthur Newcomb was the occasion for repeated encores. Arthur Tremayne favored with a reading that caused loud applause.

A reading by Miss Irene Esterbrook and a whistling solo by William Collins, both of which enraptured the audience, brought a most successful entertainment to a close.

Dancing then followed and was in order till midnight. The dance order comprised fourteen regular numbers, with four extras, the features of which were the "Leap Year Affinity" and the moonlight waltz.

A short intermission took place at 10.30, during which refreshments, consisting of ice cream, cake, coffee and sandwiches were served.

The committee in charge included Mrs. Charles Jones, Mrs. Emma Newcomb, Mrs. Emily Higgs, Mrs. Minnie Tregaska, Mrs. Emily Moyle, Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, Mrs. Elizabeth Beer, Miss Jennie Beer and Miss Mettie Rundle.

ROOSEVELT RALLIES.

Fully 1000 rallies in the various sections of this State are being planned by the Roosevelt forces. The Roosevelt leaders intend to have rallies in every city, town and hamlet in Massachuestts during the campaign. In many cities and towns a series of Roosevelt rallies will be held.

The Roosevelt leaders say that as nearly all of the press is against Col. Roosevelt they will adopt the method of getting their side of the issue of the campaign to the people. They declare they are eager for the fray and confident of the result, all they want, they say, is to have the real issues presented fairly to the Republican voters. The big rally campaign which is planned by the Roosevelt leaders will be launched in a few days.

Three rallies have already been scheduled by them for this week. Tomorrow night there will be a rally in Somerville and Friday night, one will be held in Campello.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

EASTER MUSIC

Pastors and choirmasters of Quincy are notified that their programs of Easter music must be in The Ledger office by Thursday, April 4, to insure publication in the Friday and Saturday Ledger.

A coal strike is an endurance test between the shivers of the public and the hunger of the operatives. The operatives coupons are not a factor.

Congress cannot be expected to pay attention to anticipated coal strike sufferings until all the members are provided with marble post offices.

Astonishing claims are being made by the political managers, but some remnants of the earth's surface are not yet fenced into their back yards.

It is inevitable that a new party should be formed as often as our lawmakers neglect to provide offices enough to go around.

Capt. Scott is going to stay at the South Pole to get more "data". If he thinks "data" is going to sell his lecture tickets he needs a new press agent.

There is much criticism of the new senator from New Mexico, but it they had sent their best man how awully lonely he would be down in Washington.

Owing to the surprising self-restraint of the Small Boy element of Washington, President Taft was not annoyed by needless pulling at his door bell as an April Fool joke.

Yelling the Socialist "L'Internationale" through the streets may be all right, but you would feel better to go down to the ball ground and holler "Slide, Kelly, slide."

The government that did not provide police protection would be called inefficient. The coal strike threatens to take fire away from the people, and the world had fires long before it had police.

The National Mothers' Congress should not bother about babies, but take up questions that really worry the modern Mother, like how to establish a long suit at "no trumps" when you don't have good re-entry cards.

The political manager, knowing that all his delegates were elected by the free and untrammelled voice of the sovereign people, and all the other fellows by the machinations of wicked politicians can claim that the god of battles is wearing his campaign button.

FRIVOLOUS EASTER ASPECTS.

In the minds of many people, Easter suggests mostly spring millinery, colored eggs, rabbits, post cards, and other illogical methods of telling the world that the Lord has risen.

Even the anthems that the choir is practising may not have the worshipful spirit. Sometimes you could shut your eyes, and if you did not catch the words, you could dream yourself at a comic opera.

The chorus of men has a perfect two step rhythm. You could imagine it sung by the camp of bandits who are about to seize the soprano for ransom. Then comes the haunting love song of the tenor. You could fancy him making eyes at the heroine through the stage shrubbery.

As for the clothes, it is customary to study spring styles Easter day by posting yourself at the door of a large and fashionable church. But freakishness often cures itself and fashion is fickle. In the large cities such a jostling mob has turned out to see the Easter parade, that the higher-ups have fled to more exclusive scenes.

When Miss Sophie Czelusniak, boarding house waitress fresh from Poland, appears with a $3 tropical foliage hat, surmounting her snub nose, older residents are apt to retire from the game, leaving new finery in the seclusion of the hat box.

Nevertheless, the Easter thought has two sides. It not merely brings the sweet and solemn confidence that the grave has lost its sting, and that death is an illusion, but it stands for the renewal of all life, in large things and small.

All the mirth of the spring-tide finds natural expression. It tells of the greening of the fields, of the rise of the budding plant from seared Mother Earth, of the frolicsome young lamb besides its mother.

You can no more prevent womanly beauty from blossoming Easter day, or the choir from singing music with rhythm and sparkle, than you can go out in the fields and tell the flowers they would better not bloom. But let the blooming proceed from pure joyousness, not because the crocus wants to outshine the daffodil!

THE ELLIS MILK BILL.

Few people realize how fair to producers the Ellis bill is. Their interests are very carefully safeguarded. At least two of the five members of the board which is to pass the regulations must be practical milk producers. This regulation board was devised solely for the purpose of giving the producers a voice in the matter. The original bill put the passage of the regulations, as well as their administration, in the hands of the State Board of Health and this compromise was made in the interest of the producers. The five members of the board passing the regulations will be appointed by the Governor with the consent of the Council. Producers need have no fear that men unfavorable to them will be appointed.

The Ellis bill does not abolish the courts as some would have you believe, and if any unreasonable regulations should be passed they would be declared void by the courts.

The bill will be amended by the addition of two more safeguards. I.—No regulations shall become effective until approved by the Governor and Council. 2. Before being sent to the Governor for his approval, an opportunity will be given for a public hearing at which the producers can make known their criticisms of the proposed regulations.

In view of all these safeguards can it be said that there is any chance whatever of doing any injustice to producers? As in most laws only a few careless and negligent producers will be interfered with in any way by the passage of the bill, and it is in the interest of the public that these few should be made to "clean up" as they constitute the menace to the health of the consumers and to the business of the producers.

The fatal defect in the Meaney bill is that the regulations are not administered by the State Board of Health as they are in the Ellis bill. The Meaney bill creates a new state administrative department dealing with milk health matters, in effect a second State Board of Health. Such a division of administrative responsibility would be not only expensive but disastrous. Milk health work and other health work are so closely inter-related that it is absolutely essential that they be administered by the same central board if we are to secure the maximum results in the prevention of sickness and death, not to mention the financial burdens which these bring with them.

CONTINUITY IN ADVERTISING.

The subject is frequently discussed, as to whether a big advertising splarge at intervals, or a smaller advertisement inserted regularly, will produce the most effect.

All our experience tends to the belief, that there is nothing to compare with regularity in placing your business news before the people.

Our modern life is so full of interests and most people live in so hurried a way, that public attention is fickle. The big ad makes a splendid appearance, but the constant dropping wears away the stone sooner than the occasional hard shower.

Psychology teaches that nothing effects the human mind like repetition. If a man of very striking appearance passed by your place of business only at long intervals, you would scarcely recollect him from time to time. If a person of very ordinary appearance goes by your place every day regularly for a little time, his face becomes firmly fixed in your mind.

The merchant who will advertise regularly, even if only in a small space, but each time giving some real news about his offerings, will be surprised to see how the public will look for him in his regular space, and be disappointed if he fails to appear.

TWO SIDES TO QUESTION.

Whatever may be alleged in favor of continued increases in wages it cannot for a moment be contended that they are warranted by improved business conditions. In some few cases wages doubtless have been abnormally small, but in the majority of cases they have been fully as high as the business can stand. In the building trades, more particularly in stone and brick work they are absolutely prohibitory and still the workmen are trying to push them higher. Men cannot build who would because of the enormous expense.—Waltham Free Press.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CHURCH

ON LEAVE OF ABSENCE

No Official Record of the Sickness of General Grant

Washington, April 3.—There is no official record in the war department of the reported illness of Major General Frederick D. Grant. He is now on ordinary leave of absence and the surgeon general's office has not granted or recommended sick leave.

It is a fact, however, that for the past fortnight rumors have been in circulation, coming from New York, Grant's headquarters, to the effect that he is suffering from a very serious ailment of his throat.

ADAMS CHAPTER D. R.

There was a pleasant gathering Monday afternoon at the birthplace of President John Adams of members of Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution and guests. The hostesses were Mrs. E. Granville Pratt, Mrs. George T. Magee and Mrs. Osborne Rogers.

A short business session was followed by an entertaining program. Mrs. Henry P. King of Milton was a guest of the Chapter and read a short paper, telling of her visit to All Hallows church in Barking, England, where John Quincy Adams and Louise Catherine Johnson were married. Mrs. King presented to the chapter a photograph of their marriage certificate.

William Sumner Appleton, corresponding secretary of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities addressed the meeting making special mention of the Shirley Eustice house in Roxbury which the Society is trying to save.

The hostesses of the afternoon served tea, cake and confections and a social chat over the teacups brought the meeting to a close.

The annual meeting of the National D. R. is to be held this year in Boston in May.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The next meeting of the Quincy Women's club will be of special local interest as "Quincy—Dead or Alive?" is to be debated under the auspices of the Civics committee and $25 is to be voted after the debate to the best civic improvement suggested by the debate.

It promises to be spirited and entertaining. Members are privileged to bring men guests by securing the usual guest tickets. There will be good music and a fine meeting is assured.

A meeting of the public health department of the State Federation is to be held tomorrow (Thursday) afternoon at 2 o'clock in Brockton in the Porter Church vestry. All federated club women are invited to attend. The speakers and subjects are; Local Tuberculosis by Rev. W. B. Geoghegan, Health Inspection in Factories by Dr. Wm. Hall Coon, Moral Reform from a Physician's Standpoint, by Dr. Lurana A. Chubbuck, and Sex Hygiene by Dr. Evangeline W. Young. Mrs. Francis Abele, Jr., will represent the Quincy club.

CITY FEDERATION.

A preliminary meeting for the formation of a City Federation of Women's Clubs was held at the headquarters of the New England Women's Club Saturday afternoon. Mrs. George W. Perkins of the Roxburghe Club was elected chairman and Mrs. S. P. Leighton of East Boston secretary. Seventy-three delegates from clubs all over the city were present, representing about 40 organizations.

A constitution and bylaws were drawn up and adopted, and the following nominationg committee was elected: Mrs. E. C. R. Whiton, president of the Dorchester Woman's Club; Mrs. George W. Pfeiffer of the Charity Club, Mrs. Tremere of the Jamaica Plain Tuesday Club, Miss Mary Ladd of the New England Woman's Club and Mrs. G. W. Salisbury of the Brighthelmstone Club. The purposes of the federation are to be purely civic in character.

FOR FEDERATION PRESIDENT.

Mrs. Philip Carpenter of New York was nominated for president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at the meeting of Sorosis, "the mother of clubs," as it is called, held in New York, Monday, at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The biennial convention where her name will be presented, meets in San Francisco June 25, and a strong committee under the leadership of Mrs. Tod Helmuth, who presented Mrs. Carpenter's name, will manage the campaign.

Mrs. Carpenter is one of the best known clubwomen in the country. She has been president of the New York State Federation and is a member of many clubs.

She is well-known to Massachusetts clubwomen, as she attended the ninth biennial convention held here in June, 1908, when she was serving on the board of directors of the general federation.

It is said Mrs. Carpenter will be opposed by Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker of Texas, who has also held office in the general federation and is a prominent clubwoman.

THE COMING BIENNIAL.

The recent visit of Mrs. J. E. Cowles vice-president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, to San Francisco, to confer with the local biennial board, was of great value to the work in hand. Mrs. Cowles heard the reports of all the committees, local committee chairmen, and advised with them, and was taken about the city to look at the halls and auditoriums. It is probable that the hall, the auditorium, the halls for conferences, and the state's headquarters will all be in one block, which will be to the advantage of the visiting club women, and it is also proposed to serve a luncheon in the building where the conferences will be held, so as to avoid the necessity of going down-town between the morning and afternoon sessions. There are some family hotels within walking distance of the auditorium, but the larger hotels are down town and within walking distance of each other.

The local programme committee has been assigned the task of providing a half hour of music for the evening sessions. This has been put in the hands of a local committee, Mme. Emilia Togeth, the state chairman of music; Mrs. David Hirschler and Miss Henrietta Stadmuller, who are presidents of musical clubs in the city of San Francisco.

The Santa Clara Valley club women are planting sweet peas and petunias along the highways and byways of the valley, so as to greet the convention in its trip through the valley with color and fragrance.

GENERAL FEDERATION WORK.

Many women who are connected with the General Federation of Women's clubsh ardly realize the magnitude of the objects which the organization is steadily working to accomplish. It is generally conceded that it saved the day for the pure food law, and has helped in the passage of forest preservation measures. In a smaller way it has taught the women how to differ amicably in discussion, to think soundly and broadly, to work harmoniously. It has brought together women from all over the country to consider common interests, and his alone is unifying the nation in a way which will be felt more and more as time goes on.

There are hundreds of measures which the federation has helped, among the more important being the following dozen:—

1. By bringing together women from every state in the Union to consider common interests, the country has become unified. This point has not been sufficiently stressed.
2. Women trained to differ amicably in discussion, to think soundly and broadly, to work harmoniously.
3. Art libraries and collections circulated. Art commissions established. Public taste cultivated to some extent.

PROTECTING MAHOGANY.

In these days of dust the careful housekeeper finds it sifts into her mahogany tops despite covers. This is bad for the wood and makes the covers look dingy.

A lining of some sort should be provided. Sometimes this is in the form of wadded covers of china silk that stand washing. But these give the linen cover a padded look that is not especially desirable.

An interlining of glass is growing in favor. This protects the wood, and if heavy enough not to crack as easily is serviceable and quickly cleaned. The edges should be rounded so as not to cut with careless handling.

One housekeeper advocates the use of asbestos sheets under her dressing table covers. There is no danger to the wood if hot curling tongs or half burned matches are dropped.

It is cheaper and more convenient to use white blotters as a lining. These keep dust from the wood admirably, absorb upset liquids, and cost so little that they can frequently be renewed. They have the effect also of making the linen or pique top look whiter.

EMERGENCY-MEDICINE CHEST.

There should be in every house a small chest or box containing such articles as a mother or doctor would need for instant use when something alarming or unforeseen has happened in the nursery. To have to begin to look for things when a child is cut or bruised or fainting from pain is a desperate feeling indeed, and it is best to be prepared beforehand for the little emergencies that are only too likely to arise.

Such a box should contain a large quantity of absorbent cotton, a small bottle of brandy or whiskey, and one of aromatic spirits of ammonia; a spool of adhesive plaster two inches wide, court plaster, several rolls of two-inch gauze bandages, a large handkerchief for a sling, scissors, safety pins, medicine glass, medicine dropper, cosmoline, a hot water bag, an ice bag, a bottle of some antiseptic lotion and a graduated measuring glass.

OILED-WOODWORK.

When cleaning oiled woodwork, rub with a soft cloth dipped in coal oil. The oil does not dull the polish as soap and water would, and will remove the dirt. Used to clean and polish furniture, it should be well rubbed in the wood, as, if surplus oil is left on the surface, it will gather lint and dust, says the Commoner. The odor will soon evaporate if doors and windows are left open.

STORY OF FAUST.

The fact that the Quincy Choral Society is to present Gounod's grand opera of Faust in concert form brings to mind interesting details of the famous "historical" Faust, the "Faust Legend" on which Goethe's great dramatic poem is based. According to tradition, Dr. Johann Faust from 1507 to 1540 was an adventurer whose fame as an alchemist and astrologer, physician and adept in the black art, attained to vast proportions throughout Germany. He was known as the Philosopher of Philosophers and professed ability to revive the New Testament miracles. He also asserted that the victories won by the imperial armies in Italy were due to his supernatural influence. The popular imagination naturally seized and enlarged upon these tales which constituted the elements out of which three distinct versions of Faust's life arose in the German folk-lore of the 16th century. In literature Faust appears for the first time in 1587 when the "History of Dr. Johann Fausten the world renowned Magician and Necromancer" was published at Frankfort-on-the Main. In this he is described as a student who sells his soul to the devil to obtain supernatural power and wisdom. In 1588, Marlowe published the first dramatization of the legend as the "Life and Death of Dr. Faustus" in which he lays more stress on Faust's desire for earthly pleasures than on his longing for wisdom.

Goethe's Faust-Drama lifts the hero far above the plain of individual limitation and makes him a typical representative of all humanity, its yearnings and aspirations, frailties and sorrows. It is a series of scenes and episodes among which the only one carried to a logical dramatic conclusion is the episode of Faust's love for Gretchen. It is upon this episode that Gounod's librettists, Carre and Barbier, founded their text. In the opera, Faust is presented as an aged scholar who, weary of book wisdom and solitary study, is in the act of raising a poisoned draught to his lips when his hand is arrested by the tones of a gay chorus outside. Overcome by bitter memories and having lost all hope of heaven, he calls on Satan to aid him. The spirit of evil, in the form of Mephistopheles appears, promises to restore youth and all earthly delights in this world, but claims service in the next. A vision of Margaret at her spinning wheel tempts Faust to accept the bargain and thereafter he is at the mercy of his master. Setting aside the youthful swain Siebel, Faust wins the heart of Margaret in a series of beautiful love scenes, but later is induced to leave her by Mephistopheles. The return of Margaret's brother Valentine from the wars, his death at the hands of Faust aided by Mephistopheles, Margaret's suffering and delirious agony which cause her to kill her child and for which she is imprisoned, follow in natural succession. The return of Faust and his prayer that she flee with him to escape the impending death sentence, comes all too late, and upon the appearance of Mephistopheles her horror reaches its climax and she sinks lifeless to the ground, after an impassioned prayer for forgiveness. An angelic chorus proclaims her "saved" and Mephistopheles vanishes with Faust.

Gounod's music is at all times forceful and dramatic and the melodies are among the most beautiful ever written. There was a time when any person who doubted Gounod's pre-eminence as a composer would have been deemed lacking in sanity. However, he never again demonstrated such power, neither did he show himself, like the greater Verdi, capable of accepting and utilizing new forms. "Faust" remains his monumental work and, loved the world over, still sways the hearts of thousands of opera goers yearly.

NOISE AVOIDED.

Irritating noises can be avoided by taking some old felt hats, cutting out from these disks about the size of a quarter and securely fastening them to the bottoms of the legs of all chairs, tables and other movable articles not provided with casters, says the Washington Herald. This also prevents the scratching of polished floors.

CARE OF TEETH.

Rules for Children Prescribed at Hygiene Association Meeting.

Care of the teeth was discussed at Saturday's session of the American School Hygiene Association, at the Harvard Medical School. Dr. William H. Potter gave some rules for preserving the teeth. He said he would have these rules pasted in at least one school book of every pupil:

1. The teeth should be thoroughly brushed after each meal.
2. A tooth powder used on the brush helps to clean the teeth.
3. Candy and crackers should not be eaten between meals;; they cause the teeth to decay.
4. The slow and thorough chewing of hard food helps to preserve the teeth and keeps the mouth in a healthy condition.
5. Children's teeth should be examined by a dentist at least twice a year.

"The cleaner the teeth," he said, "and the more they are exercised on hard food the less liable they are to decay. Decay comes from the use of soft foods, sugar and starch. If children can be taught to clean their teeth properly the amount of decay will become a mere fraction of what it is now. There are nowhere dentists enough to care for the teeth of all school children. There are, however, various ways by which decay can be reduced by giving attention to the teeth of the younger children in the schools."

DON'T RUIN EYES.

The woman who saves on her gas bill at the expense of her eyes is as improvident as though she wore insufficient clothes to swell her bank account.

Half of the oculists would lose their custom if people would but light their rooms properly. A glare from high lights is just as bad as a miserable little lamp that sheds light only a few inches.

The eye trained by the economical soul will be strained long before it is conscious of that strain. The woman doing fine stitching by the small table lamp will say indignantly, "I can see perfectly." Perhaps, but think of the strain on the eye of making quick photographs without enough light.

A room is improperly lighted when it has insufficient light, uneven lighting, lights that are too far off, and light which produces too great heat. A strong lamp may produce a strong light, but if the worker sits close to it she becomes overheated and eyes and health suffer.

The eyes demand not only sufficient light on book or work, but there must not be strain from the surrounding dusk. The well-lighted room has the light diffused from burners at sides or ceiling, then there is an extra light on table close to the worker.

It is just here where the economical do most harm. They think the light on the work is enough and consider a bright room as rank extravagance.

It is not enough to have the room light to the farthest corner; the reading lamp must be placed so there is no glare in the eyes. Sit so the light falls on the work over the left shoulder.

Remember, rays of light should be concentrated on the book or work by means of a shade. The best for this purpose is dark-green porcelain, with white lining though it does not make a pretty light in the room.

Where the family is large, and light must be economized, have a table in the room so it can be surrounded by workers. Use on it a double student lamp. In this way all can manage to have light which falls over the left shoulder, and there will not be the strain as when two lamps are used, giving conflicting rays.

In a bedroom have a light near the bed or couch, if one is given to reading lying down. Much injury is done by having this light too high or too far away. Where a room is not so lighted a pipe can be run to the bed at small additional cost.

Eyes differ in their demand for light, some requiring soft, shaded rays, others a strong flame. In the latter case various mantles that brighten a flame and reduce the amount of gas consumed save both money and eyes.

Room lighting in the daytime is as important as by artificial light. Where window space is scare use a yellow or other light paper that reflects light and arrange shades so they run from top and bottom. This shuts out the glare when necessary, yet does not darken a room.

Do not arrange desk or work table in your living room for decorative effect but with regard to its position to the light. No matter how it looks, one should write or work so the light comes from the left and is not faced or forms a shadow on the hand.

SENATOR OWEN IS DEFENDANT

Illegally Bought Land From Cherokees In Oklahoma

DECISION OF SUPREME COURT

Indians Had No Right to Part With Titles to 2,700,000 Acres of Land, Sold to White Men For Trifling Sums—Steps to Be Taken For Cancellation of Deeds—May Be Sensational Developments

Washington, April 3.—Archie N. Frost, formerly a Massachusetts state senator and for the last three years a special assistant to the attorney general in charge of what is known as the thirty-thousand Oklahoma land cases, won the sweeping victory for the government in the supreme court in the suit of P. E. Heckman and Robert L. Owen, appellants, vs. the United States.

This was a test suit brought to determine the legality of some 30,000 deeds of land executed by Cherokee Indians in favor of white men. The defendant is Senator Owen of Oklahoma, and some 200 other suits have been brought against the senator also. The allegation is that this land was bought of the Indians for trifling sums as a rule and that the Indian owners had no right to part with their titles, as the land bore restrictions which they could not legally violate.

The cases were originally tried in the United States circuit court in Oklahoma and thrown out on demurrer. The Eighth circuit court of appeals reversed the decision of the lower court and Owen and his colleagues appealed to the supreme court of the United States. The Heckman case, on which all the others hinged, was argued last October.

The opinion, written by Justice Hughes, declares the right of the government to bring the suit without the necessity of making the allottee a party. It sustains in full the power and control of the United States over the Indian, and the right of the government to go into court and seek the cancellation of any illegal instrument to which he is made a party.

The practical effect of the decision is that the white holders of the titles involved in these 30,000 cases must return to the Indians the lands illegally bought of them, aggregating, roughly, 2,700,000 acres valued at $10 an acre. The land averages about ninety acres to the case and the government has placed upon it a uniform valuation of $10 an acre. That this valuation is conservative is indicated by the fact that the state of Oklahoma values this land for assessment purposes at $20 an acre.

The next step will be to sue for cancellation of the deeds, the supreme court having decided that the government has this right. Should these suits be successful the land will revert to the Indians, who may sell the restricted portions under the supervision of the department of the interior or may lease the land for agricultural purposes for ... e years. The point involved is, as far as the Indian is concerned, that the means of these suits, if successful, the Indian hereafter will be protected against fraud in the transfer or leasing of the land he owns.

During the three years in which Frost has been in charge of these cases he has settled 6113 suits in advance of trial. These suits involved 384,000 acres and means a recovery to the Indians of $4,000,000 in land values. The case against Owen and his colleagues will be pushed vigorously by the government and it is stated that sensational developments may follow.

HOPED TO GAIN SYMPATHY

Merchant Enacted a Fake Robbery to Deceive His Creditors

New York, April 3.—Police Inspector Hughes authorized a statement that Robert H. Cooper, a Brooklyn produce merchant, who was found bound and gagged on a railroad track, had confessed he had not been robbed, but had told the story to gain the sympathy of his creditors, who were pressing him for bills.

According to the confession, he tore his own clothing, scratched himself slightly and lay down besides the tracks.

Policemen Rescue Girls at Fire

Boston, April 3.—Thirty terrified girls, who stood on a third story rear fire escape landing in Creek square, cut off by a fire which gutted the Power block, 88 to 98 Blackstone street, last night, were carried to safety down a narrow iron ladder by Sergeant Donovan and Patrolmen McDonald and Ferrar. The fire did $15,000 to $20,000 damage.

NEW RAISE IN WAGES

About 125,000 New England Mill Operatives Are Benefited

Boston, April 3.—Another increase of 5 percent, involving 125,000 mill operatives of northern New England, and making in some cases a raise of 11 percent within one month, marks the campaign of the Industrial Workers of the World for higher wages and better conditions for mill workers.

Treasurers of a number of Boston-owned mills announced yesterday that the further increase in wages becomes effective immediately, in some cases the changes having been made last Monday.

The action of the mill owners followed the accession of the manufacturers of southern New England to the demands of a large numebr of their operatives, who refused to be satisfied with an increase of 5 percent.

BY VOTE OF 106 TO 86

Woman Suffrage Bill Is Killed In Massachusetts House

Boston, April 3.—The bill to amend the constitution to permit women to vote was defeated by the house of representatives at a roll call vote. The vote was 86 in favor to 106 against.

This is the biggest vote that the women suffragists have ever received from the legislature in favor of their cause. Last year they received 69 against 161, while the year previous they received 47 for and 148 against the measure.

The vote was taken on the bill of Alice S. Blackwell, which provides for an amendment to the constitution striking out the word male from the qualification of voters. The debate in the house took up three hours and the gallery was taxed to its capacity.

TWO HEIRS RECEIVE $10,000,000 EACH

Nothing to Boston Claimant to the Baldwin Estate

Los Angeles, Cal., April 3.—Announcement is made by H. Unruh, executor of the estate of E. J. "Lucky" Baldwin, that each of the Baldwin heirs, Mrs. Hull McLaughrey and Mrs. Clara B. Stocker, will receive more than $10,000,000. The vaule of the estate is placed by Unruh at more than $20,000,000.

Miss Beatrice A. Turnbull of Boston, who maintains that she is a daughter of E. J. Baldwin, was a claimant for two-ninths of the $20,000,000 estate left by the turfman. She entered suit against the executor in 1910, but last Saturday the supreme court of California unanimously decided in favor of his acknowledged heirs and dismissed her petition.

Provision would be made for rate zones, the charges varying according to the distance the package was carried from the point of origin.

A close working arrangement also would be provided between the express companies and the rural free delivery system of the postoffice department.

The bill would govern the transportation of packages not exceeding eleven pounds in weight and in valuation of $80 or less.

NEGROES SLAIN BY WHOLESALE

Victims of Cult Which Practiced "Human Sacrifice"

LEADER MAKES A CONFESSION

Clears Mystery of Thirty-Five Assassinations In the South—Admits Killing Seventeen With Her Own Hands—Directing Head of "Church of the Sacrifice" Armed Herself With Hoodoo Before Killing

Lafayette, La., April 3.—Clementine Barnabet, a "half-blood" negress, told a story here that the police authorities say they accept as clearing the mystery veiling the killing of twenty negroes in southwest Louisiana, and which, it is said, gave clues that will fix the guilt for fifteen other night assassinations of blacks in Louisiana and Texas.

From Clementine's story it appears she led a mysterious negro cult, the members of which performed the rites of "human sacrifice." The negress declared she killed seventeen of the victims with her own hands.

The police declare Clementine told her story of wholesale slaughter with no apparent appreciation that the taking of human life was a crime. Without reservation she told her part in the thirty-five assassinations, but declined to reveal the names of members of the mysterious cult that helped her.

The murders have been committed in the last year. As one series of killings was added to another in different towns of southwestern Louisiana and southeast Texas the authorities concluded one mind directed them. Yesterday the negress confessed she was the directing head of the cult that is known as the "Church of the Sacrifice" which has for its feature creed the belief that by life sacrifice alone may a person gain immortality.

Before engaging in any of these crimes Clementine armed herself with a "hoodoo" which she got from a preacher and which she and other members of her band were assured would protect them from the law.

While the exact reason for the murders is not explained to the satisfaction of the authorities it is believed that Clementine and her companions were degenerates and that their weakened brains evidently were affected by the exhortations they had heard in the "Church of the Sacrifice."

The grand jury, now in session, is expected to immediately return a verdict charging the woman with the crimes to which she has confessed.

Most of the thirty-five assassinations were accomplished in the killing of families of three and four members at one time. In every instance the murder was committed at night.

The police determined from Clementine's story that the religious fanatics took possession of a cottage owned by a person marked for slaughter, and that a bloody orgy followed.

So far as can be determined none of the cult suffered death in any of the ceremonies of sacrifice.

MINISTER'S NOSE BROKEN

Other Clergymen Mauled About In Maine Liquor Raid

Waterville, Me., April 3.—Rev. Henry N. Pringle, secretary, and Rev. Wilbur F. Berry, superintendent of the Christian Civic league of Maine, and Rev. Cyrus F. Stimson, a local clergyman, were assaulted by a mob of about 150 persons while assisting Special Officer Davis in the service of liquor warrants at 23 and 23½ Maple street.

One member of the crowd held Pringle down in a pile of rubbish and rained blow after blow on his upturned face. His nose was broken. Berry was knocked down and kicked, and Stimson was grabbed by the collar and hustled into the street.

HORSE THIEVES BREAK JAIL

Brooklyn, Conn., April 3.—Edward Mason, aged 30, and Henry Hall, aged 23, convicted in the superior court recently of horse thieving and sentenced to state prison for a term of not less than one nor more than three years, escaped from jail and are now at large. They worked out of their cells, cut a hole in the ceiling, entered an attic, broke out an unbarred window and dropped to the ground. They made a clean getaway.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

HOT CROSS BUNS.

QUITE as much because of the novelty as because it is the custom we eat hot cross buns on Good Friday.

The origin of this delightful hot bread is attributed to the effort of King Henry VIII. to win back the popularity which he had lost by defying the church in putting away Katherine of Arragon in order to marry Anne Boleyn. Henry ordered that loaves of bread marked with a cross should be baked and given away at his expense on Good Friday.

Loaves of bread in time were reduced to buns, which bakers made as delicious as possible, and sold to their patrons instead of distributed free to the poor.

Made With Yeast.

Hot Cross Buns.—Take two pounds of sifted flour, a generous half cupful of butter and a pinch of salt. Knead these together. With a glass of fresh yeast combine a pint of milk which has been slightly warmed. Mix this with the flour and butter to make a thin batter.

Cover the bowl and put in a warm place and allow the batter to rise.

Take half a pound of currants, a scant cupful of sugar, half a grated nutmeg, half a teaspoonful of allspice and one egg. Stir these into the batter, working with a stout spoon, and let this mixture stand until it forms a nice sponge.

Then shape into buns, cut a cross on the top of each, cover with sugar and bake fifteen to twenty minutes.

The English Way.

Here is the real English way of making the time honored bun. The quantities named here will make about two dozen buns:

English Hot Cross Buns.—Mix together two pounds of sifted flour, half a pound of granulated sugar, a teaspoonful of mixed spices and a pound of currants.

Make a hollow in the flour and add a wineglassful of thick yeast and half a pint of warmed milk. Make a batter with the flour, cover the pan and place it before the fire until the yeast begins to work.

Add half a pound of melted butter and enough warmed milk to make a paste of all the flour.

Dust with flour and let the mixture rise again, this time for half an hour.

Knead the dough into buns and place on buttered pans to rise for half an hour.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barony. The place is to be sold, and its history and that of the owners, the Quintards, is the subject of discussion by Jonathan Crenshaw, a business man, a stranger known as Bladen, and Bob Yancy, a farmer, when Hannibal Wayne Hazard, a mysterious child of the old southern family, makes his appearance. Yancy tells how he adopted the boy.

CHAPTER II.—Nathaniel Ferris buys the Barony, but the Quintards deny any knowledge of the boy. Yancy to keep Hannibal. Captain Murrell, a friend of the Quintards, appears and asks questions about the Barony.

CHAPTER III.—Trouble at Scratch Hill, Yancy's home, when Hannibal is kidnaped by Dave Blount, Captain Murrell's agent. Yancy overtakes Blount, gives him a thrashing and secures the boy.

CHAPTER IV.—Yancy is served with a warrant for assaulting Blount. Yancy appears before Squire Balaam, and is discharged with costs for the plaintiff.

CHAPTER V.—Betty Malroy, a friend of the Ferrises, has an encounter with Captain Murrell, who forces his attentions on her, and is rescued by Bruce Carrington, who threatens to whip the captain.

CHAPTER VI.—Betty sets out for her Tennessee home. Carrington takes the same stage. Yancy and Hannibal disappear, with Murrell on their trail. He overtakes them in the mountains of Tennessee. Murrell gets Yancy drunk and stabs him in a fight that followed. Hannibal escapes in a canoe.

CHAPTER VII.—Hannibal arrives at the home of Judge Slocum Price.

CHAPTER VIII.—The Judge recognizes in the boy, the grandson of an old time friend. Murrell arrives at Judge's home. Hannibal hears of the finding of Yancy's body. Price arrested as counterfeiter.

CHAPTER IX.—Cavendish family on raft rescue Yancy, who is apparently dead. Price breaks jail.

CHAPTER X.—Betty and Carrington arrive at Belle Plain.

CHAPTER XI.—Hannibal's rifle discloses some startling things to the Judge. Hannibal and Betty meet again.

CHAPTER XII.—Murrell arrives in Belle Plain. Is playing for big stakes.

CHAPTER XIII.—Yancy awakes from long dreamless sleep on board the raft.

CHAPTER XIV.—Judge Price makes startling discoveries in looking up land titles. Charley Norton, a young planter, who assists the judge, is mysteriously assaulted.

CHAPTER XV.—Norton informs Carrington that Betty has promised to marry him. Carrington bids Betty good-bye. Norton is mysteriously shot.

CHAPTER XVI.—More light on Murrell's plots. He plans uprising of negroes.

By a great effort Betty gained a measure of control over herself. She took a step nearer and looked the girl steadily in the face.

"Perhaps you will stop this sort of talk, and tell me what is going to happen to me—if you know?" she said quietly.

"Why do you reckon Mr. Norton was shot? I can tell you why—it was all along of you—that was why!" The girl's furtive glance, which searched and watched the gathering shadows, came back as it always did to Betty's pale face. "You ain't no safer than he was, I tell you!" and she sucked in her breath sharply between her full red lips.

"What do you mean?" faltered Betty.

"Do you reckon you're safe here in the big house alone? Why do you reckon Mr. Tom cleared out for Memphis? It was because he couldn't be around and have anything happen to you—that was why!" and the girl sank her voice to a whisper. "You quit Belle Plain now—tonight—just as soon as you can!"

"This is absurd—you are trying to frighten me!"

"Did they stop with trying to frighten Charley Norton?" demanded Bess, with harsh insistence.

Whatever the promptings that inspired this warning, they plainly had nothing to do with either liking or sympathy. Her dominating emotion seemed to be a sullen sort of resentment which lit up her glance with a dull fire; yet her feelings were so clearly and so keenly personal that Betty understood the motive that had brought her there. The explanation, she found, left her wondering just where and how her own fate was linked with that of this poor white.

"You have been waiting some time to see me?" she asked.

"Ever since along about noon."

"You were afraid to come to the house?"

"I didn't want to be seen there."

"And yet you knew I was alone."

"Alone—but how do you know who's watching the place?"

"Do you think there was reason to be afraid of that?" asked Betty.

Again the girl stamped her foot with angry impatience.

"You're just wastin' time—just foolin' it away—and you ain't got none to spare!"

"You must tell me what I have to fear—I must know more or I shall stay just where I am!"

"Well, then, stay!" The girl turned away, and then as quickly turned back and faced Betty once more. "I reckon he'd kill me if he knew—I reckon I've earned that already—"

"Of whom are you speaking?"

"He'll have you away from here tonight!"

"He? . . . who . . . and what if I refuse to go?"

"Did they ask Charley Norton whether he wanted to live or die?" came the sinister question.

A shiver passed through Betty. She was seeing it all again—Charley as he groped among the graves with the hand of death heavy upon him.

A moment later she was alone. The girl had disappeared. There were only the shifting shadows as the wind tossed the branches of the trees, and the bands of golden light that slanted along the empty path. The fear of the unknown leaped up afresh in Betty's soul; in an instant flying feet had borne her to the boy's side.

"Come—come quick, Hannibal!" she gasped out, and seized his hand.

"What is it, Miss Betty? What's the matter?" asked Hannibal as they fled panting up the terraces.

"I don't know—only we must get away from here just as soon as we can!" Then, seeing the look of alarm on the child's face, she added more quietly, "Don't be frightened, dear, only we must go away from Belle Plain at once." But where they were to go, she had not considered.

Reaching the house, they stole to Betty's room. Her well-filled purse was the important thing; that, together with some necessary clothing, went into a small hand-bag.

"You must carry this, Hannibal; if any one sees us leave the house they'll think it something you are taking away," she explained. Hannibal nodded understandingly.

"Don't you trust your niggers, Miss Betty?" he whispered as they went from the room.

"I only trust you, dear!"

"What makes you go? Was it something that woman told you? Are they coming after us, Miss Betty? Is it Captain Murrell?"

"Captain Murrell?" There was less of mystery now, but more of terror, and her hand stole up to her heart, and, white and slim, rested against the black fabric of her dress.

"Don't you be scared, Miss Betty!" said Hannibal.

They went silently from the house and again crossed the lawn to the terrace. Under the leafy arch which canopied them there was already the deep purple of twilight.

"Do you reckon it were Captain Murrell shot Mr. Norton, Miss Betty?" asked Hannibal in a shuddering whisper.

"Hush—Oh, hush, Hannibal! It is too awful to even speak of—" and, sobbing and half hysterical, she covered her face with her hands.

"But where are we going, Miss Betty?" asked the boy.

"I don't know, dear!" She had an agonizing sense of the night's approach and of her own utter helplessness.

"I'll tell you what, Miss Betty, let's go to the judge and Mr. Mahaffy!" said Hannibal.

"Judge Price?" She had not thought of him as a possible protector.

"Why, Miss Betty, ain't I told you he ain't afraid of nothing? We could walk to Raleigh easy if you don't want your niggers to hook up a team for you."

Betty suddenly remembered the carriage which had taken the judge into town; she was sure it had not yet returned.

"We will go to the judge, Hannibal! George, who drove him into Raleigh, has not come back; if we hurry we may meet him on the road."

Screened by the thick shadows, they passed up the path that edged the bayou; at the head of the inlet they entered a clearing, and crossing this they came to the corn-field which lay between the house and the high-road. Following one of the shock rows they hurried to the mouth of the lane.

"Hannibal, I don't want to tell the judge why I am leaving Belle Plain—about the woman, I mean," said Betty.

"You reckon they'd kill her, don't you, Miss Betty, if they knew what she'd done?" speculated the boy. It occurred to him that an adequate explanation of their flight would require preparation, since the judge was at all times singularly alive to the slightest discrepancy of statement. They had issued from the corn-field and went along the road toward Raleigh. Suddenly Betty paused.

"Hark!" she whispered.

"It were nothing, Miss Betty," said Hannibal reassuringly, and they hurried forward again. In the utter stillness through which they moved Betty heard the beating of her own heart, and the soft and all but inaudible patter of the boy's bare feet on the warm dust of the road. Vague forms that resolved themselves into trees and bushes seemed to creep toward them out of the night's black uncertainty. Once more Betty paused.

"It were nothing, Miss Betty," said Hannibal as before, and he returned to his consideration of the judge. He sensed something of that intellectual nimbleness which his patron's physical make-up in nowise suggested, since his face was a mask that usually left one in doubt as to just how much of what he heard succeeded in making its impression on him; but the boy knew that Slocum Price's blind side was a shelterless exposure.

Polar Experts Are Figuring on the Success of Scott

SHEER LUCK PLAYS A PART

Great Difficulties In the Nature of Severe Weather Checked British Expedition, While Amundsen Was Favored on Dash to Pole—Scott Supposed to Have Achieved Results of Highest Importance

London, April 3.—Though the latest word from the British Antarctic expedition under command of Captain Robert F. Scott left the explorers still 150 miles from the South Pole on Jan. 3, polar experts here are strongly of the opinion that Scott will achieve the great object for which he set out.

The fact that his message, brought back to New Zealand by the Terra Nova, declared that he was remaining in the Antarctic for another winter in order to complete his work is taken as an indication that the party is in good health, abundantly supplied and in a position to continue the march to the pole.

Captain Scott was still advancing on the date of his last message, and those familiar with Antarctic exploration express the opinion that he would probably reach the pole before the end of January.

All the London papers print editorials congratulating the members of the Scott expedition. They emphasize the fact that it was not a mere dash for the pole, like that of Amundsen, but a thoroughly planned exploring expedition on a large scale, without any idea of racing for the pole, and that it has achieved results of the highest importance.

A striking point of difference in the experiences of Amundsen and Scott was that of sheer luck. Amundsen was greatly favored by the weather in the latter stages of his journey, during the early part of December, while Scott, at approximately the same time, met storms of great severity. Amundsen was able to cover his last 150 miles in ten or twelve days. Thus, with anything but the most unfavorable weather, Scott could cover the distance which separated him from the pole Jan. 3, well within the remaining days of the month.

Amundsen reached the pole on Dec. 14, and during the days he was occupied in making observations there, the Englishman was struggling through the snowdrifts in the lower reaches of Beardmore Glacier. The opinion is held here that if Scott had known of Amundsen's success he would have made some mention of it in his final message.

As in the case of the Shackleton expedition, valuable exploring work was done by different parties of the Scott expedition, who were sent out in different directions. Probably no further word will come from the expedition until well along in 1913.

Sir Ernest Shackleton, in an article contributed to The Chronicle, says that the dogged determination and incessant toil against disaster and difficulties which the members of the Scott party displayed must forever place this expedition among the great efforts of mankind.

SUFFRAGE BILL IS DEFEATED

The "hecklers" and other ardent upholders of the rights of women were given a great setback in the state legislature yesterday afternoon, where the members of the House punctured the question by defeating the resolve for woman suffrage, by a vote of 106 to 86. A great debate ensued on the question, but all talk was put in the shade when the vote was taken.

Among those who voted in opposition to the resolve, in other words, who does not believe that women should respond to fire alarms, serve warrants, take up arms in battle, patrol beats in order to enforce the law, or even to exercise authority over man, was Representative Walter E. Piper. He has contended all along that he does not believe in woman suffrage and he convinced his constitutents beyond the least possible doubt when he voted in opposition Tuesday.

What the opinion of Representative William J. Leslie in the matter is, cannot be definitely ascertained, for he is not recorded on the measure.

The reason that Representative Leslie was not recorded on the question was because he was with the Harbor and Land Committee on a view.

OFFICER IS AWARDED $100

HIT BY MAIL BAG.

Charles Mangs of 40 Mt. Ararat lane was quite severly injuired this noon by being struck on the head by aflying mail bag. Mangs was on his way to the Quincy depot when the 12.45 Cape express train passed through. A mail bag is thrown off at Quincy and it was this bag that hit him in the head knocking him down. He was taken to the office of Dr. Hunting where his injuries which were not serious were attended to.

LAMPBLACK AND GLUE IN CANDY.

Lampblack and shellac and furniture glue do not sound enticing as eatables, but every once in a while some raid upon the confectioners discloses the fact that in spite of the pure food laws of Massachusetts these articles and other stuffs not any more adapted for human consumption are being employed in the making of candies that are put upon the market and are wihout doubt bought and eaten by unsuspecting persons. Or, possibly they are not so unsuspecting, either. Possibly they are merely daring, unless they are really so ignorant as not to know that they cannot expect to get pure candies at a fraction of the price that good candies customarily sell for; but in the matter of eatables it is better not to be daring, and, in the case of candy, very far better is it to have a little good than a lot that is not far from bad. In Worcester the other day candies were seized that contained lampblack, instead of chocolate, and shellac to make the lampblack look more like chocolate; and Easter novelties of the confectionery variety that contained a large quantity of furniture glue. Small hope there can be that the pure food inspectors got all of this sort of thing that there was in Worcester, and little likelihood there is that any city in the state is less free from this unfit candy than Worcester was. In spite of the laws manufacturers will go on cheapening their products for the sake of the extra profits or to create an article that will appeal to a purse not equal to higher priced goods, and the dealers will take as much risk as the manufacturers for the sake of the trade. So the remedy of the situation must chiefly rest with the people, who must protect themselves by letting alone candy so cheap that it is almost sure to be unwholesome.

Candies were not the only adulterated products seized in Worcester. Soda water syrups flavored and colored with coal tar dyes were found being dispensed at soft drink counters, and the people were enjoying them quite as much as though they were not specially calculated to do them physical harm. Of course the people are not to blame, or not any more to blame than that they have not controlled their propensity to eat and drink up their surplus; but if they will insist on doing this, the revelations of the food experts in Worcester ought at least to suggest to them that they take some pains to see that they do not eat and drink dangerous preparations—New Bedford Standard.

SITUATION IN LOWELL

Mill Men Not Inclined to Grant Increase to Operatives

Lowell, Mass., April 3.—The Lowell Manufacturers' association, composed of the agents of the cotton mills which have closed their gates, considered the demands of the striking operatives at a meeting yesterday, but the nature of the action taken was not given out.

None of the persons who took part in the meeting would make any statement, and President Wadleigh of the association left the city soon after.

Some of those interested in the industrial situation here expected that the local mills would follow the action of those of New Hampshire and Maine in adding to their original increase of wages enough to make the total increase at least 10 percent.

That any additional increase was granted at the meeting or that any action was contemplated or likely, was denied by the Boston treasurers.

THE WISCONSIN PRIMARY

Sentiment Is Strongly In Favor of La Follette and Wilson

Milwaukee, April 3.—Senator La Follette of this state is the overwhelming choice of the Republican voters for the presidential nomination, and Governor Wilson of New Jersey is the favorite of the Democrats over Champ Clark. This is the result of the state's first presidential primary.

F. S. Phillips, Taft's manager for the state, concedes that the senator will have at least twenty-three out of the twenty-six delegates which Wisconsin will send to the Chicago convention.

The contest between Wilson and Clark was less one-sided, but the New Jersey chief executive won by a decisive margin. There was no Roosevelt ticket on the ballot.

UNIVERSAL SLUMP NOTED IN CONGRESS

Members of House Not Disposed to Do Much Work

Washington, April 3.—With the passage through the house of the wool bill the pressure under which the lower chamber has been working has been suddenly relieved, and a universal slump is notable.

It is understood on all hands that unless the senate and the president indicate a willingness to let the tariff bills already passed by the Democrats become law, the back of this session, so far as Mr. Underwood is concerned, is broken. There remains only the appropriation bills to pass and some measures of no great public interest.

The attention of Washington, therefore, this week, turns toward the senate, where the accumulations of several months await action.

WON'T REPLY TO SUMMONS

Percy Refuses to Give Testimony In Hackett Murder Case

Augusta, Me., April 3.—A sensation developed in the Mattie Hackett murder case when Representative Augustus Percy of Bath, who had been summoned before the Kennebec grand jury to give evidence which sheds an entirely new light on the mystery, used his prerogative as a member of the general court and absolutely refused to reply to the summons.

The knowledge that Mattie Hackett had serious trouble with a woman other than Mrs. Elsie Raymond previous to her strange murder was his, but he has refused point blank to appear before the grand jury.

DIED INTESTATE

The fortune, if no will is found, will be divided among the heirs-at-law, comprising Mr. Arbuckle's two sisters and his nephews.

SCRAPS of HUMOR

Shame on Him.

"Why are you weeping, Mrs. Tuttleson?"

"My husband is so se-selfish."

"Why, I always supposed he was such a generous man."

"No, you have been deceived. He is the very personification of selfishness."

"Dear me! I'm so sorry. What has he done?"

"He told me this morning that he would give me one-third of his income to run the house with and then proposed that each of us should have one of the other two-thirds for personal use.'

The Truth of It.

"Who's the man who just sneaked away when he saw us?" asked the newly arrived shade.

"That," replied the old habitant of the elysian fields, "is Diogenes. He always avoids me."

"And who are you?"

"Oh, I'm just an unknown contemporary of his, but I have positive proof that he swiped the lantern with which he went hunting for an honest man."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Among the Accidents.

Amateur Tenor—That's odd; I can't find any account of my singing at the Swellmore's musicale last evening.

His Friend—Where did you look for it?

Amateur Tenor—Among the musical notes, of course.

His Friend—It might be in the paper after all. Why not try in some other department?

WHY SHE BELIEVED HIM.

First Hobo—Yes, I told that lady dat I was once a senator. She actually believed it.

Second Hobo—Great Hobos! In what way do you resemble a senator?

First Hobo—Oh! I told her two or three after-dinner stories. Dey were so stale she said I must be a senator.

NEW SENATORS SWORN IN

Members From Arizona and New Mexico Take Up Their Duties

Washington, April 3.—The senate became a body of ninety-six members, New Mexico and Arizona contributing the four additional senators. T. B. Catron and A. B. Beall of New Mexico, Republicans, and M. A. Smith and H. E. Ashurst of Arizona, Democrats, were the new members to take the oath on the dais in front of the vice president's chair.

Two ballot boxes were drafted into use for the lottery determination of the lengths of their senatorial terms. Catron and Ashurst were chosen to serve until 1917; Beall 1913 and Smith 1915.

Argument for Vegetarianism.

Vegetarianism has been claimed as a part of the wisdom of the east, and it clearly has its uses, for two centuries ago an Edinburgh physician who weighed 32 stone "by regular adherence to this regimen reduced his weight to almost a third, became strong, cheerful, active and healthy."

Signs That Foretell Weather.

The country dweller has a thousand weather signs that the city man never knows. A red sunset means very little to the man in the street, but to the man among the lanes it indicates rain and bad weather. Smoke that rises straight in the air is another of the signs that a farmer notices and foretells bad weather. Circles about the moon and sun, streaks of greasy clouds and the peculiar actions of birds and domestic animals are all indications of some change in the weather to the man whose eye has been trained to recognize the signs.

LAUNCHING

sel for launching and the workmen were closely watched.

Promptly at the hour of 11.33 Admiral Bowles, with a swift glance, to see that all was in readiness gave the signal to saw away the soul pieces and as the mass of steel begun to move down the greased ways, he turned to Miss Kane and gave the word to strike.

Suspended from the bow of the vessel by a tri-colored ribbon was a bottle of Mumm's Extra dry champagne, which was encased in a steel mesh to prevent the flying glass from cutting the fair sponsor. This Miss Henley held firmly in her right hand and at the given word smashed the bottle of wine over the bow. As the sparkling liquid ran down the sides she cried out, "I christen thee Henley."

A minute afterward the stern of the boat struck the water sending a hugh wave bounding toward the Weymouth shore. Her stern seemed to sink almost out of sight. Then it rose and the vessel was riding gracefully in her native element. Tugs quickly surrounded her and she was taken to the fitting out dock.

The vessel entering the water was signalized by the shrill shriek of the whistles in the yards and by tugs in the river which almost drowned out the cheers of the launching party.

The launch over Admiral Bowles congratulated Miss Kane on the efficient manner in which she had carried out her part of the launch. The party were then escorted to the annex where a lunch was served.

Miss Kane comes from a distinguished naval family, which traces its history back to Capt. Robert Henley, who was second in Command of the famous "Fighting Macdonough" at the battle of Lake Champlain. Her grandfather was Rear Admiral Theodore Porter Kane and her father is Danbridge Henley Kane of Park lane, New York and her uncle Lieut. Col. Theodore Porter Kane recently appointed to the Charlestown navy yard.

A newspaper has been suppressed in Mexico for revolutionary opinions, notwithstanding which we believe our old Presbyterian friend "The Observer" ventures to keep on publishing in New York.

THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 27 No. 81 QUINCY, MASS., THURSDAY EVENING, APRIL 4, 1912 PRICE TWO CENTS

ADDRESS BY HON. ELMER A. STEVENS BEFORE QUINCY BOARD OF TRADE

Tells Board How the $14,272,881.28 it Costs to Run the State Each Year is Expended

No Corporation or Trust Company Gets More for a Dollar Expended Than Does the State

The first address before the Boardof Trade in the series of talks planned by President Hearn took place at the Wednesday meeting of the Board which was held at Colonial hall. The address was given by State Treasurer Elmer A. Stevens and was a most interesting talk, and greatly enjoyed by the large audience present.

Mr. Stevens arrived in Quincy early in the afternoon and after being taken for a short automobile ride about the city during which a visit was made to the two Adams birthplaces he was entertained at dinner by President Hearn, the dinner party also including City Solicitor McAnarney and Vice President Shaw. It was expected that Mayor Stone would also be present but he did not arrive home in time.

Before the address there was a short business session of the Board. One of the first matters to come up was the proposed amendment to the By-laws which was to suspend rule relative to initiation fee until April 1. It was stated that a check for $132.90 had been received from the Citizens' Association without any conditions. That there were a number of members of the association not identified with the Board of Trade and that it would be a good thing to suspend the rule that those not now members might be admitted on payment of the $5 dues thus omitting the initiation fee of $5.

NEW MEMBERS.

This amendment was voted after a brief discussion during which the facts were explained.

Application for membership were received from the following parties who were duly elected:—

W. F. Dinsmore
Peter Swanson
Chester I. Campbell
William E. Barnes
Herbert T. Whitman
Meyer Winer
Theophilus King

DIRECTORS.

The next matter was the election of nine directors. The new by-laws provides for a board of directors of twelve and as under the old by-laws which were in force at the annual meeting but three were elected it was necessary to elect nine more. The following were nominated by the committee appointed for that purpose and were unanimously elected:

George H. Brown, H. Everett Crane, J. A. Sedgwick, Albert L. Whitman, M. J. McInnis, James F. Burke, Edward A. Bean, Chester I. Campbell, Herbert S. Barker.

BANQUET.

Albert L. Whitman chairman of the banquet committee reported that the receipts of the banquet had been $461.25 and the expenditures $440. leaving a balance on the right side of $21.25.

ELMER A. STEVENS.

President Hearn then introduced State Treasurer Stevens as the speaker of the evening.

Mr. Stevens spoke without notes for an hour, and his talk was a most interesting one. In opening he said he had a profound conviction that if there was one thing the business men of the state ought to know more about, it is the manner in which the state conducts its business. There had been a feeling that the state's money was not wisely expended, but he did not think that there was any corporation or trust company that could show a larger return for a dollar expended than does the state. No corporation has more efficient superintendents or heads of department than does the state. Last year it cost the state $14,272,881.28.

That is a large sum and no one realizes it unless he has sat by the hour signing his name to checks. People say what does the state do with so much money? He was amazed that the state got out of it for even that sum. It is easy to see what becomes of the money when we understand that charitable institutions cost $4,288,774.62, reformatories and corrections $1,330,490.97. In 1910 it took 39 67-100 percent to look after reformateries and charity. Last year it cost 22-100 percent less showing that we are keping down.

Add to the above sums $640,505.26 for agricultural matters, $1,182,628.81 for education, $502,387,92 for military, $615,335.70 for public buildings, $558,884.51 for judiciary and we have the larger items of expense. Then there is the interest which amounts to $1,250,064.39.

But said Mr. Stevens I do not intend to worry you with statistics but will try to show you how the state expends its money. In the matetr of charities and reformatories why it costs more than it did one hundred years ago. He then spoke of the states prison which was heated by four stoves, had not light except that which came through small peep holes. Now we have a well-heated prison at Charlestown, an electric light in each cell and other conveniences. We can not reform men in cold cells and no light. At Charlestown we have in Gen. Bridges, the best warden that can be found. He is one of the ablest business men and disciplinarian the state ever had and Ex-Gov. Russell erected a monu-

CONTEST BEING HOTLY WAGED

The seven-fold contest now being waged betwen the boys and girls ot the Hall Place M. E. Sunday school is proving successful in every way. Although at work only three weeks the members of both sides are showing considerable spirit and the attendance and membership has increased. Alexander Steward, superintendent of the Sunday school is captain of the "Reds" (or boys) and Mrs. Steward is captain of the "Blues" (or girls).

The contest is to run until the first of July, at which time the losing side is to furnish a supper for the winning side. At the present time both sides are equally sure that they are to win. but it still remains for the "Reds" to prove their point as they are considerably behind the "Blues".

The contest is based on attendance at church, attendance at Sunday school, new scholars, time spent in study of lesson outside of class, deportment, memorizing new verses each week, and collection, each subject counting so many points. Friday night two meetings will be held in the interests of this contest. The girls will meet at the parsonage and the boys at the church and make further arrangements toward the success of the contest. All persons not affiliated with any other Sunday school are cordially invited to come.

RUMOR SAYS MAYOR HAS VETOED THE APPROPRIATION ORDER

Veto Will be Sent to City Council at Special Meeting to be Called for Next Monday

Open Question as to What Action Council Will Take on Veto

It was rumored about City Hall this morning that Mayor Stone had carried out to a letter the statement made at Council meeting last Monday evening and that he had promptly vetoed the annual appropriation order and that he would call a special meeting of the City Council for next Monday evening to consider the veto.

It was also rumored about the Hall this morning that His Honor had invited the Finance Committee to meet him Saturday evening for a conference on the budget.

The only question that can come up on the veto is either to sustain the Mayor or pass it over his veto. As it will require sixteen votes to pass it over the veto it is doubtful if it is done.

Just what the plans are, in the event the veto being sustained are not known but it is thought, if that should be the case that a new appropriation order will be immediately offered with the same amounts as named in the order passed, with the exception of the items on which a reduction was recommended by the Mayor which will be reduced as he recommended. This will give the new order its first reading so that it can be passed at the regular meeting April 15.

Mayor Stone has been away since Monday night and did not arrive home until late Wednesday evening and he went to Boston early this morning so that it could not be learned just what he intended to do.

COMMITTEE TO VISIT QUINCY

The visit of the legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs to Quincy, to look at the site of the proposed boulevard extension from Quincy Shore reservation to Hancock street, which was postponed several weeks ago on account of the snow storm, will take place Friday afternoon.

The Committee wil arrive in Quincy at 4 o'clock and will be met by the special committee of the City Council, appointed to attend the committee on its visit. President Hearn of the Board of Trade and probably Mayor Stone will also accompany the legislators.

The committee will be entertained at lunch by the Board of Trade after the view.

LENTEN SERVICE.

A large congregation attended the last in the series of special Lenten services in the Wollaston Unitarian church, Wednesday evening. Mrs. Chandler Smith presided at the organ and Miss Marion Moorhouse, the cellist, rendered most acceptably two choice selections on her favorite instrument. The Rev. Julian C. Jaynes of West Newton,pastor of one of the most influential churches in Greater Boston, preached a most helpful sermon upon "The Glory of the Commonplace." He said, "We must learn to appreciate and value the significance of the insignificant. If we cannot find God in your house and mine, upon the roadside or the margin of the sea; in the bursting seed or opening flower, in the day-duty and the night musing. I do not think we should discern Him any more on the grass of Eden or beneath the moonlight of Gethsemane."

—We don't imagine anyone has any idea but what the consumer will have to pay for the advance in wages the mill workers of New England get. The mill agents admit it, and already the price of cloth is advancing.—Brockton Enterprise.

VACATION TRIP GETS SETBACK

Frank Watson, of Hancock street, had his anticipation of a happy vacation in Maine considerably dampened at Brunswick, where he was hailed into court Wednesday morning and given a sentence of 30 days for evading his fare on a Maine Central passenger train. Watson had planned to spend the Easter holidays visiting different parts of Maine, but his incarceration will prevent his carrying out his plans for another month.

It is said he had enough money to pay a fine but the court saw fit to impose a sentence of imprisonment.

MOOSE CHARTER IS NOW CLOSED

With a membership of over 800, the charter of the local lodge of the Order of Moose was closed at the meeting held Wednesday evening in Faxon hall. There was a large attendance of members and 35 candidates were admitted.

The second degree will be worked on these members at the next meeting. Much routine business was transacted and refreshments were served at the close.

It was voted to hold a "Ladies' Night" on the evening of April 24. A committee was appointed to make arrangements for the affair, which is expected to be a gala one.

The difference between Quincy and Boston is only 10c in car fare, but $5.00 or more in clothes if you go to Kennedy's the Live Store on Summer street—300 feet or more handier and $3 to $10 more economical than the Washington street places. The special Kennedy prices on Kuppenheimer clothes are $18 to $35 while other good, all wool, guaranteed makes are $12.50 up. HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The government has issued arms to our citizens in Mexico, but what is most needed is the ability and willingness to run.

The preceding administration settled the coal strike and nobody ever said it was illegal. Mr. Taft should hunt through his law books again.

The up-to-date way of receiving a curtain lecture is to put a dictograph under the bed for use in the divorce court.

The evils of aristocracy will never be thoroughly eliminated in this country until they fix it so as to give every one an office.

In the old days all you had to do was to join your father's political party, but now you have to think up what he would have done and then vote the other way.

The women have always said pockets made their clothes look bulgy, but the new panier gowns give them a pocket big enough to stick a bale of hay into.

As economy is the skeleton in the Congressional closet which should not be alluded to in public, we are surprised that President Taft has prepared another message on this distressing subject.

If the English Suffragettes had not smashed the windows, they'd have got the suffrage, but voting would never have been so much fun as artisically smashing a good shiny plate glass front.

BELATED HONORS.

On April 15 there will be unveiled at the Potomac park in Washington a beautiful memorial to John Paul Jones America's greatest naval hero. These honors, and those accorded when his body was brought home from France, are tardy, but better late than never.

It is worth recalling that not until 80 years after Jones' great victory over the Serapis did our navy honor him by naming a ship after him, and it was an insignificant little boat at that. Congress never settled up with his relatives for his pay until 1848, when approximate justice was done.

About all that Jones ever got when living out of Congress was a gold medal, which was grudgingly voted eight years after his principal victory. Poor Jones died in obscurity and want in Paris. After one of his cruises when he captured sixteen prizes, Jones was rewarded by the action of Congress in putting 16 officers ahead of him. At another time when he captured seven very valuable prizes, Congress relieved him of the command of his ship.

Yet Jones' grand victory over the crack Serapis was accomplished in a scarcely seaworthy old tub, and when he sprang into battle it was like a "tiger among calves," as an eye witness said. His victory over the Serapis threw England into consternation, and was one of the means by which American independence was secured.

This story of indifference to heroism would seem incredible were there not instances of the same spirit in very recent years.

It sometimes seems as difficult to get heroic work recognized by our government as to get a tariff law passed. The man who wants to get some adequote recognition through Congress apparently needs to log roll and promise his support to other claimants and other interests, before he can get votes in return for a proposition that ought to go through on its merits.

After the lapse of 130 years, the American people seem fully willing to do justice to Jones. They have buried his body at home amid fitting pageantry, and sensibly have overlooked whatever slight doubt there may be as to the accuracy of the identification of the remains. Let us hope that more recent heroes don't have to wait 130 years.

AUTOMOBILE FEES.

What are the people who are back of the scheme to double state automobile fees thinking of? Are they aiming, by the creation of unjust burdens, to discourage the entry into the field of a goodly proportion of people of modest circumstances? Things have passed beyond the stage that ownership of an automobile is now the evidence of wealth. There are any number of machine owners of ordinary financial means who have purchased autos at prices well within their financial ability. These machines are either second or third-hand. Original owners, with whom money is not a consideration, preferred frequent changes, in keeping up with the latest improvements. This resulted in a marked reduction in prices to people who sought old machines placed upon the market. Account must also be taken of the success which has attended the efforts of sundry manufacturers to meet the demand for serviceable machines at a price within reach of people of moderate means. So great has been the output in this quarter that the automobile may be said to have been "popularized" in degree hardly less than extraordinary. These facts are cited for the purpose of emphasizing the conclusion that the seeming "soak 'em" agitation, in the line of largely increased automobile fees is like a two-edged knife. It will cut both ways. The rich will not alone be bled. Thousands of people in ordinary circumstances will also be required to meet a levy, the jumping up of which will only add further to the growing charge that once a man purchases an automobile, no matter how modest his expenditure, he forthwith becomes a proper object for an invidious and an exasperating application of the taxation power. Machine owners are virtually paying double taxes, and that is what renders the proposed increase in state fees particularly objectionable.—Salem News.

FRAUDULENT ADVERTISING.

The action of the Advertising Men's league of New York in instituting criminal proceedings to abolish fraudulent advertising indicates something of the tendency by which modern competition is forcing better ideals of business. Only a few years ago the public was considered the legitimate prey of advertisers who paid for misrepresentations of their wares. Two principal forces are at work in the changes which the advertising world is experiencing today. The first is a more intelligent and discriminating public which is beginning to refuse to be buncoed. Not only does it detect the fraudulent advertiser with greater readiness than formerly, but it is insisting upon his ejection and in this attitude the public is being backed by the better element of the press. A second and no less effective force, because it rests like the action of the public upon the principle of self-preservation and protection, is the growing intolerance of the honest manufacturer and merchant and professional man for the fake in these respective lines of interest. And this last is becoming conspicuous just at the present time. Doctors are coming to the point where they refuse to endure the competition of conscienceless quacks. The bar associations have long found it expedient to discipline members of the legal profession who persist in unworthy action. Advertising clubs are beginning to use similar measures to exterminate fake enterprises and investments. Honesty is ultimately the best policy in advertising as elsewhere. Reliable advertisements serve the best interests of all parties concerned.—Haverhill Gazette.

HOSPITAL FOR MELROSE.

Melrose has several times shown a remarkable ability for raising large sums of money for public purposes. Last year the patriotic citizens undertook to subscribe a large amount for the erection of a memorial to the men who gave their services to their country in 1861-5. They succeeded handsomely and the memorial is now in progress of erection. The next thing that appealed to the generosity of the people was the establishment of a hospital. It was proposed to raise $100,000, in 10 days, and the feat was accomplished on Saturday at 4 P. M. It shows what public spirited citizens can do when they are properly aroused to the necessity of accomplishing something for general good. The Melrose people were aided by contributions from nearby towns, where there is no hospital, on the ground that it would occasionally be of great value to them in cases where prompt treatment for accidents was necessary. There were former residents of Melrose who felt friendly to the enterprise and sent contributions to the old home. The main load, however, was carried by the people of Melrose and they are to be congratulated on the success of the enterprise. They will never regret the hardships or the expenditures of the campaign that ended Saturday—Lynn Item.

BOARD OF TRADE

ment to himself when he appointed him. In 1897 it cost $267 per man to maintain the prison now it costs $112.50. There are some men in prison that ought to be out, and quite a few have not out during the past year, and there are a lot out that ought to be in.

One of the worst things we have to contend with at Charlestown is the dope habit. Much complaint is made because the warden opens all mail, but when you see, as I have, letters and papers opened containing morphine between the leaves and under the flaps of envelopes you can not wonder that the letters are examined. He had also seen a bundle of papers opened from which rolled six fine steel saws.

He also spoke of the prison school and said that there was always some smart banker in prison to teach school. He told of the goods manufactured in prison. These goods were used in the state institutions. Speaking of the Concord reformatory he told how the boys there learned trades and made many things that were used in the various institutions of the state. The boys here learn all kinds of trades and they are being fitted for life. It costs money to do this but when it is understood that many of these boys later become useful citizens no one will regret his part of the expense.

He told of what the state was doing for the short term men on state farms. Also of the tuberculosis home at Rutland. There is to be more of that kind of work done. He also spoke of how the wild farm land at the Foxboro Dipsomaniac hospital had been put under cultivation and how many vegetables had been raised, which were used in other state institutions.

Referring to the reformatory for women at Sherborne he said that only nine percent of the sentences in the state were women, and how the foreign born women in these institutions were taught to read and make themselves useful.

The care of the state's insane is another large problem. At the state hospitals tonight there are 1000 beds made up, but we have not room enough. There are 1,300 insane people in the state to be looked after. To build a new institution such as is needed means an expenditure of a million dollars We have the best of modern appliances. Thirty-three percent of all people mentally affected whose cases are taken early by expert treatment are cured. The majority of physicians know but little about insanity.

Mr. Stevens also spoke of the new hospital being erected on Longwood avenue for mental cases, also of the hospital at Westboro. Hot baths for insane patients was one of the best things ever tried in Massachusets. Patients are put in hot baths, at a temperature of 100 degrees and kept there for hours. It has a very quieting effect. The state is using modern methods in these hospitals and he believed that the taxpayers would be willing to stand their share of the expense. You can not drive an insane person but you can lead them and we are thus able to have them perform much labor.

It is however difficult to get keepers and attendants at these hospitals and they are changed every few weeks. Speaking of the care of the feeble minded he said that it has been said that over two in every 1000 are feeble minded. The state has 1800 of these under its care today. These feeble minded people are able and do perform much work but they must be under constant watch as they can not be trusted alone. He then explained in detail how the feeble minded boys and girls were taught. At Waverley the state had purchased a 2500 acre lot which was being cleared for cultivation by the feeble minded. One man and 50 feeble minded boys can, and do a great deal of work.

There is one man or woman for every group of fifty, and they do an immense amount of work. That is the way the state is doing its business and you can readily see that it takes a lot of money. Dr. Furnald who is in charge at Waverley is a wonderful man and is doing a grand work.

The speaker then touched upon the work of the State Board of Charity, with its paid and volunteer or visiting agents. We have 2600 at Tewksbury and it is a problem to take care of them. At Bridgewater we have one of the greatest of state farms. It is in charge of Capt. Hills Blackstone. There is a 1450 acre farm and 2600 people there. They were paupers, drunkards and the criminal insane. Of the latter there were about 600 or 700. They are most difficult to handle. You can never trust them. You ask what do we do with them. They must have exercise and the speaker said that he had seen four hundred playing ball, and there were some good players there.

The Lyman school for boys and the Lancester school for girls were next touched upon. "Any father or mother who will allow their children to go about nights among undesirable companions are wronging their children, and are raising children for these schools." He also explained in detail the work done at these schools and how the state was making good citizens of boys and girls sent there.

Sometime during the heat of a campaign, in October, some politician rises up and calls for an investigation but never at any other time. A few years ago one tried to make an issue that it cost $8.50 a year to care for the boys and girls in this institution. He wished that he could bring his own children up for that amount.

At the state tuberculosis hospital it cost the state from $10.50 to $11.50 per week for what the patient pay $4. We sometimes hear complaints of the food at these hospitals but investigation has always shown that those who receive the least comforts at their own homes are the ones who do the most kicking while those who had the most luxuries in their own homes are the most contented.

He then touched upon the hospital for leprosy. The state is now caring for twelve patients and they must be taken care of for life. The cases are those contracted in warm foreign lands which did not develop until after their arrival in America. It takes from five to ten years for a case to develop. He spoke of his visit to the Penakes island where the lepers are confined and described how they lived and were cared for. The state can not afford to do anything else then care for these people.

Massachusetts laws are looked upon all over the world as models and are being extensively copied by many states. We also have many visitors from other states who come to learn how the good old state of Massachusetts cares for its unfortunates. He was "proud to be privileged to serve a state that does this kind of work, and it behooves every man to speak well for his country and especially this old mother state, the leader in doing a splendid and magnificent work."

Mr. Stevens received a spontaneous outburst of applause as he concluded his talk and he was given a rising vote of thanks by the gentlemen present for his talk which had been a most interesting and instructive one.

The entertainment committee then served ice cream, cake and coffee.

DOUBLE RING SERVICE USED

Brilliant Reception Follows Pretty Home Wedding

FERGUSON-RUGGLES

At a pretty house wedding, Wednesday evening, in the Neponset home of the bride, Stanley Warren Ferguson of Atlantic was united in marriage to Hazel Luella Ruggles.

The ceremony was performed at 7.45 o'clock in the presence of about 100 relatives and close friends by Rev. George W. Cutter, pastor of the Church of the Unity, Neponset. The bride was given away by her father Eben J. Ruggles, the double ring service being used. The best man was Irving F. Jewett of Reading, a close friend of the groom, while Miss Agnes B. Ruggles, sister of the bride was maid of honor.

The bride was fittingly gowned in embroidered white messaline with veil and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. The costume of the maid of honor was of white marquisette over geranium messaline. She carried a bouquet of Ward roses.

The ceremony was performed before a bank of ferns and other potted plants, the wedding march being played by Mrs. Phillips's orchestra of Boston.

A reception from eight until ten followed to which over 300 invitations were issued, the happy couple being assisted in receiving by their respective parents.

The ushers were: Crawford H. Ferguson of Bridgwater, brother of the groom, John E. Ruggles of Neponset, brother of the bride, Arthur A. Tuttle of Neponset and John H. Lingley of Brockton.

The groom's present to the bride was a pin of pearls and sapphires. Scarf pins were presented the ushers.

Amid showers of confetti and good wishes the couple left on a wedding trip that will include a visit to New York city.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eben J. Ruggles, life-long residents of Oakman street, Neponset.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Ferguson of Hollis avenue, Atlantic, formerly of Wollaston. He is a graduate of the class of 1905, Quincy High school and holds a responsible position with Walter R. Champney and Company, tea and coffee brokers, of Boston.

The reception was attended by a large number from Atlantic and Wollaston where the young people are well known. The large number of handsome and useful presents testified to the popularity of the pair.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson will make their home on Atlantic street, Atlantic, where they will be at home to their friends after June 1.

EASTER IN NEW YORK.

Parades of Models in French Creations Show Imported Designs—Point D'esprit and Net Fixings—Taffeta Wraps Ecru With Deep Blue.

Easter brides and Easter trousseaux call out all the skill of the best fashion artists in Paris and the even more clever adapters on this side of the sea. One has only to attend a parade of models wearing Parisian creations to realize how bizarre many of them seem to our taste and how essential it is that designers here should modify the clever ideas to suit American requirements. The novel touches in trimming and line in these imported hats, frocks and outer garments are always worth noting however and a good "copy-cat," as the children phrase it, can utilize many of them to advantage in smartening up her attire.

HATS.

One can find a hat of any desired style, size or coloring, yet be modishly topped, for models are seemingly innumerable this season. From plain tailored styles to the most elaborate creations, trimmings are simple. It's the hat itself that counts, its shape, materials and becomingness. Cerise and allied tones are just now the most popular contrasting colors. Lace is used for hats in brims, bandings, quills and for veilings, even more perhaps than during the season just over, and tulle is endlessly employed. Flower aigrettes and other high, upstanding trimmings are especially good style. Hemp and fine straws just now are first in the procession, but later "crin" and leghorn will be favored.

BORDERED MATERIALS.

Bordered materials lend themselves very well to pannier frocks and drapery effects, both tendencies of the moment bound to increase in vogue. The woman who is a little uncertain as to whether she can carry off the new style becomingly does well to try them out in inexpensive summer get-ups before investing heavily for more continuous and important wear.

TAFFETA WRAPS.

Taffeta makes not only a majority of the fancy silk suits and frocks, but a great number of long coats and wraps for wear over fussy dresses. Many of these in the changeable weaves. Most of these have immense collars and turn back cuffs of figured foulard, flowered crepe-de-chine or heavy lace. Black chiffon satin double faced or lined with bright colors is also much used for the same sort of wraps. Poplins are popular for this use also and wear indefinitely.

FANCY COATEES.

Fancy coatees of silk, lace or washable materials are poplar with girls and with women of straight slim figures. To this type the peplum effect is universally becoming but for older and fuller figures the style must be very much modified if worn. Tabs front and back, or only in the back can be used for anyone, but hip trimmings are for the few. Coat effects are prominent in all sorts of gowns and are usually only a matter of lines brought out by the trimmings. Point d'esprit lace and fine nets are most popular for gamps and neck fixings, as is also the combination of Continental yellow and blue.

His subject will be "The extermination of the House Fly." Every one in Quincy is invited to attend the lecture and hear what Worcester has accomplished the past year and what Quincy may do to exterminate this pest.

Prof. Hodge is to lecture twice tomorrow in Boston at the Jordan Marsh Co., at 11 A. M. and 3 P. M., to demonstrate how the fly can be eliminated, and comes to Quincy for the evening lecture. He is the inventor of a fly trap that is doing good work.

The fly is one of the greatest nuisances of the age; it multiplies rapidly and spreads disease and should be exterminated. Quincy people should do their share in the work and the committee hopes there will be a large audience to greet Prof. Hodge and profit by what he has to say on this important subject.

STRIKE PICKETS CLUBBED

Girls Say They Were Beaten by Police Without Provocation

Passaic, N. J., April 4.—Twenty girl mill workers were beaten with police clubs by special officers in a clash between the girl strikers and the officers guarding the Garfield mill of Forst, Mann & Huffmann here.

Girls, who were in the squad of pickets, declare they were beaten without the slightest warning. Witnesses assert that girls were clubbed over the heads, arms and shoulders, and that several fell beneath the blows.

USE OF SCHOOLHOUSES

Social Centers Instead of Dance Halls

EDISON PHOTOPLAY

The social center in the public school is brought forward as an antidote to the dance-hall over the saloon by the Russell Sage Foundation in a motion picture drama which has just been produced upon its initiative and with its co-operation. "Charlie's Reform" is the name of this new Edison photoplay and its first exhibition in the "movies" will occur tomorrow.

The astounding facts brought to light by the Chicago Vice Commission together with the epidemic of "tough" dances this winter have created a tremendous interest in the subject of young people's amusements. Already nearly two score of cities have organized opportunities for winter evening recreation in some of their public schoolhouses. But social workers are now beginning to realize that it is the natural desire for companionship with the opposite sex which the dance-hall meets and for which provision is not usually made in the school recreation center. The social center depicted in this new photoplay makes it possible for young men and women to meet under wholesome conditions and it is this privilege which brings about "Charlie's Reform" from a career of idleness and carousing.

The drama is based upon the following plot. Charlie, an athletic young bookkeeper and the mainstay of a widowed mother, is calling upon a sweet womanly girl by whom his affections have been strongly aroused. The continued interruptions from the small brother and two mischievous sisters make private conversation impossible. His patience finally became exhausted and when Helen's parents refuse to allow her to go out with him he leaves in high dudgeon. On the street Charlie encounters an acquaintance who invites him to a dance-hall. In a desperate mood he accepts, and at this resort takes his first steps in a downward career. His intemperance soon results in the loss of his position and he becomes a loafer at the corner saloon.

Meanwhile one of Helen's former teachers has persuaded the old folks to allow the girl to attend a nearby schoolhouse social center. At one of the weekly dancing parties she meets a young man who, subsequently, escorts her to various doings at the center. On one of these occasions Charlie's companions draw his notice to the couple as they pass the saloon window. The sight of a probable rival stirs up a jealous rage and, despite all efforts to hold him, he sets out in a half-drunken pursuit and thus comes to the social center.

The doorkeeper, alarmed by his sinister appearance, attempts to prevent his entrance. After a brief struggle Charlie pushes him aside and rushes from one room to another in search of his sweetheart. He finally discovers her in the kindergarten dancing with —a girl. He begins to upbraid her when the director enters followed by a policeman. Helen explains matters to the director and to Charlie's astonishment he is cordially welcomed to the center. Learning that he is an athlete and out of work, the director engages him as an assistant in the gymnasium. Charlie's habits change and he is taken back by his old employer, to the great happiness of his mother and of Helen, whom he now regularly escorts to the social center doings.

The plot of the drama was devised by Clarence Arthur Perry, a writer and investigator connected with the Division of Recreation of the Russell Sage Foundation. Commenting upon the purpose of the film Mr. Perry said:

"Each year in Chicago nearly one thousand girls are wiped out of existence by a life of shame. A large number of them first came into contact with the influence which brought about their ruin at the vicious dance-hall or amusement park. Most of them had gone to these places to satisfy a perfectly normal and natural desire,—the desire for human companionship. If they had been daughters of the rich this need would have been met by balls and social affairs arranged by their mothers and fathers. But being the daughter of the poor their heart needs were left to the dance-hall proprietors to exploit, to trade upon and to debauch.

"It isn't poverty mainly, but the lack of room, social skill and physical energy that prevents parents from giving their young people adequate social opportunities.

"These three things can be supplied by the municipality just as easily and just as legitimately as protection from fires, burglars and contagious diseases. Put movable seats and desks into the schoolhouses and every classroom in the city can be used as a dancing parlor for some group of congenial people. Many buildings already have auditoriums, gymnasiums and kindergarten rooms— now empty most nights of the year—which could be utilized for social gatherings. Private schools give their pupils a social training,—why shouldn't the public schools do the same thing?

"When employees of the school board develop the dances and form the ball room manners of our young people it won't be possible for mercenary amusement purveyors to awaken them to sexual precocity through the 'turkey trot' or to start them in a life of prostitution through the 'bunny-hub.'

"By adding a few specially trained leaders in recreation and social affairs to our educational corps every schoolhouse in the land can be turned into a center of neighborhood life without harm to the school property or materially increasing the burden upon the taxpayers."

MURDERER FEARS DEATH

He Is Saved From the Electric Chair by Becoming Insane

Albany, April 4.—The fear of death has literally saved a condemned murderer from the electric chair, according to the report of the special commission appointed by Governor Dix to investigate the sanity of Michael Cosmo, now in Sing Sing awaiting the infliction of the death penalty.

The case of Cosmo, who has become insane, is one of the strangest on record. Cosmo has not spoken since May 24, 1911, when he was convicted of the murder of Joseph Maroon of Middletown, N. Y. He had worn an air of bravado during the trial.

MURDER CONFESSION FOUND TO BE FALSE

Nichols Aboard Cruiser Dixie When Dr. Knabe Was Slain

Pensacola, Fla., April 4.—Seth Nichols, the sailor who told the police of Portsmouth, N. H., that he killed Dr. Helene E. Knabe at Indianapolis, Oct. 23 last, was on board the United States cruiser Dixie the day of the murder.

This information, which brands Nichols' confession as untrue, was received here by wireless from the commander of the Dixie, which is engaged in target practice in the gulf.

Nichols did not desert from the Dixie as he claimed, but was given his discharge on Dec. 20, 1911, for conduct prejudicial to the service, according to the message received from the cruiser's commander. The records of the Dixie show that Nichols was not on shore leave on either Oct. 23 or 24.

RODGERS FALLS TO HIS DEATH

Fate of Aviator Who Crossed Continent In Aeroplane

DROPS TWO HUNDRED FEET

Neck, Jaw and Back Broken as Heavy Engine of Biplane Falls Upon Him—Had Met With Longest Succession of Accidents Which an Aviator Had Ever Experienced, but Was Considered Lucky

Long Beach, Cal., April 4.—Calbraith P. Rodgers, the first man to cross the American continent in an aeroplane, was killed here almost instantly late yesterday, when his biplane, in which he had been soaring over the ocean, fell from a height of 200 feet and buried him in the wreck at the edge of the surf. His neck was broken and his body badly crushed by the engine of his machine. He lived but a few moments.

Rodgers for a week past had been making daily flights here and had taken up with him many passengers, both men and women.

Yesterday he started from his usual place and soared out over the ocean, crossing the pier and then turned and dipped close to a roller-coaster in a beach amusement park. He then flew out to sea, all the time gradually rising until he had reached a height of about 200 feet.

Making a short turn he started at full speed for the pier, then suddenly inclined his planes and his machine began a frightful descent. He was seen by hundreds of persons on the pier to relax his hold on the levers and then, seemingly realizing that he was in danger, making a strenuous effort to pull the nose of his machine into a level position.

Failing in this he managed to turn his craft further in-shore and an instant later the craft fell with a crash at the edge of the surf, not 500 feet from the spot where on Dec. 10 last he finished his ocean-to-ocean flight. Many men rushed to his aid.

Ernest Scott and James Goodwin, life-guards, were the first to reach him. They said Rodgers' head was hanging over one wing of the machine, the heavy engine was on his back and his feet were drawn up nearly double over his shoulders. Blood was flowing from his mouth.

Rodgers was lifted from the wreck and hurried to the bathhouse hospital. He died on the way.

Examination showed that his neck, jaw bone and back were broken. A telegram was sent to the aviator's widow, who lives in Pasadena, Cal., and a cablegram to his mother, Mrs. H. S. Schweitzer, who is now in London.

The machine that Rodgers used yesterday was the one with which he won $11,000 in prizes last July at the Chicago endurance meet. It is a total wreck.

Popular With Fellow Aviators

New York, April 4.—Members of the Aero Club of America received the news of Calbraith P. Rodgers' death with expressions of profound regret. He was one of the most popular members of the club, and after his epoch-making flight across the continent he was given a banquet by the Aero club and honored with a gold medal.

Notwithstanding Rodgers met with one of the longest successions of accidents which an aviator ever experienced, his fellow club members regarded him as a lucky man. His transcontinental flight, begun at Sheepshead bay on Sept. 17, 1911, was marked on the second day out by a collision with a tree and, when within sight of Long Beach, his coast goal, he had a fall which laid him up with injuries for nearly a month.

Interspersed with these more serious accidents was a series of smash-ups and lucky escapes which with long delays due to adverse weather, made it a matter of nearly three months' persistence before on Dec. 10, 1911, he finally landed at Long Beach. His perseverance and nerve had carried him a distance of more than 5000 miles. His machine was broken and repaired so many times that only the vertical rudder and the dripping pan of the original apparatus remained when he ended his flight.

Rodgers often talked of the deaths of other aviators. "Etheral asphyxia or aerial somnipathy" was the trouble with many, he said. "It lurks in the pockets of the upper air strata and creeps irresistibly upon the senses of an aviator, lulling him into a dreamy unconsciousness."

Rodgers' death makes 127 aeroplane fatalities since aviation began. He is the twenty-second American aviator in the list of victims.

FOR INVASION OF MEXICO

Bill Permitting Use of State Forces In Foreign Territory

Washington, April 4.—Following the recent decision that the state militia could not be used as an invading force by the government should it decide to intervene in Mexico, Attorney General Wickersham, who gave the opinion, has framed a bill which will make such action possible, if passed by congress.

Wickersham's bill will be forwarded to congress with the recommendation of President Taft that that body give it immediate consideration. It provides a change in the militia law, making state organizations effective as an invading force instead of only a defensive body, as under the present law.

BOYS TIRE OF BEING BOSSED BY FATHER

Youngsters Admit Killing of Parent Who Was Kind

Los Angeles, Cal., April 4.—Frank and Roy Yanes, brothers, aged 15 and 13 respectively, are in the county jail here, charged with the murder of their father, George Yanes, a rancher near Compton.

The boys admit their guilt. Frank said he and his brother had plotted the slaying of their father and that both concealed themselves at the roadside. As the elder Yanes approached, Frank told the officers, he fired the fatal shot from a revolver. The boys took $5.85 in money from his pockets, loaded the body on a mud sled and, hauling it home, told their mother some enemy had killed him.

Both admit their father had been kind to them, and that they had no reason to kill him except that he had compelled them to go to school and "they were tired of being bossed."

Steamer Goes Down With Hundred and Thirty Persons on Board

Perth, Western Australia, April 4.—Wreckage picked up off the coast appears to indicate the fate of the fifty passengers and the eighty men of the crew of the British steamship Koombana, which has been missing since the typhoon on the northwest coast of Western Australia in the last week in March.

The wreckage of the Koombana, which belongs in Adelaide, was found in the vicinity of the pearl fishing station at Broome, a small seaport in the Kimberly division of Western Australia. Forty pearl fishers lost their lives in the gale.

PAYS FINE OF $600

"Nelly Bly" Thus Avoids Service of a Body Attachment

New York, April 4.—Mrs. Elizabeth Seaman (Nellie Bly) saved herself from going to jail for contempt of court yesterday afternoon by paying a $600 fine imposed upon her by Judge Hough in the United States district court.

She refused some time ago to answer questions concerning a manufacturing business of which she is the head and which is in the bankruptcy court. The court thereupon issued a body attachment which would have been served yesterday had not the fine been paid.

TRAGEDY AFTER QUARREL

Woman Shot and Husband Dead From Self-Inflicted Wound

Providence, April 4.—Angered by her refusal to accompany him to his room, James M. Gunner, aged 40 years, of this city, shot and seriously wounded his wife, Mrs. Louise Gunner, aged 25, of New Bedford, and later put a bullet into his own brain, dying within a few minutes.

They had been separated for several months, and the shooting came as the culmination of a quarrel following her visit to her mother's home in this city.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SPRING ONIONS.

ONIONS are coming in from the south now, and the fine new Bermudas are with us, so that this wholesome if somewhat odorous vegetable has a special excuse for appearing on the bill of fare.

The Easter table may be adorned with a handsome pond lily cut out of a Bermuda onion and served on lettuce leaves. The yellow center can be represented by mayonnaise dressing.

Green Onions.

Green onions may be served fresh with salt or after this fashion:

Green Onions on Toast.—Chop a bunch of green onions, put into cold water and set the pan on the stove. When the water comes to a boil remove, drain and cover with cold water. Boil for ten minutes more and drain. Season with a small piece of butter rolled in flour, a quarter saltspoonful of pepper and a little milk—just a few spoonfuls.

Have slices of buttered toast and place a spoonful of onion in the center of each.

Fried bread may be used instead of toast. Garnish with slices of hard boiled egg.

Cooked In the Oven.

Baked With Cream Sauce.—Take a quart of onions, a cupful of milk, a tablespoonful of butter, two cupfuls of fresh breadcrumbs, a tablespoonful of flour, one and a half teaspoonfuls of salt and a dash of pepper. Peel the onions and lay in cold water. Put in a saucepan over the fire, with boiling water enough to cover. Add one teaspoonful salt and boil until tender without a cover.

Brush a bake dish with melted butter, lay the boiled onions in and cover with the cream sauce made as follows:

Cream Sauce.—Put one tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan over the fire, melt, add flour, one-half teaspoonful salt and pepper. Then add the milk slowly. Stir until smooth and creamy and boil two minutes. Pour this over the onions, melt the remainder of butter, mix with the breadcrumbs, stir them and spread over the onions. Bake until light brown.

Baked Onions—Peel and boil onions and arrange them side by side in a baking pan. Strew salt and pepper over them, cover them with a cream sauce made by directions already given, sprinkle crumbs over the top, bake for fifteen minutes covered, uncover and brown.

SOUPS WITHOUT MEAT.

GOOD nourishing soup may be made without the use of either meat or stock. Soups are just what we need for the last few days of Lent when a special effort is made by persons who do not find it convenient to dispense with meat ordinarily.

The soups are not only nourishing but they are so quickly prepared that they make excellent emergency dishes for other than lenten meals.

If the soup is not rich enough the quantity of cream or milk may be increased and an egg or two well beaten may be added.

Made With a Coreal.

Cream of Rice Soup.—Take two tablespoonfuls of rice, wash well, put on to boil in two cups of boiling water. Let it boil for half an hour. Put two cupfuls of sweet milk in the top of a double boiler. When the milk boils add the rice and the water in which it has been boiling. Take a teaspoonful of flour and rub into it a teaspoonful of sweet fresh butter. Drop this into the rice and milk. Stir and add a half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper, a quarter of a teaspoonful of curry powder and a teaspoonful of chopped parsley. Let this boil for about five minutes. Serve with croutons.

Vegetable Soups.

Cream of Potato Soup.—Take a cupful and a half of mashed potatoes, place them in the top of a double boiler on the stove. Add two cupfuls of boiling milk and a teaspoonful of grated onion. Bring to a boil and add two cupfuls of boiling water, a teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper, a tablespoonful of butter and a tablespoonful of flour after the four latter ingredients have been rubbed together. Stir until it looks creamy, then add a tablespoonful of chopped parsley and a little paprika.

Cream of Celery.—This enables one to use up the outer coarse stalks of celery, which are not so nice as the inner ones. Scrub the stalks well and cut into half inch lengths. Put into a saucepan, cover with boiling water and boil until tender. Drain and save the water. Mash the celery through a colander, return to the water and boil ten minutes. Then strain into a double boiler and to each cup of the celery water add a cupful of boiling milk. Season to taste with salt and pepper and to each pint add one teaspoonful of butter and one teaspoonful flour, rubbed together. Boil five minutes.

"You don't think the carriage could have passed us while we were crossing the corn-field?" said Betty.

"No, I reckon we couldn't a-missed hearing it," answered Hannibal. He had scarcely spoken when they caught the rattle of wheels and the beat of hoofs. These sounds swept nearer and nearer, and the darkness disgorged the Belle Plain team and carriage.

"George!" cried Betty, a world of relief in her tones.

"Whoa, you!" and George reined in his horses with a jerk. "Who's dar?" he asked, bending forward on the box as he sought to pierce the darkness with his glance

"George—"

"Oh, it you, Missy?"

"Yes, I wish you to drive me into Raleigh," said Betty, and she and Hannibal entered the carriage.

"All right, Missy. Yo'-all ready fo' me to go along out o' here?"

"Yes—drive fast, George!" urged Betty.

"It's right dark fo' fas' driving', Missy, with the road jes' aimin' fo' to bus' yo' springs with chuckholes!" He had turned his horses' heads in the direction of Raleigh while he was speaking. "It's scandalous black in these heah woods, Missy—I 'clar' I never seen it no blacker!"

The carriage swung forward for perhaps a hundred yards, then suddenly the horses came to a dead stop.

"Go along on, dar!" cried George, and struck them with his whip, but the horses only reared and plunged.

"Hold on, nigger!" said a rough voice out of the darkness.

"What yo' doin'?" the coachman gasped. "Don' yo' know dis de Belle Plain carriage? Take yo' han's offen dem hosses' bits!"

Two men stepped to the side of the carriage.

"Show your light, Bunker," said the same rough voice that had spoken before. Instantly a hooded lantern was uncovered, and Hannibal uttered a cry of terror. He was looking into the face of Slosson, the tavern-keeper.

CHAPTER XIX.

Prisoners.

In the face of Betty's indignant protest Slosson and the man named Bunker climbed into the carriage.

"Don't you be scared, ma'am," said the tavern-keeper, who smelt strongly of whisky. "I wouldn't lift my hand ag'in no good-looking female except in kindness."

"How dare you stop my carriage?" cried Betty, with a very genuine anger which for the moment dominated all her other emotions. She struggled to her feet, but Slosson put out a heavy hand and thrust her back.

"There now," he urged soothingly. "Why make a fuss? We ain't going to harm you; we wouldn't for no sum of money. Drive on, Jim—drive like hell!" This last was addressed to the man who had taken George's place on the box, where a fourth member of Slosson's band had forced the coachman down into the narrow space between the seat and dashboard, and was holding a pistol to his head while he sternly enjoined silence.

With a word to the horses Jim swung about and the carriage rolled off through the night at a breakneck pace. Betty's shaking hands drew Hannibal closer to her side as she felt the surge of her terrors rise within her. Who were these men—where could they be taking her—and for what purpose? The events of the past week linked themselves in tragic sequence in her mind. What was it she had to fear? Was it Tom for whom these men were acting? Tom who would profit greatly by her disappearance or death!

He Was Looking Into the Face of Slosson, the Tavern-keeper.

They swept past the entrance at Belle Plain, past a break in the wall of the forest where the pale light of stars showed Betty the cornfield she and Hannibal had but lately crossed, and then on into pitchy darkness again. She clung to the desperate hope that they might meet some one on the road, when she could cry out and give the alarm. She held herself in readiness for this, but there was only the steady pounding of the big bays as Jim with voice and whip urged them forward. At last he abruptly checked them, and Bunker and Slosson sprang from their seats.

"Get down, ma'am!" said the latter.

"Where are you taking me?" asked Betty, in a voice that shook in spite of her efforts to control it.

"You must hurry, ma'am," urged Slosson impatiently.

"I won't move until I know where you intend taking me!" said Betty. "If I am to die—"

Mr. Slosson laughed loudly and indulgently.

"You ain't. If you don't want to walk, I'm man enough fo' to tote you. We ain't far to go, and I've tackled jobs I'd a heap less heart fo' in my time," he concluded gallantly. From the opposite side of the carriage Bunker swore nervously. He desired to know if they were to stand there talking all night. "Shut your filthy mouth, Bunker, and see you keep tight hold of that young rip-staver," said Slosson. "He's a perfect eel—I've had dealings with him afore!"

"You tried to kill my Uncle Bob—at the tavern, you and Captain Murrell. I heard you, and I seen you drag him to the river!" cried Hannibal.

Slosson gave a start of astonishment at this.

"Why, ain't he hateful?" he exclaimed aghast. "See here, young feller, that's no kind of a way fo' you to talk to a man who has riz his ten children!"

Again Bunker swore, while Jim told Slosson to make haste. This popular clamor served to recall the tavern-keeper to a sense of duty.

"Ma'am, like I should tote you, or will you walk?" he inquired, and reaching out his hand took hold of Betty.

"I'll walk," said the girl quickly, shrinking from the contact.

"Keep close at my heels. Bunker, you tuck along after her with the boy."

"What about this nigger?" asked the fourth man.

"Fetch him along with us," said Slosson. They turned from the road while he was speaking and entered a narrow path that led off through the woods, apparently in the direction of the river. A moment later Betty heard the carriage drive away. They went onward in silence for a little time, then Slosson spoke over his shoulder.

"Yes, ma'am, I've riz ten children, but none of 'em was like him—I trained 'em up to the minute!" Mr. Slosson seemed to have passed completely under the spell of his domestic recollections, for he continued with just a touch of reminiscent sadness in his tone. "There was all told four Mrs. Slossons: two of 'em was South Carolinians, one was from Georgia, and the last was a widow lady out of east Tennessee. She'd buried three husbands, and I figured we could start perfectly even." The intrinsic fairness of this start made its strong appeal. Mr. Slosson dwelt upon it with satisfaction. "She had three to her credit, I had three to mine; neither could crow none over the other."

As they stumbled forward through the thick obscurity he continued his personal revelations, the present enterprise having roused whatever there was of sentiment slumbering in his soul. At last they came out on a wide bayou; a white mist hung above it, and on the low shore leaf and branch were dripping with the nightdews. Keeping close to the water's edge Slosson led the way to a point where a skiff was drawn up on the bank.

"Step in, ma'am," he said, when he had launched it.

"I will go no farther!" said Betty in desperation. She felt an overmastering fear, the full horror of the unknown lay hold of her, and she gave a piercing cry for help. Slosson swung about on his heel and seized her. For a moment she struggled to escape, but the man's big hand pinioned her.

"No more of that!" he warned, then he recovered himself and laughed. "You could yell till you was black in the face, ma'am, and there'd be no one to hear you."

"Where are you taking me?" and Betty's voice faltered between the sudden sobs that choked her.

"Just across to George Hicks's."

"For what purpose?"

"You'll know in plenty of time." And Slosson leered at her through the darkness.

"Hannibal is to go with me?" asked Betty tremulously.

"Sure!" agreed Slosson affably. "Your nigger, too—quite a party."

Betty stepped into the skiff. She felt her hopes quicken—she was thinking of Bess; whatever the girl's motives, she had wished her to escape. She would wish it now more than ever since the very thing she had striven to prevent had happened. Slosson seated himself and took up the oars, Bunker followed with Hannibal and they pushed off. No word was spoken until they disembarked on the opposite shore, when Slosson addressed Bunker.

"I reckon I can manage that young rip-staver; you go back after Sherrod and the nigger," he said.

LABOR CLAIMS VICTORY

Hatters' Union Wins Suit Brought Against It by Ex-Member

Danbury, Conn., April 4.—What is claimed to be a sweeping victory for organized labor was handed down in a verdict for the defendants by a jury in the superior court here in the case of Dominick O'Connor vs. Patrick H. Connolley and the Danbury Hatters' union.

O'Connor, the plaintiff, was formerly a member of the union, but was suspended for non-payment of assessments after the men returned to work at the conclusion of the great tie-up here in 1910, and lost his position in a local hat factory for that reason. Connolley, who is now state labor commissioner, was formerly secretary of the Hat Makers' association.

O'Connor sued for $5000 damages, alleging that the loss of his position was due to an illegal conspiracy.

MADERO FORCES WIN

Rebels Are Sent Scurrying Back to Their Base at Jiminez

Jiminez, Mex., April 4.—The troops of President Madero gained their first victory in the northern campaign when they defeated General Campa at Parral and sent him scurrying back to the base in this city.

Instead of finding a handful of defenders at Parral under General Pancho, Campa was met by a deadly fire from a force which he estimated at 2000 under the command of Generals Villas, Tellez, Unbina and Soto.

The presence of the federals in force in Parrel and the fact that another government force is approaching Escalon seem to indicate the rebels must abandon their campaign against Torreon and defend themselves in a decisive battle in the neighborhood of Jiminez.

IT MUST BE TRUE

Quincy Readers Must Come to That Conclusion.

It is not the telling of a single case in Quincy, but scores of citizens testify. Endorsement by people you know bears the stamp of truth. The following is one of the public statements made in this locality about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Charles J. Somers, barber, 17 Newcomb street, Quincy, Mass., says: "It is a pleasure for me to tell of my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills, for the benefit of other kidney sufferers. This remedy worked wonders in my case. Lame back and weak kidneys bothered me for ten years and nothing helped me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills. The promptness with which this remedy cured me was astonishing. My strength and energy was restored and my health improved one hundred percent. I shall always endorse Doan's Kidney Pills when I have the opportunity." (Statement given September 2, 1908.)

A LATER ENDORSEMENT.

On August 9, 1911 Mr. Somers was interviewed and he said: "I am only too pleased to verify my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. I still take this remedy occasionally and it keeps me in good health."

MONUMENT TO ARMY NURSES

Will Be Erected In State House by Veterans of Massachusetts

Boston, April 4.—The indorsement of a movement calling for a contribution of $1 from each member of the Grand Army in the commonwealth for the proposed erection of a monument to the army nurses at the entrance of the flag room in the state house; the adoption of a measure that will increase the number of delegates to succeeding encampments; the installation of officers and presentation of gifts, and a rousing farewell banquet in the New American hotel attended by 600 veterans, featured the closing day of the forty-sixth annual encampment of the Department of Massachusetts, G. A. R.

By the action of the encampment to solicit contributions from each member of the G. A. R., the monument to the army nurses is assured.

"PEACE WITH HONOR"

Conflict Between British Coal Owners and Miners Is Ended

London, April 4.—"It will be peace with honor, and the men will return to work," said Thomas Ashton, secretary of the Miners' Federation, last night. But pending a scrutiny of the ballots today he was not able to give the figures.

Other delegates, who arrived in London to attend the meeting of the federation today, are agreed there will be too small a majority against a resumption of work to justify a prolongation of the conflict.

Work in the coal fields is rapidly extending. Large numbers have resumed in Staffordshire and it is said that 20,000 men in this district will be back in the pits today.

POUCH CUT INTO

Sleuths Hunting For Men Who Stole $8000 of Government Money

Washington, April 4.—An $8000 express robbery, which has baffled Southern Express company officials, was taken up by the government secret service. It occurred between Roanoke, Va., and Norfolk, when a leather pouch, containing $12,000 government money consigned to this city, was robbed of two-thirds of its contents.

When the package shipped from the United States sub-treasury at New Orleans to the treasury here arrived in Norfolk it had been cut into, apparently with a sharp knife, and there was but $4000 in it.

RACE AFTER RUNAWAY BOYS

Officer Corbett Proves Himself a Good Sprinter

TWO GET AWAY

No sooner had Officer Henry F. Corbett placed Charles Mangs, who was injured Wednesday afternoon by a mail bag, thrown from the 12.45 Cape express train, safely in a carriage, than he saw three young lads, presumably youths who had run away from home, walking up the tracks in the vicinity of the Quincy depot. After telling the driver of the carriage to convey the injured man to a doctor for treatment, Officer Corbett proceeded to chase up the youngsters.

The latter soon realized the intent of the policeman and lost no time in trying to evade him. The race was quickly on, the three youths leading the fleet footed Corbett by a large margin. Two of the youngsters ran rapidly, so rapidly in fact that the officer lost sight of them. One of the lads, probably through fatigue, as a result of doing all the guiding for the other two, could not maintain his lead, and after a distance of about a narter of a mile, was overtaken by Officer Corbett, who took him into custody.

He was taken to the police station, where he informed the police he had left home on Tuesday in company with the other boys. He said his name was William Coveney and that he was 15 years old and lived at 750 Fifth street, South Boston. He also stated that the boys whom the officer saw with him, were his brother, John Coveney, aged 12, and Carleton Prescott, aged 12, of 590 East Ninth street. The boys said they were wandering about in search of food and had slept in an alleyway the previous night. The boy's father was communicated with and came and took the boys home shortly after nine o'clock, Wednesday. He told of the boys' leaving home and that nothing had been learned of their whereabouts until the Quincy police imparted the information. It was learned this morning that the other two boys had also returned home.

HIGH SCHOOL PRACTICE SQUAD

Fifty candidates reported at Merry Mount park this afternoon for the Quincy High base ball team. Coach Staff was on hand to try the players out in the different positions and although nothing definite could be determined from the first day's work, the coach is highly optimistic as to the outcome and feels that he will be able to round out a fast combination.

Many of those trying for positions on the team have already gained fame in foot ball and basket ball and the battery candidates seem to be very formidable. Of last year's team, Captain Blackmur, Chapman and Holmes still remain. Holmes is doing fine work behind the bat, although McDonald seems to be a foremost contender as first string twirler. Trask, O'Dowd and Johnson are all showing up well as candidates for the initial sack. Blackmur will in all probability hold down second base and a cut in the squad will be made next week. Other candidates showing up to advantage include McAnarney, Roche, Tobin, Hall, Estey, Prout, Duplessis, Finlay, Halvosa, Smith, Bill, Noonan, Ward, Jenkins.

THE LOWELL STRIKE

No Indications of Speedy Settlement of Labor Trouble

Lowell, Mass., April 4.—The strike situation shows no indications of a change and both sides are settling down for a long struggle. Stephen T. Whittier, secretary of the Manufacturers' association, said that if the strikers are willing to accept the increase offered the mills will be thrown open at once.

William E. Trautman of the I. W. W. executive board declared at a mass meeting on the South common that the strike now practicallly is won by the strikers and that it is a matter of a few days when the agents will concede all the demands.

Smith Battered by Moha

New York, April 4.—Bob Moha of Milwaukee battered Jim Smith of New York so badly in a scheduled ten-round bout here last night that Smith's seconds threw up the sponge to save their man from a knockout in the eighth round. Smith weighed 171 pounds at the ring-side and Moha 166.

LA FOLLETTE TO PRESS CONTEST

Going After Delegates In All the Roosevelt Strongholds

STRONG BOOST IN WISCONSIN

It Places Senator Ahead of Former President In Race For Nomination —Will Enter Fight In Illinois and States Farther West—Indications That Taft Forces Will Control Conventions In Iowa and Kansas

Washington, April 4.—Senator La Follette of Wisconsin is now second in the race for the Republican presidential nomination. His victory at the primaries in his own state gives him a lead over Mr. Roosevelt.

The senator left for Nebraska yesterday afternoon, where he will continue his campaign for delegates. He will stop over a day at Chicago for a conference with the men who have charge of his interests in Illinois. Announcement was made at his headquarters here that ne will be a candidate in most of the Illinois districts. The senator said he was sorry he could not spend two or three days delivering speeches in Illinois. At the time his appointments for Nebraska were made Illinois had not provided for the direct primary.

The plan of the La Follette people is to put up candidates for delegates in those Illinois districts in which Roosevelt appears to be strong. The Wisconsin senator makes no attempt to conceal his desire to try his strength with Roosevelt wherever possible. The La Follette people are making capital out of the fact that Roosevelt did not submit his case to the Republican voters of Wisconsin. They are saying that Roosevelt has been asserting that what he wanted was direct primaries, and yet he failed to let his name go on the ballot in Wisconsin, a state that is presumed to have the ideal presidential preference primary law.

Senator La Follette will make a large number of speeches in Nebraska. He expects to show more strength in that state than Roosevelt and hopes that he may be able to get the delegates. After he gets through with Nebraska he will go to South Dakota, Minnesota, Oregon and perhaps to California. His ambition now is to go into the Chicago convention with more delegates than can be counted for Roosevelt.

Telegrams received here from Iowa indicate that the Taft forces will undoubtedly control the state convention. It is asserted that the president now has the 741 votes necessary to control the convention with about twenty-five county conventions yet to be held. In Kansas the Taft forces have even won in Topeka, the official home of Governor Stubbs, one of the seven governors who persuaded Roosevelt to be a candidate. The Taft forces carried five out of six wards in that city.

TAFT A REACTIONARY

Claim of Roosevelt In Speeches Delivered In the South

Louisville, April 4.—President Taft's statement that he is a progressive was disputed by Theodore Roosevelt in a speech here last night. The former president said that Taft in some of his acts had shown himself a reactionary. In support of this contention, Roosevelt went over the record of the present administration in certain particulars and criticised it sharply.

The colonel's speech came at the end of the first day of his week of campaigning through West Virginia, Kentucky, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

He broke his record for speeches for the present campaign, making fifteen yesterday. All but two were given at railway stations from his car. Everywhere he found large crowds and a cordial reception.

Police Search the Cretic on Her Arrival at Boston Without Result, When Acting Immigration Inspector Discovers Suspects Huddled In Water Tank—Mostly Young Men, Some Looking Like Hard Characters

Boston, April 4.—Twenty-seven men, supposed to be criminals of the Italian Black Hand type, were discovered aboard the steamship Cretic from Italy and the Azores, while she was being searched by Acting Immigration Inspector William R. Hartland of the immigration force yesterday afternoon at her dock in Charlestown.

The discovery of the stowaways in a water tank created a sensation, for the reason that Immigration Commissioner Billings of the Boston office had been warned that a number of "black handers" were coming to Boston as stowaways on the Cretic.

In order to be prepared for any "black handers" on board, Deputy Police Superintendent Watts and several inspectors were on hand shortly after the liner docked, both to help search the ship and to look after any persons taken into custody.

When the immigration inspectors boarded the Cretic at quarantine a search of the lifeboats and other common hiding places for stowaways was made, but without results. Owing to the necessity of looking after the passengers, a more minute search could not be made until after the passengers had disembarked.

The entire crew of the Cretic was mustered on deck and a roll call given, in order that no stowaways, or possible members of the Black Hand society could pass themselves off as regular hands. The police inspectors meantime had been searching the ship, without results. Hartland was at one time employed on board a liner and knew more of the nooks and corners where stowaways might be concealed than did the landsmen.

It was for this reason that he had been assigned by Billings to conduct a search on his own account, and the confidence in his abilities to ferret out any of the hidden folks was fully justified when he found the twenty-seven stowaways referred to in one of the tanks.

They were taken from their hiding place and under custody of immigration and police inspectors were transferred to the Charlestown police station. Most of the party were young men, and some of them looked like hard characters.

The stowaways perhaps did not know what a chance they were taking when they went into the water tank for a hiding place, because it is the custom to fill the water tanks for ballast.

The discovery on the Cretic is the most important in the stowaway line made in several years at the port of Boston. There was another similar incident some years ago on board another White Star liner.

APPROPRIATION ORDER VETOED

Mayor Also Calls Special Meeting of City Council

THE CALL

Mayor Stone this morning vetoed the annual appropriation order, which was passed by the City Council at its meeting last Monday evening. His reasons for the veto will be stated in a communication to the Council.

The Mayor also issued a call this morning for a special meeting of the City Council for next Monday evening. There are but two matters stated in the call. Viz.

To receive a communication from the Mayor returning Order No. 108 without his approval.

To consider and act on an annual appropriation order for 1912.

It is understood that the Mayor will meet the Finance Committee, Saturday evening when the question of the budget will be gone into. In speaking of the budget this morning the mayor said that in some of the items the Finance Committee had not allowed enough money to pay the actual expenses. One item in particular he spoke of, was lights where he says the amount allowed in the budget is not sufficient to pay for the lights already installed.

In other items the Mayor says the amounts are in excess of what they should be unless the city council wants a prohibitive tax rate.

INSPECTOR GOES TO THE RESCUE

That he is fully qualified to perform the duties of a water inspector, whenever the occasion requires, as well as an inspector for the Board of Health department, was demonstrated by Edward J. Lennon, shortly before noon today, near the junction of Elm and South streets. It seems that a brook which flows in the vicinity had been made to resemble a dam, as a result of a number of boys placing rocks across the stream, thereby retarding the flow of the water.

Mr. Lennon, happened to be driving by at the time, en route to making an investigation of conditions somewhere in the neighborhood, when he espied the failure of the brook to flow in its usual manner, noting at the same time the overflow of water, that was apparent, and the danger that was sure to result unless immediate remedial steps were taken. Mr. Lennon lost no time in procuring a fork, rake and a number of other such implements necessary to confiscate the "dyke," that had been built, and within a short time had succeeded in making the water flow in its acccustomed place.

Many of the neighbors in the vicinity realized full well what would have happened to their cellars had not Mr. Lennon come to the rescue and they were loud in their praises of what the congenial inspector of the Board of Health had done for them in his anxiety to avert all danger.

TEAM BREAKS THROUGH BRIDGE

It was nothing short of miraculous that no accidents occurred Thursday afternoon, when the rear wheel of one of Johnson's lumber teams fell through the bridge leading to Post Island, Houghs Neck. The team was heavily laden with lumber at the time and although the driver, John McDonald, was thrown from his seat by the sudden collapse of a portion of the bridge he managed to cling to his horse and thus save himself from danger. The horse remained quiet throughout the situation and came out without a scratch.

Evidently the load of lumber was too heavy for the bridge, whose woodwork was badly rotted. The driver was unable to release the team from where it had fallen and it required a crew of men to take the team out of the hole, into which it had fallen. It was not until this noon that the driver was enabled to take the team back to the wharf, preparatory to delivering another load of lumber.

PARISHIONERS GREET PASTOR

Third Alphabetical Supper at the Bethany Church

GOOD CHEER REIGNS

The third of the alphabetical suppers was held Thursday evening in the Bethany chapel and it was a most delightful gathering and happy occasion. Good cheer and hospitality reigned supreme and the supper was a most excellent and generous one. Dr. and Mrs. Asher Anderson of Cambridge and the new pastor Rev. B. F. F. Willmott,, his wife and son were present.

At the conclusion of the supper, Deacon Chase said he was very glad to see so many present to greet the new pastor in an informal way. "This is a very happy family assembled here tonight, and as we have been under the guardianship for the last few month of Dr. Anderson, we feel that these festivities would not be complete without a few words from him."

Dr. Anderson said, "If you will forgive the old chestnut, 'I am too full for utterance.' Dear deacon and dear friends, we have come to the parting of the ways, I have spent a very happy time among you, and for all your kindness, your cordial greetings, and the friendly relations which have existed between us I thank you most heartily. I am rather jealous of your new pastor, you have shown so much affection to me that I don't like to have him supplant me in your affections. But I know you will extend the same generous spirit towards him that you have to me, working in harmony and in loving and practical sympathy.

"You will look forward to the meetings and the prayer meetings and your hearts will be filled with rejoicing, yourl ives blend in unison and his ministry among you will be an ideal one. I want him to spend the rest of his days in Quincy. I prophecy a pastorate of forty years. I commend him to your prayers, your allegiance, knowing he will prove himself abundantly worthy."

Deacon Chase said: "we have a pastor emeritus, pastor pro tem and pastor elect."

Mr. Willmott responded, saying in part: "It gives me much pleasure to be here tonight. These church suppers are family feasts, to bring us together socially and establish friendly and familar relations and good fellowship. This is the night the Lord's supper was first observed and so let us have the consciousness of His presence and go on with our work with unwavering purpose and make this church an exceptional church, this people an exceptional people. We know problems and difficulties may confront us but you have six good deacons and if anything unpleasant should occur tell them and they will tell me if it is wise. May we work together very successfully, may our faith be strengthened and may we prove ourselves true disciples in the ministry of Jesus Christ."

Much credit is due Mrs. H. Everett Crane chairman of the supper committee, for the very successful manner in which all details were carried out. Mrs. Crane's assistants were: Mrs. Herbert Pratt, Mrs. Annie Pratt, Mrs. F. F. Prescott, Mrs. Andrew Stewart, Mrs. Cyrus T. Sherman.

The following ladies presided at the chafing dishes: Mrs. V. E. Miller, Mrs. George L. Badger, Mrs. A. L. Tucker, Mrs. J. Francis Merrill, Mrs. S. I. Wood, Mrs. H. M. McPhail, Mrs. Albert Hayden, Mrs. John Keast, Mrs. Frank F. Prescott, Mrs. George Macfarlane, Miss Hattie Sargent, Mrs. Emma Spaulding, Mrs. H. Bromley, Mrs. George A. Sidelinger, Mrs. J. S. Swingle.

Mrs. John F. Welch was chairman of the reception committee; Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard chairman of the decoration committee Mrs. John Roberts of West Quincy chairman of general committee.

Alvah Innis and Warren Stewart were in charge of the clothing in the coat room.

There were two hundred and four at the supper, which was one of the most successful ever held.

SEEKS TO AMEND ITS BY-LAWS

Firemen's Relief Association Petitions Legislature

THE PROPOSED BILL

Representative William J. Leslie, of Quincy, today presented to the House Committee on Rules the petition requesting permission for making changes in the by-laws of the Fireman's Relief Association of Quincy. Although it is long past the stipulated time for receiving new petitions, the committee decided to recommend a suspension of the rules of the House and admit the petition. The bill in full is as follows:

Section 1. The Quincy Fireman's Relief Association may amend its by-laws so as to provide that the present members and future members of the said association may continue as members after they have ceased to be members of the Quincy Fire Department; but such members shall not be entitled to any benefits except that provided for by article 15 of the by-laws of the Association. Provided, however, that the amount of the benefit may be changed at any time in accordance with the provisions of the by-laws.

Section 2. The Quincy Fireman's Relief Association may include in its members the following named persons who are former members of the Fire Department of the City of Quincy, Peter J. Williams, Edgar F. Hayden, Jr. James Morrissey, Frederick Garbarino, Welcome Blake, Alfred W. Besson, Clarence D. Sargent, James E. Dinegan, George S. Williams, John McKenna, John Ross, William F. Powers, Thomas Hogan, James F. Rooney and Edward Flaherty.

Section 3. This act shall take effect on its passage. Rep. John F. Meaney for the Rules committee will report the committee's recommendation in the House today.

REP. BUSY ON COMMITTEE WORK

The legislative committee on Harbors and Public Lands, of which Rep. Leslie of Quincy is a member, has been granted more time in which to file its reports of unfinished business. This committee has been one of the busiest of the present session, which is saying a great deal. Besides giving public hearings to all matters assigned to its care, this committee is obliged to travel about the State, and inspect closly the scenes of the large number of proposed projects with which it has to deal. Mr. Leslie has in the past few weeks visited in his committeeman capacity the Housatonic River in Berkshire county, part of the Connecticut river that is proposed for a State reservation, part of the Merrimac River, the harbors of Gloucester and Quincy and Town river in Quincy, and the part of the town of Hull for which protection against the sea is asked for.

☞Prof. Hodge of Clark College, Worcester, lectures tonight on "The extermination of the fly," at the clubhouse of the Quincy Women's club, President's hill. You are urged to attend. No admission is charged, the lecture being free to every one and for the good of Quincy.

LEGISLATORS VISIT QUINCY

The members of the Legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs will have a taste of Quincy's hospitality when they visit the city this afternoon to view the proposed location of the boulevard from Quincy Shore Reservation to Hancock street for which a bill calling for $240,000 is before the House.

The Committee who will be accompanied by Representatives Piper and Leslie will arrive in Quincy, at City Hall at 4 o'clock. Here they will be met by Mayor Stone, Councilmen Richards, Studley and Thompson, the special committee of the City Council and President Hearn of the Board of Trade.

The committee will be first taken to the rooms of the Board of Trade where they will be given a lunch by Quincy's wide-awake business association. Automobiles will then be taken for a view of the proposed location of the boulevard.

100,000 FLIES KILLED.

In the April Woman's Home Companion there is an interesting discussion of the problem, "Getting Rid of the House Fly." There are a number of practical suggestions and a number of reports of the campaign already made against the fly. Following is a report from an Ohio town:

"Early in July, 1911, the newspaper in our village tackled the fly problem for this community. At the outset it was announced that on a certain day the citizens would be asked to co-operate with this paper in 'swatting the fly A local clothing cencern co-operated to the extent of distributing, without any charge wire fly swatters,' and on the day appointed three thousand of them has been distributed.

"Boys and girls were encouraged to assist in ridding the community of flies by the offering of prizes on the part of this concern, and when the day had come and gone, more than one hundred thousand flies had been slain in Hamilton.

"During the days which preceded the day designated, educational articles were carried by the town paper. The co-operation of the city authorities, and especially the health officer, was secured for 'Fly Day' and efforts were put forth at that time looking to the permanent cleaning up of places where flies could breed. 'Fly Day' in Hamilton was generally conceded to have been very successful. There was no effort made, of course, to absolutely exterminate the fly, because such a result was realized to be out of the question, but this paper had as its aim, simply to give the people an idea of how far they could go in solving the fly problem if they all got together and worked to that one end."

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Mr. Roosevelt has been speaking of the Welfare of the Farmer, and failed to tell the public how they can get any of it away from him.

Lady Warwick says life in America is too speedy, but if she lived over here a little she'd soon be assuring the chauffeur that she'd pay his fine.

What is going to become of the rights of private property anyway, if a man can't keep his senate seat after good money has been spent to get it?

Stock Market tip: The advance will continue until the lamb pelts have been disposed of, after which a decline will take place, to prepare for the next shearing.

It would seem as though a young man with a call to preach would in these days of high living become a Unitarian from necessity if not from choice. The salary per year shows the Unitarian average to be $1653, the Episcopal $1242, Universalist $1238, New Jerusalem $1233, Jewish $1222, Presbyterian $1177, Reformed $1170, United Presbyterian $1096 and Congregationalist $1042. While most of the other churches average less than $600. The ministers of the country are certainly up against a problem when a family has to be raised and educated. The professional man cannot begin to compete in wages with the laboring man notwithstanding the fact he has paid a good price to fit himself for his work.

BUSINESS FRIENDS AT HOME.

When you desire to raise money to put through a business proposition, do you board a railroad train and seek it from capitalists in some distant city? Well, not very often. You go down the street calling on every one in sight, and come back on the other side. And yet some of us who have often asked for business favors of our home people in the past, and will ask for them again, do not hesitate to spend money freely and needlessly in patronizing the merchants of other cities, often too, to our distinct disadvantage and regret.

It is an excellent principle in business to stand by the people that stick by you. The man who buys everything possible at home creates a circle of business friends, who appreciate his loyalty, and would like to return it in so far as they can. These business relations lead to personal friendships, and they bring returns not from self interest alone, but from ties of neighborliness and good fellowship.

A great many things in life go by favor. When two propositions look about alike, you choose the one that is backed by the man with whom you have had some friendly relation. Every time any one buys at home he creates that relation, and the fruitage is likely to come back with a surprising amount of compound interest some day, and it often comes from unexpected quarters.

The person who buys goods of some distant concern never gets anything in the way of reciprocity or return. He has cast his bread on waters that flow away, and will never return. Who in the big mail order house knows or cares about him, save as one cog in the vast machine of distribution, to be ground through the day's work without the slightest feeling of personal friendship or reciprocity?

NEW YORK MILK BILL.

In the wind-up rush at the close of its session, the Legislature passed a bill which, if it becomes a law, will reduce to a nullity the present legal requirements as to the nutritive quality of milk sold in this city. Instead of demanding that the milk be up to a certain fixed standard, the law as changed would simply require that it be as good as happens to be supplied by the particular cows furnishing it. The trouble about such a regulation is not only that it permits a lower standard, but that it would be practically impossible to enforce it; and it is for this reason that the health authorities, and the philanthropic agencies that have done such excellent life-saving work for the little children of New York declare that the bill practically amounts to a downright destruction of all safeguards of milk quality. Gov. Dix should not hesitate to veto the bill. Unless he does so, he will make himself personally responsible for the deaths of hundreds of babies next summer, whose lives would have been preserved but for the forcing of an unwarranted change in a beneficent law, under whip and spur, in the rush of the last days of the Legislature, and his own failure to interpose a veto.—New York Evening Post.

THE SORRY PART.

"Governor Foss is likely to go down in history," says a contemporary, "as our greatest pardoning governor."

It is a pity that such a distinction should be sought, when there are so many other ways in which distinction would spell honor to the executive and advantage alike to commonwealth and people.

As pardon movements are now too often engineered, there is too much appeal to politics and slop. Above all, the proper work of the courts is nullified. That is where the scandal makes itself strikingly manifest.—Salem News.

FLAG NOT DISHONORED.

Editor Quincy Ledger:

I saw a letter in the Ledger of April 2, written by L. B. Titus a member of the American Flag Association in regard to Miss Liberty who won the prize at the I. O. O. F. dance in Quincy last week. The flags were not mutilated in any way as they were draped and pinned on. There was no cutting or mutilating of them and they did not even touch the ground. In fact the lady who wore them has too much respect for Old Glory to mutilate or insult it in any way. If L. B. Titus thinks the flags were mutilated she can call at 479 Hancock street, Wollaston and see for herself.

Mr. Editor, will you kindly insert this letter in your paper and oblige the wearer of the flag costume who never saw a representation of the Goddess of Liberty without a flag and thinks the criticism far fetched.

Mrs. C. W. Nelson,
Wollaston, April 4, 1912.

GOTHAM HAS STEPLESS CAR

Likely to Become a Permanent Feature of the Metropolis

New York, April 5.—The first stepless side door car ever in operation on the street car lines of this country rolled out of the car barns of the New York railways yesterday for her maiden trip. The "stepless" car has come to stay if its triumphal progress down and up Broadway is any indication.

The most striking feature of the car is the absence of steps at the centre entrance on either side. The car body hangs within four inches of the pavement and the floor is six inches higher, making a step up of ten inches for the passenger. This is less than the height from the ground to the steps of any car now in operation in this city.

There were about sixty passengers in the car. The bodies of the three victims were not found for nearly an hour.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Miss Billie Burke is coming to the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, to begin her annual two weeks' engagement on Easter Monday (April 8). Miss Burke was the Easter attraction at the Hollis last year too and it is a custom that ought to be encouraged for Miss Burke, more than any other actress on the American stage, represents springtime and youth and all that sort of thing. Charles Frohnam is presenting her this season in "The Runaway" and the critics have agreed that this is "the best of all Billie Burke's comedies." Miss Burke played a long and very successful engagement in "The Runaway" at the Lyceum Theatre New York, last autumn and since then she has taken the piece to Philadelphia, Chicago and numerous other cities and has scored a triumph in it wherever she has gone.

In the play the charming young actress impersonates a very young and pretty little French country girl who runs away from home because her aunts want to marry her to the village booby. She finds shelter in the studio of a great artist in Paris and eventually snuggles herself into his heart and marries him. It is just the sort of role that Miss Burke can play a little bit better than any other woman now on the stage. One New York critic said that the part suited her as well as her own tousled hair and another remarked that it proved her the Peter Pan of player ladies because she absolutely refuses to grow up. She is supported by a particularly strong company. During Miss Burke's engagement at the Hollis there will be the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. Miss Burke will give an extra matinee also on Patriots' day, April 19.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

Winthrop Ames will give the Boston public its first opportunity to see an example of the stagecraft of Prof. Max Reinhardt, the most commanding figure in theatrical management in the world today, beginning Tuesday evening at the Shubert Theatre, when he will present "Sumurun," the wordless play with music which was the artistic sensation of Berlin, London and New York theatrical circles. Mr. Ames has brought over from the Deutsches Theatre, Berlin, Prof. Reinhardt's entire company and production.

The story of "Sumurun" is told entirely in action without the use of words. It is a Persian tale, the plot of which was arranged by Frederick Freska, one of the younger of the German dramatists, and elaborated by Prof. Reinhardt. All the color, comedy, animation and gorgeousness of ancient Bagdad are revealed in the nine tableaux of this drama of love, romance, jealousiy and death. The picturesqueness of Persian scenes, the languorous warmth of Oriental love, the fierce flame of its easily kindled passions, and the blithe joyousness of its comedy, are woven into the story which is highly dramatic, relieved by laughter producing episodes. The story of the love of the Hunchback showman for his dancing slave girl, known as the Beautiful Slave of Fatal Enchantment, and of Sumurun the favorite wife of the old Shiek, for Nur-al-Din, the cloth merchant, and the subsequent comingling of the two stories, ending in the murder by the old Sheik of his son, and his own death at the hands of the Hunchback, is told entirely without the use of words, but so vivid and realistic is the acting of the German Company, and so dramatic the story that the spectator is not aware of the absence of words.

B. F. KEITH'S.

The real novelty of the season is promised for B. F. Keith's Theatre next week, when an all-women vaudeville show will be the attraction. Of the sixty-odd artistes on the program, everyone will be of the fair sex. Aside from the unusual nature of this attraction, the week will be notable for the return to Boston after several years' absence, of Caroline B. Nichols and her famous Fadettes and Willa Holt Wakefield. The Ladettes return from a long tour of the South and West, where they won fresh laurels. Mrs. Nichols brings an entirely new repertoire of popular and semi-classical selections, and she has the finest company of musicians that were ever gathered together for an organization of this kind. Willa Holt Wakefield will present a brand-new pianologue, singing all new songs, including "I've got a pain in my sawdust," a cute little doll song; a "Common Little Girl;" and "The Story of the Pair of Sausages." Another spectacular feature will be the Kaufmann Troupe, eight handsome young lady cyclists who perform the most intricate military formations mounted awheel. Rowena Stewart and Gladys Alexandria have an original comedy entitled "Broadway Love," Hilda Hawthorne, the lady ventriloquist, will be on hand with her famous "Johnnie;" Max Witt's Melody Lane Girls have a novel specialty; Catherine Hayes and Sabel Johnston will be seen in "A Dream of Baby Days;" Annie Kent has a new dancing oddity; and the Four Onetti Sisters are wonderful German gymnasts.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Beginning Monday evening, at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, Lew Dockstader and his own Great Minstrels will begin a two weeks' engagement. There is only one Lew Dockstader, and he is "king of the minstrel world." No Don Carlos has yet arisen to dispute his claim or to pretend to sovereignty in the realm of burnt cork where Lew Dockstader holds sway as the undisputed monarch. His conceded individuality and his unique personality, coupled with genialty and magnetism, are attributes which have made his name familiar as household words and have won for him a popularity which extends from ocean to ocean. Mr. Dockstader has, during his long professional career, succeeded in elevating minstrelsy to an artistic plane and in rescuing it from the inane doggerel which pervaded it a generation ago to the highest standards of popularity and appreciation. The famous minstrel has the happy faculty of gathering around him none but the best of minstrel talent to march under his banner. The singing contingent of this season's entertainment is one of the big features, including such artists as Manuel Romain, "the song bird of minstrelsy," Frank Farron, another tenor with a most remarkable range of voice, Master Charles Leo, the phenomenal boy soprano.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

Beginning Monday, The Liebler Company will present for a limited engagement at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston, that much-heralded and widely-discussed play "Alias Jimmy Valentine." The play, which ran for nearly two years at the Wallacks theatre, New York, is the work of Paul Armstrong, suggested by O. Henry's short story "A Retrieved Reformation." The play is unquestionably the most successful yet written by this prolific author, who is also responsible for such successes as "The Heir to the Hoorah," "Salomy Jane," "The Deep Purple" etc. The play tells the story of Lee Randall, who under the name of Jimmy Valentine, is convicted on the word of a dying crook, of bank robbery. The action opens in the warden's office at Sing Sing, where Jimmy is brought out, among other inmates of the prison, to perofrm for the benefit of a party of humanitarians, and open the safe. Among the party is Rose Lane, niece of Lt. Gov Fay of New York, who is also present. Rose recognizes Jimmy as her rescuer of two years previous when she had been attacked in a Pullman car by a rowdy. Her pleadings to her uncle wins for him a gubernatorial pardon, and, also puts him on the straight road to reform. Through the kindness of influential friends this former bank-looter is given a responsible position in a national bank. There, by honest and efficient service, he soon works his way near the top of the ladder, when a child, having been accidentally shut in a new vault, combination of which has not yet been determined, he is forced to choose between saving a life and disclosing his identity to a detective who has been on his trail.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

After an interval of five years, "Romeo and Juliet" is to be given next week at the Castle Square. It will be given in response to an emphatic demand, and it will offer the best of opportunities both to actors and producers. The romance of this, the most famous of all Shakespeare's romantic dramas, is enthralling from the very outset. At the very opening of the play, Romeo is captivated by Juliet's beauty, and from that point the plot runs smoothly. Successively comes the famous balcony scene, the episode in Juliet's chamber, the marriage with Romeo in Friar Lawrence's cell, her taking of the potion, and the final scene of all in the tomb of the Capulets. Throughout the attention of audience is held constantly.

At the Castle Square, "Romeo and Juliet" will have an elaborate scenic settings and costumes it will appeal production, and in beauty of stage both to the eye and to the mind of the audience. As for the acting, Mr. Craig will be seen in the role of Romeo, which he has acted on many occasions with great success, and Mary Young will bring her personal beauty and artistic skill to the charming character of Juliet. Among the others, Mercutio stands out prominently, and he will be acted by George Hassel, while Donald Meek will appear in the leading comedy role of Peter. The other characters will be allotted among the other members of Mr. Craig's company. The run of "Romeo and Juliet" at the Castle Square will be for only one week.

LAST REHEARSAL.

The last regular rehearsal of the Quincy Choral Society before the concert of April 9, was on Thursday evening and proved that the singers have thoroughly enjoyed learning the Faust choruses under Conductor McConathy's able teaching. They have imbibed the true spirit of the music and the opera should prove a delight to all who are interested in the society's growth, as it promises to give more conclusive evidence than any work yet attempted that there is a splendid future before this organization.

The afternoon concert will be no small part of the society's first Music Festival. The program has been arranged with great care and beside the fine chorus singing of the High School scholars, the orchestral program, opening with the splendid "Oberon" overture by Weber, will present the brilliant "Ballet Divertissement" by Saint-Saens, several lighter compositions by noted composers and will close with the first movement of Dvorak's famous symphony "From the New World." This symphony has the distinction of being the greatest piece of music ever composed in this country, as the composer, although a foreigner, was living in New York City at the time it was written. He was a native of Bohemia and although his American symphony was supposed to be founded upon Negro melodies, which he considered the real folk-music of this country, many critics claim that the fundamental themes are so impregnated with the spirit of the composer's native folk lore that they are more Bohemian than Negro.

At the time this symphony was first presented it raised a storm of criticism because ofthe fact that Negro music had been considered by so great a composer the folk-music of this land. The idea was disputed by many of our eminent musicians and supported by as many more and has always remained a fruitful source of argument. However, nothing could detract from the worth and beauty of the symphony itself which is regarded as one of the greatest works of this truly great musician who was a composer in all forms.

It seems eminently fitting that the first Music Festival should include this particular symphony as it is, we believe, the first symphony to be played in this city by any orchestra. The Choral Society has proved itself a pioneer from the start and has already to its credit the first complete presentation in Quincy of three great oratorios and a world-famous cantata. May the good work continue!

Mrs. Anthony Hears of Hubby's Talk About Her Diamonds

New York, April 5.—When Mrs. Charles H. Anthony returns to Mr. Anthony at Muncie, Ind., she is going to give him a piece of her mind.

Mrs. Anthony has been stirring up considerable fuss by wearing slippers with diamonds in the heels. The ubiquitous press, it seems, made a note of this and reporters out in Muncie approached Mr. Anthony anent the subject, and Anthony said:

"You can buy that kind of diamonds at $5 a quart."

"Now what do you think of that?" said Mrs. Anthony at the Waldorf. "Talk about women being gabby! They've got nothing on that husband of mine. Such a talker! And always says the wrong thing, always! Wait till I get home. I'll read him the Indiana riot act. Do you wonder I'm a suffragette?"

Boston, April 5.—An attempt to bribe one of the jurors in the case of Victor M. Joseph Kelley is the juror who was approached, but he has been unable to identify the guilty person. A new suit of clothes for Easter and some money—the exact amount was not stated—are said to have constituted the bribe which was offered Kelley.

RELIEF SENT FLOOD VICTIMS

Furnished by Army Upon Order of President Taft

RATIONS ARE BEING RUSHED

Army Quartermaster and Corps of Assistants Will Determine What Is Needed In Future—Thousand Families In Dire Distress at Hickman, Ky.—Grave Fears That Levees Opposite Memphis Will Not Hold

Washington, April 5.—President Taft has ordered the quartermaster general of the army to supply rations to people driven from their homes by the Mississippi flood, whenever there is suffering for food.

This action was taken after an extended conference with Senator-elect James of Kentucky, who presented the appeal from all the flood districts along the river.

The fact that thousands of refugees are in need of food supplies was urged upon the president as a reason why he should ask an emergency appropriation of $250,000 for a relief fund. Taft told James that quicker action could be secured by having the army supply food, and orders were sent to the quartermaster's depot in St. Louis to rush rations up to the Cairo district.

A quartermaster of the army with a sufficient corps of assistants was ordered to the scene and he will have charge of issuing the rations and determining what is needed in the future.

The army will follow the course of the flood down the river and thus be enabled to have food and tents to be issued the moment the people are driven from their homes to higher ground.

Meanwhile an emergency appropriation bill has been introduced in congress and as soon as this is passed the president will sign it.

The following telegram was received by James from Mayor Dillon of Hickman, Ky.:

"Existing conditions are critical and pitiful. We not only have our own city, but also the people behind the levees in Kentucky and Missouri. One thousand families is a minimum estimate of the refugees. We have expended every cent in our treasury. The people of Hickman have used every resource to care for the distressed. For God's sake ask congress to appropriate $5000 in cash, every cent of which will be accounted for."

Despite appeals by the Kentucky congressional contingent, the house ways and means committee decided to postpone until today action on the bill appropriating additional emergency funds for the flood sufferers. The committee hopes that the waters may subside by today and make further appropriation unnecessary.

Grave fear was expressed in dispatches received at the weather bureau from responsible river men that the levee on the Arkansas side of the Mississippi, opposite Memphis, will not withstand the flood. Should the levee break, the area south to Helena, Ark., would be submerged.

Although the officials trust that the levees will hold, it was pointed out that every break will relieve the tension at the lower river points which the flood has not reached. The greatest stage cannot be forecasted at this time owing to the uncertainty of the overflow water above Helena.

Last night saw the river within two-tenths of a foot of what the Memphis weather forecaster has termed the dead line—forty-four feet. In his opinion the levees will go when the pressure represented by that much water is reached.

A stage of forty-five feet, ten feet above the danger line, is predicted. Weak spots have appeared, too, at Mound City, Ark., and at the Reel Foot levee, west of Hickman, Ky.

JACK JOHNSON

Wants to Settle Smuggling Case Without Prosecution

FOR SMUGGLING DIAMONDS

Jack Johnson Can Escape Prosecution Only by Paying $9600

Chicago, April 5.—Unless Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, pays to the United States government a $9600 fine for smuggling a diamond necklace, he runs the risk of being prosecuted for smuggling. He is charged by the treasury department with having brought in illegally a $6000 necklace when he returned from King George's coronation.

Johnson was at the United States district attorney's office endeavoring to settle the matter without prosecution. He was informed that the only way he could do so was by the prompt payment of $9600 as a penalty. The necklace contained sixty diamonds, and was worn by Johnson's white wife.

DENIES HER GUILT ON WITNESS STAND

Mrs. Vermilya Declares She Knows Nothing of Poisons

Chicago, April 5.—Hundreds of people crowded Judge Sullivan's courtroom to hear Mrs. Louise Vermilya make her denial on the witness stand of what has been termed by the state attorney "the most dastardly and subtle murders of modern days."

There was a hush in the crowded courtroom as the woman was carried in her invalid chair to the witness stand to resume her story. Her face was pale and haggard. With an air of confidence she looked straight at the jury. She said in answer to a question from her lawyers:

"No, I did not kill Richard T. Smith. I did not kill Arthur Bissonnette. I never killed anybody. I loved all these people whom I was charged with killing."

The woman declared she knew nothing of poisons or how to administer them. She said she was engaged to marry Richard Smith.

NATIONAL GAME REFUGES

Provided For In Measure Introduced by Senator Perkins

Washington, April 5.—Senator Perkins of California has introduced a bill which aims at the protection and increase of state game preserves by providing that the secretary of agriculture may proclaim certain areas to be "national game refuges," and which shall thereupon be recognized as breeding grounds.

The measure says that the area of any one refuge shall not exceed 50,000 acres; that it shall be situated on a national forest or on other unoccupied public lands; and that privately held lands may be relinquished to the government for the purpose of establishing such refuges.

The secretary of agriculture is given authority to establish such preserves.

Doctor Reports That It Cured Woman Afflicted With Cancer

Philadelphia, April 5.—Cure of a case of cancer in the neck of a woman by the injection of guinea pig serum was reported by Dr. G. H. A. Clowes of Buffalo at the annual meeting of the American Association for Cancer Research held in the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Clowes also presented strong evidence of the certain relation between cancer and disease of parasitic origin. Out of 1500 cases, 200 were determined to be cancer by tests of the blood for anti-trypsin reactions.

VATICAN TAKES NOTICE

Rome, April 5.—The anti-tipping crusade reached the Vatican yesterday and was recognized in an official papal edict forbidding church functionaries to accept tips for providing tourists and visitors with good seats for the Holy Week services.

The impressive ceremonies of the week have created a big demand for good places, and some of the church servants have been profiting thereby.

FOSS DROPS BAY STATE PRIMARY

Governor Quits His Actual Candidacy For President

DOES NOT INJURE CHANCES

May Get Nomination In Case of Deadlock at Baltimore Convention by Securing Good Will of Clark and Wilson In Leaving Field Clear For Them In Massachusetts—Action Comes as Surprise to Politicians

Boston, April 5.—Governor Foss sprung a big surprise last night when he announcel his withdrawal from the ballot as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president.

He notified Secretary of State Langtry of his intention to withdraw in a formal communication, and also wrote Chairman Riley of the state committee, giving his reasons.

In his letter to Riley the governor says:

"The appearance of my name upon the presidential preference ballot in accord with the old idea of voting for so-called 'favorite sons' would not help the cause of these issues in the least, as they are already the dominant issues of our national party; but would only diminish the effectiveness of the new primary law."

The governor's action was taken after he had been informed that out of courtesy to him as the "favorite son" both Champ Clark and Woodrow Wilson had decided to withdraw their names from the ballot.

With the withdrawal of Governor Foss from the contest the fight will now be between Clark and Wilson.

The governor does not believe that his withdrawal from the contest injures in an way the chances for securing the nomination at Baltimore. On the contrary, he believes that by eliminating himself from the ballot in this state he will have secured the good feeling of both the Clark and Wilson forces at the convention should there be a deadlock, as a result of which his name would be considered as a compromise candidate.

The governor's action was entirely unexpected. It came as a shock to the candidates for delegates-at-large who have already filed nomination papers pledged to his candidacy. Not only has the slate named by the Democratic state committee gone on record as pledged to the governor, but a number of delegates in the congressional districts have also done so.

Of course the withdrawal of Foss releases the candidates for delegate from their pledge, but the question arises as to whether or not they can go on the ballot as unpledged.

The question of whether the pledge of the candidates can be removed from the ballot will be settled by Secretary of State Langtry.

BRITISH STRIKE IS OVER

Miners' Executive Committee Orders the Men Back to Work

London, April 5.—The coal miners executive committee, after consulting the returns officially, called off the coal strike and ordered the miners back to the pits.

The official count when announced was, as expected, agains resumption, being as follows:

Against resumption 244,011
For resumption 201,013

The executive committee, however, promptly applied the two-thirds rule and declared the proposal to continue the strike had been defeated.

Despite the order to call off the strike a national conference of the whole of the miners' federation will now have to decide whether or not the advice of the executive committee shall be adopted

Offer of Reward Fails to Tempt Him to Betray Allen Gang

Hillsville, Va., April 5.—Another days pursuit of the courthouse assassins still at large has brought no news of success from the posses in the mountains.

Jordan Edwards, one of the Allens' kinsmen, charged with giving aid to Sidna Allen and Wesley Edwards, the only two outlaws of the band who have not been taken, was given a grilling by detectives in the hope that he might tell their whereabouts.

The mountaineer was firm, and did not betray them. He scorned an offer that the $1500 offered for the men would be his if he gave them up. It turned out that he is in Sidna Allen's debt.

Detectives have found a great many others in this county in the same plight who fear being suspected of aiding the officers.

LAUGH IS ON LAWYER

Asks Pretty Witness to Describe a Hug and She Does

New York, April 5.—Asked to show Justice Delaney and the jury in the supreme court how Mrs. Lillian Kinsman, the defendant in a suit for divorce brought by Charles F. Kinsman, embraced Ellis, the man named as corespondent, Mrs. Belle Kuell, a servant, who was a witness for the plaintiff, calmly threw her arms about Charles LeBarbier, counsel for the defendant, who had made the request.

The laugh was on the lawyer, who looked very much disconcerted, while the pretty young witness was perfectly unconcerned.

The jurors laughed heartily at the spectacle, suspecting that LeBarbier had intended to disconcert the maid when he asked her to make the demonstration.

Doctor Summoned to Aid Little One Makes Pathetic Discovery

Newark, N. J., April 5.—When a child crossing Bowery street was run down by a trolley car last evening Dr. Ralph Flachs, the nearest doctor, a block away, was hurriedly summoned.

Leaning over the mangled little form the physician was horrified to find it was that of his own 4-year-old daughter Ella.

Almost in a state of collapse from the discovery Flachs was barely able to pick up the body of the child, who had apparently been instantly killed, and carry it home. The girl had rolled under the car fender and been crushed by the front wheels.

MAINE LEGISLATURE ACTS

Passes Resolve to Oust York County Attorney Richardson

Augusta, Me., April 5.—Charges of soliciting a bribe, of employing sharp practise in avoiding trial on an indictment of ignorance of the law and of incompetency were preferred against County Attorney Asa A. Richardson before the state legislature.

The charges were brought by counsel for Sheriff Charles O. Emery in the impeachment proceedings brought against the sheriff by Richardson, who alleged that the sheriff had attempted to bribe him to protect liquor sellers.

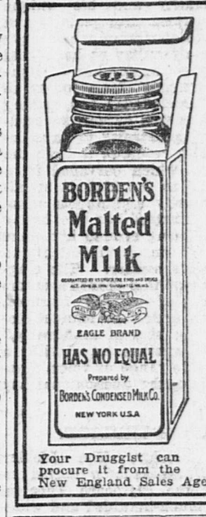
Upon the presentation of the charges against Richardson by the attorneys for the sheriff the legislature adopted a resolve for the preparation of an address to remove Richardson from his office as county attorney. Notice was served upon him in the corridor and the hearing of his case will begin today.

ABUSED BY HIS WIFE

Man Who Is Entitled to Divorce If His Story Is True

Washington, April 5.—The most henpecked man in America by his own claim, has come to light in the person of Harry A. Radcliffe, a local meat dealer, who is suing for divorce. Radcliffe, on the witness stand, could not enumerate the attempts made on his life by his wife with revolvers, knives, bottles and other weapons.

He said he was compelled to sleep for weeks in the stable with the horses, and on one occasion, when he was out of the city, his wife sold the contents of his meat shop as junk. On another occasion, he said, she cut up his clothes and burned a buggy and three sets of harness. He exhibited a scar on his face which he said his wife had inflicted with a bottle while he slept.



Borden's

The proprietors of Borden's Malted Milk are convinced that a large share of its popularity is due to its flavor. They have eliminated all the sickish sweetness and the peculiar "tang" that used to be associated with malted milk, and have produced something that the most delicate taste not only approves but craves. It is put up in a bottle inside a square package. Be sure you get Borden's Malted Milk if you desire the above demonstrated.

He conducted his captives up the bank and they entered a clearing. Looking across this Betty saw where a cabin window framed a single square of light. They advanced toward this and presently the dark outline of the cabinet itself became distinguishable. A moment later Slosson paused, a door yielded to his hand, and Betty and the boy were thrust into the room where Murrell had held his conference with Fentress and Ware. The two women were now its only occupants, and the mother, gross and shapeless, turned an expressionless face on the intruders; but the daughter shrank into the shadow, her burning glance fixed on Betty.

"Here's yo' guests, old lady!" said Mr. Slosson. Mrs. Hicks rose from the three-legged stool on which she was sitting.

"Hand me the candle, Bess," she ordered.

At one side of the room was a steep flight of stairs which gave access to the loft overhead. Mrs. Hicks, by a gesture, signified that Betty and Hannibal were to ascend these stairs; they did so and found themselves on a narrow landing inclosed by a partition of rough planks; this partition was pierced by a low door. Mrs. Hicks, who had followed close at their heels, handed the candle to Betty.

"In yonder!" she said briefly, nodding toward the door.

"Wait!" cried Betty in a whisper.

"No," said the woman with an almost masculine surliness of tone. "I got nothing to say." She pushed them into the attic, and, closing the door, fastened it with a stout wooden bar.

Beyond that door, which seemed to have closed on every hope, Betty held the tallow dip aloft, and by its uncertain and flickering light surveyed her prison. The briefest glance sufficed. The room contained two shake-down beds and a stool; there was a window in the gable, but a piece of heavy plank was spiked before it.

"Miss Betty, don't you be scared," whispered Hannibal. "When the judge hears we're gone, him and Mr. Mahaffy will try to find us. They'll go right off to Belle Plain—the judge is always wanting to do that, only Mr. Mahaffy never lets him—but now he won't be able to stop him."

"Oh, Hannibal, Hannibal, what can he do there—what can any one do there?" And a dead pallor overspread the girl's face. To speak of the blind groping of her friends but served to fix the horror of their situation in her mind.

"I don't know, Miss Betty, but the judge is always thinking of things to do; seems like they was mostly things no one else would ever think of."

Betty had placed the candle on the stool and seated herself on one of the beds. There was the murmur of voices in the room below; she wondered if her fate was under consideration and what that fate was to be. Hannibal, who had been examining the window, returned to her side.

"Here's Yo' Guests, Old Woman!"

"Miss Betty, if we could just get out of this loft we could steal their skiff and row down to the river; I reckon they got just the one boat; the only way they could get to us would be to swim out, and if they done that we could pound 'em over the head with the oars—the least little thing sinks you when you're in the water." But this murderous fancy of his failed to interest Betty.

Presently they heard Sherrod and Bunker come up from the shore with George. Slosson joined them and there was a brief discussion, then an interval of silence, and the sound of voices again as the three white men moved back across the field in the direction of the bayou. There succeeded a period of utter stillness, both in the cabin and in the clearing, a somber hush that plunged Betty yet deeper in despair. Wild thoughts assailed her, thoughts against which she struggled with all the strength of her will.

In that hour of stress Hannibal was sustained by his faith in the judge. He saw his patron's powerful and picturesque intelligence applied to solving the mystery of their disappearance from Belle Plain; it was inconceivable that this could prove otherwise than disastrous to Mr. Slosson, and he endeavored to share the confidence he was feeling with Betty, but there was something so forced and unnatural in the girl's voice and manner when she discussed his conjectures that he quickly fell into an awed silence. At last, and it must have been some time after midnight, troubled slumbers claimed him. No moment of forgetfulness came to Betty. She was waiting for what—she did not know! The candle burnt lower and lower and finally went out and she was left in darkness, but again she was conscious of sounds from the room below. At first it was only a word or a sentence, then the guarded speech became a steady monotone that ran deep into the night. Eventually this ceased and Betty fancied she heard sobs.

KNABE "MURDERER" SAYS THAT HE LIED

Memory Restored by Statement of Captain of the Dixie

Portsmouth, N. H., April 5.—Seth Nichols, former member of the crew of the U. S. Dixie has confessed that he lied to the authorities when he said that he murdered Dr. Knabe of Indianapolis. He now claims that the suicide of his wife and liquor are responsible for the condition of his mind that made him tell the fake story.

The statement from the captain of the Dixie that Nichols was aboard the Dixie at the time of the murder brought back his memory.

After being confronted by this report, Nichols broke down and confessed that he absolutely knows nothing of the crime except that which he read in the papers.

Since the death of his wife, who was only 17 years old, Nichols claims he thought he was the murderer of the Indianapolis woman physician.

CHANCES TOO RISKY

Scott Had No Intention of Racing For the South Pole

London, April 5.—A dispatch to Central News from Christ Church, N. Z., contains an extract from a private letter written by Captain Scott on Oct. 28.

He refers to Captain Amundsen's proposed dash for the pole as complicating the position, but says he is determined not to alter his plans, inasmuch as indulging in a race for the pole would spoil the prospect of getting there. Scott expressed the opinion that Amundsen was taking risky chances, but if he succeeded he would deserve all credit.

Against Municipal Lighting

Boston, April 5.—Municipal lighting got a death blow in the house with the rejection of a bill to make its adoption easy by city councils. The vote was 101 for the bill and 106 against it. The bill provided that a majority vote instead of a two-thirds vote of a city council or of a town government is sufficient to authorize municipal lighting.

THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The month of March was the record month of circulation at the Thomas Crane Public Library. It was the largest number issued from the main desk since the enlargement of the building, 6449.

From the children's room, 2513, and 400 sent to the schools, make the biggest output from that department, 2913. A circulation of 2497 from the West Quincy reading room, also the record month there, brought up the grand total for the month of March to 11,859.

Some figures from the West Quincy branch should be interesting. For the opening month, July, 1910, a circulation of 1038. For Nov. 1911, 2166, hitherto the record month and more than double circulation in a little more than a year. Now let us compare the first three months of this year with the same months a year ago.

RESIGNATION OF HEAD MASTER

It was announced Friday afternoon by Superintendent Albert L. Barbour that Headmaster James D. Howlett of the High school had tendered his resignation to the school committee, to take effect at the terminus of the present scholastic year. Mr. Howlett has been principal of the High school the past two years and resigns to accept a position of headmaster of the Medford High school.

Mr. Howlett states that it was no easy proposition to accept the fine offer made him by the Medford school authorities, owing to the fact that he had established his system at the High school, so thoroughly, and made so many friends in Quincy, that to estrange himself at this time seemed almost impossible. Mr. Howlett says, however, that his new position gives him a far better field for advancement, also the minimum salary paid to a teacher at the Medford High is equal to the maximum salary paid at Quincy.

Mr. Howlett had taken an active interest in all departments of school work at Quincy High and has acquitted himself in a manner worthy of commendation. The best wishes for success have already been showered upon him by many of his Quincy friends all of whom seem to feel that Mr. Howlett will prove himself an able principal for the Medford High school.

Mr. Howlett is a graduate of Colgate college, class of 1900 and while a student there took an active interest in all athletic movements, being himself very proficient in football and baseball. He was recently elected president of the Colgate Alumni Society.

After graduation Mr. Howlett took a post graduate course at his Alma Mater. He was born in East Boston, but his parents moved to Everett when he was quite young. His preparatory studies were made at Coburn Classical institute. The first work of Mr. Howlett in teaching was at these two schools of learning.

In 1903 and 1904 he was a sub master at Quincy High under Charles F. Harper. From here he went to Farmington, N. H., where he taught until he was appointed headmaster of the Plymouth High school in 1906. He remained in Plymouth until Jan. 4, 1910, when he was appointed headmaster of the Quincy High school. It is said Mr. Howlett turned down two other flattering offers, so that it was inevitable that Quincy should again lose a valuable teacher.

EXTERMINATION OF HOUSE FLY

With Little Attention Quincy Could be Rid of Flies

HOW TO DO IT

A flyless utopia was the picture drawn for Quincy at the Quincy Women's clubhouse Friday evening by Professor C. S. Hodge of Clark University, Worcester.

Speaking upon the "Extermination of the house fly," Professor Hodge declared that with but a very small amount of attention, and the co-operation of all the residents, Quincy could be rid of flies in less than a month.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Home Economics committee of the Quincy Women's club with Mrs. Stanley Bone its chairman presiding.

Although the audience was not a large one the interest as shown by the attention paid and the questions asked spoke well for the movement in Quincy.

Mrs. Bone introduced Mr. Hodge as professor of biology at Clark University and spoke of visions of a flyless Quincy.

"The problem" said Professor Hodge, "is much in the air and belongs to that group of civic biology that requires the co-operation of every member of the community in order to solve.

"As soon as we gain sufficient civic consciousness it will be solved easily and we will have fun in doing it.

"I often think there is a close connecting link between science and religion and would quote the saying of President Emeritus Eliot in his 'New Religion' who says 'Cleanliness is next to Godliness but cleanliness must come first.'

Civic biology is training in the development of co-operative good will. There is a great movement at the present time of the uplift for disease.

"The world is suffering from millions of cases perfectly preventable. There are hundreds of thousands of premature deaths that are unnecessary. The present age of good health depends upon the extermination of the disease carrying fly.

"It is the necessary first step. Health officials say 'clear the air of this universal distributor of filth first—the typhoid fly.' It answers the question: How did he catch it?

"It is true that baby had not been out of the house, but where had the little fly been that bathed in the baby's milk in the dairy a week ago."

Professor Hodge vividly described the journeys of a fly from stables, spitoons and other unsanitary places to the food that is spread on our tables and declared that anyone who watched, by aid of a microscope, for an hour the actions of a single fly upon a dish of food would never again

It may not be amiss to remark at this Easter season, when the Easter lilies are so much in evidence, that the most commonly misspelled word that comes in various news articles to the Ledger office is this same word "lily." Strange as it may seem, probably nine persons out of ten write the word "lilly" or in the plural "lillies." The church is always resplendent with "Easter lillies" and the bride with "lillies of the valley."

One would hardly think that the town of Medford could pay more than the City of Quincy for teachers but such seems to be the case for we are to lose Headmaster Howlett from the High school, because of a much higher salary and greater inducements. Thus they come and go, the pupils no more become accustomed to a teacher and his influence begins to be felt when along comes a school committee looking for a good proposition for their school, and Quincy is the loser.

Mr. Howlett as did his predecessor Charles F. Harper, entered into the interests of the city. He is closely identified with its social work being an active member of the Associated Charities where his help and influence will be missed. He has many friends in and out of school, who, while regretting his leaving wish him every success.

REVIVING BANK BUSINESS.

The report of bank clearings for March for 125 cities, issued by R. G. Dun & Co., is full of hope for the business man. A gain of 7.7 per cent. over last year is recorded, and the loss from 1910 is only 3.7 per cent.

March was a month of storms and cold, which must have had some effect in delaying spring trade in country districts. This reviving tendency of trade again illustrates how foolish it is for the American business man to be afraid of his own shadow. For the past two years, our country has been full of pessimism. It is of course a time of political and social unrest, of some breaking down of party lines and some drifting away from old moorings.

These periods of change are not of course favorable to development of enterprises founded on fictitious capital. But any enterprise established on a basis of actual assets or of an established trade and good will, is founded on a rock.

The people who are constantly predicting a devastating panic should study American business history more carefully. They should learn that our great industrial depressions have come from two causes: First, the needless fears of business men; second, the over-confidence of business men.

The latter is the principal cause of industrial depression. It leads capitalists to tie themselves up in a network of debts, one fabricated on another in a top heavy pyramid. Some day something jars the narrow foundation of all this edifice of dreams, and it comes down in a heap.

As far as the first cause goes, the prophet of disaster helps to bring on the very thing he dreads. If he and his kind keep still in these days of change, there will be no panic resulting from fear. And the very caution now prevailing in the business community makes the danger of panic from over-confidence far less than it is at the top of some high wave of fancied prosperity.

As far as political upheaval goes, the American people never yet determined upon any economic revolution that unsettled the foundations of property.

Our people are much too bright and clever to inflict suffering on themselves by making it impossible for capital and labor to receive fair returns.

Free Lunches Barred

Peoria, Ills., April 6.—Mayor Woodruff has signed an ordinance prohibiting free lunches in the city's 308 saloons. A heavy penalty has been provided for violations.

LEGISLATORS ENTERTAINED

so Representatives Piper and Leslie of Quincy. They were in charge of Major J. P. Clare as messenger. There was also in the party George Rogers attorney for the Metropolitan Park Commission and Mr. Rablin, engineer of the Commission.

Only a short stop was made at City hall, the visitors being taken to the Elks club where they had an opportunity to wash off some of the dust collected since morning. After being thus refreshed, automobiles were taken for a trip over the Quincy Shore boulevard.

Going directly to the corner of Hancock and Atlantic streets they went over the whole length of the Quincy Shore boulevard, which is a most beautiful drive, but at present begins and ends nowhere. Arriving at the National Sailors' Home a start was made over some of the streets to Hancock street. These streets were in a very muddy condition and an auto containing some of the party got stuck in the mud and they had to get out and push. A stop was made at the Quincy end of the drive and the proposed route pointed out. Several of the law-makers were heard to express their surprise at the beautiful view, from the drive.

Safe back on Hancock street the party was taken directly to Quincy, after a brief stop at the proposed Hancock street end of the drive. Arriving at Quincy a visit was made to the rooms of the Board of Trade where lunch was served by Caterer Thompson, with the Board of Trade as hosts.

After the lunch Mayor Stone briefly welcomed the legislators and expressed a hope that they had been fully impressed with what they had seen and promised that if Quincy did not obtain the boulevard this year it would keep coming until the drive was built. He then introduced President Hearn of the Board of Trade.

President Hearn said it gave him great pleasure in behalf of the Board of Trade to welcome the legislators to Quincy. The Board would always be glad to see them and have them accept its hospitality. He also said he hoped they had been impressed with what they had seen and would see their way clear to take favorable action on the Quincy bill.

Chairman Brown of the Senate Committee thanked the Mayor and President Hearn for the hospitality that had been extended, and assured them that it was always a pleasure to visit Quincy, and hoped that he would again be given an opportunity to enjoy its hospitality. He felt that the committee had been well informed of the plan and would act as the Metropolitan district desired, in the way of public improvements.

Judge Avery was also called upon and spoke briefly. He referred to the new court house building, which the legislature had given him, and which he said was about ready for occupancy and said he would be glad of an opportunity to welcome them there.

This closed the visit and as it was after 6 o'clock automobiles were taken for Boston and home.

The afternoon had been a pleasant one and the officials of the city certainly did all they could to impress the legislators with the necessity of completing the boulevard, so that it might have an outlet on Hancock street.

EASTER THOUGHTS.

Lucy Creemer Peckham.

Here the brown earth warms in the glowing sun;
Here crocus and snowdrop spring out in the light;
The streamlets and rivers rush laughing along
All glad in the radiance dispelling the night.

The swift-swinging world from spring unto spring,
Turns ever somewhere her fair face to the light,
And the music of birds as they joyously sing
Thrills all the rapt stillness with strains of delight.

Somewhere every day has a bright Easter morn;
Somewhere every day Love's white lily unfolds;
Somewhere every night death's terrors are shorn;
While the spirit refreshed a new day-dawn beholds.

Oh, shadows! Oh pain! Oh sorrowful tears!
Why darken our vision with thy fleeting clouds?
What need to dishearten and chill us with fears,
Till doubt like a pall all life's beauty enshrouds?

Faith cheats thee at last, her strong wings upbear
The spirit in man to the throne of his God,
Where he leaves all his burden, and casts all his care,
And rises, rejoicing to trust in the Word
Writ large through all Nature and in his own soul;
Form changes, life lingers, but Love holds control.

GOOD WORK BY VISITING NURSE

The old adage "nothing succeeds like success" is being borne out by the successful work shown in the report made for the visiting nurse movement in Quincy for the month of March. With the addition of another nurse much more has been acomplished, the records showing a total of 333 calls for the month against a record of 137 calls for the corresponding month of last year. These calls represent fifty-two patients of whom thirty-four were new cases, while eighteen were carried from the previous month, and twenty patients remained under treatment, at the end of the month.

Twelve physicians called for the nurses' services and the district covered, embraced every section of our city from Houghs Neck to Atlantic, West and South Quincy, Quincy Point and Wollaston. The cases treated show the following:

Rheumatism 1, pneumonia 2, cancer 4, anaemia 1, operations6, bronchitis 3, obsterical 15, colitis 2, nasal hemorrahge 1, shock 1, tuberculosis 1, malnutrition 2, otitis medico 1, neuritis 3, felon 1, cystitis 1.

Although much is accomplished, the work is done so quietly that many of our people do not know of this charitable movement. Originating with the Women's club, they have been sponsors for the cause financially being helped by a few close to the work. The present year a larger number of people have been invited to become supporters of the work, to the extent of contributing one dollar a year, and the response has been sufficently generous to warrant procuring a second nurse, and taking up lines of work before impossible.

While dollar contributions to some might seem inadequate, yet the committee in charge believe this method of financing will amply take care of all requirements if only those who recognize the amount of good being done will become contributors.

The nurse goes into the poorest home and cares for the sick one without any questions. Her immediate duty is with the sick one, yet she helps the family as a whole. If possible work is found for the unemployed, the smaller children are looked after and in many other ways great good is done; so that the dollar given to help this work is well spent. While the services of the nurses are available to any resident of Quincy, it is but natural to believe that contributors will have an interest in the work, that will greatly aid its growth.

Mrs. N. S. Hunting, 1136 Hancock street, Quincy, is treasurer of the committee, and all contributions are promptly acknowledged.

HOLY COMMUNION AND RECEPTION

The communion and reception of members in Memorial church, Atlantic Thursday brought out the largest number of communicants since the church was dedicated. After the communion there were addresses by Deacon Edwin French, Fred Burditt, William F. Cummings and Deacon W. F. Blake. Deacon French spoke on making the prayer meeting a force in the life of the church; Mr. Burditt paid high tribute to his "dear mother" in instilling into his heart and mind the teachings of Christ and he suggested that the home is where our lack of influence is felt today; Mr. Cummings spoke on the many phases of church life and showed much thought and scriptural research. He said—we are soldiers and have enlisted in the cause of Christ, we are redeemed, we are a family; Deacon Blake spoke on the church as a home, stating that we should make the home beautiful for the family—love it and make it enjoyable. So in our church, we should be loyal to it—support it and be true to our promises to watch over, care for and pray for the members. Mr. Blake also spoke of the loyalty of the twenty-one teachers in the Sunday school and said that the success in that branch was due to them.

In closing the meeting the pastor, Rev. Mr. Davison spoke of the loyalty of the people and his appreciation of some who had been on the sick list and could not be present.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. VIEW SHOWS A HEAVENLY CITY

The following letter sent to a Quincy friend of the writer is so descriptive and interesting that it has been sent us for publication.

"Climbing the heights toward Gardner, Mass., I noticed in the distance a strange and dazzling appearance, which upon nearer view, fairly took my breath away. The ice storm was so heavy in this section as practically to obscure the landscape, transforming it into a veritable heavenly city, whose gates were not only separate pearls, but whose highways, streams lakes and forests were purest crystal.

Miles of evergreens: pine, spruce, cedar and hemlock, spread their boughs like white canopied tents, drooping in some instances, until their weight of glory bowed them to the earth. The birch and poplar, trees with their slender trunks and multiple twigs were absolutely supernatural. Nothing was visible but ice crystals, hanging in glittering pendants, massed into tassels, and grouped into banners of crimson and purple irridescence.

"The storm beating upon them bent the tall, slender growths in one direction, like the waves of a mighty sea, frozen while in motion. Here and there groves of pine reared themselves heavenward in cathedral domes, whose gothic arches and mighty towers gave no suggestion of the earth, which was itself transformed and glorified by the rain from heaven and the mystic touch of the frost.

Monadnock and Wachusett were the incarnation of the spirits of the air, and the sapphire arch of the sky like that which circles over the Falberg above Norway's fiords. All the Venetian prisms and crystals—like limpid light, themselves—were as nothing compared to one shaft of sunlight athwart this immense glacier, which gleamed and glistened and shot forth all the hues of the rainbow, until the eyes ached beholding the glory thereof, and mind and soul grew silent and reverent in the Great Presence.

"It was a vision of a world redeemed—sin and crime eliminated, pain forgotten and 'death swallowed up in victory.' The purified earth reaching up to and blending with heaven, and one listened, involuntarily if the ear might not catch some distant echo of the voices of the 'ten thousand times ten thousands'."

JACK McGRANE.

Jack McGrane, a priminent Northwestern conductor in Norfolk, Neb., died at his home, 1104 Cleveland street March 9, from gallstones and kidney trouble, following a few days' illness. He was about forty years old.

John F. McGrane, affectionately known as "Jack" by many of his friends, was one of the most popular Northwestern conductors in the service. "He was everybody's friend" say the railroad men at South Norfolk and he took a keen interest in every move which meant good for brother railroaders. He was vice-chairman of the local railroad men's grievance committee and also chairman of the grievance committee of the trainmen's order. He had been a Northwestern conductor for about ten years, previous to that being a brakeman.

Mr. McGrane was born in Quincy, Mass., June 6, 1872. He moved from Massachusetts to Illinois and later to Nebraska. He was married Nov. 6, 1902 in Norfolk to Miss Vina Crotty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Crotty of South Norfolk. To this union two sons were born, John McGrane, jr., and Frederick McGrane.

Both parents of Mr. McGrane have been dead for some years. He is survived by a sister Mrs. Ward O'Neill.

Half have we forgot the measure
Of the dancing foot of pleasure,
Walked with pace grown slow and laggard,
Worn the face care-lined and haggard.
Spring itself rebukes us, bringing tonic for the heavy mood,
Stirs us to the lilt of singing with its ichor in our blood.
Love unbars the doubter's prison,
Faith assures us "Christ is Risen!"
Lo! we greet life's happiest angel!
Here is Easter at the door.

EXTERMINATION OF FLY

knowingly eat anything that the flies had come in contact with.

The family of an Indiana farmer of which 5 children out of 6 had died was brought forth as an example. Here a shallow surface well offered an ideal breeding place and fly hatchery. The air was thick with flies.

"The physician's statement of these childrens' deaths probably laid the cause to some well-known disease. It would be more in keeping to have said "Poisoned by flies." And this could have happened in Massachusetts as well as Indiana.

"There are in this country yearly 49 thousand fatal cases of neuritis and over 7 thousand of summer complaint that are fly born.

"There are 500 thousand cases of typhoid, most of which are fly born, resulting in over 50 thousand deaths a year. Of the thousands and millions of cases of tuberculosis many are caused by flies. The latest discovered disease that is carried is infantile paralysis.

"All these are carried by the filth diseased fly. We must clean him up and for the entire country . We can't see much change until the movement is country wide and we banish this filth distributor of our homes.

"In organizing the Clark College biological course this question was studied by districts. The breeding places of the insect were discovered and wherever they were found a large 'A' was put on the map to mark them.

"A house to house canvass was then made for cases of malaria and a black dot placed on the map to locate each case.

"What was the result? Around each 'A' the map was black with dotes. The class simply did its laboratory work out of doors in the mud holes of Worcester.

"Pictures were taken at the same time of the seamy side of Worcester. As a result of the investigation gravel trains were backed in and the breeding places filled. Malaria was cleaned up.

"The land was channeled and drained. Catch basins and sewers were treated with kerosene. Worcester people could enjoy their porches and gardens without the nuisance of flies.

"The most encouraging sign of the times is the advent of the vacuum cleaner. You may chase the same speck of dust around for years but you only have to catch it once.

"The same method that was followed with dust was used in regard to rats, insects and birds. It is true we drove them away from our homes, but we simply sent them to the homes of our neighbors.

"Now the vacuum cleaner instead of the duster methods are coming in and are a great advance over former ideas."

Professor Hodge compared our present methods of dealing with pests to the labors of Sisyphus.

"When things are so bad we can't stand them any longer, we begin the fight. When it is almost done we say never mind the few that are left. Soon these few increase rapidly and we have the work all to do over.

"The fly is the easiest of all problems on the American continent. It is the easiest , the most vital and the first step in the whole series.

"They are so easily attracted to food in such swarms that we do not have to chase them or shoot them but simply let them catch themselves.

"We have been very foolish. We have shut ourselves up in wire cages and let the flies have the whole outdoors.

"We spend 10 millions of dollars in screens every year that keep the flies in as well as out. We invest in fly swatters and tanglefoot.

"Ordinances say—Keep the garbage can fly tight. This is the best way in the world to drive them into the kitchen in search of food.

"From this, first came the idea of a combination garbage can and fly trap.

The speaker by this method caught two quarts or 16 thousand flies in a day. One Worcester boy caught 23 quarts. This is an effective vacuum cleaner for flies. This is one particular thing that is absolutely effective.

"While it is sensational to catch a great many in the fly season the lesson of practical biology lies in beginning early. One pair of over winter flies, caught now before laying their eggs means the saving from septillions of flies later in the summer.

"A fly lays from 120 to 150 eggs at a batch and each fly lays at least six batches in the summer. These eggs hatch and in ten days become adult flies. In 14 days these flies have begun to lay.

"Multiply these figures and see the number of flies brought forth from this one in a summer. If all lived there would be enough to cover the entire world 47 feet deep. Only about 8 million of these survive however.

"The entire country is working up and waking up to this problem and it will mean many an absolutely flyless community before summer.

"In order to make eggs flies must feed. Their favorite breeding places are the interior of stables.

"Arm chair biologists say make the stables fly tight. This is nonsense. The eggs are laid before the manure is put away and the stable is turned into a maggot incubator for hatching out young flies.

"The fly proof stable is a fragment of the imagination and a logical absurdity.

"What is needed is a durable wire screen on the sunny side. Put a hole in this and put a fly trap over it. If you simply let them out your are using the feather duster method.

"Let the flies in also but catch them by the same method. This little device on any stable and the neighborhood will need no screens. The flies will be absolutely exterminated.

"The fly campaigns in Worcester showed the world how not to do it. Prizes were offered for the boy that brought in the most flies.

"The winner brought in 95 quarts in three weeks. In order to do it he raised them and more flies escaped than he caught. We had the plan bottom side up with a vengeance.

"Now the plan is to divide the city into districts under the boy scouts or similar organization and offer a prize to the boy who first reports no flies in his district.

Public sentiment may be aroused by having lessons on the house fly in the schools and having the children actually see the maggots emerge as flies, under glass.

"This is turning the plan right side up. In Cleveland they went us one better and started a winter campaign, paying ten cents a hundred for over winter flies.

"If we offer ten cents a hundred to school children for all flies they catch before April 15th you will have nearly all the over winter flies that breed the summer hordes.

"Then arrange the districts for a thorough campaign and by the summer you may let yourself out of jail and have a flyless home."

Professor Hodge spent some time in describing his combination fly trap and garbage can. This is most effective. For those who do not want the garbage standing around the trap may be baited with sour milk and bread. Beer and bread have been found to have the most attraction.

The professor in answer to questions also spent some time in dealing with the extermination of mosquitos, rats and other pests.

"A CHARACTER ASSASSIN"

Candidate Wilson Thus Expresses His Opinion of Hearst

Peoria, Ills., April 6.—For the first time, Governor Wilson has replied to attacks long persisted in by William R. Hearst. He called Hearst a "characteer assassin" and denominated Senator Stone of Missouri an agent of Hearst in repeating Hearst's charges against the governor.

Mr. Wilson's ire was aroused by the speech of Stone in Chicago, in which the Missourian, championing Champ Clark, said Wilson had bolted Bryan in 1896 and 1900, and had failed to vote in 1908.

The governor denounced Stone's charges as being inspired by Hearst. He said: "I had the pleasure of voting for Mr. Bryan in 1900 and 1908," and added, "I never have voted any ticket other than the Democratic." He did not explain his actions in 1896, when he voted against Bryan.

CHAPTER XX.

Murrell Shows His Hand.

At length points of light began to show through chinks in the logs. Hannibal roused and sat up, rubbing his eyes with the backs of his hands.

"Wasn't you able to sleep none?" he inquired. Betty shook her head. He looked at her with an expression of troubled concern. "How soon do you reckon the judge will know?" he asked.

"Very soon now, dear." Hannibal was greatly consoled by this opinion.

"Miss Betty, he will love to find us—"

"Hark! What was that?" for Betty had caught the distant splash of oars. Hannibal found a chink in the logs through which by dint of much squinting he secured a partial view of the bayou.

"They're fetching up a keel boat to the shore, Miss Betty—it's a whooper!" he announced. Betty's heart sank; she never doubted the purpose for which that boat was brought into the bayou, or that it nearly concerned herself.

Half an hour later Mrs. Hicks appeared with their breakfast. It was in vain that Betty attempted to engage her in conversation. Either she cherished some personal feeling of dislike for her prisoner, or else the situation in which she herself was placed had little to recommend it, even to her dull mind, and her dissatisfaction was expressed in her attitude toward the girl.

Betty passed the long hours of morning in dreary speculation concerning what was happening at Belle Plain. In the end she realized that the day could go by and her absence occasion no alarm. Steve might reasonably suppose George had driven her into Raleigh or to the Bowens' and that she had kept the carriage. Finally all her hope centered on Judge Price. He would expect Hannibal during the morning; perhaps when the boy did not arrive he would be tempted to go out to Belle Plain to discover the reason of his non-appearance. She wondered what theories would offer themselves to his ingenious mind, for she sensed something of that indomitable energy which in the face of rebuffs and laughter carried him into the thick of every sensation.

At noon Mrs. Hicks, as sullen as in the morning, brought them their dinner. She had scarcely quitted the loft when a shrill whistle pierced the silence that hung above the clearing. It was twice repeated, and the two women were heard to go from the cabin. Perhaps half an hour elapsed, then a step became audible on the packed earth of the dooryard. Some one entered the room below and began to ascend the narrow stairs, and Betty's fingers closed convulsively about Hannibal's. This was neither Mrs. Hicks nor her daughter, nor Slosson with his clumsy shuffle. There was a brief pause when the landing was reached, but it was only momentary; a hand lifted the bar, the door was thrown open, and its space framed the figure of a man. It was John Murrell.

Standing there he regarded Betty in silence, but a deep-seated fire glowed in his sunken eyes. The sense of possession was raging through him, his temples throbbed, a fever stirred his blood. Love, such as it was, he undoubtedly felt for her, and even his giant project, with all its monstrous ramifications, was lost sight of for the moment. She was the inspiration for it all, the goal and reward for which he struggled.

"Betty!" the single word fell softly from his lips. He stepped into the room, closing the door as he did so.

The girl's eyes were dilating with a mute horror, for by some swift, intuitive process of the mind, which asked nothing of the logic of events, but dealt only with conclusions, Murrell stood revealed as Norton's murderer. Perhaps he read her thoughts, but he had lived in his degenerate ambitions until the common judgments or the understanding of them no longer existed for him. That Betty had loved Norton seemed inconsequential even; it was a memory to be swept away by the force of his greater passion. So he watched her smilingly, but back of the smile was the menace of unleashed impulse.

"Can't you find some word of welcome for me, Betty?" he asked at length, still softly, still with something of entreaty in his tone.

"Then it was you—not Tom—who had me brought here!" She could have thanked God had it been Tom, whose hate was not to be feared as she feared this man's love.

"Tom—no!" and Murrell laughed. "You didn't think I'd give you up? I am standing with a halter about my neck, and all for your sake—who'd risk as much for love of you?" He seemed to expand with savage pride that this was so, and took a step toward her.

"Don't come near me!" cried Betty. Her eyes blazed, and she looked at him with loathing.

"You'll learn to be kinder," he exulted. "You wouldn't see me at Belle Plain; what was left for me but to have you brought here?"

While Murrell was speaking the signal that had told of his own presence on the opposite shore of the bayou was heard again. This served to arrest his attention. A look of uncertainty passed over his face, then he made an impatient gesture as if he dismissed some thought that had forced itself upon him, and turned to Betty.

"You don't ask what my purpose is where you are concerned; you have no curiosity on that score?" She endeavored to meet his glance with a glance as resolute, then her eyes sought the boy's upturned face. "I am going to send you down river, Betty. Later I shall join you in New Orleans, and when I leave the country you shall go with me—"

"Never!" gasped Betty.

"As my wife, or however you choose to call it. I'll teach you what a man's love is like," he boasted, and extended his hand. Betty shrank from him and his hand fell at his side. He looked at her steadily out of his deep sunk eyes, in which blazed the fires of his passion, and as he looked, her face paled and flushed by turns. "You may learn to be kind to me, Betty," he said. "You may find it will be worth your while." Betty made no answer; she only gathered Hannibal closer to her side. "Why not accept what I have to offer, Betty?" Again he went nearer her, and again she shrank from him, but the madness of his mood was in the ascendant. He seized her and drew her to him. She struggled to free herself, but his fingers tightened about her.

LEGISLATURE ACQUITS EMERY

Man Who Brought Charges Against Him Is Convicted

RICHARDSON IS IN DISGRACE

County Attorney Who Accused Sheriff of York County of Bribery Found Guilty of Corruption and Incompetency—Vote In House Largely Along Party Lines—Governor Refuses to Accept Sheriff's Resignation

Augusta, Me., April 6.—County Attorney Asa A. Richardson was found guilty by the state legislature last night on charges of corruption and incompetency. The senate voted guilty 16 to 8, and the house 67 to 55.

The prosecution centred around the allegation that Richardson deliberately sought to prevent trial of William L. White of Old Orchard on a liquor nuisance indictment, and that when Associate Justice Haley of the supreme court declined to file the case Richardson presented an indictment which had not been signed by him or by the foreman of the grand jury.

An effort was made to restrict the whole case to the White indictment, but it was unsuccessful, President Clifford of the senate ruling that the attorneys could not enter into an agreement to that effect, and that the two branches could not amend the resolve for an address in convention.

The defense was a general denial of all the charges. Richardson repeated much of the evidence given in the Emery trial, which was to the effect that a Biddeford man solicited his protection for liquor dealers and promised that he should have $50 a week for it. The county attorney said that he insisted that the money must be paid by the sheriff and that as a result of the actual payment of the cash he began the proceedings which are now pending in the courts of York county.

The resignation of Sheriff Charles O. Emery of York county, who was acquitted of bribery charges by the legislature yesterday, was handed to Governor Plaisted yesterday afternoon.

After the resignation was presented Governor Plaisted sent for Emery to talk with him, and refused to accept the resignation at present.

The legislature refused to sustain the charges of bribery and attempted bribery brought against Emery by County Attorney Richardson.

It was voted not to adopt an address to Governor Plaisted asking for the sheriff's removal from office. Criminal proceedings against Emery are still pending in the courts.

A NEW GREATER BOSTON PLAN

Proposes Six Districts with Central Governing Powe

QUINCY IN FIFTH

Hardly does one project to secure a Greater Boston meet with a quietus than another scheme is sprung on the unsuspecting public of the district. Friday another new plan was born when John J. Martin, president of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, Henry C. Long and William McDonald called on Mayor Fitzgerald and urged his support and co-operation to have a bill passed in the legislature which will establish a Metropolitan council.

The measure in brief proposes a Metropolitan Council, and besides taking over the powers of the present Metropolitan boards also some of the powers of cities and towns in the council district.

The bill divides the area into six districts. Quincy appears in the fifth district with the towns of Milton, Norwood, Canton, Randolph, Braintree Weymouth, Hingham and Hull.

Other provisions of the bill provide that the president of the Governing Board shall be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Council, to serve for three years from the second Wednesday in January, 1913, and shall receive a salary of $10,000 a year and shall give his whole time to the work.

Boston shall be represented by three members and the other districts by one each. The bill calls for the abolishment of the Metropolitan Park Commission and the Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Board the employees of which shall become employees of city of Boston if the Council so desires

The governing board will estimate the amount necessary to pay expenses and the tax shall be apportioned among the several municipalities.

The appointment of a treasurer is provided for, at $5000 a year. The Council would have full charge of matters pertaining to fire departments in the districts and appoint a chief at $7000 a year.

The bill further gives the board control of the establishment, location and management of all special public schools; control of all public hospitol, other than the State Hospital, and all public charitable institutions other than State institutions and over the laying out, alteration and dis continuance of streets.

The Governor is empowered to appoint a Police Commissioner who will control all the police including the Metropolitan, his salary to be $7500 a year.

Other sections of the bill give the right to take property by eminent domain and provide the annexation of one borough with another by vote of the people. Another section provides for a referendum, the question to be submitted to the State election this year and to be voted upon by the voters in the cities and towns involved.

Mayor Fitzgerald said he would take the matter under consideration. He advised the committee to take it before each of the city and town officials within the district.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

The next cut in the Quincy High baseball squad will be made by Coach Staff Monday afternoon at the practise which has been called for at 3 o'clock. The squad now includes fifty candidates but this number will be reduced to twenty-five at the aforementioned time. Many of the candidates are members of the freshman class and are not yet fast enough to represent a High school team, yet from the practise that has been indulged in to date it is plainly evident that there is much talent among the Quincy High school athletes and with the proper development of the same forthcoming, the school will be well represented in future seasons.

Outside of short stop, which will be covered by Maurice Blackmur, it is not as yet certain to whom the other berths will go, although the work of all battery candidates thus far seems to augur sufficiently well for their being given ample opportunity to teet their efficiency in the different games that have been scheduled. Coach Staff is highly pleased with the way the boys have taken hold all ready and fells that an exceptionally fast aggregation can be rounded out from the material that is now on hand. There are some fine games billed with High school team and the season as a whole gives every promise of being one of the best in the history of the school.

Verner Johnson, Arthur Rosen, Domenick Fasci and Dominic Vendetti, all of this city, are to compete in the annual Cathedral Y. M. C. A. 10 mile run, scheduled to take place this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The last two mentioned will represent the Italian American A. C. Rosen will wear the colors of the local Y. M. C. A. while Johnson will run unattached.

The candidates for the Makaria baseball team were given their first call of the season for practise this afternoon.

The first game of the contest between the second team of the Quincy A. A. and the second teams of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. will take place next Tuesday evening in St. Mary's hall. West Quincy. The second and last game of the series of two will be played in the gymnasium of the Y. M. C A. In the event of a tie, the rubber game will be played on a neutral floor.

This series will undoubtedly prove a great drawing card as both teams are about as fast as any to be found in their respective classes. The Quincy A. A. team will be composed of the same players that respresented it throughout the season, the same team that was awarded the championship of the second division of the Greater Boston Basketball league. The Y. M C. A. team will be picked from Trask, the star High school player, also Holmes and Johnson of the same team both of whom gave fine accounts of themselves this season and Rich Kemp, Dineen and Parker, all players of much ability. The contest will be brought to a close with dancing and there is no doubt that the popular West Quincy rendezvous will be overwhelmingly taxed on the occasion.

BRAINTREE

Charles S. Bates has gone to New York on a business trip.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Stedman returned Saturday from a trip to Indiana.

Miss Helen Simms of Gorham, Me. is spending her spring vacation in Braintree.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Winslow moved Monday to E. Stanwood Hollis house on West street.

Miss Helen Qualey of Washington street, after a winter spent in Baltimore, has returned to her home.

Mr. and Mrs. Atherton N. Hunt of Vine street are taking an extended pleasure trip through the Southern states.

Henry C. Long of Boston will be the speaker at the Men's Club of All Souls' church next Wednesday evening. His subject will be "The commercial and industrial development of Boston."

The monthly meeting of the Penniman school Association was held Thursday evening with Mr. and Mrs. George A. Arnold, Middle street. After a short business meeting the reading of Hamlet was taken up and all present took part. The first two acts were read. An old Boston paper dated 1770, proved interesting. Ice cream and cake was bountifully served. The next meeting will be held on May 2, with Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Garner, Cleveland avenue.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Flyless, Fleckless Foods Are Planned for Boston's Back Bay Families—A Market with Germ-Proof Marketmen—Department Store Helps along the Anti-Fly Crusade—Musical Happenings. Include Renaissance of English Folk Music, while Mrs. Gardner's Annual House Parties, Interest the Artistic—Meantime Sporty Bostonians Go to the Dog Show.

Prize winning canines from England, Canada, all parts of the United States and elsewhere were gathered at the Mechanics Building in a notable exhibition and contest during the first week of April, and dog fanciers from all over the country held animated discussions as to their relative merits. Local jubilation is high over the winning of the $500 or a silver cup by Mrs. Arnold Lawson's Noswal Nabob, the French bulldog against which she challenged any other French bulldog, and which won out in three contests with the famous champion Nellicote Gamin of worldwide reputation. fifty-five different breeds from the $10,000 Russian wolf hound to the tinest "Toy," at least a thousand dogs, made a showing of some size and interest, among which the Airedales, Norwegian beardogs, the schipperkes, chowchows and other rare breeds were very popular. Special trains, special servants, and all the earmarks of royal dogdom were features of the exhibition.

The highbred dame of olden times went to market with a basket under her arm, and now, despite the decadence of personal purchasing, the Back Bay may have a public market at which representatives of the Cabot, Codman. Amory, Crowninshield and Wigglesworth families may hobnob with the butcher boy. The Women's Municipal League, at all events, is backing the proposal and vouching for its sanitary conditions. The market will be so spotless and germproof that all employees must undergo an examination before they are accepted. Not every marketman is fit to handle a ball of beef destined for a Beacon street table. Although all the plans are made as to its management and other details, it is not yet known who is to furnish the first cost of contruction. It is understood that a new building will be erected not far from the Public Garden, one which will be large enough to supply the demands of a large business from the start and to meet the requirements of growth. Among the features of this public market will be the rat-proofing of the building, the incorporation of the Worcester system of eliminating flies, a refrigerating system and hot water in abundance. The prospect of cleaner food is really a welcome one and housewives not only in the Back Bay but in all the nearby suburbs are looking forward with anticipation to its fulfillment.

The success of the postal savings bank system is again indicated in the fact that Mr. Frank Hitchcock, formerly of Somerville and now somewhat widely known as Postmaster General has extended the number of offices by one thousand, to be opened on May 1. This makes about eight thousand post offices now handling postal savings. Henceforth the smaller offices in the rural districts are to be included among the postal savings branches at the rate of one thousand a month until practically all post offices doing a money order business have become depositories of the earnings of the people. The Hub meantime continues to be prominent in the list of largest receipts, despite the contention that New England owing to its well established savings banks had no need of this system.

An innovation in the "Swat the fly" campaign which might well be emulated elsewhere was a stereoptican lecture given by Professor C. F. Hodge of Clark University, Worcester, under the auspices of a leading Boston department store. This mercantile establishment turned over one of its largest furniture salesrooms for the purposes of the lecture, and advertised it duly by bulletins in the store and by newspaper notices. The result was that the crowd that flocked to the morning lecture was so large that the experiment was repeated in the afternoon. Nearly 1200 people mostly housewives, attended the lecture and many remained to receive instructions as to the various ways of placing the traps upon garbage cans, in cellars and upon doors. With the devices explained and demonstrated by Professor Hodge, who is perhaps the country's leading fly exterminator, any city can be free of flies, and therefore many-fold healthier and free from typhoid and other contagious diseases. It is discouraging, however, to a city like Boston to exert itself in this direction when at its borders are self-governed towns which allow pestholes, street refuse, and other fly-breeding filth to nourish thousands of millions of the death-carriers, to be blown with the first wind into the city. This is still another argument for a greater Boston which shall bring the outlying suburbs under the control of the health department. and the street cleaning department Conditions existing in some of the selectmen-governed communities around the Hub at present are not only a menace to health but a disgrace to the responsible towns.

Fenway Court, Mrs. Gardner's Venetian palace, has again been opened to the public, at two dollors per, for two weeks in accordance with the annual custom. The appreciation with which the privilege of seeing the rare treasures in this museum is held is evidenced by the number of connoisseurs who come from New York and elsewhere to see the collection. Each day finds practically the entire 200 ticket holders allowed in one day in attendance at the Court. The galleries of the Boston Art club are devoted to the twenty-fifth exhibition of the Water Color club, and numerous other exhibitions are keeping the frequenters of the art route busy.

A rare entertainment by sweet-voiced singers from the English countryside has afforded Bostonians unusual pleasure on several occasions of late. Oriska, Dorothy and Rosalind Fuller, three charming young women from the little village of Sturminster, Newton, Dorset county, England, have been giving a series of lecture recitals of English, Scottish and Irish folk songs. A complimentary concert of English songs given to the students at the New England Conservatory of Music was so successful that further performances were requested. A recital under the auspices of the American Drama Society and the Twentieth Century Club and two public recitals at Jordan Hall were also presented. Miss Oriska Fuller, an associate of the Royal College of Music in London, accompanies the singing on a harp modeled after those used by Irish minstrels some 800 years ago. The sisters are all accomplished vocalists, and their programmes afford rare entertainment. The simple character of the songs, the sweetness of the singing and the accompaniment, the naive charm and absolutely perfect diction of the singers delight their audiences. Walter G. Fuller, an elder brother, lectures briefly at the recitals. He was formerly the editor of the University Review of London, is a student of folk songs and folk lore and an active worker for the revival of all phases of country life.

A Beautiful Mild Spring Day Shower Came in Evening

BETHANY CHURCH.

At the Bethany church, Sunday morning the new pastor, Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott occupied the pulpit taking for his text, 1st Corinthians, 15, 57: "But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." The sermon, appropriate to Easter, was eloquent and forceful. Mr. Willmott said in part: "The gospel of the resurrection of Jesus Christ is a revelation to us of God's word; all nature responds to the Divine will and our vision is broadened and deepened when we realize the mission of Jesus, which was not to destroy, but to fulfill according to God's immutable purpose.

"The great hopes of the multitude, which had been raised into the belief of an earthly kingdom, were dashed to the ground and vanished into thin air, when they heard the words of our Saviour, 'Father, into thy hands I commit my spirit.' It was not the outcome of a preconceived idea but the permanence of God's will and in the resurrection of Jesus Christ, we may not see death, save as a door to more abounding life, and to be risen with Him in the newness and power of an endless life. Had there been no resurrection there would have been no christianity in the world. Glad in the confidence of the risen Lord let us have greater faith to teach and preach the blessed message of Jesus Christ all over the world: Victory over the fear of death and the mysteries beyond death. It is not so much the fear of dying but, the fear of the unknown, but thanks be to God who giveth us the victory, the terror of change passes away, and the passionate longing for the spiritual which is the common desire of human kind brings us peace and security.

"In the struggles, sacrifices and battling against each other, in the conflicts of life, we are assured of God's love and we on this Easter morn can say with thankful hearts, 'Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.' Gratefully remembering that we are God's children, this idea of death should bring us more in harmony with Him who died for us. Death is not a supposition, not a theory. If a man died shall he live again. ? 'Because I live, ye shall live.' Death is the portal into the glorified life. 'In my Father's house are many mansions.' The life beyond is transcendantly more beautiful than the one we are now living. Not that everything is made plain, 'eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard all of the glories laid up for us in Jesus. We care not so much for the technique of the story, but O, the love expressed in the resurrection. If the dead be not risen, if Christ be not risen, then we are most pitiable. Welcome the hope of Easter time, thy life is all unsatisfied without the cherished ideals and these truths brought to us by Jesus. When Jesus Christ stood before the public on that Easter, He personified men. He personified redemption, redemption glad, longed for, a tremendous longing for Jesus Christ.

"May the joy of Easter time abide with you throughout the year. May the message of Jesus Christ bring peace and blessing; and take away the fear of sin and death."

Musical program was exceedingly fine. The church was beautifully decorated under the auspices of the Christian endeavor committee, Mary Stewart, chairman. Purple and white crepe paper was festooned from the chandeliers and a very generous amount of flowers and potted plants were arranged around the pulpit. After the services the flowers were sent to the sick.

The Sunday school gave an Easter concert Sunday evening. The children marched in from the vestry to the strains of the organ, Madame Morey playing with her accustomed skill. The program was: Song by the school; scripture reading by the pastor; song Miss Stewart; prayer, pastor; recitation Miriam McDonald; song school; address Karl Sidelinger; Cross exercises; song "Lily of the valley" Nellie Bishop, Frances and Beatrice Sherman, six others joining in the chorus; recitation by S. Everett Richards; recitation, Eleanor Horton; recitation, Olive Prout; exercise, Miss Hayward's class; song the whole school; address Mr. Willmott; recitation "Good Night" Dorothy Miller and song school.

The concert was exceptionally fine all participating deserving much credit, also the committee who had it in charge.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Enthusiasm was the keynote which marked yesterday's services, and the day will go down in the church records as one of the most successful for many years. Willing hands had been diligently employed arranging the floral decorations, and the sight that met the eyes of the congregation when they entered was at once beautiful and inspiring. An unusually large number of communicants took part in the early morning celebration, which fact might have been calculated to lessen the attendance at the full choral celebration at 10.30 a. m., but events went to prove there was no ground for any such supposition—there was a crowded congregation for this service as well as the one in the evening.

Many present at the services had undoubtedly been impressed by the splendid rendering of Stainer's "Crucifixion by the choir the Sunday evening previous, and attended yesterday in anticipation of hearing some more good music, and it is safe to say they were not disappointed! Christ church choir is well known in the city to maintain a fairly high standard of excellence, but yesterday excelled themselves and rendered their music with such feeling and expression as to cause many present to become reminiscent of happy hours spent in cathedrals abroad. We would refer our readers to our issue of April 6th for a full program of the services. Schubert's "Te Deum" in B. Flat, Cruickshank's "Communion service," and Roger's Anthem "As it Began to Dawn", were the three principal musical features of the morning, while in the evening Hoffmeister's "Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis," Roger's Anthem, and Handel's "Hallelujah chorus" represented the main items.

Organist and choirmaster Professor Frank Wrigley is to be congratulated on his able handling of such high class compositions, and we think particularly on his success in the training of the treble voices, indeed it is hard to understand how boys so young can be relied upon to carry such works through! No comment is necessary regarding the Professor's manipulation of the organ, his dexterity is already too well known, nevertheless we cannot restrain ourselves from expressing our high sense of appreciation of his selections from the oratorios, played throughout the sacramental rites. The vocal solos of the day were rendered by Mr. Carter, tenor, and Masters Ross and Moyle, all of whom deserve great credit.

The rector Rev. Richard Armstrong, assisted by Rev. Dr. Manchester of Wollaston, officiated at all the services, and delivered a most inspiring sermon in the morning based on the great lesson of Easter Day—the Resurrrection—and all it means to mankind.

In the evening the Rev. Dr. Manchester gave a forceful address on the same subject, but viewed from another standpoint and dwelling on the proneness of men of our day to skepticism in religious truths.

Altogether it was a day that will not be easily forgotten, and it is comforting to feel that such a spirit is afoot in our city.

WOLLASTON M. E.

The thoroughly renovated church and new carpet, together with the fine display of Easter lilies and potted plants added greatly to the attractiveness of Easter Sunday at the First M. E. Church, Wollaston. At 10.15 the pastor led the love-feast in the vestry. The pastor took for his subject, An Easter Message based on the words found in Matthew 2 3:9 "And as they went to tell his diciples, behold Jesus

The Man Who Buys a Gold Brick

Naturally Feels Guilty

We'll wager that there are dozens of men in this community who have paid out good money for bad clothes — for clothes that they didn't wear, because they couldn't. These men feel "guilty" to think they let a clothier "put one over them." Don't ever place yourself in a position in which you are going to feel "guilty." Purchase your clothes from a clothier you have confidence in, and one whom you know sells clothes that he has all confidence in. I have unbounded confidence in the clothes I sell.

DEATH OF SERGT. DAVID J. BARRY

Had an Honorable Record as an Officer and Veteran

FUNERAL THIS MORNING

Sergt. David J. Barry, one of the oldest members of the police department passed away at his home 36 Bates avenue, early Saturday evening after an illness of several weeks, aged 65 years. Sergt. Barry has not been in the best of health for some years having suffered considerably at times from acute malaria, contracted during his service in the civil war. Two weeks ago his heart weakened from these attacks and he has been confined to his home ever since. Watchers at his bedside have seen him gradually fail and his death was not unlooked for.

Sergt. Barry was one of the bravest officers in the department. There was nothing he was afraid of, and he would tackle single handed the roughest of crowds. For some years he did night duty in City Square and he was held in wholesome fear by the hoodlum element that always congregated in and about the depot and City Square. One night in 1896 while at the railroad station he pulled several persons from in front of an approaching train, but came near losing his own life in the attempt. For this he received a medal from the Massachusetts Humane society.

Sergt. Barry became a member of the police force in the early nineties and did night duty at West Quincy and later at City Square. Previous to that time however he had been a constable since 1886, and served as such until a regular police department was established. In 1901 when the present police headquarters on School street were opened he was given in charge of the day desk. Later he was transferred to the night desk which position he held until his death.

In 1905 when the City Council, by ordinance, changed the rank of the officers he was made a sergeant the date of his appointment as such being April 17 of that year.

He was born in Glanmire, County Cork, Ireland, Aug. 15, 1847 and came to America when 9 years of age. At the age of 14 years he enlisted for the civil war in Rhode Island, after having twice been refused, on account of his age, in Massachusetts. He served in the 7th Rhode Island regiment until the battle of Gettysburg where he was wounded in the right leg by a piece of bursting shell. He was in the memorable charge of Mary's Heights and at the battle of Fredericksburg. Recovering from his wound he returned to his regiment and served until the close of the war, being again wounded at the siege of Petersburg. After the war he volunteered for service under Gen. Hancock and was ordered to Mexico to drive out the Emperor Maximilian. He did considerable duty in the Army of Alabana and other southern states during the reconstruction period.

He came to Quincy, shortly after the close of the war and has since been a resident of this city. He learned the trade of a granite cutter at which he was employed until he began active police duty.

He was a member of Paul Revere post 88, G. A. R. and of Quincy Council Knights of Columbus. He leaves a widow, three sons and two daughters.

THE FUNERAL.

No honors were spared the late Sergeant David J. Barry, whose funeral took place this morning from his late residence on Bates avenue. The cortege, headed by former comrades of Paul Revere Post, G. A. R., and followed by all of his police associates, whom it was possible to spare from duty, under command of Chief Frank E. Burrell, squad of members of Col. A. B. Packard Camp, Sons of Veterans and a delegation from the Street Railway Union and Knights of Columbus, proceeded to St. Mary's Church, West Quincy, where a solemn high mass of requiem wes celebrated at nine o'clock by the pastor Rev. Henry T. Grady, assisted by Rev. Andrew J. O'Brien D. D., professor of Dogmatic Theology at Brighton Seminary, as deacon, Rev. William J. Duffy, assistant pastor, as sub-deacon and Rev. Mr. Thomas W. Buckley, an ecclesiastical student at Brighton Seminary, as master of ceremonies. Seated within the sanctuary was Rev. Patrick J. Scannell, assistant pastor of the Church of St. John the Baptist, an intimate friend of the departed. The services were attended by a large number of friends, whose acquaintance the late Sergeant Barry had enjoyed, and to whom he had greatly endeared himself. The occasion was also graced by the presence of many city officials and representative citizens, who had come to pay their last respects to a faithful and devoted servant. Included among these were Mayor Eugene R. Stone, ex-Mayor William T. Shea, Chief of Police Thomas Fitzgerald of Weymouth, Chief Engineer of the local fire department Amos L. Litchfield, John O'Connell of the Milton police, ex-City Clerk Charles J. McGilvray, chairman of the Board of Health, William H. Teasdale, Councilman Harry G. Studley, Trustee of the Library Board, James F. Burke, School Committeeman Joseph H. McPherson and Michael B. Geary of the Board of Registrars.

The musical portion of the mass was the Gregorian chant, furnished under direction of organist Mrs. Mary McKay Reardon. Solos were rendered by Mrs. James L. Fennessey, who sang the "Domina" at the offertory, and Paul Morrisette, who sang the "Pie Jesu" after the libera. The "Libera" was rendered by a quartet composed of Mrs. James L. Fennessey, Thomas Joyce, Arthur Lambert and Paul Morrisette. The honorary pall bearers included Albert Farhan, color bearer for the Sons of Veterans and Edward J. Lennon, Frank Curtis and eGorge L. Philips members of Paul Revere Post, G. A. R. The active pall bearers were the following members of the police department, Lieutenant Daniel R. McKay, George A. Cahill, George F. Phillips, David L. Farrell, Jeremiah Dinneen and Sergeant John Halloran.

Burial was at St. Mary's Cemetery, where prayers were recited at the grave by Rev. D. O'Brien, assisted by Rev. Mr. Buckley. The Grand Army service was conducted under direction of George L. Phillips and the military honors concluded as soon as the remains were interred, by a salute of guns fired three times by four members of the Sons of Veterans. There was a great profusion of floral tokens and a large concourse of friends of the late Sergenat Barry assembled in the cemetery to pay final tribute to one whose memory will be treasured up for a long time in the history of the City of Quincy.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The Americans down in Mexico must be tired of this soap box government.

From the way the Father of Waters is thrashing around we greatly fear he is going to fall out of his bed.

Uncle Sam loves Miss Jappy—at a distance. But this coming over to Magdalena Bay is too close a Bunny Hug, even for leap year.

Melvin Vaniman persists that he is going to cross the Atlantic in his airship. He will be all right provided he can swim ashore.

A woman has flown over the English channel. She was justified in taking extreme measures to get away from the Suffragettes.

If you get only one delegate out of a dozen, it is obvious that the money power must have bought the rest, or the majority would not be so big.

MILWAUKEE WHACKS SOCIALISM.

The overturn of Socialism in Milwaukee shows that the American voter prefers human welfare to economic theories.

In so far as the Socialists of any American town can take a public service, and furnish it to the voter under municipal ownership at a price under that of private ownership, they will be able to gain and retain power. The voter will never decline to accept a reduction in price of electric light and city water merely because it is tagged with the red flag of Socialism.

The trouble with Socialism is that it has never confronted the question of how exceptional ability is to be recognized and rewarded. Under Socialism, if there was any difference of reward, it would go to the politician class, the same olly tongued men who are now representatives to legislatures and delegates to conventions. The result of placing them in positions of business responsibility for which they are not fitted, would be to increase the cost of living.

The man with capacity for executive work and organization on a large scale is not apt to be a good vote-getter at election, and his ability would not be recognized under Socialism.

A man of high executive capacity can ordinarily take a business enterprise, and by proper systematization of its processes double its production. Socialism provides no way by which the people can secure the advantage of this executive ability.

Unsystematic methods and a failure to reward human ambition are incredibly wasteful. A business producing value to the extent of $1,000,000 under such methods could usually be made to produce $2,000,000 under efficiency and reward for ambition.

The public could better afford to see the man who accomplishes that result get $100,000 profit for his labor, than to lose $1,000,000 through inefficiency and shiftless methods.

According to testimony from Milwaukee, the Socialist adminstration spent too much time lecturing on their Utopia, too little in auditing accounts and getting good value in city purchases.

On the other hand Socialism is growing in this country, and it will continue to grow in se far as the old parties give costly and unbusinesslike government, and in so far as the workers fail to get a fair share of life's comforts.

—A citizen of Hyde Park says that annexation has not brought the five cent fare and cheaper gas, and that the community has lost socially and financially by uniting with Boston. While the tax rate is lower the valuations are sure to go up without any material increase in the value of the property to the owner. Boston is finding out that Hyde Park is a costly proportion.—Chelsea Record.

FINANCIAL NEWS.

(Special)

At times the market showed slight reactionary tendencies during the past week, chiefly owing to the temptation to take profits. The undertone, however remains strong and there is still good reason for anticipating a continued active market and a still higher range of prices. Such expectations are abundantly justified by the remarkable change which has taken place in business sentiment over the entire country. Probably the volume of trade has not yet increased in proportion, but in due time general business is bound to reflect the more hopeful conditions which now prevail.

The first stage of a Presidential campaign is always marked by extreme distrust and uncertainty because of the unknown possibilities which may develop. Yet, whenever the time for nominations draws near, the outcome becomes more clear, and when platforms have been announced, confidence revives and trade promptly recovers. The year 1912 is not likely to prove any exception to this rule. Distrust and conservatism obliged producers and distributers to follow a hand-to-mouth policy for many months. Consumption meanwhile went on with slight diminution. The result is that the country is relatively bare of manufactured goods, so that distributers and producers alike now find themselves compelled to make fresh ventures and new starts in order to satisfy positive requirements. Fortunately the excessive conservatism of the last year or two has not brought on any serious reaction. On the contrary, it has proved that the commerce the industries and the finances of the country are in sound condition. And now that doubt is at last disappearing, radicalism declining and political opinion becoming more reasonable, there is every reason to look for progressive improvement for some time ahead. Big business will henceforth be harassed less, and be more sure of a fair hearing. Moreover, President Taft has said that while big concerns must conform to the law, there should be "no persecution" of such on part of the Government.

The chief drawback in the situation is the universal unrest of labor. In many cases concessions are being made and wages advanced wherever the increased cost can be passed on to the poor consumer, who of course must ultimately pay the bills. These concessions are likely to add to rather than decrease the high cost of living; but repetition of the process of first advancing wages and then advancing prices—a sort of pernicious circle—must apparently go on until this movement exhausts itself.

The money market promises to show a hardening tendency from now on. April settlements passed without a tremor. Bank reserves are very low, and in view of probably increased requirements for trade purposes not to speak of stock market activity, lenders are likely to insist upon better rates. As foreign loans mature, they will not be as freely renewed, for American funds employed in Europe during the last six months will be more needed at home.

The general market is not without its pitfalls and liabilities to reaction, particularly in case of unfavorable political developments, either at home or abroad. Primary conditions however are sound, and better sentiment should soon be followed by better business. For such reasons, and in spite of occasional reactions, we expect ultimately higher prices.—Henry Clews, Banker, New York.

RIVAL CLAIMS OF MANAGERS

Taft Has 280 of the 354 Delegates Already Chosen

ROOSEVELT FIGURES ON 66

President's Followers Concede Colonel but 32, While Latter's Friends Say Taft Has Only 38, Figuring on 116 Contests—Figures Do Not Agree With Those of Impartial Political Observers in Washington

Washington, April 8.—One-third of the race for the Republican presidential nomination has been run. There will be 1076 delegates entitled to seats at Chicago. Up to today 354 of these delegates have been chosen and 32 contested delegates have been actually named.

The past week was a light one in the naming of additional delegates—only 36 were chosen. La Follette fared best during the week, winning the 26 delegates from his own state of Wisconsin in presidential preference primaries. Taft obtained two instructed delegates from the Thirteenth Indiana and two from the Seventh Georgia congressional districts, making a total of four for the president during the week.

Cummins, who has been trailing along for a month with two instructed delegates, doubled his strength during the week by capturing the Third Iowa, making a grand total of four for him. Roosevelt forces claim the two delegates chosen by the First Maine district convention. These Maine delegates are not instructed, but pledged themselves to vote for Roosevelt before the convention met.

The Taft managers make this claim: Taft, 280; Roosevelt, 32; La Follette, 36; Cummins, 4; total delegates chosen, 352. They do not include in their table any reference to the two delegates chosen in Maine. In order to make this total of 280 for Taft, the administration's managers count for Taft these uninstructed delegates: Two from Indiana, two from Michigan and seven from New Mexico.

The Roosevelt managers make this claim: Roosevelt, 66; Taft, 38; Cummins, 4; La Follette, 36; contested, 116; total, 354.

Disregarding rival claims of campaign managers, the Republican delegates thus far chosen appear to impartial observers in Washington as follows:

Taft, 269; Roosevelt, 29; La Follette, 36; Cummins, 4; not instructed, 16; Roosevelt contests, 32.

Total Republican delegates chosen, 354; total delegates in Chicago convention, 1076; majority necessary to nominate 539; total contested delegates to date, 32.

WILSON LOSES PAPERS

Political Opponents Suspected of Theft From Room In Hotel

Chicago, April 8.—Roomworkers, undeniably having political affiliations, broke into Governor Wilson's suite of rooms at the Hotel Herman yesterday afternoon and stole a suitcase full of private correspondence and papers relating to his campaign belonging to the New Jersey executive.

The robbery occurred while the Democratic candidate was at St. Mary's rectory lunching with Rev. P. J. O'Callaghan and other priests of the Paulist Order. It was discovered when the governor returned to his room.

The robbers left the silver toilet articles and other belongings of worth. Before leaving last night for Syracuse, N. Y., Wilson said that the robbery was very significant.

Soon Miss Herndon will be able to sleep well and to wink the injured eye. A strip of flesh was removed from the woman's temple and grafted to the rim of the lid.

Broker's Assailant Is Insane

Boston, April 8.—The Suffolk county grand jury returned a no-bill in the case of Herman Lewinski because of his insanity. The defendant, who shot Spencer W. Hill a broker, will be confined in an asylum.

HAIL AND FAREWELL.

The beginning and ending of the Easter services at Bethany church Sunday were of a somewhat marked and unusual character. In the morning the new pastor, Rev. Mr. Willmott, before an overflowing and appreciative audience, gave an inspiring Easter sermon, which was fitly supported by the grand music of the choir and players. This auspicious occasion was really the introduction of Mr. Willmott to his new field of labor.

In the evening came the hardly less interesting exercises of the Sunday school concert, given before another crowded house, and immediately following this there was an unusual third service in the corner of the church around the organ. Madame Morey called the choir around her, together with such other hearers as happened to be near, and in fitting and tender words made a short farewell address, thanking them for the loyal and enthusiastic support which they had given her during their nine years of acquaintance and association, and congratulating them on the splendid progress they had made during that time, as evidenced by the noble performance of the morning. One could notice serious faces and moistened eyes during the address. As she finished speaking she gave each member of the choir a beautiful picture, both as memento of herself and as appropriate to Easter Day.

In response the choir joined in giving her a substantial sum of money, and, what she will value still more highly, a written address signed by every member, and describing the delightful relations that have so long existed between organist and choir, and regretting the present separation.

A no less pleasing gift was a beautiful Cambridge Bible from Madame Morey's large Sunday school class of girls, together with an appropriate address signed by all of them.

It need hardly be said that Madam Morey's hosts of friends in the congregation are not letting her go away without some substantial recognition of her services as organist and choir director, as well as of her womanly worth, and accordingly as a fitting climax to a notable affair she was given a purse of one hundred dollars, along with the kindest of wishes for her future health and success.

EASTER IN THE CHURCHES

met them, saying, All hail." He said in part, Of all our christian festivals there is none that brings so much joy as that of Easter which commemorates the resurrection of our Lord. But for the resurrection of Christ there would be no christian hope, no charm for life, no disclosure of another world. Christ overcame the world that we might find in Him the true source of all victory. On this Easter occasion the whole christian family receives a new pledge of immortality. But yesterday on Calvary was the grave of the human family, today the grave of Christ is the glory of the world. But yesterday and the Lamb of God was led to the slaughter; today He has conquered death and robbed the grave of its victory.

What joy must have filled the hearts of the disciples as they saw and met their Lord face to face. The risen Jesus met the woman saying, All hail thas is, be glad, be full of joy. If there is one season of the year when as a church, and as individuals we should be full of joy and rejoicing it is Easter. The reason for this joy may be realized because:

I. The fact of the resurrection furnishes us with certainty. He predicted His resurrection, He is true to His word even though to be true to it He must conquer death.

II. The joy of Easter is still further realized from the fact that there is an empty tomb. The tomb could not hold Him, He was greater than the tomb, and mightier than death.

III. The joy of Easter is intensified by the fact that we worship a living, not a dead Christ. The life of Christ makes emphatic the resurrection. His last words upon the cross were significant His task was carried out; His mission completed; the trust conscientiously executed. That is the secret of final victory He conquered when He fell, He rose triumphant over both death and the grave to become the living glorified Redeemer of all mankind. The true joy of Easter is the fact that Christ lives and is the embodiment of all true joy, yea He is the source of all joy, the fountain head of all truth, the author and the finisher of all faith.

The joy of Easter is still further enchanced by the fact that all power is ascribed to Him. At the close of the sermon, twenty Tetaments were distributed to children of Sunday school for their faithful attendance at the morning servce since the first of November. Reception of members followed this service, Rev. F. H. Morgan assisted the pastor at the communion which was shared in by the largest number in the history of the church.

The choir with Mrs. F. G. Bennett as organist, furnished unusually good music supplemented by Miss Marguerite Louise Holbrook as soloist sang "The King of Love My Shepherd Is" by Spence and "Hear Ye Israel" by Mendelssohn.

At 6 o'clock the Sunday school gave a concert to an audience that taxed the seating and standing capacity of the church. Mr. S. N. Belcher's class were the committee on the program with Florence Waite and Miss Bessie Wilbur as chairman, Miss Holbrook sang "The Lord is My Light" by Marsh and "Come Unto Me" from Messiah. J. A. Sedgwick, the superintendent took charge of the concert at the close of which with the assistance of F. G. Bennett, the assistant superintendent distributed potted plants to every boy and girl of the Sunday school. Great credit is due the committee and all who in any way helped to make the concert one of the best ever held in the church.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

A large audience gathered in the Wollaston Baptist church Sunday morning. The flowers were beautiful. The large chorus choir under the leadership of musical director Amos D. Albee sang and Mrs. Alma Faunce Smith officiated at the organ. Rev. Joseph Walther, the pastor preached to the children on the "Lessons from the Lily" and to the adults on "Three great resurrection facts in which we may all glory," after which the Lord's supper was celebrated.

The Sunday school, Elford L. Durgan, superintendant assembled at 12.15. Three hundred and twenty-two were present in the entire school. Forty-nine present in the Albee Woman's class.

The Junior Endeavor society met at 3.30 in the chapel. Miss Ethel M. Campbell assisted by Mrs. Kendall F. Harriman had the meeting in charge.

The Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was held at 6, subject: "The kind of Life we shall wish we had lived." Luke 16: 19-31, leader William E. Bullock.

At 7 o'clock the evening service was held in the auditorium. The large chorus choir under the leadership of musical director Amos D. Albee sang several selections. Mrs. Alma Faunce Smith presided at the organ. The pastor preached a sermon on "An ordinance appropriate to Easter" after which the following persons were baptized. Edward H. Sears, Mrs. Ethel C. A. Sears, Mrs. Elizabeth Oxner, Mrs. Annie Holmes, Mrs. Ethel B. King and Miss Alice E. Sawyer.

This evening at 6 several of our members will attend the monthly banquet and meeting of the Sunday school Superintendents Union of Boston and vicinity in Ford hall, Boston, but will return in time to attend the parents' and teachers' meeting in the new Wollaston school building.

Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 the pastor Rev. Joseph Walther will attend an important ministers meeting in the First Baptist church, Cambridge, and at 7.45 a cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Selden H. Nickerson, Ardell street, Montclair. Mr. Selden H. Nickerson will lead the meeting.

Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock the pastor's first class in the fundamental principles of the Christian faith will be held in the parsonage.

Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock the pastor's second class in the fundamental principles of the Christian faith will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Grass, 52 Ardell street, Montclair and at 7.45 the monthly meeting of the Nearer and Farther Lights society will be held in the parsonage.

Friday evening at 7.45 the regular meeting for praise, prayer and testimony will be held in the chapel; subject: "The greatness of Jesus." "What think ye of Christ?" A personal experience meeting. This subject will conclude our meditations on the life and character of Jesus.

The annual meeting and supper of our church will be held in the chapel at 6.30 Wednesday evening, April 17. Not only are the regular members of the church expected to attend but also those adults who regularly worship in our congregation.

The Rand class through its social committee of which George K. Drew is chairman is planning for a social and general good time on Monday evening April 15.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

A very large congregation filled the church at the morning service. The music was more elaborate than usual appropriate to the glad Easter tide. The regular quartet was assisted by Mr. Sutherland on the violin, and Miss Moorhouse on the 'cello, together with additional male voices and the Girls' choir club. Rev. Mr. Norton's Easter sermon was inspiring and helpful with text "Come, see the place where the Lord lay," Matt. 28:6. The Easter lilies and other flowers in profusion added much to the pleasure of the whole service.

Mr. Norton spoke to the Sunday school in place of the regular lesson, and brought home to the scholars, the lessons of the Resurrection.

The Christian Endeavor society held its regular consecration meeting at six o'clock with the president Miss Ruth A. Taylor as leader. The meetings are enthusiastic and helpful to the young people of this church.

On Thursday of this week will be held the last church supper of the season, and it is hoped there may be a large attendance.

Our Friday evening services are more largely attended than formerly, and every one enjoys the hour spent at that service.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

Easter morning brought out a crowd of worshippers which filled the auditorium of the Wollaston Unitarian church. The arrangement of the cut flowers and many potted plants was particularly attractive, the color scheme being deep red and white. Tulips and an array of sturdy potted geraniums contributed warmth and richness to the decoration of pulpit, choir loft and windows, and were an excellent and artistic setting for the Easter lilies and white tulips which formed the more conventional adornment of the chancel.

A double mixed quartet furnished the music, assisted most ably by Miss Helen I. Moorhouse, cousin of Miss Marion Moorhouse, the well-known 'cellist of Wollaston.

Rev. Carl G. Horst took as his text "This corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." The old, and ever new, and always thrilling subject of Immortality was reverently dwelt upon and the hearts of all strengthened by listening to the simple and direct expression of a belief in a life beyond the seen and present life.

Again was the Communion service observed in its symbolic form, the breaking of the bread and the pouring of the wine by the minister with the reading of beautiful selections from the scripture, completing a most impressive service. The presence of the entire congregation lent an atmosphere of fellowship and communion not felt when the division of the two services was marked.

The Canticle of Commemoration and the singing of a congregational hymn concluded the services.

After the morning service the Sunday school held an Easter service, consisting of Easter carols, responsive readings, prayer and a splendid story entitled the "Land of the Blue Flower," beautifully told by Mrs. Carl G. Horst. The annual offering for the Children's Mission in Boston was received. At the close of the service each child received a handsome plant.

At the afternoon Easter service at 4.30 o'clock another large congregation taxed the seating capacity of the church. The Quincy Commandery of Knights Templars in full Templar regalia attended the service and a special Quincy Commandery quartet, assisted by Miss Marion Moorhouse, the talented 'cellist of Wollaston, rendered the musical portions of the service. The minister who was assisted by the Rev. Rufus Tobey, preached from the text "Lay hold on the Life eternal." I Timothy 6,12. A number of beautiful flowers for the chancel were given in memory of former members of the church, among whom were Mrs. Faunce, Mrs. Maria Tabor Wilbur and others. The church decorations were never more attractive and the committee in charge, Mrs. W. E. Rowe, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Boynton and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Brodbeck, deserve great praise.

The Wollaston Unitarian club holds its last meeting of the reason, Tuesday evening; dinner at 6.30. Speaker George W. Anderson, Esq., of Boston, subject: "The Minimum Wage."

A children's dancing party, under the auspices of the Unitarian church-Helpers, will be held in Brasee hall, Wednesday, from 4 to 6 o'clock. Mothers of children are admitted free.

At the Wollaston Young People's Social club, Tuesday, April 16, Carleton Chapman of West Upton will be the entertainer.

The last vesper service of the season will be Sunday afternoon, April 14, at 4.30 o'clock.

The annual Unitarian Ministers' Retreat will be held in the First Parish at Chestnut Hill, Tuesday, April 16. The Communion service will be conducted by the Rev. Augustus M. Lord, D.D. The Rev. Edward Hale will lead the devotional meeting and the Rev. Theodore C. Williams will preach the annual sermon. There will also be an organ recital by Ernest W. Harrison concluding with evening prayer.

Next Sunday morning the Rev. James Harry Holden, minister of the Roxbury Universalist church, and Rev. Carl G. Horst will exchange pulpits.

Rev. and Mrs. Carl G. Horst leave for Athol tomorrow.

FIRST CHURCH.

A very large audience greeted Rev. Dr. Adelbert L. Hudson, at First church Sunday morning at his first Easter service as pastor of this church so rich in history. The decorations were confined to the pulpit and consisted of Easter lilies, jonquils and ferns. At the right of the pulpit was a large stand of potted plants, which were distributed to the members of the Sunday school, at the special service of the school in the afternoon. The music was of unusual high order, the regular quartet choir being assisted by a violin and cello.

In opening the pastor said, owing to the short time he had been settled over the church, he had not the opportunity to converse with all, who might wish to join with the church and he would therefore at this time extend a cordial invitation to all who desired to join in the fellowship of this ancient church. At this service, which was of usual impressiveness, eight united with the church.

Dr. Hudson took for his scripture lesson the words from the book of Job, beginning "Man that is born of woman is of few days, and full of trouble."

In opening his discourse the pastor said "The progress of mankind was onward and upward." This discourse was the last in a series, on the simple foundation of the Unitarian faith. His text was from Job 14 14. "If a man die, shall he live again?" Job's problem, he said is the problem of our lives. His problem comes down to us as the real problem of modern life. The christian church has assumed to answer the question, "if a man die shall he live again?" The pulpit speaks with such dogmatism that thinking people say men in the pulpit know no more than I, so today it is important that the pulpit should speak squarely man to man upon the question of eternal life.

There can be only one answer. If a man dies that is the end of him. Our faith is that man does not die. There is something in him that lives. There is something higher in life than our physical being. Man is a child of the living God, not in body but in soul. The highest expression of the life of God is in the soul of man. The regard for fellow man is greater than ever. This suggests the reason of our faith. That mankind as a whole will act honestly and honorably. Yet the fact is the opposite. Then why should we go on? It is because of that eternal faith that man as a whole will be honest. Can you actually prove any friend is absolutely true and loyal. No, you can not. Yet it is necessary for life that you believe in loyalty. Our whole life is based on faith such as this. If we place faith in all other things why shall we hesitate when we come to the worship of God? If our philosophy of life is true so must the philosophy of faith in God be true.

We have no hope that the body will ever rise again, yet we cling to the faith of that eternal life, that can never die. Does our personality suffer death or does it live again? The development of a personality, is what we send our boys to college for. To make men of them. Is it unreasonable then to say if there is anything that survives, it must be the thing that has the greatest value. As your personality is your greatest thing "I believe it is the personality in him that will live." There is something in personality that can never die. The personality of man is the greatest thing in the world. If your personality is lost it will be God's loss. I believe eternal life is eternal and everlasting to reconscrecate our life to those nobler ideas that find their personality in man."

At the close of the service a communion service was held to which all were invited to participate.

In the afternoon at 4 o'clock there was a special service for the Sunday school which was largely attended. The children, the superintendent, Charles H. Johnson, and the pastor, Rev. Mr. Hudson, took part in the service and at the close each child was given a potted plant to take home.

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S

To celebrate the feast of Easter, the greatest in the ecclesiastic year, expressing the joy of the church over the resurrection of Christ was fittingly observed at St. Chrysostom's church Sunday morning with the usual impressive services

Over a hundred came to pay their devotions and receive holy communion at the 7 A. M. celebration.

The altar was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies in large brass vases; on the steps leading to the chancel were potted Easter lilies and the baptistery font was filled with the same exquisite flowers. Following the usual happy custom of the parish at Easter, the money for the flowers was given to the Alta Guild by individuals as memorials.

The altar with its appropriately embroidered white silk hangings was further enhanced by a new white dossal with ridells bordered with white silk fringe in a flemish oak frame, the top of which is handsomely carved. It was given by Mrs. George P. Keith of Hudson in memory of her mother, Mrs. William A. Osborne of Arlington street, Wollaston. Much admiration has been expressed in regard to this beautiful gift which has added much to the sanctuary and to the church as a whole. It was presented and blessed by the rector Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra at the early service.

Every seat was taken and chairs brought in at the 10.30 morning prayer and holy communion. Rev. Mr. Steenstra preached a deep and forceful sermon from St. Mark 16:6 "And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted: Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified; he is risen; he is not here; behold the place where they laid him."

The special musical program by the vested choir was well rendered and in keeping with the occasion. During the offertory, "As it began to dawn" by Rogers was sung, Miss Louisa Allison Ross organist.

The children of the Sunday school had their carol service at 4 P. M. bringing their mite boxes for missions. After the singing of Easter hymns each child received a potted plant.

At the 7.30 evening prayer Rev. Mr. Steenstra took his theme from the second lesson appointed for Easter. "The life giving power that the conviction of the resurrection gives to the individual life.

The practice of the Easter Even Baptism began very early in the history of the church and this beautiful custom was observed in St. Chrysostoms, Saturday afternoon.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

At the Universalist church Sunday morning a large audience was present to enjoy and feel the inspiration of the Easter service. The subject of the sermon was "Practising Immortality." The pastor Rev. Fannie E. Austin, spoke from the text, John XVII. 3, "This is life eternal that they might know Thee, the only true God." In part she spoke as follows:

" 'If a man die shall he live again?' To us personally a great deal depends upon how we answer that question, much of our happiness, our peace and our growth in divine things. But there is something more fundamentally important than believing in immortality. It is what has been called 'Practising immortality.' The practical subject is how to live as immortal beings. The task of deserving immortality is a nobler object to which to give ourselves than that of proving immortality. Possibly we may not be able to prove immortality to our complete satisfaction, but everyone may set himself to the endeavor to be worthy of immortality. In the great thoughts that men have had upon this subject the idea of worth has been tied up with that of everlastingness. They have argued that because human life contains noble qualities God means to preserve it to his eternity. A pure, loving unselfish life must be precious in the eyes of the great Creator.

"When Jesus speaks of eternal life he evidently means something more than endless existence. Eternal life is to know God. It is life that is in harmony with God. It is life that is characterized by duty and loving service. It would seem that Jesus' defining makes eternal life possible here and now. He speaks in the present tense. You may have the peace, the joy, the rewards of the eternal life without waiting for the dissolution of the body. You may have them in the measure in which you possess the qualities of the spirit that mean Christ—likeness." At the close of the sermon twelve members were received into the church by the right hand of fellowship and one by letter who was unable to be present. The communion service followed. Easter lilies, palms and pots of daffodils were used profusely in decoration and the effect was most pleasing. A chorus choir of twenty young people furnished the music and the joyous singing added much to the service.

In the evening at 7 o'clock the concert by members of the Sunday school took place. A large audience was present to enjoy the excellent music and readings by the older members of the school. The little folks always please and their efforts were commendable. At the close of the service the flowers used in decoration were sent to those sick and shut in.

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY.

In presenting "Faust" at the evening concert of tomorrow's Music Festival the Choral society has selected an opera every chorus and solo of which is one to please the ear and touch the heart; and those attending may expect to hear all the favorites, the "Soldiers' Chorus," "Waltz Chorus," etc. sung with splendid effect Some of the soloists are to sing in Quincy for the first time. Loyal Phillips Shawe of Providence, who will sing the role of Valentine has a fine baritone voice and sings with dramatic power and expression. His principal solo, "Even the Bravest Heart," is one of the most beautiful in the whole opera and is a favorite concert aria with all baritones of note. Miss Estelle Patterson of Dover, the Margarita of the cast, is one of the younger concert singers who has every promise of a notable success in her chosen profession. She has just accepted the position of soloist at the Mount Vernon church, Boston, and is one of the singers under consideration for the annual Southern tour of the Boston Festival Orchestra. Many of Boston's most noted singers have earned their first laurels outside their native state on these annual tours of the Orchestra, which always cover the principal eastern and southern cities. Such an opportunity is eagerly ought by ambitious singers and the fact that Miss Patterson is being considered for so important a position is proof that she is a soprano well worth hearing.

With fine soloists and one of the ablest conductors in this part of the country the Choral society is offering a musical treat to the people of Quincy which should be widely appreciated.

E & W Shirts for Spring, $1.50

There are many different brands of shirts sold at $1.50—some are made from good fabrics, but poorly finished, while others are well made but from poor fabrics. All the fabrics that go into E & W Shirts must come up to a certain standard—they must count so many threads to the square and must measure so many yards to the pound—they must be at all times absolutely fast color; then they are cut and made by a high grade manufacturer who tailors them in just the same way as those costing twice as much; that's why I claim there is no better shirt for $1.50 than the E & W Shirt. BACHELOR PASTORS DENIED PROMOTION

Poorly Paid Charges Are Reserved For Single Men

Baltimore, April 8.—Rev. Dr. William W. Costin, one of the most scholarly ministers in the Baltimore conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, has withdrawn from the ministry because of obstacles to his progress owing to him being a bachelor. Albert Loose and George Cook, two leading members of Chatsworth church, of which Dr. Costin was the pastor, told why he had left.

"I know that Dr. Costin has not been swayed by monetary considerations," said Loose. "He loves the ministry, but he wants to have the promotion in the ministry that he deserves and he is tired of having district superintendents and finally the bishop tell him that he will have to get married if he expects to advance in his profession in the Baltimore conference."

Bishop Cranston refused to discuss Costin's resignation. It was necessary, he said, to have unmarried ministers to serve in charges that could not afford to pay much.

Diaz Thinks That Mexico May Be In Need of His Service

Madrid, April 6.—Former President Diaz of Mexico declined to comment on the difficulties that are besetting the Madero administration. He said:

"I have decided not to express an opinion on Mexico, since I fear natural resentment might distort my judgment. Only should my beloved country need my services, or should foreign intervention threaten, then would I return to fight for her independence, notwithstanding my 83 years. I hope to visit Mexico again shortly, although I shall ultimately fix my residence in Spain."

ARRESTED IN HACKETT CASE

Mrs. Raymond Charged With Murder of Maine Girl

CRIME COMMITTED IN 1905

Famous Strangling Mystery Will Not Come Before Court Until October—Suspect Must Remain In Jail Meanwhile—She and Her Family Appear Relieved to Have Suspense Ended—Summary of Crime at Readfield

Augusta, Me., April 8.—Mrs. Elsie H. Raymond of Poland, charged with the murder of Mattie Hackett at Readfield, Aug. 17, 1905, was arrested by Sheriff Richardson and is in the Kennebec county jail here. No term of a court having jurisdiction in murder cases will be held in this county until Oct. 15, so she will be obliged to wait until then for trial.

The special report of the grand jury followed reports that the case was being considered after resting seven years and that important new evidence had been discovered.

"Thank God," said Mrs. Raymond when informed that she had been indicted. She was standing by a window overlooking the courthouse grounds. Her husband and 4-year-old daughter, Evelyn, were beside her. Since it became known that the case was surely to be reported Mrs. Raymond and the members of her family have expressed the opinion that an indictment and trial would be a welcome relief from living under the shadow of suspicion.

After the parting Burton Raymond took his child and hurried into the open air alone. He will stay in Augusta a few days in order to be near his wife and will then return to his work at Poland. The child will go to relatives.

Mrs. Raymond will not be called upon to work while in jail. She will share her narrow quarters with Ada Davenport, who is awaiting trial for a minor offense.

The indictment of Mrs. Raymond created a sensation throughout this part of Maine. The people of Readfield have never ceased to clamor for the punishment of the murderer of Mattie Hackett. She was young, popular, about to become a bride, and was known to everyone throughout the rural community in which she lived.

Miss Hackett was the 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Hackett. On the night of the murder she had been left alone at her home to wash the supper dishes while her mother and a younger sister went to call on a neighbor. Her father was in the barn doing the chores, when suddenly he was startled by his daughter's screams for help.

He rushed from the barn in an effort to locate the girl, but the shrillness of the screams had died away and there was only a gurgling sound as though one was being strangled. It was dusk and it was several minutes before Hackett found his daughter.

She was lying beside the road, about 100 yards from her own home. She was unconscious but still breathing when picked up by her father and carried to her home. She wore no hat and no coat and had apparently started out for a walk.

In the excitement a small cord which was drawn tightly about the girl's neck and cut deep into the flesh was overlooked, with the result that she lived but a short time after having been found.

It is believed that had the cord about her neck been discovered when she was first found that her life might have been saved.

VERMILYA JURY DISAGREES

Dismissed by Judge After Deliberating For Eight Hours

Chicago, April 8.—The jury in the case of Mrs. Louise Vermilya, charged with murdering Richard T. Smith, was discharged by Judge Sullivan after members of the jury informed the court that they could not agree upon a verdict.

The jury had been out eight hours. Members of the jury from the time the first ballot was taken stood 9 to 3 for conviction, it was said.

Not a man wavered in his opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the woman who was accused of having poisoned Smith with arsenic.

He was taken into custody and arraigned, pleaded not guilty and was held in $5000. He furnished five $1000 bills as bail to appear for trial.

Death of Italian Poet

Bologna, April 8.—Giovanni Pascoli, the Italian poet, died here.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHEN DUCKS ARE COOKED.

WHEN you select a duck try to get one under a year old. The windpipe should break when pressed. The fat is soft and white, and on tame ducks the feet should be yellow. Wild ducks have red feet. It is now too late in the season for them.

Some tests for a young duck are to examine the skin on the leg to see if it is smooth. If smooth the duck is young. The webbing on the feet should be soft and the breast plump and hard. The wings also should be tender.

Preparing the Fowl.

Have the dealer clean the duck, if he will, but you must look over it yourself to see that it has been picked clean, that the crop, all the entrails and oil bags have been taken out. Then singe, wash inside and out and rinse in water to which a teaspoonful of baking soda has been added. Wipe, truss, dredge with salt, pepper and flour after the dressing has been stuffed inside. Bake in a hot oven for half an hour. Serve with green peas.

Those who do not like the strong flavor which some ducks have should stuff the craw with apples cut into small pieces. The apples are not eaten. They absorb the flavor.

A covered roaster is the best for cooking the duck. Unless the fowl is young and tender fifteen to eighteen minutes to the pound should be allowed for roasting. Pour a cupful of boiling water over the duck when putting into the pan.

While cooking baste the duck with gravy from the pan. Rub with butter, sprinkle with flour and allow to brown.

The Dressing.

To make gravy set the pan in iced water after removing the duck. This brings the fat to the top. Skim off, strain the gravy, add the cooked giblets chopped fine. Thicken with browned flour, color with herbs, boil for a minute, add pepper and salt as needed and serve in a gravy boat.

A plain bread stuffing is made for the duck in this way. Take enough dry bread crumbs to fill the inside of the duck. Mix with it a teaspoonful each of onion juice and minced parsley, a saltspoonful each of sweet marjoram, sage and summer savory and pepper and salt at discretion. Do not wet the stuffing, but soften it with a little melted butter.

Apple sauce should always be served with roast duck and currant jelly is also in place. So are green peas, onions or celery.

Celery or onions are often placed inside of duck which is to be roasted. This is supposed to improve its flavor.

Depredations by Foxes In Parks In Outskirts of Boston

Boston, April 8.—Alarmed by the depredations of foxes in Franklin park and the Arnold Arboretum, which are preying on the golden pheasants and other ground birds placed there by the city, West Roxbury residents are to appeal to the city council to exterminate the pests.

At last reports the foxes had changed their scenes of operation from Arnold Arboretum to Franklin park, so as to be near the bird house there and close by the hen roosts of two large farms belonging to the city.

GIVEN $2500 DAMAGES

Miss Mercy Wins Her Slander Suit Against Dean Talbot

Chicago, April 8.—The jury in the case of Miss Esther Mercy in her slander suit against Miss Marion Talbot, dean of women at the University of Chicago, for $100,000 damages, returned a verdict, giving the plaintiff judgment for $2500.

The sensational slander suit had its inception in the disappearance of a bunch of aigrettes from a $250 hat owned by Miss Mercy, while she was living at the home of a relative of Dean Small of the University of Chicago, and was attending that institution as a student.

Miss Mercy alleged that when she reported the loss she was threatened with arrest if she made the matter public. Later Miss Mercy was expelled from the university by Dean Talbot, after an alleged stormy interview, in the course of which the student says the official made remarks reflecting on her character.

Miss Talbot denied this charge and declared that Miss Mercy was discharged because her veracity had been brought into question.

CHAMPION MILK PRODUCER

Holstein Cow on Brockton Farm Excels All Previous Records

Brockton, Mass., April 8.—The world's record for milk production for a period covering four months has been broken by Creamella Vale, daughter of the famous DeKol Creamella, which held the title for a number of years. The cow is a high-bred Holstein-Friesian, and is owned by the Dutchland Farms.

During the period mentioned, 1308.98 pounds of milk have been produced by the cow, and it is considerably in the lead of the figures of Colantha Fourth Johanna, the present world's champion. Expert Gastill of the Amherst agricultural college is conducting the tests.

3000 SQUARE MILES FLOODED

Thirty Thousand People Homeless and Thirty Drowned

RAVAGES OF THE MISSISSIPPI

Financial Loss Estimated to Have Already Reached $10,000,000—Suffering In Missouri, Tennessee, Arkansas and Illinois—Many Levees South of Memphis Are Threatened—Cairo Surrounded by Water Ten Feet Higher Than Level of City

Memphis, April 8.—Thirty thousand persons homeless; 2,000 square miles of country inundated; thirty persons drowned, and a financial loss of $10,000,000 constitute the result of a two weeks' flood in the Mississippi valley.

These figures were arrived at by government engineers and officials of state levee boards engaged in combatting the ravages of the Mississippi from places in Illinois to threatened places in Mississippi and Arkansas.

Water is pouring into Arkansas through three new breaks in the levee south of Memphis and several hundred square miles are subject to flooding.

Railroad traffic in these sections is practically paralyzed.

Hundreds of persons still are menaced by the river at places in lower Missouri, northwest Tennessee and Arkansas. They are marooned in housetops, in trees and on anchored rafts directly in the current of the rampaging stream. Conservative judgment at Memphis is that the great majority of these unfortunates will be rescued.

Hourly the danger zone works southward. In the upper reaches the Ohio and Mississippi rivers are practically at a standstill. This means that the flood's crest now is exerted on the dikes from the Missouri line southward.

There has been suffering among thousands of refugees gathered in the highland towns in the flood districts. However, this situation cannot continue because officials of the state and federal governments are working to carry food to the homeless.

State and levee board officials in the districts south of Memphis are laboring to top the threatened levees. Mississippi state officials think their embankments will hold. Nevertheless the menace to states bordering the Mississippi south of Memphis will not have ceased until the great river's angry waters have poured into the gulf.

Cairo, Ills., is surrounded by a vast stretch of water, the crest of which is ten feet higher than the average level of the city. In many places the water is twenty feet higher than the streets.

For four days Cairo has been an island city. When the levees protecting the drainage district went out all rail communcation was stopped and the only entrance to the city now is by boat from Mounds, nine miles away.

The levee workers and such refugees as are in Cairo are being fed by the commissary department. Rations are being served to 1500.

In the wide stretches of the Mississippi's flooded acres there are three striking pictures. The northernmost is in the 500 square miles of the Reelfoot lake country of Tennessee, where 2000 or more persons have been driven from their homes by the smashing of a Mississippi levee in southwestern Kentucky. In the district thousands of acres of fertile fields are under water.

A few miles south, in Arkansas, three counties are under water. From this rich "bottom" country hundreds of farmers and villagers have been driven. Flood waters swept over the fertile fields and thriving villages with the breaking of the levee on the Arkansas side, north of Memphis.

The scene south of these points impresses one with the might of a giant stream on a rampage. Homes that once marked the centre of rich "bottom" farms now float in a torrent that cannot be stayed. Bits of wreckage carried along in the tawny tide reflect the extent of the damage in the valley above.

To the small farmer and "settler" the coming of the floods means blight. Hundreds of such persons have refused, however, to leave their homes, and in many instances such cases have been dealt with by force. Those marooned in housetops are compelled to take to barges and are sent to places of safety. There have been reports of fatalities among "poor whites" and negroes who risked their lives to save their mules.

HOME CURE FOR RABIES

Bacteriologist Says He Successfullly Tried It on Himself

Philadelphia, April 8.—Professor D. L. Harris, city bacteriologist of St. Louis, startled the American Association of Pathologists in session here by announcing that he had discovered a home cure for the rabies, and that furthermore he had tried the cure on himself and was convinced of its value.

The cure of Harris consists of an improvement of the Pasteur treatment. Under that treatment it is necessary to kill a rabbit each day in order to get the brain for inoculation purposes. Harris asserts that when he was bitten by a mad dog he experimented with himself.

STRIKES THREATENED IN TEXTILE CENTRES

Number of Dissatisfied Workers Is Comparatively Small

Boston, April 8.—Despite the wave of wage increases which during the next twelve months will swell by more than $12,000,000 the pay of thousands of textile workers in New England, dissatisfaction is manifest among the operatives in a number of places. Strikes are now in effect, or are threatened during the week beginning today, unless certain demands are granted in nearly a dozen textile centres, or mills.

Except in Lowell, where 15,000 are out of work, the number of operatives involved is comparatively small. It is generally believed that the strike and lockout in Lowell will be ended this week, through the expected action of the manufacturers in granting an increase of 10 percent.

Ten percent is the rate of increase generally granted by the textile interests of New England, and in most of the mills where the advance does not equal this amount, the operatives are dissatisfied.

"Let me go!" she panted. He laughed his cool laugh of triumph.

"Let you go—ask me anything but that, Betty! Have you no reward for patience such as mine? A whole summer has passed since I saw you first—"

There was the noisy shuffling of feet on the stairs, and releasing Betty, Murrell swung about on his heel and faced the door. It was pushed open an inch at a time by a not too confident hand and Mr. Slosson thus guardedly presented himself to the eye of his chief, whom he beckoned from the room.

"Well?" said Murrell, when they stood together on the landing.

"Just come across to the keel boat!" and Slosson led the way down stairs and from the house.

"Damn you, Joe, you might have waited!" observed the outlaw. Slosson gave him a hardened grin. They crossed the clearing and boarded the keel boat which rested against the bank. As they did so the cabin in the stern gave up a shattered presence in the shape of Tom Ware. Murrell started violently. "I thought you were hanging out in Memphis, Tom?" he said, and his brow darkened, as sinister and forbidding, he stepped closer to the planter. Ware did not answer at once, but looked at Murrell out of heavy bloodshot eyes, his face pinched and ghastly. At last he said, speaking with visible effort.

"I stayed in Memphis until five o'clock this morning."

"Damn your early hours!" roared Murrell. "What are you doing here? I suppose you've been showing that dead face of yours about the neighborhood—why didn't you stay at Belle Plain, since you couldn't keep away?"

"I haven't been near Belle Plain; I came here instead. How am I going to meet people and answer questions?" His teeth were chattering. "Is it known she's missing?" he added.

"Hicks raised the alarm the first thing this morning, according to the instructions I'd given him."

"Yes?" gasped Ware. He was dripping from every pore and the sickly color came and went on his unshaven cheeks. Murrell dropped a heavy hand on his shoulder.

"You haven't been at Belle Plain, you say, but has any one seen you on the road this morning?"

"No one, John," cried Ware, panting between each word. There was a moment's pause and Ware spoke again. "What are they doing at Belle Plain?" he demanded in a whisper. Murrell's lips curled.

"I understand there is talk of suicide," he said.

"Good!" cried Ware.

"They are dragging the bayou down below the house. It looks as though you were going to reap the rewards of the excellent management you have given her estate. They have been trying to find you in Memphis, so the sooner you show yourself the better," he concluded significantly.

"Then It Was You—Not Tom—Who Had Me Brought Here!"

"You are sure you have her safe, John; no chance of discovery? For God's sake get her away from here as soon as you can; it's an awful risk you run!"

"She'll be sent down river tonight," said Murrell.

"Captain," began Slosson, who up to this had taken no part in the conversation, "when are you going to cross to t'other side of the bayou?"

"Soon," replied Murrell. Slosson laughed.

"I didn't know but you'd clean forgot the Clan's business. I want to ask another question—but first I want to say that no one thinks higher or more frequent of the ladies than just me; I'm genuinely fond of 'em, and I've never lifted my hand ag'in 'em except in kindness." Mr. Slosson looked at Ware with an exceedingly virtuous expression of countenance. He continued: "Yo' orders are that we're to slip out of this a little afore midnight, but suppose there's a hitch—here's the lady knowing what she knows and here's the boy knowing what he knows."

"There can be no hitch," rasped out Murrell arrogantly.

"I never knew a speculation that couldn't go wrong; and by rights we should have got away last night."

"Well, whose fault is it you didn't?" demanded Murrell.

"In a manner it were mine, but the ark got on a sandbank as we were fetching it in and it took us the whole damn night to get clear."

"Well?" prompted Murrell, with a sullen frown.

"Suppose they get shut of that notion of theirs that the lady's done drowned herself; suppose they take to watching the river? Or suppose the whole damn bottom drops out of this deal? What then? The lady, good looking as she is, knows enough to make west Tennessee mighty onhealthy for some of us. I say, suppose it's a flash in the pan and you have to crowd the distance in between you and this part of the world, you can't tell me you'll have any use for her then." Slosson paused impressively. "And here's Mr. Ware feeling bad, feeling like hell," he resumed. "Him and me don't want to be left in no trap with you gone God only knows where."

"I'll send a man to take charge of the keel boat. I can't risk any more of your bungling, Joe."

"That's all right, but you don't answer my question," persisted Slosson, with admirable tenacity of purpose.

"What is your question, Joe?"

"A lot can happen between this and midnight—"

"If things go wrong with us there'll be a blaze at the head of the bayou; Does that satisfy you?"

"And what then?"

Murrell hesitated.

"What about the girl?" insisted Slosson, dragging him back to the point at issue between them. "As a man I wouldn't lift my hand ag'in no good looking woman except, like I said, in kindness; but she can't be turned loose; she knows too much. What's the word, Captain—you say it!" he urged. He made a gesture of appeal to Ware.

"Look for the light; better still, look for the man I'll send." And with this Murrell would have turned away, but Slosson detained him.

"Who'll he be?"

"Some fellow who knows the river."

"And if it's the light?" asked the tavern-keeper in a hoarse undertone. Again he looked toward Ware, who, dry-lipped and ashen, was regarding him steadfastly. Glance met glance, for a brief instant they looked into each other's eyes and then the hand Slosson had rested on Murrell's shoulder dropped at his side.

CHAPTER XXI.

The Judge Meets the Situation.

The judge's and Mr. Mahaffy's celebration of the former's rehabilitated credit had occupied the shank of the evening, the small hours of the night, and that part of the succeeding day which the southwest described as soon in the morning; and as the stone jug, in which were garnered the spoils of the highly confidential but entirely misleading conversation which the judge had held with Mr. Pegloe after his return from Belle Plain, lost in weight, it might have been observed that he and Mr. Mahaffy seemed to gain in that nice sense of equity which should form the basis of all human relations. The judge watched Mr. Mahaffy, and Mr. Mahaffy watched the judge, each trustfully placing the regulation of his private conduct in the hands of his friend, as the one most likely to be affected by the rectitude of his acts.

Probably so extensive a consumption of Mr. Pegloe's corn whisky had never been accomplished with greater highmindedness. They honorably split the last glass, the judge scorning to set up any technical claim to it as his exclusive property; then he stared at Mahaffy, while Mahaffy, dark-visaged and forbidding, stared back at him.

The judge sighed deeply. He took up the jug and inverted it. A stray drop or so fell languidly into his glass.

"Try squeezing it, Price," said Mahaffy.

The judge shook the jug, it gave forth an empty sound, and he sighed again; he attempted to peer into it, closing one watery eye as he tilted it toward the light.

"I wonder no Yankee has ever

"Try Squeezing It, Price," Said Mahaffy.

thought to invent a jug with a glass bottom," he observed.

"What for?" asked Mahaffy.

"You astonish me, Solomon," exclaimed the judge. "Coming as you do from that section which invented the wooden nutmeg, and an eight-day clock that has been known to run as much as four or five hours at a stretch. I am aware the Yankees are an ingenious people; I wonder none of 'em ever thought of a jug with a glass bottom, so that when a body holds it up to the light he can see at a glance whether it is empty or not Do you reckon Pegloe has sufficient confidence to fill the jug again for us?"

But Mahaffy's expression indicated no great confidence in Mr. Pegloe's confidence.

"Credit," began the judge, "is proverbially shy; still it may sometimes be increased, like the muscles of the body and the mental faculties, by judicious use. I've always regarded Pegloe's as a cheap mind. I hope I have done him an injustice." He put on his hat, and tucking the jug under his arm went from the house.

DRESSED AS A MAN

Female Plumber Lived With Another Girl as Her Husband

London, April 6.—The story of how Adelaide Dallamore, a girl of 22 years, had dressed as a man and lived with another girl as her husband, while earning a living for both as a plumber, came out in the police court here, when the girl was brought in on a charge of disorderly conduct as a man. Miss Dallamore for some time has earned a good living working at plumbing.

On promising to dress in woman's clothes in the future, the court bound the girl over.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

HETTY GREEN OPENS OFFICES OF HER OWN

Celebrates Event by Having Her Ancient Desk Revarnished

New York, April 8.—Mrs. Hetty Green, for the first time in her business career of nearly fifty years, has opened offices of her own at 111 Broadway, a stone's throw from Wall street.

For years she conducted her business at the banks which she patronized, a few years ago deserting the Chemical National bank for office room at the National Park bank. She has now moved her ancient roll top desk to the offices of the Westminster company, which she formed a year ago with a capital of $125,000, as a holding company for all of her financial interests.

Mrs. Green celebrated the occasion by having her ancient piece of office furniture revarnished.

THE "SACRIFICE SECT"

Negro Preacher Who May Have Helped Form It Is Arrested

Lafayette, La., April 8.—Officers investigating the confession of Clementine Barnabet, the negress who claims she directed the killing of seventeen or more negroes in the last year, have in custody a negro preacher named Thompson.

The officials believe that he had much to do with the organization of the secret sect known as the "Sacrifice Sect," presumably headed by a Barnabet woman, part of whose creed consisted of the belief that whom she killed gained immortality.

SALEM'S SMALLPOX CASES

Epidemic Apparently Checked by the Board of Health

Salem, Mass., April 8.—In spite of the addition to the total number of smallpox cases being treated in the city it is apparent that the board of health has the epidemic under control.

There are forty-two cases in all, all of them from South Salem, the "point district." Today all school children who have not been vaccinated must be vaccinated before they will be admitted to their respective schoolhouses.

The board of health has issued orders to manufacturers who employ help in the South Salem district that their help must all be vaccinated before they will be permitted to work.

FOOLED THE MINISTER

Girl Who Stated She Was "Over Eighteen" Was Technically Correct

Montgomery, Mo., April 8.—When Frances Windsor, 15 years old, and William Boone, 19, went to Rev. Samuel Palmer to be married they exhibited a marriage license, and the girl, despite her youthful appearance, assured the minister she was "over 18." Her statement was true, for in her shoe were the figures "18."

Benjamin Windsor's suit against the pastor, asking $2000 damages because he performed the wedding ceremony for his daughter, a minor, will be dismissed at the coming term of the circuit court, Windsor having been advised that a valid marriage license, signed by the recorder, relieves the killed gained immortality.

Blood Transfusion Fails to Save

Washington, April 8.—Mrs. Ruth O. Peck, wife of Paul Peck, the aviator, died here after a transfusion of blood from her husband in an attempt to save her life.

Georgian Prince Floated

Bristol, R. I., April 8.—The British tank steamer Georgian Prince, which went ashore on the eastern end of Hog island, was floated at high tide by several tugs.

THE ADVISORY BOARD'S DUTIES

Members Make Public What it Believes its Duties Are

COMMUNICATION

Editors of Ledger:

The Advisory Board recently appointed by Mayor Stone to formulate a plan for equalizing the valuations on the real estate of the City of Quincy, believes it proper that it should, at this time, place before the citizens of the city its views as to its duties.

The Board understands its duties are purely advisory. It has no authority to fix valuations on any property of the city, real or personal, or even to recommend that a given valuation be placed upon any particular piece of property. That is a duty which by law devolves on the Board of Assessors and must be performed by them.

As we understand it, the sole duty submitted to our Board is to formulate general rules for so determining the valuation of property, as will give to different pieces of property capable of uniform development and similarly located with reference to conditions which affect values, equal valuation, and to recommend the adoption of the same by the assessors.

The Board has entered upon the performance of its duties, and although it has had but two meetings, it has already had brought to its attention instances of inequality in the valuation of real estate, and it firmly believes that entirely apart from whether the gross valuation of the city shall be either increased or decreased as the result of the adoption by the Assessors of its recommendations, if its recommendations are adopted, a standard for valuing the real estate of the city will be established, which will prevent, in the future, the many instances of inequality which today exists in the valuations fixed by the Assessors for the real estate of the city.

RETIREMENT OF MUSIC DIRECTOR

Madame Morey, who has been organist at Bethany church for many years finished her term of service Easter Sunday. It is with feelings of regret her friends accept her resignation.

Madame Morey spoke a few words of farewell at the close of the Sunday school concert. She said "I have been with you so long, your faces are familiar to me and I have grown attached to Quincy and Quincy people. There is always a welcome at meeting and a parting greeting, we have come to the parting of our ways. I have always rejoiced in your joys and sympathized in your sorrows. The song and the word, I have always tried to interpret faithfully and to the Glory of God. We would follow our Master, feeling we could choose no better way, and we realize this Easter day His life of service and sacrifice May our hearts continue to praise Him with uncreasing happy songs, and may we all learn the sweet song of true life until our souls can sing the highest, purest, and sweetest notes, and be in harmony with God. I want you all to unite in singing one hymn for the last time and if we meet no more on earth we shall meet beyond."

Madam Morey was visibly affected, and her friends are sorry to have her leave. At parting she gave to each a souvenir picture of Christ and the fisherman, as a slight token of her love and esteem.

ITALIAN WAS WELL ARMED

In court this morning Canale was fined $50 for carrying a loaded revolver and the gun was also ordered to be forfeited.

EASTER IN THE CHURCHES

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

All the services yesterday at the First Presbyterian church were well attended and excellent in character. At the morning service the sacrament of the Lord's supper was observed. The church was filled with members who came to enjoy the double meaning of the day, Easter and communion.

Eighteen united with the church on profession of their faith in Christ and by letter. The pastor spoke briefly on removing difficulties; "who will roll us away the stone?" The singing by the choir added beauty to the service. The morning was one of great helpfulnes to all. In the Bible school there were special exercises for the children consisting of Easter carols, dialogues, recitations with helpful words by Alexander Clark, the superintendent, George Wilson, assistant superintendent and Rev. J. A. Matheson, pastor.

A large number of Junior C. E.'s were in attendance at the afternoon meeting. These little ones are making a fine beginning, many of them taking part without notes. A fine spirit was evident at the Senior C. E. service of consecration. A very large percent of members were present and took part.

At the evening service the pastor preached the Easter sermon to a large and attentive congregation from the text: "Come, see the place where the Lord lay," emphasizing the necessity of belief in the resurrection of Jesus from the dead in order to complete his work and give man a finished salvation.

The choir sang the Easter music with excellent spirit. It was greatly appreciated by all and added much to the helpfulness of the service.

Wednesday evening the C. E. society will hold the annual banquet and installation of officers. The banquet is the result of a contest of "efficiency of service" held for three months between the Reds and Blues. The Reds are to give the supper.

Thursday evening the annual meeting of the congregation and corporation will be held for the election of officers and hearing the reports from the various societies of the church during the past year.

Friday evening the choir will give a sacred concert entitled "Little Minnie." Much time has been spent on this piece and all who attend are assured of a real treat.

ATLANTIC MEMORIAL.

At the Memorial church, Atlantic yesterday morning there was the usual large Easter congregation. Miss Maud E. Read read the scripture lesson from the 20th chapter of St. John Her well rounded developed voice made the lesson very impressive. The pastor, Rev. T. W. Davison preached on the theme "Easter, The World's Hope. His text being Matthew 28-6. He is risen.

Mr. Davison said in part "Most of us during health and youth give the impressions that we are materialistic. but when affliction, sorrow and death approach, what we are at heart shows that there is a hidden kernel of spirtuality. That spiritual element of life makes us habitually hopeful. We think of life as endless. We may seem absorbed in business or caring only for our family or friends, or lost in sorrow at afflicton and death, but whatever our experiences may be however indifferent we may appear there is an element of hope which makes the hardest condition bearable.

"That hope makes us unselfish and kind, dignified and peaceable. It inspires us to action and braves all discouragement. The child is hopeful of the future, the youth is looking toward maturity and an honorable Christian old age looks to a kingdom beyond.

A Christian hope is not other-worldiness. I have no sympathy with those who are looking for a future heaven and doing nothing for the life that now is. To me that is degeneracy and superstition.

"The Risen Christ is the only solution of Life's problems. I know there are burdens that are unjust impositions, battles that are unnecessary: there are noble souls, whose plans are always thwarted, and aspirations quenched, but let hope enter the heart by a vision of the living Christ and defeat is turned into victory. We have allowed our part too often to limit us in future growth and attainment. We have believed that with all of our Christian progress that it is natural to do wrong and unnatural to do right; natural to be selfish, mean and cruel, natural for man to practice falsehood and not truth, deceit instead of honor. But the living Christ gave men hope. He pointed to an immortality where life is above wrong, and where even death could not silence truth or stop righteous movements. The hope of the world is found in the Easter message that Christ has risen that implies that wrong will be righted evil eliminated and sin forgiven

"The world cannot be satisfied with religious stagnation, social conditions that are unfair or political parties that are corrupt. Hope looks for something better. The immigrant leaves home and comes to our shores because he wants something better than the old country can give.

If our church is not interested in man's welfare here as well as hereafter we will not inspire hope. I have no sympahty with a Church that is out of touch with humanity when men are hungry for food, longing for an opportunity, craving fellowship and desirous of service. They hope and that hope leads to healty action and life.

The musical program arranged by John Ward in the morning and by Spencer Appollonio in the evening were above anything the Church ever had in the musical line. The evening chorus has recently been reorganized by Mr. Apollonio and the young people are enthusiastic over his directorship. Miss Clark of Dorchester played the violin and gave several selections accompanied by the organ.

The platform was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies and green foliage under the direction of Mrs. L. T. Gurney and Miss Ada Harding.

The evening service was in charge of the Sunday school. The program consisted of songs, addresses and recitations.

The dialogue "Her Easter choice," seemed to touch the heart of every one and was considered beautiful in sentiment and rendering. During the evening, Roll of Honor badges were awarded to those who had not missed a Sunday last quarter. Mr. Blake spoke of the attendance of the Sunday school coming up to 220; he said that the forty-five who had not missed a Sunday were the back bone of the school.

HALL PLACE M. E.

Easter Sunday was a busy day at the Hall Place M. E. church. Being the last Sunday in the present conference year, the official board met at 10 A. M. in the vestry, to finish so far as possible the work of the current year as as the pastor goes to the annual conference at Springfield on Wednesday. A statement of the financial condition, showing a good year's work, was given by the treasurer and the pastor reported for the benevolences and improvement. During the year about $1,000 in improvements have been made.

At the morning service the pastor baptized two small children. One person was received into the church on probation and five into full membership. The sacrament of the Lord's supper was observed. Miss Helen Martin sang a solo. The choir sang, "Awake thou that sleepest," with Miss Martin as soloist.

The contest between the boys and girls in the Sunday school gained considerable enthusiasm and high points were scored.

The Junior and Epworth League services were omitted.

At 7 o'clock the Sunday school gave their annual Easter concert.

A special feature of the concert was the Missionary exercise, "Carrying the Easter Message to the World." People of the various countries were represented by children dressed in native costume and these were welcomed into the Light of the Salvation in Christ Jesus by Christian children. It was an interesting and helpful occasion for all to gain a better knowledge of the great need of other countries still in darkness and superstition.

The decorations were in charge of the following commitee, Miss Jessie Burke, Helen Martin, Pauletta Kristofferson, Clyde Hannant, Edward Newcomb and J. Lawrence Martin.

MINERS IN BRITAIN SENT BACK TO WORK

Federation Sustains Action of Its Executive Committee

London, April 8.—The Miners' Federation, following a long session, officially declared off the great coal strike, and ordered the men to return to work immediately.

The decision was a great victory for the "peace with honor" party in the ranks of the miners. There had been much criticism of the action of the executive committee in deciding that a two-thirds vote was necessary to continue the strike, and the radical element went to the meeting prepared to force the federation to override the committee.

COUNCIL SUSTAINS MAYOR'S VETO OF ANNUAL APPROPRIATION ORDER

Order as Passed Exceeded by Many Thousand Dollars What City Could Afford

Vote After Debate Stood 4 in Favor and 16 Against Passing

By a vote of 16 no and 4 yes the City Council at a special meeting Monday evening sustained the Mayor's veto of the annual appropriation order and refused to pass it over his objection. Before a vote was taken however there was nearly an hour's discussion on the question during which several of the city officials were questioned as to the ability of their departments getting along with a less sum than that reported by the Finance Committee.

There was but one absent member, Councilman Ericson, although Councilman Sodergren was temporarily absent from the Council chamber when the vote was taken, and therefore was not recorded.

The meeting was called to order at 7.35 o'clock by President Ralph W. Hobbs, who read the call for the special meeting which was to act on a communication from the Mayor returning Order No. 108 and to act on an order for the annual appropriations.

The first matter was the veto message which read as follows:

Ralph W. Hobbs,

President of the City Council,

Dear Sir:—

I hereby return without my approval Order No. 108 for the annual appropriations for 1912.

I disapprove the items thereof for the amounts stated therein. The total amount provided by said order exceeds by many thousands of dollars, the amount the city can afford to expend this year on account of the general operating expenses of the several departments.

It seems to me, and I believe that we should be able to run our departments for less money than called for by this order. If something is not done to reduce these expenditures the tax rate for 1912 will be so large that it will be a great detriment to our city.

For years each department, in its estimate for the money needed during each year, has asked for more than it has received. I know that the departments could spend all the money asked for to a good advantage and I should be pleased to see them receive it if the city's finances would warrant the expenditures, but the truth is the city cannot afford to appropriate the money.

If this order were to be approved by me for the amount stated therein, we would be obliged, this year, to raise $810,513. Our estimated valuation is $34,000,000, in reality, it is about $2,000 less than this amount. To raise a large amount of money on such a valuation, allowing for a nominal increase thereon, would be placing too heavy a burden on the taxpayers of the city.

For these reasons the order is returned without my approval and with the items thereon disapproved as aforesaid.

Yours very truly,

Eugene R. Stone,

Mayor.

Councilman Richards opened the argument. The sums named in the budget as passed were absolutely necessary. The order had been unanimously passed at the last meeting. It seemed to him that the council should

E & W Shirts for Spring, $1.50

There are many different brands of shirts sold at $1.50—some are made from good fabrics, but poorly finished, while others are well made but from poor fabrics. All the fabrics that go into E & W Shirts must come up to a certain standard—they must count so many threads to the square and must measure so many yards to the pound—they must be at all times absolutely fast color; then they are cut and made by a high grade manufacturer who tailors them in just the same way as those costing twice as much; that's why I claim there is no better shirt for $1.50 than the E & W Shirt. BRILLIANT SCENE AT THE EASTER MONDAY BALL OF QUINCY COUNCIL

Many Handsome Gowns Worn by Ladies Made the Scene a Brilliant One

Efficient Committees in Charge Added Greatly to Pleasure

The annual Easter Monday concert and ball of Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus was held Monday evening at Music hall and was a pronounced social success in every way. The attendance was fully as large as in previous years. The music entrancing and the gowns worn by the ladies were in many cases exquisite.

The guests of the evening included Mayor Eugene R. Stone, Rev. John J. Coan and Rev. Patrick J. Scannell of St. John's church, Rev. John P. Cuffe of the Sacred Heart church of Atlantic, Charles J. McGilvray, Grand Knight of Ave Maria council of West Quincy, Grand Knight, Edward V. Heffernan of Braintree council and Grand Knight Thomas White of Weymouth council.

The reception committee were distinguished by blue colored sash across the shirt front. This committee was headed by Past Grand Knight John J. Cunniff, who with his efficient committee was very active in the performance of their duties, and to them is due much of the evening pleasures enjoyed by the participants. Assisting Past Grand Knight Cunniff was, Hon. William T. Shea, P. G. K., John W. McAnarney, P. G. K., Lawrence W. Lyons, P. G. K., Edward J. Murphy, P. G. K., James F. Burke, P. G. K., Peter J. Cahill, P. G. K. Dr. George M. Shehan, William T. Moran, Edward J. Parker, George B. Gavin, James W. Sweeney, Eugene W. O'Connor, Bernard Cullen, John A. Mahoney, Patrick W. Driscoll Arthur Murphy, M. J L. Kennedy, Robert E. Foy, John F. Bruton.

Music for the promenade concert, which preceded the dancing was furnished by Wilson's orchestra who rendered a program pleasing to the ear, their selections including the following:—

March
"The Standard Guard" Eilenberg
Overture
'Poet and Peasant" Suppe
Concert Waltz
"Return of Spring" Waldteufel
Selection, "The Rose Maid"
Burno Granichspacedpen
Xylophone Solo Selected
Gerald A. Sullivan
Finale
"Gipsy Dance" Hermann

The ball proper opened with a grand march which was participated in by seventy-five couples. It was led by Grand Knight Edward D. Barrett and Mrs. Barrett who looked particularly charming in a handsome tunic of pink lace embroidered with silver and silver fringe, over white satin. She also wore a handsome corsage bouquet of violets in the centre of which was a magnificent rose. Then came Deputy Grand Knight Michael T. Walsh and Miss Carroll, of South Framingham who wore a handsome pink messaline with lace trimmings.

Other couples immediately following were Assistant Floor Director, Richard A. Cole and Mrs. Cole, John A. McGowan and Mrs. McGowan, Grand Knight, Charles J. McGilvray and Miss McGilvrary, Grand Knight, Edward V. Heffernan and Mrs. Heffernan, Grand Knight, Thomas White and Mrs. White, Past Grand Knight John J. Cunniff and Mrs. Cunniff, Ex-Mayor William T. Shea and Miss Lyons, Michael T. Sullivan, Treasurer of Quincy Council and Mrs. Sullivan, Charles C. Hearn, President of the Board of Trade and Mrs. Hearn and others of the several committees and participants.

The march was very prettily executed and when the sixteen front came down the hall, there was a spontaneous outburst of well merited applause. The march over, general dancing was in order until 2 o'clock at which time special cars were in waiting for all points.

From 10 o'clock on Burleigh & Martin served a most excellent menu in the annex. Usually at these lunches, or suppers it is served in the buffet style, but on this occasion tables with seats were provided which made the supper much more enjoyable. The menu was well cooked, and well served and was pronounced most excellent.

Aside from the platform there were no special decorations. On the screen back of the orchestra was a handsome silk American flog beneath which hung the banner of Quincy Council. Across the front of the platform was a row of potted plants and ferns intertwined with which were jonquils, dafodills, geraniums and silver leaves, the whole making a very pretty effect. Derringer had charge of the decorations.

The committee of arrangements was headed by Michael T. Walsh, Deputy Grand Knight, whose distinguishing color was purple. He was assisted by John T. Cain, Secretary, Michael T. Sullivan, Treasurer, Edward D. Barrett, G. K., John J. Cunniff, P. G. K., John W. McAnarney, P. G. K., Charles C. Hearn, John H. Heaney, John F. Bruton, Richard A. Cole, John A. McGowan, Joseph M. STILL ALARMS.

Two still alarms brought the auto chemical to the vicinity of Presidents bridge Monday evening and on each occasion the call was for a grass fire, evidently caused by sparks from a train. The first response was at 10.30 o'clock, while the last call came in at midnight.

AUNT JERUSHA'S FAMILY ALBUM

An Entertainment Teeming With Mirth and Laughter

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S

Monday evening in the parish rooms of St. Chrysostom's church, there was an entertainment teeming with fun, mirth and laughter the attractions were Aunt Jerusha's family album, exhibited under the supervision of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Northup and Mr. Walter Jackson a sleight-of-hand performer.

The first on the program was piano solo by Miss Gertrude M. Allen, Alice Romance transcrite by J. Ascher, The Mountain stream by Sidney Smith were rendered very acceptably. Miss Edna Fowler in a quaint old costume of black silk, sweetly sang "Auld Lang Syne." Then through an opening in what appeared to be a large album resting on an easel was shown a series of living pictures, 31 in all, representing the numerous relations of Mrs. Jerusha Dow, an old fashioned lady who relates the family history as she turns the leaves of "The Family Album," Mrs. Morgan, J. Walker as Mrs. Dow looked charming in a flowered brocade gown of the Louis XVI period with a high coiffure ofpowdered hair as she gave the life history of her numerous relatives and from the first dear face of her sainted grandmother, to baby Ned, her grandchild "with sech big expressive eyes" each portrayal was equally commendable and was enthusiastically greeted. Each portrait produced its distinct type and gave the audience unmistakable signs of enjoyment, guessing who they were, for most of the make-ups were surely astonishing.

The pictures were represented by

BURGLAR SCARE AT WOLLASTON

Finally is Aroused at 3 A. M. by an Unbidden Guest

IS FINED $10

Aroused from her peaceful slumber at about three o'clock this morning by the ringing of the front door bell and constant knocking on the door, Mrs. Frank Burgess, of 78 Beach street, Wollaston, opened the window of her bedroom, and on inquiry as to who was on the piazza was given the response, "Let me in." At first Mrs. Burgess thought the man was a burglar and his assertions "I want to get to the Fore River" and "Come on, its getting late," failed to quiet her alarm. She remembered that a telephone connection was in the house and the police department was communicated with in short order.

The auto was quickly sent to the scene and officer James McNamara detailed to apprehend the disturber. The officer quickly espied the man on the steps of the Burgess house and soon had him in the auto. On being questioned, the man said his name was Jonas W. Powers and he resided on South street. He also added that he worked at the Fore River shipyards and wanted to get a couple of hours sleep before beginning his daily toil.

Powers was arraigned in court this morning on the charge of drunkenness, it having been agreed to prefer no charge of burglary or attempted burglary against him. He pleaded not guilty, but Judge Avery said he thought Powers was out "too late at night" and in consequence thereof the said Powers was fined ten dollars.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

A liberal minded man is one who thinks the way you do.

If you don't know exactly all about the baseball leagues just ask the first boy you meet.

One always thinks there is a lot of money to be made in any kind of business that he isn't in!

It isn't the good time a woman has that counts with her! It's the telling about it.

The Republican Presidential campaigns are making so much noise it is hard to hear anything in the Democratic camps.

Maybe you are one of those chaps who want the earth. If so what would you do with the old thing if you had it?

The rumor of danger of a volcanic eruption down Panama Canal way was probably due to that other rumor, that the Colonel was about to pay a visit to the great work.

Mr. Roosevelt's Louisville speech was written with a pencil stub on a suitcase in the New York station. He is acquiring the ways of a newspaper man, but he will not be thoroughly seasoned until he learns to do it on top of his derby hat.

What leads the workingman to wave the red flag is not the making of money by efficiency of production, but the creating of multi-millionaires through shuffling stock into some new combination, where nothing is produced.

JAPAN AND MAGDALENA BAY

It seems entirely possible that Japan might like a coaling station at Magdalena bay in Lower California, just as there was long a demand in our navy for a coaling station in Oriental waters.

It is also probable that such an acquirement would not be favorably regarded in this country. The more of a lodgment foreign powers get on this continent, the more money we must spend for armament to met possibilities of war.

But even if the representations as to Japan's intentions at Magdalena are correct, and probably they are greatly exaggerated, to create a war scare out of them will be preposterous for many reasons. In the first place the only existing difference between the two peoples lies in matters of trade. Just as a business man never commits assault and battery to persuade a customer to buy his goods, so the modern nation does not spend a billion on a war in order to secure a few millions of commercial profit.

Furthermore, the war scare crowd overlook the staggering burden of debt under which Japan labors. Her people are taxed the overwhelming proportion of 20 to 25 per cent of their income. The present generation has all it can do to pay the bills for the last fight.

MINISTERS' PAY.

Claiming that ministers are deserving of more pay than most of them receive Rev. Andrew J. Coultas of Fall River revives a question that has long been discussed by clergymen and laymen, not alone in Brockton and vicinity but all over the country.

Some ministers may receive all they are worth, but it does not appear by a glance at a salary list that all of them do. A young man to fit himself for the ministry must take a course in theology that is expensive. Then, after he has left the university halls, he is under a heavy expense for books and further study before he can assume the pastorate of any thriving church. Likewise it is customary for the young clergyman to take unto himself a wife almost at the beginning of his ministerial duties. This is as it should be. A minister with a wife is of more value to a community as a leader than one without. Almost always a young man going into the pulpit has to spend a portion of his first three years' salary in paying back money with which he was able to procure an education.

Some parishes do not pay more than $800 a year; but few pay more than $2200. Of course there are exceptions. It is usually a number of years before a young clergyman rises to a salary of $1500 or more. This does not seem right on the face of it.

Rev. Mr. Coultas says some ministers do not get as much as some mill workers. So long as the statement is qualified with "some" it probably is correct. If it is the people who support the churches should blush in shame.

No one doubts the great good a minister can bring to a community. That good is measured by the bigness of the minister and his bigness ought to be measured by the salary he receives. People who support the churches—everyone ought to help support them, for it would be a sad community if there were no churches—should be mere generous, even if it were from a selfish standpoint. A man in his own business would not hire a $1500 man if it was going to grow faster with a $3000 man on the job.

We quite agree with Mr. Coultas, and sincerely hope his agitation may bring about the raising of the salaries of pastors in and around Brockton.—Brockton Enterprise.

—Colorado voters are to pass upon a plan proposed by Judge Lindsay of Denver for compelling labor from men who fail to support their families. The bill in question provides that workhouses shall be established in counties of 20,000 or more population, in which the shirkers and idlers shall be put to work, and the money derived from their labor used for the support of their wives and children. Massachusetts has a law that, although it isn't exactly like the one proposed by Judge Lindsay, is similar. In this state 50 cents a day for the labor of a prisoner is paid his family by the counties.—Brockton Enterprise.

VEGETABLES, ETC. TO BE WEIGHED

Under New Law, Use of Dry Measure is to be Curtailed

IN EFFECT APRIL 13

On and after April 13, housewives instead of buying the family supplies by the peck or bushel will have to buy by the pound. According to a new law passed this year which goes into effect on the above date vegetables, nuts, fruits, etc. must be sold by the pound or by numerical count. The law is to be strictly enforced by the sealer of weights and measures departments of the state.

At the present time there are upwards of 50,000 dry measures in use in the state which will have to be discarded and scales substituted. To provide for the change it is estimated that 10,000 new scales will be necessary to supply the peddlers and stores.

Instead of asking your grocer for a peck of apples or a quart of beans, etc. you will say "Give me a half pound of beans" or "Two pounds of apples" The weights of the several commodoties as fixed by the new law are as follows: The number of pounds given, corresponding to what was known as a bushel.

Commodity	Pounds
Parsley	8
Dandelions	12
Kale	12
Spinach	12
Beet Greens	12
Roasted Peanuts	20
Green Peanuts	22
String Beans	24

Carrots	50
Onions	52
Sweet Potatoes	54
Turnips	55

The new law which is an amendment to Chapter 57 of the revised laws reads as follows:—

"Chapter 57 of the Revised Laws is hereby amended by striking out Section 21 and inserting in place thereof the following:

"Section 21. All fruits, vegetables and nuts, except as hereinafter otherwise provided, shall be sold at retail by dry measure, weight or by numerical count, and all fruits and vegetables for which a legal weight has been established shall be sold at retail only by weight or numerical count. Whoever violates any provision of this section shall forfeit a sum not exceeding $10 for each offense."

The standard of bushel weight of certain commodites are included in the following new act:

"Section 1. Section 4 of Chapter 62 of the Revised Laws, as amended by Chapter 297 of the Acts of the year of 1910 is hereby further amended by striking out the word 'and,' in the last line, and by adding at the end thereof the words: of string beans, 24 pounds; of shell beans, 28 pounds; of unshelled green peas, 28 pounds, of dandelions, 12 pounds; of spinach, 12 pounds; of beet greens, 12 pounds; of kale, 12 pounds, and of parsley, eight pounds—so as to read as follows:

"Section 4. The bushel of wheat shall contain 60 pounds; of Indian corn or of rye, 56 pounds; of barley, 48 pounds; of oats, 32 pounds; of corn meal, 50 pounds; of rye meal, 50 pounds; of peas, 60 pounds; of soy beans (glycerine hispida) 18 pounds; of potatoes, 60 pounds; of apples, 48 pounds; of carrots, 50 pounds; of onions, 52 pounds; of clover seed, 60 pounds; of herdsgrass or timothy seed, 45 pounds; of Japanese barnyard millet (panicum crusgalli), 35 pounds; of bean and shorts, 20 pounds; of flaxseed, 55 pounds; of coarse salt, 70 pounds; of fine salt, 50 pounds; of lime, 70 pounds; of sweet potatoes, 54 pounds; of beans, 60 pounds; of dried apples, 25 pounds; of dried peaches, 33 pounds; of rough rice, 25 pounds; of peaches, 48 pounds; of tomatoes, 56 pounds; of sea island cotton seed, 44 pounds; of buckwheat, 48 pounds; of beets, 60 pounds; of upland cotton seed, 30 pounds; of cranberries, 32 pounds; of pears, 58 pounds; of parsnips, 45 pounds; of roasted peanuts, 20 pounds; of peaches 48 pounds; of tomatoes, 56 pounds; of turnips, 55 pounds; of quinces, 48 pounds; of string beans, 24 pounds; of green peanuts, 22 pounds; of shell beans, 28 pounds; of unshelled green peas, 28 pounds; of dandelions, 12 pounds; of spinach, 12 pounds; of beet greens, 12 pounds; of kale, 12 pounds, and of parsley, eight pounds.

BARNES FORCES ARE IN CONTROL

Carry War Direct to Roosevelt In New York State

CONVENTION IS IN SESSION

Recall of Judges Denounced In Platform—Attitude of State Republican Organization Plainly Placed Before the Country—Warm Indorsement of Taft Policies—Boom For Renomination of Sherman For Vice President

Rochester, N. Y., April 9.—Plans for the platform to be adopted at the state Republican convention here today carry the war directly to Mr. Roosevelt and his followers. They denounce in unmistakable terms the recall of judges, saying such legislation would put the "judiciary at the mercy of the mob" and compel "every jurist of repute to leave the bench to preserve his self-respect."

The followers of William Barnes, Jr., the state chairman, who are in control, made it plain that they are certain this plank, "and others fully as conservative," will be adopted as outlining the issues of the campaign. They say they do not care whether the delegates-at-large are instructed for President Taft or not, but what they do intend to do is to place the attitude of the New York Republican organization before the country in unmistakable terms.

The Taft policies are to be warmly indorsed also. Workingmen's compensation will be advocated in a plank couched in general terms. The Sherman anti-trust law, as a Republican measure, will be praised, and declaration made that it is not the belief of the Republicans of New York that it should be interfered with. Judicial reform will also be advocated. An appeal for reform in the financial administration of the government of the nation at large will also be made.

The convention met at noon today, with Dr. Nicholas M. Butler, president of Columbia university, as temporary and permanent chairman.

A boom for the renomination of James S. Sherman for vice president made itself felt here when a delegation from Utica arrived on the "Sunny Jim special."

DENOUNCES OLD FRIENDS

La Follette Says They Pervert Facts In Explaining Desertions

Lincoln, Neb., April 9.—In a lengthy statement made public here Senator La Follette says:

"The attempt of my former supporters to justify their desertion of my candidacy by making Walter Houser their scapegoat is a cowardly perversion of fact. They know that no one had authority to withdraw me as a candidate. They know one and all that I persistently refused to withdraw in favor of Roosevelt.

"They furthermore know that I refused to permit Roosevelt's candidacy to be coupled with mine.

"Pinchot and others, who professed to be my supporters, but who in fact were supporters of Roosevelt, became very insistent just as soon as my candidacy began to show promising strength that Roosevelt's name should be joined with mine in resolutions of indorsement. This was when he was still protesting that he was not a candidate. I refused to consent.

"Pinchot thereafter called conferences of my supporters to meet at the headquarters in Washington and sought to force me into such a combination, but they failed."

ASSAILS TAFT MANAGER

Roosevelt Names Some of the "Bosses" Who Are Supporting Taft

Clinton, Ills., April 9.—Mr. Roosevelt launched into a scathing attack upon the Taft forces, taking in all the "boss" politicians in his speech here.

"I was interested when I again noticed that poor Congressman McKinley had groaned because Mr. Taft was not a politician," said Roosevelt. "Well, Mr. McKinley has tried to supply that want. Penrose, Guggenheim, Gallinger, Lorimer, Cox, Tawney—they are all backing Mr. Taft, together with Mr. McKinley. I don't think Mr. McKinley need groan very much for lack of politicians."

Discussing Lorimer he said: "I wish to register as emphatic a protest as I am capable of against the infamy of Lorimer using Lincoln's name as a mask for himself."

Crucial Day For Roosevelt Cause

Chicago, April 9.—Illinois holds its three primaries today, and the result of the vote will have much to do with the Roosevelt cause. Should Roosevelt carry the state the direct preference of voters as shown there will boom him, while a reversal would be a blow from which he would have hard work recovering.

Italy's Big Order For Cannon

Paris, April 9.—The Montlucon gun factory has received an order from the Italian government for ninety-three batteries of quick-firing guns. There will be 558 cannon in the consignment and the cost is figured at $1,600,000.

TO CHECK INFANT DEATH

Bottle-Fed Babies to Be Given Special Attention at Boston

Boston, April 9.—Plans for conducting a systematic crusade to check infant mortality in this city were formulated at a conference which Mayor Fitzgerald held with the health commissioners.

The mayor instructed the health board to transfer three nurses from the contagious diseases work to join with two other nurses in visiting the homes of all infants for the purpose of advising the mothers in regard to feeding the babies from bottles.

Figures in the local board show that the greatest mortality is among bottle-feeding babies. According to those figures, 80 percent of the deaths of children in summer are bottle-fed babies.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING

An Education That Fits for Profitable Employment

INSTRUCTIVE LECTURES

At the monthly meeting of the Wollaston Parents' and Teachers' Association Monday evening members of the association of the Massachusetts Fields school were guests.

Two instructive lectures on vocational training were delivered. One on "Vocational Education" by F. V. Thompson assistant superintendent of the Boston public schools. The other by Albert L. Barbour told what the city of Quincy intends to do along this line the coming year.

The evening opened with vocal solos by Mrs. James Perkins, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Mary Chandler West. In the absence of the president and vice president, the principal, David H. Goodspeed presided.

Following the secretary's report by Mrs. Barstow, Frank A. Page was appointed to fill the vacancy on the Art Committee caused by the resignation of Frank P. Waterhouse.

A nominating committee was elected consisting of Mrs. O. A. Blaisdell, Mrs. Charles B. Hall, Mrs. Alfred H. Richards, Mrs. Frank Perry and J. Arthur Favreau.

A communication was received from the Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters requesting the association to change its night of meeting as it conflicted with that of the Circle. The matter was laid on the table.

It was voted by the association that the City Council be petitioned to grant the old Wollaston school lot as a public park and playground for Ward Five.

"The term vocational education," said Mr. Thompson, "is a large one and suggests many things. It is as large as the nation, as the government, as civilization itself.

"Vocational education is not a fad. While it may do the unwise thing at first it has a worthy motive, which in reality is democracy, behind it.

This kind of education is defined on the statute books as that kind of education that fits for profitable employment. It might well be termed any kind of applied education that leads to profitable earning capabilities.

The speaker went on to tell of the new ideas that are coming in. In the past education was for the aristocracy Now it is being founded upon lines of broader democracy.

"The days of great educational personalities are going and facts are coming to take their place. The school systems are being built on a new basis of efficiency."

Mr. Thompson spoke of the manner in which the school authorities and business men are getting together as never before.

The work of the investigating committee of which he was a member, appointed during the term of Governor Douglas was explained.

"It found that 75,000 children from 14 to 16 are in the industries under no educational influence. Of these 75 per cent might be retained in school by their parents. It is not economic necessity but the failure of the school system that sends them forth.

"In Germany each of this class has educational instruction for 6 or 8 hours a week the time being paid for by the employers."

Instances were given to show that vocational schools do not take away from the existing educational institutions but add to the interest of education in general.

The special types of vocational schools in Boston were described by the speaker. At the girls trade school by a year's training the girl may increase her weekly wage from 3 dollars to 6 or 7 dollars. This represents the difference between being self supporting and living a parasitic life on society.

The boys industrial school idea is just beginning in Boston. Education is changing from sentiment to reality. We are going to adopt education to our own industries.

The pre-vocational centres that are being established in Boston for those that school at present holds no interest for were described at length.

Superintendent Barbour told of the specific things that will be aimed at the coming year in Quincy if the expected appropriation for the school department is forthcoming.

. It will take the boys and girls at the three times in their life when they need reaching.

CITY COUNCIL

consider the items suggested to be cut and see if the departments could be run efficiently with the reduced amounts. At the last meeting we heard from several of the department officials and he would like to inquire as to the others. He would like to ask the commissioner if he thought that Bridges and Drains could get along with a cut to which the Commissioner replied that it depended on the amount cut.

Councilman Richards. Can you get along with less than $3,000 for bridges and drains?

Commissioner Tupper—We could take care of some of the bridges but some of the drains would have to be disregarded.

Councilman Richards—What is the condition of the public buildings?

Commissioner Tupper.—Many of them need considerable repairing. Some of the schools need painting, the plastering in some of the engine houses need repairing and there are also some leaks in the school buildings.

Councilman Richards.—Do you think you can possibly do all of the work for less than $10,000?

Commissioner Tupper.—No.

Councilman Richards.—Can you get along on the highways for the amount as cut?

Commissioner Tupper.—The amount of work done on the highways will be governed by the amount of money.

Asked about the repair of the highways the Commissioner said that his plan had been to repair the main thoroughfares and do some work on the side streets. The main streets to be fixed were those connecting the different centres of the city.

Councilman Richards.—Is it not a fact that if the amount was cut $5,000 you can not take care of the highways?

Commissioner Tupper.—At least one of them will have to be cut out.

Councilman Richards then asked the Chief of Police if he considered the amount named in the order was more than required and the Chief replied no.

Councilman Richards.—Could you run the department as efficiently with a cut of $500 as with a larger amount?

Chief Burrell.—No.

Ward Whitcher of the library board was then asked as to the amounts for that department. He said that his department could not be run as efficiently with a cut of $1,000. He then went on to explain how his department had made up its budget. It needed more money for books as there were many books the library should have that it could not now purchase. Then more money was needed for rebinding, etc. and it had been planned to open a branch library.

Councilman Richards, continuing said it was fair to presume that the Mayor had considered these items the only ones he could cut. The day of theory had passed and we are now up against a condition. The Finance Committee did some cutting. The committee was made up of fairly intelligent men and average taxpayers. If we must have a high tax rate we will have to pay it. We are up against a condition but he did not think the way to remedy it was to cripple the efficiency of the departments. He hoped the budget would be sustained.

Councilman Cunningham also argued at length in favor of sustaining the budget. Last year the Board of Health expended $13,000 for contagious diseases. Suppose we cut it $5,000 this year and we have another epidemic later in the season. It will require the larger part of the amount mentioned for tuberculosis cases. What will you do then for the balance of the year? The City Engineer says that he did not think he could get along with a cut of $25. The library needs the $1,000 to get along with and establish a branch library. Last year $5,000 was expended on bridges, etc. We now offer them $3,000. It cost $9,024 for the care of public buildings. We gave them $10,000 and it is proposed to cut off $1,000. Last year the highway department had $29,000. This year we gave them $33,000 and now you propose to cut off $5,000 which will make the amount less than last year. When a request was made for additional police in a certain section the Mayor said that the appropriation was not sufficient yet it is proposed to make a cut of $500.

It is true that we must get down to business but what is the use of trying to run for a sum we know will not be sufficient? Have you been shown where the slighest saving can be made?

Councilman Craig believed as did the Finance Committee but if the Mayor believes he can save this money he should be given an opportunity.

Mayor Stone addressing the council said, I want to ask you in all fairness if you were runing a business enterprise and found you were expending too much money, what you would do? The first thing you would do would be to cut the running expenses. That is just what I am trying to do. I have had fully as much experience in conducting business as either of the councilmen who have spoken and that is what any firm would do. Cut expenses.

Our valuation last year was $34,000,0000 and we lost $2,000,000 by one family moving from the city. He hoped that the advisory board would increase the valuation $4,000,000. A tax rate of $22.50 is almost prohibitive. It is good business judgment to cut even if we have to come back later in the year for some of the departments. Do one of you believe if the police department is cut $500 its efficiency will be crippled? Will not the department do as much work as last year? Is it not better business to try and save a few dollars?

The Board of Health can never tell how much it will need, but it is good business to take a chance that it can get along with less. It the gentleman from Ward Six had as much experience as I have had in business he would know the first thing to do was to cut expenses. He believed with his efficient heads of departments this year a saving of $12,000 could be made. Let us try and live within our income. He wanted to see all departments get all the money possible but we must curtail.

Councilman Cunningham again arguing for the budget as passed said that with all the cuts recommended there would be but a saving of thirty cents in the tax rate and for this sum the Mayor proposes to cripple the departments of the city. And the departments that can least stand it.

Councilman Abele said that at first he had been inclined to favor the budget as passed. He believed a great deal of the trouble had been with the inefficiency of the departments. The special committee on financial investigation felt satisfied that a great deal of money had been wasted in other years. If we can be given a fair assurance that the departments will live within the appropriation it is worth while looking into. He was satisfied from what had already been done in one department that the present officials were efficient. He was willing to give them a trial.

Councilman Richards then asked Councilman Abele several questions and again spoke in favor of the budget as passed.

The vote on passing the order notwithstanding the objections of the Mayor was then taken by roll call and as stated above the council refused to pass the order over the veto, 4 voting yes and 16 no as follows:

Yes—Cunningham, Richards, C. A. Ross, Sandberg—4.

No—Abele, Bailey, Barker, Beeman, Boyd, Carruthers, Craig, Devaney, Forde, Gauthier, Gilliatt, Mahoney, Murray, J. R. S. Ross, Studley, Thompson—16.

Absent—Ericson, Sodergren—2.

Not voting—President Hobbs.

Under the second matter in the call Councilman Studley offered a new appropriation order which was referred to the Finance Committtee with instructions to report at the next meeting.

The new budget as offered by Councilman Studley proposes the following cuts from the amounts mentioned in the order as passed:

Mayor's Miscellaneous,	$500
Scavenger Dept.	500
Contagious diseases,	3,000
City Engineer,	200
Public Library	500
Care Public Buildings,	2,000
Highways,	6,000
Special police	500
	$13,200

Another change is the increasing of the pay of permanent men of the fire department $1,536 which makes a net cut of the budget of $11,664.

TRICKS IN THE AIR

Performance of Rodgers Responsible For His Death, Says Brookins

New York, April 6.—Walter R. Brookins arrived in New York from Florida and expressed deep regret over the death of Calbraith P. Rodgers, the aviator who fell at Long Beach, Cal.

He blamed the accident on the attempt to perform tricks in the air. "If a man would stick to legitimate flying," said Brookins, "I think that there is no more danger in the air than in an automobile. But it is the desire to do aerial glides and dips that causes most of the fatalities."

PRINCE LOSES HIS APPEAL

Must Pay $20,000 For Jewelry He Bought When He Married

Washington, April 9.—Prince de Bearn, nobleman of France, lost his appeal to the supreme court of the United States from decisions adverse to him in the Maryland courts, brought by his three brothers and a Paris jeweler, Jean B. Chaumet. The court held it had no jurisdiction over the litigation.

The suit against the prince grew out of claims for money. The jeweler claimed $20,000 for jewelry sold to the prince upon the event of his marriage to Miss Winans of Baltimore in 1906. The jewelry was a wedding gift to his wife.

The Man Who Buys a Gold Brick

Naturally Feels Guilty

We'll wager that there are dozens of men in this community who have paid out good money for bad clothes — for clothes that they didn't wear, because they couldn't. These men feel "guilty" to think they let a clothier "put one over them." Don't ever place yourself in a position in which you are going to feel "guilty." Purchase your clothes from a clothier you have confidence in, and one whom you know sells clothes that he has all confidence in. I have unbounded confidence in the clothes I sell.

VESSEL DOOMED TO DESTRUCTION

Flames Gaining Great Headway on the Steamer Ontario

GREAT DISPLAY OF HEROISM

Engineer, Wireless Operator and Crew Hesitate Not a Moment In Performing Duty Fire Drill Had Taught—Passengers Are Safely Removed to Shore—Fire Starts Near Midnight and Spreads With Great Rapidity

Montauk Point, L. I., April 9.—Bright as the flames bursting through the forward deck of the Merchants and Miners' line steamship Ontario, lying like a stricken thing on a jagged reef off Montauk light, is the glory of First Engineer Disney, Wireless Operator Ingalls, Captain Bond and others of the gallant crew, who stuck at their posts in the choking smoke and blistering heat until all the thirty-two passengers had been rescued, and after.

"Women first," was the order of the skipper, and like heroes his crew to a man obeyed the command.

In striking contrast to the conduct of the officers and crew of the ill-fated Joy line steamer Larchmont, which went down five years ago in a fearful blizzard off Block island with all the 300 souls aboard, save a scant nineteen, was the behavior of the Ontario's men.

Ingalls, the wireless operator, rigged his instruments on the after quarter of the ship and was again in communication with the wireless stations along the coast.

Though faces flanched when the awful discovery was made, soon after midnight, that the Ontario's forward hold was in flames, not a man of them hesitated in performing the duty the steamship's fire drill had taught.

With outward confidence they were far from feeling the officers, stewards and seamen went among the panic-stricken passengers, calmly seeing that all were warmly clothed and provided with life-belts, meanwhile rushing their preparations to fight the raging menace below the blistering deck.

For miles north and south along the Atlantic seaboard revenue cutters and tugs were brought speeding through the darkness and storm by the mysterious "S. O. S." distress call of the wireless to succor the burning ship.

And until the billows of smoke from the blazing hold blinded and almost stifled him, and the heat of the fire scorched his clothing, Ingalls, the boy operator, clung to his key so that the craft coming to the rescue would know the Ontario's location.

The tug Tasco arrived first from New London, and as soon as the sea had moderated sufficiently to make the transfer safe, the thirty-two passengers, including Captain Bond's wife, were taken off in small boats. Ten of the passengers were in the steerage.

But Bond and his crew refused to desert their posts. All day they fought the fire. It appears to be slowly gaining and the lifesavers here believe the Ontario is doomed.

The owners of the Ontario have no criticism to make of Bond's action in beaching his vessel. They say it was the only proper course to save the passengers.

The breeches buoy, sent aboard early by the Montauk and Hither Beach lifesavers, may have to be utilized soon to take the Ontario's men off the ship.

Flames are bursting through the deck forward. The Ontario lies so far up on the reef, about fifty yards off shore, that the revenue cutters and the wrecking tug Harriet from New York, cannot get close enough to aid effectually in fighting the fire.

The Ontario was running at fourteen miles an hour when she struck, and Captain Goodale of the Harriet said her hull must be badly stove in. The paint on the steel plates of the vessel's sides is curling off in flakes from the terrific heat or the cotton bales blazing in the forward hold.

A lighter has been placed alongside and the whiskey, resin, turpentine and other inflammable material in the after hold is being jettisoned.

The life crew from Watch Hill is lying off the burning ship in their power boat, waiting to take off the crew in case it becomes necessary.

The fire was discovered shortly after midnight when the ship was about ten miles off Shinnecook on her way from Baltimore to Boston. The flames spread with great rapidity.

When the ship struck, shortly after 3 a. m., the fire had eaten its way through the forward deck to the pilot house and the dynamos of the wireless apparatus. Captain Bond and First Officer Harding were nearly suffocated by the smoke. The steam steering gear was damaged and they had steer by hand. Finally, at the verge of unconsciousness, they lashed the wheel and staggered aft a moment before the keel crashed onto the reef.

The Ontario is lying about three miles east of Ditch Plain station.

SENATOR USES HIS FISTS.

Flares Up When Elevator Boy Refuses to Make Special Trip

Washington, April 9.—In the Ebbitt House, Senator Marcus A. Smith of Arizona pummeled an elevator boy because he thought he was insulted. The senator pushed a button summoning the elevator, but the boy, following the rules of the house, went right up past his floor with other passengers.

When the elevator boy stopped for the senator on the way down the latter made a rush for him, struck him in the face with his fist, and knocked him down. A bridal couple was in the elevator at the time. The bride fainted.

Delay Report Relative to Magdalena Bay Matter

Washington, April 9.—Friction between Senator Lodge and the state department was evidenced when it was learned that the information relative to Magdalena bay, called for last week by Lodge, would be delayed for perhaps a week.

The reason for this unexpected development is, it is claimed by some, that the state department at first intends to send merely a summary of the documents which it holds, and that when Lodge insisted that the documents themselves should be transmitted the department began to spar for time.

Another explanation is that the state department has been caught napping and has no information of any value—that Lodge is, in fact, better posted about the mechinations of the land company and the Japanese government than are the professional diplomats of the diplomatic service.

LANGFORD BEATS M'VEY

Wins Hard Fought Battle of Twenty Rounds at Sydney

Sydney, N. S. W., April 9.—Sam Langford, the American heavyweight, defeated Sam McVey of California, in a twenty-round fight on points.

Langford and McVey fought in the stadium before 15,000 spectators, and after a hard contest, in which honors were fairly even until the last few rounds, Langford succeeded in reversing his defeat by McVey on Dec. 26 last. The betting was 10 to 9 on McVey.

The spectators cheered the refereree's decision and were obviously delighted at what they considered a nard and fairly fought battle.

Real Estate Men's Greater Boston Bill Goes to Legislature

Boston, April 9.—Governor Foss sent a message to the legislature, transmitting with it the "Greater Boston" bill of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange. The governor approves the bill as far as it goes.

"Personally," the governor says in his message, "I advocate the actual political union of all the cities and towns about Boston into a Greater Boston. This bill goes far short of that, but it is a step in the right direction, which I believe is justified by the current needs."

Sugar Continues to Drop

New York, April 9.—All grades of refined sugar were reduced 5 cents 100 pounds yesterday.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FRESH FRUIT SHERBETS.

SHERBETS make nice desserts for the special luncheon or dinner. They look so pretty and taste so delicious that a sherbet is just the dainty to finish off the Easter feast.

Some persons boil the sugar and water to a sirup and then add the fruit juice. A tablespoonful of gelatin soaked and dissolved adds to the smoothness of the sherbet. So does the white of an egg added after the sherbet has been frozen.

Sherbets may be made with the juices from canned fruits or with fruit sirup.

With Timely Fruits.

Cranberry Sherbet.—Wash and pick a quart of cranberries. Put into a saucepan with three cupfuls of boiling water and boil five minutes. Mash and boil ten minutes without a cover, then add three cupfuls of sugar and boil five minutes.

Strain, cool and freeze the same as ice cream. After churning ten minutes add the whites of two eggs beaten until stiff, then churn five minutes.

Pack the freezer with alternate layers of ice and salt, two parts ice and one part salt. Serve in ice cream or sherbet cups.

Pineapple Sherbet.—Take a pint of grated pineapple, a pint of sugar, one and a half pints of water. Boil sugar and water until sugar is thoroughly dissolved.

When cool add grated pineapple and juice of two lemons; freeze fast. When partly frozen add beaten whites of two eggs, mix thoroughly, take out dasher, pack and let stand for an hour or more.

Freezing fast makes it light.

With Grapes and Flowers.

Grape Sherbet.—This sherbet may be made with malaga grapes or, better still, with grape juice. Boil two cupfuls of sugar with the grated rind of one lemon and two cupfuls water for five minutes. Soak half a tablespoonful of gelatin in a fourth of a cupful of cold water and pour over it the boiling sugar.

Add a cupful of grape juice and the juice of two lemons. Strain and freeze, adding the beaten white of an egg when the mixture is of the consistency of mush.

Violet Sherbet.—Boil together for five minutes a pound of sugar and a pint of water; add the juice of two lemons. When icy cold add a pint of grape juice and freeze. When frozen stir in a meringue made from the white of an egg and a tablespoonful of powdered sugar and repack. Let this stand one or two hours. Serve in punch or wine glasses garnished with fresh violets or with candied violets.

EASTER CAKES.

ANGEL food or angel cake is appropriate for Easter. It is a cake that every one likes.

When the angel cake rises above the top of the pan the oven must be made hotter. When done it will fall back to the level of the pan when it may be taken from the stove. You may turn the pan upside down and let the cake cool. Then loosen with a knife and take out of the pan.

Reliable Recipes.

Angel Cake.—Sift a cupful of flour, mix with a teaspoonful of cream of tartar and sift several times. Take the whites of ten eggs and beat until stiff.

Add to the eggs ten ounces of granulated sugar and a teaspoonful of extract of vanilla.

Beat again. Now stir the flour in with the eggs to make a batter. This must be done quickly and deftly.

Take a cake pan having a funnel, cover the funnel and bottom of the pan with paper, pour in the mixture and bake about forty minutes.

Take out of the oven, loosen the cake and remove from the pan.

Rich Angel Cake.—Take one cupful of flour to one cupful and one tablespoonful of sugar, add one teaspoonful of cream of tartar and a pinch of salt. Put all in a sieve and sift six times.

Beat the whites of twelve eggs very stiff. Slip the eggs off the platter into the mixing bowl, lightly stir in the sifted ingredients, adding one teaspoonful vanilla. Pour into an ungreased pan with a funnel. Do not let it stand after it is thoroughly mixed.

Bake Carefully.

Bake fifty or sixty minutes in a slow oven. Do not open the oven door until the cake has been in twenty minutes.

Do not jar the floor while cake is baking. When baked turn upside down until cold or until cake falls out.

This recipe calls for fewer eggs and is therefore a less expensive cake:

Plain Angel Cake.—Beat the whites of four eggs very stiff and add half a cupful of sugar, one and a half cupfuls of pastry flour, sifted several times to make it lighter; a little salt, a teaspoonful of vanilla, half a teaspoonful of cream of tartar.

Don't grease the tin, but when the cake is done stand tin on two dishes upside down until it falls out. Put a towel or soft cloth under it to drop on and turn it right side up at once.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barony. The place is to be sold, and the history and that of the owners, the Quintards, is the subject of discussion by Jonathan Crenshaw, a business man, a stranger known as Bladen, and Bob Yancy, a farmer, when Hannibal Wayne Hazard, a mysterious child of the old southern family, makes his appearance. (Continued from last issue)

Ten or fifteen minutes elapsed. Mahaffy considered this a good sign; it didn't take long to say no, he reflected. Another ten or fifteen elapsed Mahaffy lost heart. Then there came a hasty step beyond the door, it was thrown violently open, and the judge precipitated himself into the room. A glance showed Mahaffy that he was laboring under intense excitement.

"Solomon, I bring shocking news. God knows what the next few hours may reveal!" cried the judge, mopping his brow. "Miss Malroy his disappeared from Belle Plain, and Hannibal has gone with her!"

"Where have they gone?" asked Mahaffy, and his long jaw dropped.

"Would to God I had an answer ready for that question, Solomon!" answered the judge, with a melancholy shake of the head. He gazed down on his friend with an air of large tolerance. "I am going to Belle Plain, but you are too drunk. Sleep it off, Solomon, and join me when your brain is clear and your legs steady."

Mahaffy jerked out an oath, and lifting himself off his chair, stood erect. He snatched up his hat.

"Stuff your pistols into your pockets, and come on, Price!" he said, and stalked toward the door.

He flitted up the street, and the judge puffed and panted in his wake. They gained the edge of the village without speech.

"There is mystery and rascality here!" said the judge.

"What do you know, Price, and where did you hear this?" Mahaffy shot the question back over his shoulder.

"At Pegloe's; the Belle Plain overseer had just fetched the news into town."

Again they were silent, all their energies being absorbed by the physical exertion they were making. The road danced before their burning eyes, it seemed to be uncoiling itself serpent-wise with hideous undulations. Mr. Mahaffy was conscious that the judge, of whom he caught a blurred vision now at his right side, now at his left, was laboring painfully in the heat and dust, the breath whistling from between his parched lips.

"You're just ripe for apoplexy, Price!" he snarled, moderating his pace.

"Go on," said the judge, with stolid resolution.

Two miles out of the village they came to a roadside spring; here they paused for an instant. Mahaffy scooped up handfuls of the clear water and sucked it greedily. The judge dropped on his stomach and buried his face in the tiny pool, gulping up great thirsty swallows. After a long breathless instant he stood erect, with drops of moisture clinging to his nose and eyebrows. Mahaffy was a dozen paces down the road, hurrying forward again with relentless vigor. The judge shuffled after him. The tracks they left in the dust crossed and re-crossed the road, but presently the slanting lines of their advance straightened, the judge gained and held a fixed place at Mahaffy's right, a step or so in the rear. His opulent fancy began to deal with the situation.

"If anything happens to the child, the man responsible for it would better never been born—I'll pursue him with undiminished energy from this moment forth!" he panted.

"What could happen to him, Price?" asked Mahaffy.

"God knows, poor little lad!"

"Will you shut up!" cried Mahaffy savagely.

"Solomon!"

"Why do you go building on that idea? Why should any one harm him—what earthly purpose—"

"I tell you, Solomon, we are the pivotal point in a vast circle of crime. This is a blow at me—this is revenge sir, neither more nor less! They have struck at me through the boy, it is as plain as day."

"What did the overseer say?"

"Just that they found Miss Malroy gone from Belle Plain this morning and the boy with her."

"This is like you, Price! How do you know they haven't spent the night at some neighbor's?"

"The nearest neighbor is five or six miles distant. Miss Malroy and Hannibal were seen along about dusk in the grounds at Belle Plain; do you mean to tell me you consider it likely that they set out on foot at that hour and without a word to any one, to make a visit?" inquired the judge; but Mahaffy did not contend for this point.

"What are you going to do first Price?"

"Have a look over the grounds, and talk with the slaves."

"Where's the brother—wasn't he at Belle Plain last night?"

"It seems he went to Memphis yesterday."

They plodded forward in silence; now and again they were passed by some man on horseback whose destination was the same as their own, and then at last they caught sight of Belle Plain in its grove of trees.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Judge Takes Charge.

All work on the plantation had stopped, and the hundreds of slaves—men, women and children—were gathered about the house. Among these moved the members of the dominant race. The judge would have attached himself to the first group, but he heard a whispered question, and the answer:

"Miss Malroy's lawyer."

Clearly it was not for him to mix with these outsiders, these curiosity seekers. He crossed the lawn to the house, and mounted the steps. In the doorway was big Steve, while groups of men stood about in the hall, the hum of busy purposeless talk pervading the place. The judge frowned. This was all wrong.

"Has Mr. Ware returned from Memphis?" he asked of Steve.

"No, sah; not yet."

"Then show me into the library," said the judge with bland authority, surrendering his hat to the butler. "Come along, Mahaffy!" he added. They entered the library, and the judge motioned Steve to close the door. "Now, boy, you'll kindly ask those people to withdraw—you may say it is Judge Price's orders. Allow no one to enter the house unless they have business with me, or as I send for them—you understand? After you have cleared the house, you may bring me a decanter of corn whisky—stop a bit—you may ask the sheriff to step here."

"Yes, sah." And Steve withdrew.

The judge drew an easy-chair up to the flat-topped desk that stood in the center of the room, and seated himself.

"Are you going to make this the excuse for another drunk, Price? If so, I feel the greatest contempt for you," said Mahaffy sternly.

The judge winced at this.

"You have made a regrettable choice of words, Solomon," he urged gently.

"Where's your feeling for the boy?"

"Here!" said the judge, with an eloquent gesture, resting his hand on his heart.

"If you let whisky alone, I'll believe you; otherwise what I have said must stand."

The door opened, and the sheriff slouched into the room. He was chewing a long wheat straw, and his whole appearance was one of troubled weakness.

"Morning," he said briefly.

"Sit down, sheriff," and the judge indicated a meek seat for the official in a distant corner. "Have you learned anything?" he asked.

The sheriff shook his head.

"What you turning all these neighbors out of doors for?" he questioned

"We don't want people tracking in and out the house, sheriff. Important evidence may be destroyed. I propose examining the slaves first—does that meet with your approval?"

"Oh, I've talked with them; they don't know nothing," said the sheriff. "No one don't know nothing."

"Please God, we may yet put our fingers on some villain who does," said the judge.

Outside it was noised about that Judge Price had taken matters in hand—he was the old fellow who had been warned to keep his mouth shut, and who had never stopped talking since. A crowd collected beyond the library windows and feasted its eyes on the back of this hero's bald head.

One by one the house servants were ushered into the judge's presence. First he interrogated little Steve, who had gone to Miss Betty's door that morning to rouse her, as was his custom. Next he examined Betty's maid; then the cook, and various house servants, who had nothing especial to tell, but told it at considerable length; and lastly big Steve.

"Stop a bit," the judge suddenly interrupted the butler in the midst of his narrative. "Does the overseer always come up to the house the first thing in the morning?"

"Why, not exactly, sah, but he come up this mo'ning, sah. He was talking to me at the back of the house, when the women run out with the word that Missy was done gone away."

"He joined in the search?"

"Yes, sah."

"When was Miss Malroy seen last?" asked the judge.

"She and the young gemman you fotched heah were seen in the gyarden along about sundown. I seen them myself."

"They had had supper?"

"Yes, sah."

"Who sleeps here?"

"Just little Steve and three of the women; they sleeps at the back of the house, sah."

"No sounds were heard during the night?"

"No, sah."

"I'll see the overseer—what's his name?—Hicks? Suppose you go for him!" said the judge, addressing the sheriff.

LONG VIGIL FOR NOTHING

Campers Before Door of Land Office Meet With Disappointment

Washington, April 8.—Land seekers who have stood in line in the North Yakima, Wash., land office since January, awaiting the opportunity to file for irrigated fruit farms in the Tieton project have had their long vigil in vain.

The reclamation service has announced that no advantage will be gained by early filing. According to the announcement, all of the forty farms in the third unit at Tieton, soon to be thrown open, will be disposed of by lot.

Places in the line at the North Yakima land office had been considered worth from $2000 to $3000 each, because heretofore the first man who filed had choice of the homestead lands.

Men brought reclining chairs into the corridor, had their meals served to them and have been holding their places, either personally or by proxy, since about New Year's day.

CANNOT STAND ANY MORE

Man Sentenced to Whipping Post Escapes Part of Punishment

Wilmington, Del., April 6.—Because it was believed certain that if the additional lashes were inflicted the demand that the whipping post be abolished would be so strong that it would have to be heeded, the board of pardons remitted the thirty lashes which were to be given Charles B. Wright.

A month ago Wright was lashed almost into unconsciousness, being given the first forty of a seventy-lash sentence. When taken into the jail his back was scored so that scars will remain permanently.

MINERS ARE IN HOPEFUL MOOD

Prepared to Meet Anthracite Operators Half Way

CONCESSIONS LOOKED FOR

May Be Hitch Over Recognition of United Mine Workers' Organization—Suspension of Mining Is Complete, but Hard Coal Territory Is Unusually Quiet—Week's Loss of More Than Eight Million Dollars

Philadelphia, April 9.—The district presidents and secretaries who, with J. P. White, national president of the United Mine Workers, comprise the committee which will have a further conference with the anthracite operators here tomorrow in an endeavor to adopt a new wage agreement, met here today to put in shape their arguments for presentation at the conference.

The officers at the district headquarters in Scranton, Hazleton and Shamokin are in a hopeful mood and expect an amicable settlement will be reached. They look for come concessions from the operators and are prepared to meet them half way.

The entire hard coal industry remains as completely tied up as it was last week. None of the coal companies expect to make a move until after the conference on Wednesday. If concessions are made it is expected a series of meetings will have to be held to come to a final agreement.

One hundred and seventy-five thousand anthracite mine workers and numberless thousands of other interested persons hope that the conference will result in a new agreement and speedily end the suspension of mining that was begun on the first of April. The eagerness shown by both sides to meet again and talk over differences has raised the spirit of the miners and they feel that with concessions on both sides there will be little difficulty in reaching a satisfactory working agreement.

When the suspension began there was a strong impression among the men that a compromise increase in wages would be granted them. This would have been satisfactory enough to many of the miners, but during the past week evidence has cropped up that the union officers will insist upon some recognition of the United Mine Workers' organization. If the conference splits on this question, a long suspension and another deadlock or strike is likely.

The entire 500 square miles of hard coal territory, with a population of 1,250,000, has been unusually quiet in view of the large number of idle men and boys. The suspension of mining has been complete, and there has been little occasion for the mine workers to do picket duty. There has been some friction over the employment of men to do temporary repair work in the mines while the suspension is on, but in most cases an amicable arrangement has been reached. The mine workers have looked upon the suspension as a vacation and they are making the best of it.

Despite the fact that the suspension has been in force for a week, and there is no telling how long it will last, business throughout the coal fields is said to have never been better. Thousands of mine workers and their families have come into the towns, either on sightseeing or shopping tours. Newspapers in all the larger towns have reported largely increased business in advertising, a sign of prosperity.

The estimated losses to all directly affected by the week's suspension in the anthracite fields are, according to estimates based on official figures, as follows:

Loss in wages to miners	$2,125,000
Loss to companies in profits	1,350,000
Loss to sellers of supplies	625,000
Loss to railroads on freight	2,375,000
Loss in wages to trainmen	60,000
Loss to retail merchants	200,000
Total	$8,535,000

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The Manager—The only objection I have to this production is that the waits are so long.

Leading Man—Yes; especially for salary.

CHAMPIONSHIP GAMES.

Weather conditions are ideal for the first game of a series of two basket ball games,, between the Quincy A. A. and Quincy Y. M. C. A. second teams, to be played this evening in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy. The game bids fair to be a warm one and a large crowd is expected. Dancing will follow the game.

This Happened on Mars.

Allen—Hello, Duncan, old man! How're things?

Duncan—Pretty good, pretty good. And with you?

Allen—Can't complain particularly. Get a little short of cash sometimes—business is growing fast and I have to pretty near pawn my watch on occasions to keep going. You know how it is; prosperity is sometimes actually a drag on your pocketbook. That's a preliminary to asking you if you've $10 loose that you can let me have until next week Thursday. Got to get the wife a little present for her birthday, and haven't a cent to do it with.

Duncan—Why, sure. More, if you want. And never mind about paying me Thursday; wait until I want some money and come to you.

Allen—Nix. Thursday goes and ten is all. Thanks. So long.

Duncan (Thursday)—Morning, Allen. Great weather.

Allen—All to the good. You're looking fine. Say, here's that ten. Much obliged. Nothing like having friends to help a man once in a while.

Duncan—Oh, you needn't have hurried. I'd clean forgotten about this ten.

Allen—Well, I don't forget the money I owe or what's owed me. Thanks again for your loan. S'long.—Exchange.

—Amundsen incurred a debt of about $18,000 in fitting out his South Pole expedition, and Norway is proposing to pay it, probably by private contributions. Since Norway gets so much prestige from his success this is the least his countrymen could do. And probably they will do a great deal more.

BOY SCOUTS MEETING

An interesting meeting of the Boy Scouts took place in the vestry of the Wollaston Congregational church, Monday evening, the occasion being the first regular visitation of the local council to troop one of Wollaston.

The council consists of Rufus B. Tobey, A. B. Cassidy, Charles A. Randall, Elford L. Durgan and Charles M. Roach. Those of the council who were present were impressed with the work that is being carried on. A number of older people witnessed the exercises of the evening.

The meeting which was in charge of the scoutmaster F. J. Hammel and George W. Brown, opened shortly after seven-thirty with the scout yell which was followed by the scout salute.

Ormond E. Loomis, field secretary and scout commissioner of Greater Boston was present and gave the boys an impressive talk on the Boy Scout movement.

The troop was carefully quizzed by Scoutmaster George W. Brown on the scout oath and law and the sixteen points of the compass. Knot tying and flag signaling by the Continental code were also demonstrated.

Scoutmaster F. J. Hammel put the boys through a course of bandaging and first aid to the injured. Relief for fainting and drowning was shown and improvised splints and slings and bandages for the head were made. This portion of the evening included a lesson in observation by Scoutmaster Hammel.

The meeting was addressed by various members of the council and visitors whose remarks were most encouraging.

The court of honor, consisting of Secretary Loomis, Rufus B. Tobey and Scoutmasters Hammel and Brown awarded certificates to the following scouts who have satisfactorily passed the second class requirements.

Everett Sutermeister, Franklin Seiders, Dorford Bruce, George MacDonald, Allen Stearns, Ronald MacDonald, Gilbert Hamlin, George Cropper, Robert Hamlin, Percy Ela, Thomas Barstow and Sidney Bedwell.

The following boys of Troop Two, under the leadership of Mr. Towne received tenderfoot certificates: Charles Tanner, Jr., Albert Robinson, Herbert Atkins and Charles Morris.

Troop One was organized last October and since that time much interest in it has been manifested both by the boys and their parents. The present enrollment is in the neighborhood of 35.

The scoutmasters are at work on plans for a summer camp in Central Massachusetts, the site of which has been selected near a picturesque lake.

MISS CULLINAN'S LINEN SHOWER

A linen shower was given Miss Catherine Cullinan Monday evening, at the home of her sister Mrs. John Donovan, Watson road, by a number of her friends. Miss Cullinan who is to be married tomorrow evening at St. John's church, was taken completely by surprise. She was the recipient of many congratulations on her coming marriage to Thomas Connelley, one of the most popular young men of the city. Songs, jokes and games were enjoyed and the affair was brought to a close with a repast.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING.

7 years finds himself out of touch with it and hungry to get to work.

For these pre-vocational classes will be established here and there coming to school here will be different. One half the day will be spent in work with the hands the other half in book work.

At the end of two years he will have had a taste of manual processes and can tell whether he wishes to continue at high school or at a vocational school. In case he decides to go to work he can take it up with more interest.

For the boy of 14 who has to go to work the proposition of an industrial school will be made.

"The boy will be taken at 14 and given a full year's preparatory course. Then he will be given a 3 year half time course.

"The boys will work in pairs spending one week in the shop and the next week in school. This will combine the technical side with the practical work to the advantage of the boy."

Mr. Barbour paid a tribute to the apprentice school at Fore River that has in it from 125 to 150 boys and teachers from 16 to 18 trades. This is the best trade school in the country. The fact that there are over 400 boys who wish to join this shows the demand for this kind of education.

"Starting next fall two trades will be taught under the Quincy school system with co-operation of manufactures—those of joiners and machinists.

For the boys who have left school to become journeymen, plumbers, carpenters, granite cutters and the like, evening extension courses will be established as the demand warrants.

"The school department will endeavor to find out the educational needs and meet these as far as possible. The state stands ready to match dollar for dollar that the city expends.

"For the girls in the fifth and sixth grades pre-vocational classes will be established along similar lines with book work half the time, household arts sewing and domestic science the rest.

"This will offer to the girl who cannot go to high school teh same opportunities in these lines as if she did.

"For industrial education in this city, on account of conditions, nothing can be done on the part time scheme for girls. The school department will however call attention to the Boston Trade School for Girls, where it will pay the tuition, and the opportunities in Boston.

"For girls over 18 who have left school evening instruction in household arts and domestic science will be taught in various centres of the city.

"For every group of 15 or 18 girls that can be gathered together they will be taught whatever they wish whether dressmaking, millinery, cooking or science."

This in brief is the program for the school department the coming year. Superintendent Barbour stated that while this was expensive in the gross as it goes on the net expense would be less than in the high school as the state pays one half.

Following questions to the speakers the meeting adjourned for refreshments served by a committee consisting of Mrs. Charles L. Seavey, Mrs. James Falconer, Mrs. George Taylor, Mrs. George A. Murray, Mrs. H. M. Savage, Mrs. J. M. Lewis, Mrs. J. H. Broughton, Mrs. J. A. Favreau, Mrs. A. E. Stephenson and Mrs. Frank Hall.

DIKES EXPECTED TO WITHSTAND FLOODS

Crisis In Mississippi River Situation Is Expected Today

Memphis, April 9.—The crisis in the Mississippi valley's tremendous flood is imminent. Chief anxiety centres in the situation along the river reaches south of Memphis. If the dikes of Arkansas, Mississippi and north Louisiana held for today then the fertile valleys of the delta and the Yazoo south of Memphis will be spared.

State and government officials say the dikes on the eastern bank will withstand the tremendous pressure that will be exerted by the flood's crest.

Unofficial estimates of the damage vary widely. Many persons who know every bend in the great river from New Orleans to Cairo say the pecuniary loss will amount to $10,000,000. Other persons equally conversant with the situation modify this estimate.

The number of fatalities has been small. Prompt warnings have preceded the river's rise and residents of the threatened districts have been more or less alert. Probably thirty fatalities would meet the conservative total.

TIME BRINGS CHANGES

GRANDMOTHER MOURNS; GRANDDAUGHTER IS JOYFUL.

Illustration, Not Much Exaggerated, of the Modern Trend—"Don't Know Where We're Going, but the Going Is Good."

"When John asked permission to pay his addresses to me, father investigated his character very carefully before consenting," said grandmother.

"The first time Reginald called I looked up his father in Bradstreet's before risking any further damage to the drawing room furniture," laughed Geraldine.

"And when John asked me to marry him, I told him I would think it over. A girl didn't throw herself at a man in my day."

"She doesn't now, either. When Reginald asked me, I said I would answer him as soon as my father saw his father and ascertained if he would make the right kind of a settlement on us."

"For months father and mother were the only ones who knew that John and I were engaged. I wouldn't have had anybody know for worlds," said grandmother.

"I sent the notice to the newspapers the next morning after Reginald proposed," acknowledged Geraldine. "It requires a lot more nerve for a man to break an engagement after it has been announced."

"As soon as we became engaged," mused the elder lady, "I set to work hemming towels and table linen. I had already pieced quilts and made comforts in anticipation of the day when I should have a home of my own."

"It's up to Reginald to provide the comforts of home, if we have one—which I hope we shall not. I prefer to live in a hotel," asserted the younger woman emphatically.

"John warned me that his board was seldom more than bacon and corn bread, but I was willing to share it with him."

"I am willing to share Reginald's board as long as he can afford to board where they keep a good chef."

"Sundays," said grandmother, "John saddled old Bess, put the pillion on behind for me, and we rode 20 miles to church."

"I have promised Reginald that he may stay at home and read the Sunday supplements if he will provide a limousine for my church-going."

"I wove the cloth and did all the sewing for myself and my six children," said grandmother.

"Women married, then, to get work," declared Geraldine. "Now they marry so they can quit work."

"Yes," asserted the old lady, "the modern woman toils not, neither does she spin."

"I am acquainted with several who have to toil pretty hard and spin many fairy tales in order to work their husbands for a new gown. If Reginald turns out like that, I'll renovate his ideas or Reno-vate him."

"At the pace we are traveling now I don't know where we shall land," mourned grandmother.

"Neither do I," admitted Geraldine; "but the going is good. Why borrow a tire until you have a blowout?"—Judge.

Undiplomatic Druggist.

South Trimble, clerk of the house of representatives, was talking about diplomacy.

"In a public post," he said, "great diplomacy is needed. The man in a public post must be diplomatic all the time; otherwise he will be treated like the druggist.

"A druggist, late one cold winter night, was awakened by the tinkle of his emergency bell. It was a boy. The druggist slipped on a dressing gown, went shivering downstairs and found the boy wanted two cents' worth of chewing gum.

"'It's like your cheek,' the druggist growled, 'to wake me up at this time of night for a paltry two cents' worth.'

"At this the boy scowled, threw down the gum and pocketed his two cents again.

"'Like my cheek, it is?' he said. 'Then I'll take my custom somewhere else. You can keep your chewing gum. I won't have it now, after your sauce.'

"And he stalked out wrathfully, and the poor druggist went shivering back to bed."

Splendid Stadium Going Up.

The Stadium for the Olympic games of 1912 is now in course of erection at Stockholm, Sweden. The building is erected in hand-made purple bricks and granite. Inside this permanent building extra rows of temporary seats will be arranged for use during the games. The Stadium will then hold about 25,000 spectators. It contains a running track, four laps to the mile, and a grass football ground which in the winter time will be transformed into a skating rink. The gates and arches are vaulted in the old Swedish style. On the brick walls there are blocks of granite inlaid in which a series of Swedish heroes will be sculptured, and the gates to the entrance stairs will be decorated by 18 heathen gods and goddesses.

COULDN'T KEEP AWAKE

Chicago Butcher Says Jury Service Is Only For Thin Men and Bums

Chicago, April 9.—John W. White, a corpulent and strenuous butcher, struggled along for nearly a week trying to be a perfectly good juror in the municipal court, but he failed dismally, because he couldn't keep awake.

Bailiffs stood at his side and nudged him in the ribs. 'Twas like trying to tickle a rhinoceros. Then they kicked his shins, pulled his ears and, grasping firmly, shook him by the shoulders.

"You see, only thin men and bums are meant for jury service," said White. "A man who spends most of his days in an ice box, or a heavyweight who worked strenuously can't stand this program of doing nothing. This warm air just makes a fellow sleepy."

White returned last night to his ice box and he believes he has accumulated enough sleep to last for a month.

MONEY WASHING MACHINES

They Are Expected to Save the Government a Million a Year

Washington, April 9.—The problem of washing and ironing dirty paper money appears to have been solved by some new machines which have been perfected in the government's bureau of engraving and printing. One of these will take a dirty, germ laden piece of currency and turn it out clean and crisp in two minutes, and the other will do the same in three.

These machines are expected to save about $1,000,000 a year for the government, as 60 percent of the paper money now sent to the treasury for redemption can be circulated again by washing it.

CAPTAIN OF CRETIC PUT UNDER ARREST

Charged With Violating the Law as to Immigrants

Boston, April 9.—Captain Raphael Lobez of the White Star liner Cretic, on which twenty-seven stowaways, said to be "Black Hand" men from Italy, were brought to Boston last week, was arrested yesterday afternoon.

There were three counts in the charges against the captain. The first one was that he had carried nineteen more people in the steerage than his papers declared. The second count was that he had failed to keep the married women passengers properly separated from the others. The third charge was that he had failed to keep conspicuously posted a copy of the law about the carrying of passengers in the language that prevailed on the ship.

Captain Lobez was arraigned before Commissioner Hayes. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $1000 bail. The bail was furnished and he was able to catch his ship, which sailed for Italy.

Earlier in the day two members of the Cretic's crew who had been arrested for being in the plot to land the stowaways in this country were discharged because of insufficient evidence against them.

The twenty-seven men, found secreted in an empty water tank at the extreme bottom of the ship were deported on the Cretic.

RICHESON'S PETITION

April 26 Is Time Set For Argument Before Governor Foss

Boston, April 9.—The petition for the commutation of the sentence of Clarence V. T. Richeson from death to life imprisonment will be argued before Governor Foss by Attorneys Morse and Lee on April 26.

This time was fixed at thirty-minute conference which Morse held with the governor at the state house.

At the executive chambers it was announced that the governor would hear the case prepared by counsel for Richeson and that he had informed Morse he would submit the petition and data to the executive council.

SHEEHAN GOES TO PRISON

Killed His Sister by Pouring Boiling Water Over Her Head

Boston, April 9.—John Sheehan, found guilty of causing the death of his sister, Mary Greenhalge, by emptying a pot of boiling water over her head in her home in this city, was sent to the state prison for from ten to fifteen years.

Mrs. Greenhalge was in her kitchen when the defendant picked up a pot of boiling water and emptied it on her, remarking, it was claimed: "There, I got you now."

Strike of Carpet Workers

Boston, April 9.—Several hundred women employed in the Roxbury Carpet company factory struck because the management refused to grant an increase in wages.

HOMICIDE IS CHARGED

Mrs. Snyder Is Held Without Bail For Coroner's Jury

New York, April 9.—Mrs. Mary Snyder, whose name was Mamie Karn when she ran away from her home in Morristown, N. J., and was married, she says, to Walter J. Snyder, advertising manager of Sports of the Times, coolly stuck to her story that Snyder had stabbed himself with a pair of seven-inch scissors which she held in one of her hands, when she was taken before Coroner Hellenstein. She was held without bail for the coroner's inquest on April 18, on a charge of homicide.

When arrested after the discovery of Snyder's body in a bathtub the woman said that there had been a quarrel. Now she says it was all a joke. She declares that she thinks Snyder was trying to frighten her by stabbing at himself.

She was perfectly cool and collected. One remark which she made to Detective Galvin, who brought her to court, was "Gee, but it's tough." She expressed no regret for Snyder.

GOUNOD'S FAUST PRESENTED BY QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY

Conceded to Have Been One of Finest Musical Productions Ever Heard in Quincy

Afternoon Orchestral Concert and Chorus Finely Rendered

As the Quincy Choral society grows older and stronger it is proportionately more ambitious, so on this, its fourth season it has undertaken more work. Earlier in the season a fine concert was given and it was decided instead of the second concert to have a musical festival with an orchestral concert in the afternoon as well as an evening concert.

Although the afternoon concert conflicted with an important meeting of the Quincy Women's club and one or the other had to be sacrificed there was a good attendance at Music hall Tuesday afternoon of music lovers. That they enjoyed the program was shown by the warmth and frequency of the encores. The program rendered was as follows:

Overture—"Oberon" Weber
Girls' Glee Club
"The Year's at the Spring"
Mrs. H. H. A. Beach
"Dream Song" Mary W. Daniel
Ballet Divehtissement From "Henry VIII" Saint-Saens
"Gathering of the Clans."
"Scotch Idyl."
"Gipsy Dance."
Jig and Finale.
Boys' Glee Club
"Hark, the Trumpet Calleth'"
Dudley Buck
"Inconstancy" G. W. Chadwick
Andante from String Quartet op. 11
Tschaikowsky
Introduction Act III "Lohengrin"
Wagner
Mixed Voices—Choruses from "Joan of Arc" Gaul
Symphony "From the New World"
Dvorak

The program was rendered by the Boston Festival orchestra of thirteen pieces under the direction of John W. Crowley, and a High school chorus of selected voices under the direction of Miss Emma A. Perkins, musical director of the Quincy public schools.

The orchestral concert was a delight in selections and exquisite rendering while the chorus work of the boys and girls cannot be praised too highly.

Another year if the festival idea is continued the afternoon concert will rival the evening one in point of attendance for the standard set and enjoyment of those in attendance fortells much of the future.

In the evening at eight o'clock, Gounod's beautiful opera "Faust" was given a most beautiful rendering. The score used was the arrangement of the late Arthur S. Wonson to whom the Choral society is indebted for its fine training in past years. It was first used a few years ago most successfully at a brilliant musical festival in Gloucester and is among the most notable pieces of work of this gifted musician.

The opera was given by the following soloists:

Estelle Paterson, soprano, Viola Van Orden, contralto; G. E. Rasely, tenor; Willard Flint, bass; Loyal Phillips Shawe, baritone; supplemented by a chorus of 100 voices under the conductorship of Osbourne McConathy and the Boston Festival orchestra under John W. Crowley.

Of all the grand operas Gounod's Faust has led as a favorite and its story and music are familiar and loved the world over. No opera selected by the Choral society could have given more pleasure to the large audience assembled; as attested by the spontaneous applause acorded the favorite pieces.—"The Soldiers' Chorus," "The Waltz Chorus" and many of the solos. The music at all times melodious and often dramatic and forceful was given a fine rendering, the interpretation of the soloists, chorus, and orchestra being particularly pleasing and in every way satisfying.

Of the soloists much can be said of their fine interpretations. Miss Patterson the soprano is new to Quincy and, although one of the younger concert singers, is winning public recognition. She is a soloist at the Mount Vernon church, Boston. The purity of tones and sustained power made her rendering of the part of Margarita a pleasure to the audience and the encores given her were hearty and appreciative.

To many Miss Van Orden, who sang the part of Siebel, is well known by her former engagements here, having sung with the Westland quartet at musicales of the Quincy Women's club. Her voice is flexible and its quality always pleasing. In Faust she had opportunity for good work and carried through the part easily and merited the applause of her listeners.

Mr. Rasely of Worcester who sang the role of Faust and from whom much was required seemed equal to the task. He carried the part well, saving his strength at first for the more strenuous work as the opera proceeded. His voice was melodious, at times dramatic and all in all of a quality to please. He gave a fine interpretation of the role.

In Mr. Shawe another soloist new to our city was introduced and accorded a warm welcome. His splendid baritone voice suited the part of Valentine, which although not prominent, called for good interpretation. His singing of "E'en the bravest heart" was one of the solos to receive quick recognition of appreciation from the audience.

And Mr. Flint well, he was just Mr. Flint, always good, always satisfying, and a great favorite with Quincy audiences. His Mephistopheles was great and he sang the whole score from memory. Very little was left to the imagination in his interpretation; it was lurid and his Ha! Ha! was expressive at times. His voice deep and full just suited the part and rounded out the perfect whole.

There was not as much chorus work as in the oratorios and concerts here fofore given by the choral society but the chorusses were more effective possibly. The old favorite the "Chorus of the Soldiers" was given with a swing and rhythm that called forth a burst of applause and caused a repetition to be given. The Waltz chorus was also given with just the right shading and accuracy of marking. The chorus work was fine and showed careful training and understanding. Director McConathy is to be congratulated on the results attained.

The orchestra from the opening prelude through to the closing chorus of Angels was adequate at times carrying the score with exquisite marking of time and melody.

After the concert nothing but praise was heard as the audience dispersed. Every one was enthusiastic. It was undoubtedly one of the finest musical productions ever given in Quincy.

The ushers in charge of Delcevare King were George E. Adams, Emery L. Crane, Charles C. Hearn, Jr., Dr. Cornelius J. Lynch, Victor E. Miller, John F. Roche, Robert Sibley, Morton Smith, Lucien Thayer, and Arthur L. Thomas.

Officers of the Society are: president, Thomas B. Pollard; vice president, Dr. George H. Ryder; treasurer, Harry S. Bates; secretary, Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell; and directors, Frank W. Crane, Mrs. John F. Hunt, Mrs. Edith Cary Page, Wendell H. Luce and Louis B. Weston.

HOSPITAL FOR ISOLATION

It Would Have Saved Quincy Over $5,000 Last Year

STATE REPORT

In a report just issued by the State Board of Health, special attention is paid to the conditions in Quincy regarding the inspection of isolation hospitals. The board say "The board of health in the city of Quincy has been sending many patients with contagious diseases to the Massachusetts Homoeopathic Hospital in Boston, the city last year over $5000.

"There is a decided feeling in the community that steps should be taken toward the establishments of an isolation hospital. Some years ago the trustees of the city hospital offered to give the city a piece of land for the establishment of a contagious hospital. The matter fell through because of inability to agree upon details of administration.

"A tuberculosis camp which can accommodate ten permanent patients was established two years ago by local anti-tuberculosis society at a cost of about $3,500. The city made arrangements with the camp to take care of their tubercular patients. Under the existing arrangement, it will be noted that the city of Quincy is not entitled to the subsidy of five dollars per week."

The subsidy referred to in the last sentence is the one provided for in the statutes of last year whereby a city or town which maintains a tuberculosis hospital may, upon the proper certification, collect five dollars per week from the State for every patient who can not afford to pay for his own keeping. The fact that Quincy does not maintain its own tuberculosis hospital prevents the city from taking advantage of the State's subsidy.

Regarding the inspection in Weymouth the board reports that the local board is "agitating the necessity of the establishment of a general hospital."

If such a hospital were established an isolation hospital might be run in conjunction with it.

Regarding Braintree the board says; "The town is largely residential, and persons ill with communicable diseases are cared for in their homes. Adjoining the town farm is a building which, with little expense, could be adapted for an isolation hospital, including persons ill with tuberculosis."

The agent of the board is quoted in the report as saying that the town of Milton is quite free from contagious diseases, and the need of an isolation hospital is not apparent. A building near the town farm can be adapted very readily for such a case in an emergency.

NEW OFFICERS ARE INSTALLED

Quincy Lodge of Elks Has a New Exalted Ruler

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY

The installation of the newly elected officers of Quincy lodge of Elks was held Tuesday evening at Greenleaf hall and was the occasion for the gathering of a large number of Elks, not only from Quincy lodge but from many lodges in the state including one from Laconia, N. H.

The installation ceremony was performed by acting District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler of Massachusetts South East, Charles F. J. McCue of Cambridge, who was accompanied by Joseph N. Shafer of Melrose as Deputy Grand Esquire. Others on the suite were: Andrew J. Casey, Past District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler of Massachusetts North East, of Newburyport, as Grand Esteemed Leading Knight; J. Freeman Saville, Past Exalted Ruler of Somerville lodge, as Grand Esteemed Loyal Knight; J. A. S. McGowan, secretary of Somerville lodge as Grand Esteemed Lecturing Knight; Rush T. Jones of Everett lodge as Grand Secretary; Robert Evans of Everett lodge as Grand Treasurer; Hon. Eugene R. Stone of Quincy lodge as Grand Chaplain and John W. Sweeney of Quincy lodge as Grand Inner Guard.

The grand officers were received with the honors due their position after which the officers of Quincy lodge were installed, the work being very impressively done. The officers of Quincy lodge installed were as follows:

Exalted Ruler—George A. Jordan.
Esteemed Leading Knight—Phillip H. Sullivan.
Esteemed Loyal Knight—John Hilderbrand.
Esteemed Lecturing Knight—Edward D. Larkin.
Secretary—John D. Smith.
Treasurer—Charles R. O'Connor.
Tyler—Maurice F. Cohen.
Trustee for three years—James W. Sweeney.
Delegate to Grand Lodge—Robert J. Williams, Jr.
Alternate—Elmer L. Paine.

After these officers had been installed the new Exalted Ruler was presented with a handsome bouquet of roses by the members of the lodge with their best wishes. He then announced the following appointive officers:—

Esquire—Edward J. Desmond.
Inner Guard—Frank B. Lowe.
Chaplain—John Mahan.
Organist—Henry Binney.

Following the installation remarks were made by Deputy McCue, during which he said that it was forty years ago that the ship of Elkdom had been launched. Its keel was Justice, its how Charity and its stern Fidelity, upon these the ship had sailed onward with the American flag, symbolizing love, Labor and Loyality flying at its peak. He also spoke of the work the order was doing in a fraternal way and said one flower placed at the feet of the living, was worth more than all the roses of regret at his grave. In closing he urged the brothers to stand by their Exalted Ruler and make the lodge the banner of the state.

Mayor Stone congratulated the suite on the most excellent work it had done. The order of Elks stood for a great deal and if the ethics of the order are lived up to, there will be no more need of police or police courts He hoped that the coming year would be one of success to the new officers and promised them his hearty support in all things.

Andrew J. Casey of the suite said that twenty years ago the order of Elks was looked upon as one of sports. But things had changed since then so that today, in every country the order was looked up to as a body of gentlemen. No good Elk was ever an arnachist or a socialist but all stood for that flag, the grandest flag of all that waved over a free and united people.

Mr. Saville of the suite extended the greetings of Somerville lodge whose latch string was always out. Mr. Mc-

NEW MASTER HIGH SCHOOL

A special meeting of the School Committee was held Tuesday evening at which action was taken on the resignation of James D. Howlett, as head master of the High school, and to fill the vacancy caused by his resignation.

The resignation was accepted with much regret and the secretary was instructed to express the deep appreciation of the School Committee for his work, and its regrets of his departure.

The matter of filling the vacancy was then taken up and Ernest L. Collins was elected to become the master, dating from the opening of the fall term.

Mr. Collins the new master is a graduate of Bates college in the class of 1898. Since that time he has been sub master at the Winchester High school. Principal of the High schools at Brookfield, Braintree and Athol, being located at the latter school for four and a half years. He has also served as sub master of the Everett High school and for the past three months has been acting master at the Everett High school. He comes to Quincy highly recommended.

Mr. Collins is 36 years of age, is married and has one child.

BANQUET AND ENTERTAINMENT

The annual entertainment and banquet of the Granite City club will be held this evening at Colonial hall. The banquet will be served at 6.30 by P. & J. Besse and promises to be of an appetizing nature. Music during the banquet will be furnished by Tom Smith's orchestra.

Immediately following the banquet there will be an entertainment by a male quartette and vaudeville troup. An enjoyable evening is being looked forward to by the members of this well-known social club.

It might be mentioned that the banquet and entertainment is held under the direction of the "S. A." committee.

The Man Who Buys a Gold Brick

Naturally Feels Guilty

We'll wager that there are dozens of men in this community who have paid out good money for bad clothes — for clothes that they didn't wear, because they couldn't. These men feel "guilty" to think they let a clothier "put one over them." Don't ever place yourself in a position in which you are going to feel "guilty." Purchase your clothes from a clothier you have confidence in, and one whom you know sells clothes that he has all confidence in. I have unbounded confidence in the clothes I sell.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Some people go through life merely waiting for a chance to get even with some one else.

A force of Venetian gonodliers could find employment in any of our Mississippi river towns now.

Nothing ever surprises a newly married man much after he gets used to seeing his wife lay down half her hair.

The trouble with early spring shad and strawberries is that the average huckster sells 'em both from the same cart.

Think of Baltimore talking of piping natural gas into the city when that Democratic Convention is to meet there in June.

Col. Roosevelt does not want to be king, he says. He wants "a full sized man's job." And in trying to defeat Taft he seems to have his heart's desire.

Senator Bailey says the women are running Congress. It would give us great comfort if we could feel that any power had been able to subject Congress to its authority.

SCATTERING IMMIGRATION.

In the state of New York alone there are 75,000 men in the cities who could find jobs on the farms if they wanted them. This statement was made a few days ago at the New York meeting which organized the American Immigration Distribution League.

It is pathetic to see the way robust and strapping immigrants, from country districts in the old world, fitted to do farm work and do it successfully, will settle down in slum life here. They find their friends located in the cities, they lack money to get out into God's country. They grab the first low paid job their friends find for them.

It is not long before their brown faces turn into livid pallor under the crowding of slum life. They become enfeebled, their blood grows thin, their heart grows fearful of the great unknown of America's land of agricultural promise. They cling to the pittance that will keep them alive in the sweat shop, while their children have to sit up to 1 o'clock at night because the grownups occupy all the space toiling over ready made clothing.

It was shown at a Congestion of Population exhibit in New York in 1909, that one society had sent 37,000 foreigners out of the city in nine years, and 85 per cent of them stuck. While all this surplus of labor is drooping in the town, the farmer is clamoring for anything with flesh and blood enough to hold a hoe, and the consumer is paying a bigger provision bill because our acres are not tilled.

About 15 years ago there came to a canning factory in Chautauqua county, N. Y., two Italians. They were set to work, but there was so much sentiment against foreigners that they could not secure board within two miles. Other compatriots came later, the colony went into vine growing and other farming. Today 1200 of them are growing fat on their fine farms, and land has advanced from $50 to $75 an acre to $250, and the native Americans have to hustle.

Scattering the immigrants would substitute hapipness and joy for want, it would cure a festering sore in our city life, and it would give cheaper food. May the new league do the great job cut out for it!

IMPRACTICABLE TEACHING.

When a Wellesley professor can bring herself to say that "there can be no just wage so long as a dollar is paid in dividends," one is obliged to say that such an assertion is so far at variance with the obvious teachings of economics and human experience as to impugn the further usefulness of such a teacher as a leader of enlightened thought, says the Lowell Courier-Citizen.

We cannot see how labor is to be employed, unless capital is invested in developing commercial enterprise; and we cannot see how capital is to be expected to develop enterprise unless it finds at least a reasonable profit in so doing. In short, the contention that nobody at all is entitled to any pay except the one who works with his hands in manufacturing a yard of cloth is such outrageous drivel that comparatively few will be found to accept it. That, however, is precisely what is meant when the Wellesley professor—assuming she is correctly quoted—says that so long as there's a dollar left over after paying for material, machinery oil and power, it has all got to go exclusively to the help, and not one penny to reimburse those who erected the plant.

It is a pity that extreme notions of this kind should be preached, simply because they are on their face utterly impracticable and can therefore serve no possible end save that of fomenting unrest and discontent among people who would much better be happy. If the idea were capable of realization it would be different. The cold truth is that it is not—and that to harp upon the splendid dream is to sigh for a paradise that not only cannot be had in this material world, but actually would not satisfy us if we had it. When we talk of a society wherein philanthropists shall build mills and equip them without participating in the reward of the operation thereof, we are talking idle nonsense which profiteth not; and surely nobody should know it better than college professors.—Taunton Herald.

THE SUBSTITUTION EVIL.

A salesman of the National Biscuit Company was lately talking to a grocer in a Southern city who had laid in a stock of soda crackers put up in a 5 cent package and made by a competitor of the National Biscuit Company. The grocer said that the reason he carried the competitive article was because prices in the imitation goods were so much lower that it afforded him an extra profit, and that he thought he could work them off on his customers in place of Uneeda Biscuit.

While they were talking a colored woman came into the store and asked for a package of Uneeda Biscuit. To show the National Biscuit Company's salesman how easy it was to substitute, the proprietor himelf waited on the woman, showing her the imitation package and advising her to take it, saying that it was "just as good", as Uneeda Biscuit. The colored woman hesitated, and then said: "No, sah, dey is wanted for sickness, an' my missus sen' me for Uneeda Biscuit; she is mighty partic'ler, an' she know what she want, so gib me Uneeda Biscuit, boss."

This is only one of many similar instances that the constantly occurring in the effort to substitute other goods when Uneeda Biscuit are asked for.

After all, isn't the best for substitution the making of first-class goods, and then the advertising of them to consumers so thoroughly and persistently that, like the colored woman, they are afraid to take any risk in buying something else?—From Printers' Ink.

SUPERIOR COURT.

In the Norfolk Superior Court, at Dedham Monday, William Elliot, Frank Weise and Charles Fleming all of Roxbury were found guilty of breaking and entering the drug store of Eugene Tessier, Sea street, Houghs Neck, January 29.

ROOSEVELT AN EASY WINNER

Taft Buried In Illinois by Two and a Half to One

RESULTS OF DIRECT PRIMARY

Clark Defeats Wilson on Preference Ticket by About Two to One—Cullom May Lose Seat In Senate—Woman Suffrage Meets Decisive Defeat—Roosevelt Men Likely to Carry State Convention In Maine

Chicago, April 10.—Incomplete returns from Illinois primary election precincts indicate that Theodore Roosevelt led President Taft about two and a half to one in the preferential presidential primary and that Champ Clark's vote in the same primary was approximately twice that for Governor Wilson of New Jersey.

An independent estimate gives Roosevelt a majority close to 100,000.

Chauncey Dewey, head of the state Roosevelt organization, gave out a statement declaring that the former president had carried Illinois by 150,000, and that, while the average proportion of his vote to that of President Taft was two and a half to one, in places it had been as high as five to one.

Senator La Follette polled a small vote.

State candidates known to be friendly to Senator Lorimer are indicated by early returns to have lost several contests. Chief of these was Len Small, who for governor appears to have been defeated by Governor Deneen.

John E. W. Wayman is running a strong third.

Edward F. Duane, Democratic candidate for governor, appeared to be leading Samuel Alschuter in Cook county, but out in the state returns indicate his strength to be less. Ben F. Caldwell ran well in the central part of the satte.

Senator Cullom encountered a sharp fight for the advisory vote for United States senator and returns indicate that he is losing to L. Y. Sherman.

Woman suffrage in Chicago appears to have met a decisive defeat.

DELEGATES FROM VERMONT

Half Chosen Thus Far Divided Between Taft and Roosevelt

Montpelier, Vt., April 10.—Half the Vermont delegates to the Chicago convention were chosen yesterday and Taft and Roosevelt supporters split even in the struggle for control. The delegation will be completed today with the choice of four delegates-at-large. The two Taft delegates and their two alternates were elected in the First district by a majority of 78, while Roosevelt men won the same number of delegates in the Second district by a margin of 30 votes.

A large number of the delegates who took part in both district conventions will attend the state convention today and the Taft leaders claim that their majority of the total vote will hold good today and give them the state delegation.

THE MAINE DELEGATION

Ten of the Twelve Likely to Be In Favor of Roosevelt

Bangor, Me., April 10.—Indications point to a fight to a finish on the floor of the Republican state convention here this afternoon. All efforts at a compromise between the Taft and Roosevelt factions of the party having failed.

The Roosevelt men have been claiming all twelve of the state's delegates to the national convention. It is now conceded by them, however, that the two delegates from the Third district are in doubt.

An effort is being made at the meeting of the Republican state committee to compromise on nine for Roosevelt and three for Taft, but the Roosevelt men are proving obdurate.

OPPOSED TO INSTRUCTION

Attitude of Leaders In New York Republican Convention

Rochester, N. Y., April 10.—The Republican state convention held its first session here, and after a "keynote" speech by Temporary Chairman Butler, sounding what he believed to be the chief issues of the coming presidential campaign, took an adjournment until today to permit the all-important committee on resolutions to draft a platform, select four delegates-at-large to the national convention, and try to determine whether it would be for the best interest of President Taft to send an instructed delegation to Chicago.

The thousand and odd delegates are discussing the unanswered question whether it would be expedient to send an instructed delegation to the national convention for President Taft.

Chairman Barnes and those leaders who believe with him that the delegation should not be instructed, declared that they would not recede from their position.

DISRESPECT TO THE FLAG.

Editor, Daily Ledger:

Permit me to call attention through your columns to an instance of seeming disrespect to Our Flag which came under my observation Monday evening at City hall.

Instead of being taken down at sunset and removed, the flag was lowered to the foot of the staff and there allowed to hang limply from the halyards; truly not in a position suggestive of dignity or calculated in to bring forth manifestations of patriotism. I have not the least desire or intention to criticise the custodian of City hall, I know his duties are numerous and irregular, but whatever is done or left undone let this little duty be attended to seasonably and properly as befits the respect due the emblem of a mighty nation.

ELKS' NEW OFFICERS

Gowan spoke of the great possibilities of Quincy lodge and Grand Esquire Shafer gave one of his characteristic addresses.

Robert Evans, known in Elkdom as Fighting Bob, made a stirring address. This he said was a new era in the life of the lodge and it behooves the members to put their shoulder to the wheel and help the good ship along. The lodge of Elks was an institution of influence and of charity and if we will only exemplify the precepts of our order, Justice, Love and Fidelity with Brotherly Love the world will be the better for its having lived.

The last speaker was introduced as "Rusty" Jones although the name belied him. He proposed a new song for Quincy lodge. "Roll Jordan Roll". If the brothers would learn to sing and practise the song the coming twelve months would be the most prosperous in the history of the lodge.

An adjournment was then made to the Elks club where Caterer Thompson served a banquet consisting of lobster, chicken and potato salads, chicken croquettes, ice cream, cake and coffee. As the banquet was concluded the hour was approaching eleven and as the bell tolled off the hour, the brothers stood with bowed heads while Mr. Shafer gave the toast, "Our Absent Brother." "His faults we write upon the sands, his virtues on the tablets of memory."

—There was no need of vocational schools in the olden time. The schools were not expected to teach boys and girls how to work. Their education in that respect was well attended to at home.—Spencer Leader.

N. E. ASSOCIATE ALLIANCE.

Quincy Alliance, Mrs. George G. Saville, president, is to be the hostess club for the meeting of the New England Associate Alliance in Quincy on Thursday, April 25 in the chapel of First church. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, president will preside and the opening address at 10.30 A. M. will be given by Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, pastor of the church. At the 2 P. M. session E. Etheldred Brown will speak on "Jamaica—Our prospective mission field, the place, the people and our opportunity" and Rev. Charles E. Park on "The art of going to church."

CURRENT EVENTS LECTURE.

It was a most delightful afternoon on April 5th at the clubhouse when members of the Quincy Women's club were guests of the Literature committee at the last lecture on current events by Mrs. May Alden Ward. Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney welcomed the guests and assured Mrs. Ward of the committee's appreciation of their excellent work the past season. Mrs. Gurney then introduced Mrs. Ward who gave in her usual pleasing manner a detailed and comprehensive account of the vital struggle and great crisis in England during the coal strike of the past month, telling of the terrible effects; the crippling of the railroads, steamships and all the other industries and how suffering was beyond conception. The emergency measure was explained; the wage board and the progress was followed along through both houses of Parliament until it was presented to the King for his signature. Mrs. Ward explained the difference between our constitution and the English constitution and she devoted some time to the Home Rule bill which comes up April 11th. Also the Militant Suffragettes' question and different methods employed to deal with the problem. Mrs. Ward spoke of our own Congress and politics at Washington. With a politician, in a campaign year, it is not what is good for the country but what is good for his party. Neither the Republicans nor Democrats will know what their platforms are to be until after the conventions in June. The situation is curious. The way in which the "Pork Barrel" distribution is made and how the money is squandered was made plain when a town whose population is 1800 can get a $225,000 post office and another one of 2000 population can have a $300,000 appropriation for a post office and several others with the same ratio.

A social tea followed the lecture, those present having an opportunity to meet Mrs. Ward. On the tea table were pots of white hyacinths. Mrs. Frank S. Davis and Mrs. Boyd F. Bowles poured tea which with delicious home made cake and crackers were served by Mrs. Maurice P. Spillane and Mrs. Albert Maynard Parker.

MAY MORNING MUSICALES.

The music committee of the Quincy Women's club, Mrs. Jennie B. Worcster chairman, has announced a series of May morning musicales to be given at the clubhouse, May 1, 15, and 29.

As two of them occur after the close of the club season they will offer opportunities for members to meet for an hour under the pleasantest of conditions. The clubhouse grounds are very attractive at this time of the year, the musical programs will be arranged to give genuine pleasure and the hour which is planned to be from 10.45 to 11.45 will no doubt be the means of inaugurating many pleasant luncheon gatherings as an aftermath, especially with those who wish to entertain out of town friends. The musical foundation of the programs, will be the Mazah trio, Roscoe R. Ricker, violin; Miss Marion Moorhouse, 'cello; and Miss Grace M. Farrington, piano, and on each morning there will be one or more vocal soloists assisting. Subscriptions to the course may be had of members of the music committee as follows: Mrs. Jennie B. Worster, Mrs. Albert E. Avery, Mrs. Clarence Burgin, Miss Alice Coe, Mrs. W. H. Doble, Mrs. Henry Faxon, Mrs. Victor E. Miller, Mrs. Frank J. Moore, Mrs. Albert R. Moulton, Mrs. N. G. Nickerson, Mrs. Edith Cary Page, Mrs. Hazen E. Ricker, Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, Mrs. Charles Sampson and Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

There was a large attendance of club women at the clubhouse Tuesday afternoon for the debate under the auspices of the Civics committee.

The president Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard called the business meeting to order at half past two, the usual reports being given. Among the committees to make announcements were;; Mrs. Ward Whitcher of the Library Extension committee of a lecture by Mrs. Glendower Evans of Boston on the Minimum Wage, and Mrs. Robert E. Park on Pensions for Mothers and Child Welfare. Mrs. Whitcher also said club members would be welcome to the Parliamentary class on the 1st and 3rd Tuesday mornings each month with an extra one April 30.

Mrs. Worster for the Music committee anounced three chamber concerts May 1, 15, and 29 at the clubhouse at 10.45 A. M. subscriptions at $1.00.

Mrs. E. B. Marsh of the Program committee spoke of the children's party at the clubhouse for Saturday afternoon at 2.30.

Mrs. Francis Abele, Jr., delegate to the health conference at Brockton gave an interesting three-minute report of the meeting. It was a good report and deserving of greater publicity.

Mrs. Chandler W. Smith of the Philanthropy committee announced that Miss Purchase the new secretary of the Associated Charities had headquarters in the clubhouse and could be seen between the hours of 11 A. M. and 1 P. M.

The afternoon's program as arranged by the Civic committee was a debate on "Quincy—Dead or Alive? Mrs. Oscar A. Blaisdell, chairman, who introduced the speakers for and against, the first being Mrs. Adelaide Claflin who spoke on the affirmative.

Mrs. Claflin said as a former and long time resident of the city she felt she was better able perhaps to judge if Quincy were dead or alive than one who had lived here continuously as she could see the changes and improvements. She thought the city much alive with its public library and enlarged grounds,; its new post office, court house, and many halls; its granite industry and shipyard; its awakened Board of Trade; proposed waterfront development, etc. Even farming had some attention for witness the prize winners at flower, fruit and garden shows. Quincy instead of being the old rummy hole as of old had developed a higher life—had many churches, a hospital, schoolhouses the best in the country. Quincy was in no danger of dying. Best of all was the formation of the Quincy Women's club. Its influence was unlimited it was a new beginning which will grow. We must dream to a good purpose, dream of civic beauty. Reach the young people and arouse in them a feeling for beauty. No Quincy is not dead. the new sprouts all show life.

Mrs. Zenas S. Arnold in the negative said in Quincy there was an ample field to improve. Start to come to Quincy from Boston what do we find—perhaps a long wait for a train as the service is poor. Once on the train no seats and told to go to the rear and still no seats. Arrived at Quincy what—a small inadequate station; men smoking notwithstanding signs on the wall to the contrary; offensive lavatories used by the general public because the city provides no public necessaries. As we go about the city what do we find? Not a spot to sit down to rest; no playground in the Centre;; no breathing space; no municipal planting of trees; no beauty spots but plenty of public dumps opened his lecture with a description of the commission appoined last year, of which he was a member, to investigate the minimum wage.

WOMEN'S WAGES

The commission found at the start that there were certain low wages paid women that could be brushed aside at the outset. These included the women in small towns who lived at home and worked in stores or telephone offices to earn pin money or eke out the family income. This class offered no serious problem.

In order to find out what to deal with the commission investigated three industries—the department stores, the laundries and the candy stores.

The commission was further assisted by an elaborate Federal report on the condition of the textile industry.

In its conclusions the commission had four industries to consider and when the figures began to come in it was convinced that there was a problem in Massachusetts.

There are 41 per cent of the candy workers, 10 per cent of the saleswomen, 16 per cent of female workers in the laundries and 23 per cent of the women in the cotton mills whose wages are less than five dollars a week.

This does not mean the full amount received during the year. It means for a full week's work. Some of these are seasonal trades and the annual earning is found to be pitifully small.

There are 65 per cent of the candy workers, 29 per cent of the saleswomen, 47 per cent of the laundry workers and 37 per cent of the cotton workers whose wages fall below six dollars a week.

This involes thousands of women in these four industries and is typical of a considerable body of the industrial world, where the wages paid are admittedly not enough to live, by any decent American standard.

We should next consider whether interference is justified by law and we can say that wages are not what they should be and that a certain standard should be paid.

The speaker mentioned experience with the minimum wage law elsewhere. In Australasia machinery provides a fixed wage below which it is illegal to employ women and minors.

It is well regarded by employes and by most of the employers. It is a weapon to prevent a small number of slave driving employers, by competition, to drive all others down to a wage scale that means barbarism. What difference is there between chattle slavery and wage slavery?

In England after a long series of hearing the minimum wages has been applied to two or three orders included the chain, lace and garment workers. Recently there has been an enactment in the coal industry.

In Massachusetts the commission has introduced an act providing for a commission of three, who shall be paid when they work, with a paid secretary as executive officer of the board.

This commission will cooperate with the Bureau of Statistics and if it finds any occupation with a substantial number of female employes where the wages paid are inadequate to supply the necessary cost of living and maintaining the worker in health they may interfere.

It is then empowered to cause to be established a minimum wage board for the case at hand which shall arbitrate the matter.

This shall be composed of not less than 6 employes, 6 employers and half as many of the general public. These shall act in the capacity of jurors and shall be paid as such.

They shall take up the conditions and if not less than two-thirds of them agree, they shall report a wage determination.

It is the expectation that most employers will welcome this because it will enable them to create uniformly good conditions and not put out of business the men who do not want to drive their employes.

Then the minimum wage commission shall receive this determination which it may modify or reject but not raise.

Public notice of the determination will be given and a hearing held. If it then stands the test of a public hearing and the attendant criticisms it may be put in effect as a mandate.

It will then be illegal and a misdemeanor to pay a lower wage than that set and the employee will have the civil right to recover the difference between the wage paid and the minimum set by law.

The speaker told of the way in which they intended to get around some of the objections to the measure.

Provision will be made for a license for the physically slow or disabled worker to enable him to work at a lower wage. The line will be drawn sharply, however, to eliminate the scab worker that would try to creep in under the provision.

In regard to competition with other states there is of course a danger and Massachusetts will have to go slow. She has always managed to keep a trifle ahead of the other states in reforms and she should continue to do so.

Among the accomplishments summed up by the speaker were the compulsory keeping of wage sheets by the employer. The investigation would be well paid for if it simply brought home to the employers the conditions in force under them.

It also directs public interest to the matter which will help to improve conditions.

It will furnish a weapon for the good and decent employers to put out of business or at least ineffective the few slave drivers.

In conclusion it is worth a trial. It can do no harm and may do some good.

The remainder of the speaker's address was taken up with the question of the increased cost of living, the discussion of the labor and immigration problems.

Many questions along these and other lines were asked the speaker at the close and the members adjourned feeling that the season had been concluded in a most profitable manner.

RUNAWAY IN CITY SQUARE

Fruit, vegetables and victuals profusely decorated Temple street about two o'clock Tuesday afternoon as a result of a horse, attached to a team belonging to Johnson Bros. and driven by Walter Colbert, becoming unmanageable. It seems that a broken shaft which kept proding into the side of the animal, caused it to became infuriated. The horse began to run wildly almost in front of the Post Office, with Colbert struggling in vain to prevent danger.

The horse swerved around Washington street, onto Temple, and in so doing threw Colbert to the ground in such a way that the driver miraculously landed on his feet. The horse kept on its mad run, advanced along Hancock street, turned around Maple street and was just turning into Temple street for the second time, when Colbert, who had been chasing it all the time, grasped the steed by the nostrils and brought it to a standstill. The horse and driver escaped uninjured, though the harness and the team, in addition to the provisions that were lost, were badly damaged.

WOMEN POSSESS TIGERS' CLAWS

Snyder's Remark In Predicting His Untimely End

LIFE FILLED WITH "ROMANCE"

Said He Had Loved and Perhaps Been Loved by Every Type of Woman During His Career as Heart Breaker —Five Said to Have Been Known as "Mrs. Snyder" In Past Few Years—One Wants His Estate

New York, April 10.—A trail of love affairs that stretched across the continent and sometimes were carried on simultaneously in two or three widely separated sections of the country has been uncovered in the investigation of the death of Walter J. Snyder, advertising manager of Sports of the Times.

Snyder met his death on Sunday in the apartment occupied by himself and Mary S. Karn of Morristown, N. J., known as "Mamie Snyder."

It developed that Snyder's 37 years had been filled with more "romance" than that of a dozen average men. Snyder, who had been successively jockey, race track tout, bartender, fair manager, gambler and sporting writer, seems to have possessed himself of a new wife almost every year since he reached maturity.

That he had experienced trouble with at least one of these women is evidenced by a remark made by him a few weeks ago to a business associate and repeated to a detective at work on the case.

"The whole country's one grand old valentin to me," laughed Snyder. "I've known and loved and perhaps been loved by every type of woman. But I'm just beginning to learn that they've got tiger's claws hidden away under their soft, kitten-like fur. And they don't mind showing those claws to a man. That's why I know my career as a heart-breaker will be over when I am 40."

The names of five of the women who have been known as "Mrs. Snyder" in the past few years are:

Mary S. Karn of Morristown, who eloped with Snyder, then a bartender in a Morristown road house, eight years ago. Held for his murder.

Annie Tracey, daughter of a Baltimore city official, said to have been legally married by Snyder in 1903. Divorced him within a few months.

Edna Bush, a girl of Boston, who lived with Snyder in that city several years ago as his wife.

Bertha Y. Snyder of Detroit, who eloped with Snyder six years ago when he was secretary of the "Blue Ribbon Meeting" in Detroit, believes she is his widow and has retained attorneys to fight for the estate which she says, amounts to $25,000. She said yesterday that she would have killed Snyder had she not lacked the nerve and added she was coming to New York to assist Mary Karn in her fight for life.

HUB'S FATTEST MAN DEAD

Weight Increased From 434 to 850 Pounds During Illness

Boston, April 10.—Abraham Sodekson, well known in this city on account of his unusual size, died on the 26th anniversary of his birth at his home, 20 Prince street. He weighed 850 pounds and had been ill about four weeks. During his sickness it is estimated that he gained in weight at the rate of twenty pounds a day.

Attending physicians said that death was due to fatty degeneration of the heart. About four weeks ago Sodekson began to have the habit of dozing asleep while standing on his feet and a few days later fell upon a kitchen stove in his home, receiving burns about the back and arms.

Before his illness Sodekson weighed 434 pounds, was active and a hearty eater. His disposition was always sunny and he was generous to a fault. Neither his parents nor his sister were above the average size.

EXPECTS TO SECURE GOOD HUSBAND YET

Woman Accused of Having Ten Is Jailed For a Year

Allentown, Pa., April 10.—In the criminal court Mrs. Jennie Schwoyer, 23, accused of bigamy in having ten husbands, was placed on trial. She pleaded not guilty, declaring she had not been married at all.

Marriage bureau records were produced to show she had been married in Lehigh county alone at least three times.

On being called for sentence Mrs. Schwoyer again insisted she had never been married and her attorney stated she had once been kicked by a horse and is mentally unbalanced.

After some questioning the court ventured the opinion that the woman was more untrutaful than "looney" and sent her to jail for a year.

When she reached the prison her aphasia left her quite suddenly and she began to rail at her husbands, saying none of them had been of any account, and repeated the assertion that she'd get a good one yet—if she had to marry six or seven more.

DEMANDS WILL BE MODIFIED

Expectation of the Anthracite Coal Operators

NO RECOGNITION OF UNION

Willing to Compromise, However, on Demand For Increased Pay and Perhaps on Shortening of Workday—Leading Producers Confer on Attitude to Be Assumed at Conference With Miners' Committee Today

New York, April 10.—Although no formal meeting of the anthracite coal operators' committee of ten was scheduled for Tuesday, representatives of some of the leading operators conferred here as to their attitude when they will meet representatives of the miners in joint conference at Philadelphia today.

They anticipated that some modification would be made then of the miners' original demand for a 20 percent increase in wages, recognition of the union, reduction of the working day from nine to eight hours and other minor changes.

Representatives of the operators said that there had been no change from their original attitude regarding recognition of the Miners' union. An overwhelming majority of the operators, they said, would oppose the granting of this demand. A representative of one of the leading operators said that he thought the operators would be willing to compromise on the demand for increased pay, and, possibly, on the shortening of the workday.

Orders were issued by the union district headquarters at Shamokin, Pa., calling off all repair work in the Schuylkill district after today. There will be no interference with the pumpmen and workmen needed to prevent damage to property until after the result of the conference becomes konwn, when, it is said, it is intended to suspend everything in case there is no prospect of an agreement being reached. The union heads claim that some companies were taking advantage of the permission given union men to do repair work to prosecute new work which led to the order being issued.

It is expected the operators will have a final discussion prior to the joint conference today. Among those who accompanied President Baer of the Reading company to New York was W. J. Richards, general manager and second vice president of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company. Richards is the head of the practical side of the Reading's anthracite interests.

Prediction of Settlement

Philadelphia, April 10.—Leaders of the coal miners from all the anthracite districts of the state have arrived here. All declare tnemselves confident that a settlement will be reached.

John M. Mack, secretary-treasurer of district No. 1, stated that the union is ready to meet the operators and that he is confident of concessions.

Record Production of Anthracite

Pittsburgh, April 10.—The report of James Roderick, chief of the Pennsylvania bureau of mines for 1911, will show that the anthracite coal production for the year was 90,052,341 tons, which eclipses the high-water mark of 1907 by about 5,000,000 tons.

DROWNING IN BEER

Capital Punishment For Drunkards Suggested by Magistrate

Philadelphia, April 10.—Magistrate Grelis wants a new statute under which he may punish men who drink and abuse their families.

He wants this action to be made a capital offense, the offender to be sentenced to drowning in an immense beer vat in which he would have to swim until overcome with fatigue, when he would sink and his dying breath create a bubble in the beer.

At all events this is what the magistrate said in discussing the case of Joseph Harrington, who drove his wife and seven children into the street.

FREE PASSES FOR SOLONS

Favored by Rhode Island House, but Held Up In Senate

Providence, April 10.—The "free pass" clause was missing from the public utilities bill when it was reported to the senate by the committee on judiciary with recommendations for its passage.

The original bill, which passed the house, provided that all railroads in the state should be compelled to furnish free passes to state officers and members of the legislature. Intense interest in the form of the bill as it will pass the senate is manifest throughout the state.

Lynched After Discharge In Court

Shreveport, La., April 10.—Dismissed because positive proof was lacking when arraigned on a charge of having written letters to a white woman, Thomas Miles, a negro, 29, was lynched near the city limits.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SPRING LAMB WITH MINT SAUCE.

NOW is the time that we enjoy the spring lamb, best roasted and served with mint sauce.

String beans, peas or asparagus may be served with roast lamb.

Roast Lamb.—Go over the meat with a clean damp cloth before you put it into the baking pan. Season with pepper. Take a cupful of water and add a teaspoonful of salt to it. Use this to baste with.

Lamb should be roasted a quarter of an hour for every pound of the meat. The oven must be very hot. Serve with mint sauce or asparagus tips.

Stuffed Lamb.

A loin of lamb may be stuffed if the ends of the ribs are taken out so that it can be rolled.

Stuffed leg of lamb is also nice. The butcher will take out the bones for you.

Wipe out the meat with a damp clean cloth. Sprinkle with salt. Add the dressing.

If it is a loin then roll and sew up. Lay on a rack in a dripping pan. Place some of the suet from the lamb on the meat. Sprinkle with flour, salt and pepper and bake in a hot oven. Some suet should also have been placed in the pan. When the flour browns a little begin to baste the lamb.

To make the dressing use breadcrumbs or, better still, cracker crumbs. Take about a cupful. Season with thyme or any herb preferred. Add salt and pepper and two ounces of melted butter and if it is still too dry a little hot water.

Stuffed Shoulder of Lamb.—Have the butcher take the bone from the shoulder of lamb. Wipe it off and make a stuffing of four ounces of shredded suet, four ounces of breadcrumbs, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, a pinch of thyme and marjoram, salt and pepper to taste. Bind together with egg. Put the stuffing between the folds of meat and fasten up with skewers. Roast slowly and baste well. Serve with peas or mint sauce.

Mint Sauce.

Mint sauce should be made an hour or so before it is to be used, as then the vinegar absorbs the full aroma of the mint. Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of fine sugar in one tablespoonful of boiling water. Add three heaping tablespoonfuls of finely chopped mint. Set away for half an hour. Drop in one tablespoonful of olive oil and half a cupful of good vinegar.

LIBELLED CONGRESSMEN

Charge Against Importer Who Is Arrested In New York

New York, April 10.—Henry W. A. Page, a commission merchant and importer of linens and cottons, was arrested here on a federal warrant from the District of Columbia, charging him with libelling Representative Clayton of Alabama, chairman of the house committee on judiciary, and other members of congress.

Page took his arrest coolly. When arraigned he gave $5000 bail for his appearance in Washington, where he will go without fighting extradition.

In the indictment, which contains three counts, Page is charged with having circulated alleged libellous matter in a pamphlet, in which he is alleged to have referred to certain congressmen as "crooks" and "perjurers."

Former Montenegro Cabinet Ministers Tunnel Way Out of Fortress

London, April 10.—The thrilling escape of a former minister of Montenegro, Ivanovitch, with other ministers who were fellow prisoners in the fortress at Podgoritza, is related in a Constantinople dispatch to The Chronicle.

Ivanovitch and his comrades made their way out of the fortress by digging a subterranean passage. They were condemned in October, 1907, to fifteen years' imprisonment for complicity in a plot against the government of Montenegro.

The conspiracy was formed with the intention of overthrowing King Nicholas and blowing up the entire ministry with bombs.

MADE MILLIONS FROM $1.25

Publisher Says He Was Wrecked by Postal Fraud Order

St. Louis, April 10.—G. E. Lewis, charged with using the mails to defraud, told on the witness stand in the United States district court here the story of his remarkable financial career from his first venture in the publishing field, when he started a magazine with $1.25.

He told how he ran up this $1.25 in a series of business and banking operations which involved several million dollars. Lewis said his publishing business outgrew its plant several times. He recited the success of his business, declaring its downfall commenced with the issuance of a fraud order by the postoffice department in 1905.

Before this, he said, he was receiving from 3000 to 22,000 letters a day. As a result of the fraud order Lewis testified, he lost $190,000 in advertising contracts and his banking credit was cut off.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barony. The place is to be sold, and its history and that of the owners, the Quintards, is the subject of discussion by Jonathan Crenshaw, a business man, a stranger known as Bladen, and Bob Yancy, a farmer, when Hannibal Wayne Hazard, a mysterious child of the old southern family, makes his appearance. Yancy tells how he adopted the boy.

CHAPTER II.—Nathaniel Ferris buys the Barony, but the Quintards deny any knowledge of the boy. Yancy to keep Hannibal. Captain Murrell, a friend of the Quintards, appears and asks questions about the Barony.

CHAPTER III.—Trouble at Scratch Hill, Yancy's home, when Hannibal is kidnaped by Dave Blount, Captain Murrell's agent. Yancy overtakes Blount, gives him a thrashing and secures the boy.

CHAPTER IV.—Yancy is served with a warrant for assaulting Blount. Yancy appears before Squire Balaam, and is discharged with costs for the plaintiff.

CHAPTER V.—Betty Malroy, a friend of the Ferrises, has an encounter with Captain Murrell, who forces his attentions on her, and is rescued by Bruce Carrington, who threatens to whip the captain.

CHAPTER VI.—Betty sets out for her Tennessee home. Carrington takes the same stage. Yancy and Hannibal disappear, with Murrell on their trail. He overtakes them in the mountains of Tennessee. Murrell gets Yancy drunk and stabs him in a fight that followed. Hannibal escapes in a canoe.

CHAPTER VII.—Hannibal arrives at the home of Judge Slocum Price.

CHAPTER VIII.—The Judge recognizes in the boy, the grandson of an old time friend. Murrell arrives at Judge's home. Hannibal hears of the finding of Yancy's body. Price arrested as counterfeiter.

CHAPTER IX.—Cavendish family on raft rescue Yancy, who is apparently dead. Price breaks jail.

CHAPTER X.—Betty and Carrington arrive at Belle Plain.

CHAPTER XI.—Hannibal's rifle discloses some startling things to the Judge. Hannibal and Betty meet again.

CHAPTER XII.—Murrell arrives in Belle Plain. Is playing for big stakes.

CHAPTER XV.—Norton informs Carrington that Betty has promised to marry him. Carrington bids Betty good-bye. Norton is mysteriously shot.

CHAPTER XVI.—More light on Murrell's plots. He plans uprising of negroes.

CHAPTER XIII.—Yancy awakes from long dreamless sleep on board the raft.

CHAPTER XIV.—Judge Price makes startling discoveries in looking up land titles. Charley Norton, a young planter, who assists the judge, is mysteriously assaulted.

CHAPTER XVII.—The Judge and Hannibal visit Betty.

CHAPTER XVIII.—Betty is told why Norton was killed and leaves Belle Plain, taking Hannibal with her. The carriage is held up in the woods.

CHAPTER XIX.—Betty and Hannibal are made prisoners in a lonely cabin.

CHAPTER XX.—Murrell appears at the cabin and shows his hand.

CHAPTER XXI.—The Judge hears of the mysterious disappearance of Betty and Hannibal.

The sheriff was gone from the room only a few moments, and returned with the information that Hicks was down at the bayou, which was to be dragged.

"Why?" inquired the judge.

"Hicks says Miss Malroy's been acting mighty queer ever since Charley Norton was shot—distracted like! He says he noticed it, and that Tom Ware noticed it."

"How does he explain the boy's disappearance?"

"He reckons she throwed herself in, and the boy tried to drag her out, like

"Hicks Says Miss Malroy's Been Acting Queer Since Charley Norton Was Shot."

he naturally would, and got drawed in."

"Humph! I'll trouble Mr. Hicks to step here," said the judge quietly.

"There's Mr. Carrington and a couple of strangers outside who've been asking about Miss Malroy and the boy; seems like the strangers knowed her and him back yonder in No'th Carolina," said the sheriff as he turned away.

"I'll see them." The sheriff went from the room and the judge dismissed the servants.

"Well, what do you think, Price?" asked Mahaffy anxiously when they were alone.

"Rubbish! Take my word for it, Solomon, this blow is leveled at me. I have been too forward in my attempts to suppress the carnival of crime that is raging through west Tennessee. You'll observe that Miss Malroy disappeared at a moment when the public is disposed to think she has retained me as her legal adviser; probably she will be set at liberty when she agrees to drop the matter of Norton's murder. As for the boy, they'll use him to compel my silence and inaction." The judge took a long breath. "Yet there remains one point where the boy is concerned that completely baffles me. If we knew just a little more of his antecedents it might cause me to make a startling and radical move."

Mahaffy was clearly not impressed by the vague generalities in which the judge was dealing.

"There you go, Price, as usual, trying to convince yourself that you are the center of everything!" he said, in a tone of much exasperation. "Let's get down to business! What does this man Hicks mean by hinting at suicide? You saw Miss Malroy yesterday?"

"You have put your finger on a point of some significance," said the judge. "She bore evidence of the shock and loss she had sustained; aside from that she was quite as she has always been."

"Well, what do you want to see Hicks for? What do you expect to learn from him?"

"I don't like his insistence on the idea that Miss Malroy is mentally unbalanced. It's a question of some delicacy—the law, sir, fully recognizes that. It seems to me he is overanxious to account for her disappearance in a manner that can compromise no one."

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Judge Finds Allies.

They were interrupted by the opening of the door, and big Steve admitted Carrington and the two men of whom the sheriff had spoken.

"A shocking condition of affairs, Mr. Carrington!" said the judge by way of greeting.

"Yes," said Carrington shortly.

"You left these parts some time ago, I believe?" continued the judge.

"The day before Norton was shot. I had started home for Kentucky. I heard of his death when I reached Randolph on the second bluff," explained Carrington, from whose cheeks the weather-beaten bloom had faded. He rested his hand on the edge of the desk and turned to the men who had followed him into the room. "This is the gentleman you wish to see," he said, and stepped to one of the windows; it overlooked the terraces where he had said good-by to Betty scarcely a week before.

The two men had paused by the door. They now advanced. One was gaunt and haggard, his face disfigured by a great red scar; the other was a shock-headed individual who moved with a shambling gait. Both carried rifles and both were dressed in coarse homespun.

"Morning, sir," said the man with the scar. "Yancy's my name, and this gentleman 'lows he'd rather be known now as Mr. Cavendish."

The judge started to his feet.

"Bob Yancy?" he cried.

"Yes, sir, that's me." The judge passed nimbly around the desk and shook the Scratch Hiller warmly by the hand. "Where's my nevvy, sir?—what's all this about him and Miss Betty?" Yancy's soft drawl was suddenly eager.

"Please God we'll recover him soon!" said the judge.

By the window Carrington moved impatiently. No harm could come to the boy, but Betty—a shudder went through him.

"They've stolen him." Yancy spoke with conviction. "I reckon they've started back to No'th Carolina with him—only that don't explain what's come of Miss Betty, does it?" and he dropped rather helplessly into a chair.

"Bob are just getting off a sick bed. He's been powerful porely in consequence of having his head laid open and then being throwed into the Elk river, where I fished him out," explained Cavendish, who still continued to regard the judge with unmixed astonishment, first cocking his shaggy head on one side and then on the other, his bleached eyes narrowed to a slit. Now and then he favored the austere Mahaffy with a fleeting glance. He seemed intuitively to understand the comradeship of their degradation.

"Mr. Cavendish fetched me here on his raft. We tied up to the sho' this morning. It was there we met Mr. Carrington—I'd knowed him slightly back yonder in No'th Carolina," continued Yancy. "He said I'd find Hannibal with you. I was counting a heap on seeing my nevvy."

Carrington, no longer able to control himself, swung about on his heel.

"What's been done?" he asked, with fierce repression. "What's going to be done? Don't you know that every second is precious?"

"I am about to conclude my investigations, sir," said the judge with dignity.

Carrington stepped to the door. After all, what was there to expect of these men? Whatever their interest, it was plainly centered in the boy. He passed out into the hall.

As the door closed on him the judge turned again to the Scratch Hiller.

"Mr. Yancy, Mr. Mahaffy and I hold your nephew in the tenderest regard; he has been our constant companion ever since you were lost to him. In this crisis you may rely upon us; we are committed to his recovery, no matter what it involves." The judge's tone was one of unalterable resolution.

"I reckon you-all have been mighty good and kind to him," said Yancy huskily.

"We have endeavored to be, Mr. Yancy—indeed I had formed the resolution legally to adopt him should you not come to claim him. I should have given him my name, and made him my heir. His education has already begun under my supervision," and the judge, remembering the high use to which he had dedicated one of Pegloe's trade labels, fairly glowed with philanthropic fervor.

"Think of that!" murmured Yancy softly. He was deeply moved. So was Mr. Cavendish, who was gifted with a wealth of ready sympathy. He thrust out a hardened hand to the judge.

"Shake!" he said. "You're a heap better than you look." A thin ripple of laughter escaped Mahaffy, but the judge accepted Chills and Fever's proffered hand. He understood that here was a simple genuine soul.

"Price, isn't it important for us to know why Mr. Yancy thinks the boy has been taken back to North Carolina?" said Mahaffy.

"Just what kin is Hannibal to you, Mr. Yancy?" asked the judge resuming his seat.

"Strictly speaking, he ain't none. That he come to live with me is all owing to Mr. Crenshaw, who's a good man when left to himself, but he's got a wife, so a body may say he never is left to himself," began Yancy; and then briefly he told the story of the woman and the child much as he had told it to Bladen at the Barony the day of General Quintard's funeral.

REPORT ON AINSWORTH

House Committee Says Taft and Stimson Prejudged the Case

Washington, April 10.—President Taft and Secretary Stimson are severely arraigned in a report on the Ainsworth case presented to the house by the military affairs committee.

Secretary Stimson is charged with having committed "a great and irreparable wrong" and "a flagrant misuse of official authority" when, last February, he suspended General Ainsworth from his duties as adjutant general of the army and charged him with insubordination.

That the president and Stimson prejudged the case, that the accusations against the general were based upon prejudice and that the secretary of war has "an erroneous idea" of his relation to congress, are some of the other conclusions reached by a majority of the committee.

Following Ainsworth's relief from duty and when a court marital seemed probable, the president permitted him to retire from the army because of his long service. The report follows an investigation of Ainsworth's relief from duty.

CREW QUITS ONTARIO

Wreckers May Cut Through Hull to Quench Flames on Steamer

Montauk Point, L. I., April 10.—Rising seas forced the abandonment late last night of the steamer Ontario, which was beached to save her passengers when the vessel took fire early Monday.

Eight members of the crew took refuge on the revenue cutter Acushnet, and the remainder were taken aboard the wrecking tug Tasco.

The Acushnet stood by until she began to touch bottom with every swell, and then cast off. Shortly after the Tasco and the lighter, on which considerable of the cargo of the steamer had been placed, also pulled away.

The water which was poured into the hold of the steamer in a steady stream had little apparent effect on the fire.

It is probable that the wreckers will return to the vessel and they may be obliged to cut through the hull below the water line to flood the holds and extinguish the flames.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

E & W Shirts for Spring, $1.50

There are many different brands of shirts sold at $1.50—some are made from good fabrics, but poorly finished, while others are well made but from poor fabrics. All the fabrics that go into E & W Shirts must come up to a certain standard—they must count so many threads to the square and must measure so many yards to the pound—they must be at all times absolutely fast color; then they are cut and made by a high grade manufacturer who tailors them in just the same way as those costing twice as much; that's why I claim there is no better shirt for $1.50 than the E & W Shirt. Try one.

WANT SCHOOL HALL COMPLETED

Meeting of Quincy School Parents and Teachers

OTHER BUSINESS

At the adjourned meeting of 'The Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Quincy School of Atlantic last evening, the committee on membership recommended that there be no dues or membership fee. The recommendation was adopted as there were other plans to raise the necessary money in the near future.

The committee on recommendation for the Assembly Hall also reported and read the letter they hoped to send to the City Council.

The association feel strongly that the people of Ward Six have been patient and considerate in waiting these years for the full completion of this school, and it is their hope that the City authorities will see this and finish the hall this summer.

Words of appreciation were spoken of the efficiency and ingenuity of Principal Sampson and the teachers.

The councilmen of the Ward assured the association of their interest and hearty co-operation in trying to have the school building fully completed and made first class in every way.

Mr. Charles Gill said that there is more of a spirit of co-operation in the Atlantic people now than he had ever seen, and he felt sure that the request to finish the building would be granted.

President W. F. Cummings suggested that the members help Mr. Sampson by giving shrubs and other plants to beautify the grounds.

Vice President L. T. Gurney said that the people ought also to get busy and see that educational pictures are presented to the school to beautify the walls and educate the children in good art taste.

Councilman Hobbs showed the architect's plans of the hall after the meeting adjourned.

"NO WATER OF LIFE IN QUINCY"

The Quincy correspondent in the Granite Cutters' Journal speaking of the coming convention of the granite workers in Quincy next week says:

The convention will soon be in session, then the labors of the delegates will commence. Equal justice to all parts of the country is impossible but I hope that the conclusions of the convention will be as near to that ideal as it is possible for humans to get; and, that each delegate will endeavor to legislate not especially for his own locality but for the benefit of the entire organization. The delegates will find many places of interest in Quincy. This city is a part of the great metropolitan district of which Boston is the centre and inasfar as the production and cutting of granite is concerned, it is the metropolis.

Its proximity to Boston has its disadvantages. The citizens of Quincy believe in license to sell the "water of life," but not in Quincy. This condition makes it impossible for any one to run a first-class hotel on a paying basis, it has been tried often enough but each attempt has proven that a first-class liquor license was necessary before a hotel could be made a business success.

This does not hurt Quincy's prestige as a great granite producing centre, but it seems strange that men would vote "no," at election time and yet join clubs and other organizations where there is always "something doing," in the shape of "irrigation" or see to it that the expressman is onto his job. Probably if Boston was one hundred miles away instead of simply being on the other side of the Neponset River, things would be arranged differently.

$500 FINE FOR GRAFTER

Mayor Took Money For Influence In Awarding Contracts

Freehold, N. J., April 10.—Edwin W. Packer, mayor of Long Branch, was fined $500 after his counsel had entered a plea of non vult to an indictment charging the mayor with having accepted a sum of money from the representative of an asphalt paving company with a view to having the mayor use his influence in the awarding of contracts. The mayor also placed his resignation in the hands of the court.

Asked if he was the tool of others or the accomplice of others in this transaction, the mayor replied that he was absolutely alone.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

and a beautiful landscape disfigured by billboards especially in Wollaston and Atlantic. These board are used not only by foreign merchants but by our own. It is said the men taken to court from our police station are dirtier than others and that the station is much alive in unpleasant ways. We have poor architecture, mostly a hodge podge and any fine buildings we have, have been mostly the gifts from outside individuals. No we are not up to the standard and are dead.

Mrs. H. M. Willard said Quincy was alive although even she suggested improvements that should be such as social centers. Thought the club could add leaven to the whole and do much good work. She spoke of the historical assets of Quincy, its churches, etc.

Mrs. Wilson Marsh on the negative said Quincy was a perfectly good city spoiled—was in fact dead. Why even the Quincy Women's club owes its birth to two outsiders. Where are the men's clubs for higher life? The churches are more for mutual rather than outside work. We have a hospital but where are the contagious, maternity wards. Our tuberculosis camp is established but how about its sanitary conditions—cesspools running over and the city won't extend the sewer. Our library is no power for social service—there should be as many branch libraries as railroad stations. Should be social centres for girls—the boys have the Y. M. C. A. but nothing for the girls. School buildings should be used as clubs for girls and men under proper conditions. Playgrounds established are worse than none because not equipped Probation Court officer to be appointed but no union of the people in cooperating for the best man. Quincy is dead to its responsibilities. Applause.

This closed the argument from the platform. The first speaker from the floor in the affirmative was Mrs. Walter Pinkham who brought many statistics of the city's growth to show that it was not dead. She showed a picture of Wollaston as it was 40 years ago. All statistics show we are much alive for although we may be in debt $1,000,000 we have $2,000,000 assets which is a million to the good.

Mrs. Albert M. Parker spoke from the floor in the negative. She said we are always shirking our responsibilities and cited Adams academy going to waste, good high school and not enough teachers; too frequent changes of teachers. Quincy although once famous educationally was now dead.

Mrs. E. B. Marsh said Quincy was not dead with its 7 Parents' and Teachers' associations all alive to the needs o fthe growing population and new generation. Had other live organizations—the Choral society, Granite City club and other clubs for social life. Its chief charm was its ancient homes. Had public buildings and parks and was alive.

Mrs. Frederick H. Bishop in the negative said we had had presidents born, live and die here and they lived in the past. Wollaston was beautiful—is it beautiful now? Our fast increasing tenements, placed close to nice estates. Our water front was it to be all for business? We must organize to work. Get together to live and then we might have a resurrected city.

Mrs. Charles Sampson said Quincy was alive and dwelt particularly on the proposed water front improvements, public landings, etc., the shiyards and said "Don't be a calamity howler—Quincy is alive.

Miss Mary Louise Gavin on the negative said 'Quincy is dead." Houses are packing box type—no beauty—has record for crime which spoils reputation of city—business is going backward. Look at the granite business where money was once made. Who is making any now at it? Have waited 80 odd years to develop a water front after all business is dead. Inthe matter of schools we were famous once—does anybody hear anything about the Quincy schools now? Quincy lacks co-operation; all personal interests are dead to public interests.

Mrs. Claflin in rebuttal said what Quincy needed was good surgery to cut out the dead places. Co-operation and more red blood, no calamity howlers. Have every sort of material and should have an optimistic spirit—healthy outlook—be alive.

Mrs. Arnold said she still believed Quincy to be dead and had no doubt of the sympathies of her audience.

The judges, Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, Mrs. W. E. Alden, and Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney retired to decide which of the speakers had the best of the argument for or against and in their absence the club was entertained with music Mrs. Albert E. Avery singing a group of songs, accompanied by Mrs. Moulton piano and Roscoe Ricker, violin. There was also an informal discussion of what to donate the $25 for, to be given by the club for the best suggestive civic improvement the following being selected to vote upon.

To establish social centres.

That Adams Academy might be made use of.

City Planning.

School Nurse.

Gyms and Swimming pools.

Provide seats and resting places in centre of city.

Reflectoscope for Library extension work.

It was voted unanimously to give $25 toward bringing the reflectoscope. The judges reported that the negative side carried the debate and that Quincy was dead.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS

Civil service examinations are being held in Quincy today for clerical, janitor and foreman service of the city. There are three ladies and two men taking the clerical examination, nine janitors and eight foremen.

Tomorrow, Thursday, a civil service examination will be held for the fire and police service and an unusual large class is scheduled to take these examinations. Eighteen will take the examination for permanent firemen, five for call firemen and seven for the police service.

AFTER SHIPPING TRUST

Preliminary Investigation Is Taken Up by House Committee

Washington, April 10.—The "shipping trust" investigation has already been begun by the house committee on merchant marine and fisheries. In a statement issued by Chairman Alexander he says that the state railway associations, traffic associations and consular officers are being asked to co-operate and file information with the committee.

In about six weeks it is expected that a list of questions will be sent to steamship owners and it may be that some of them will be called to the capital to testify orally.

Emil L. Boas of New York, who is resident director of the Hamburg-American line and regarded as the head of the so-called "steamship trust," will likely be called to testify.

Y.M.C.A. LOSE TO CHAMPIONS

Quincy A. A. Team Does Great Work and Scores a Win

THE SUMMARY

Although the members of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. second basketball team fought strenuously with the Quincy A. A. second team during the first half of the game played last evening in St. Mary's hall, lack of endurance together with an inability to display the same form in the second session caused them to go down to defeat at the hands of the champions of the Greater Boston Basketball league by a score of 18 to 10. It was the first game of a series of two to be played for the championship among second teams of the city.

The next contest will take place in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Saturday evening, where the association boys feel they can turn the tables and thus necessitate a third struggle. At the end of the first half Quincy A.A. led 8 to 6.

In an endeavor to wrest away a victory, the lineups of the Y. M. C. A. team was changed considerably yet even this failed to produce any favorable results. Trask and Johnson, two formidable players of the Quincy High five, performed for the combination of the losers, but did not seem to play their usual brilliant game, due mainly to lack of team play on the part of the defeated contingency.

The star of the game was Frank Harmon, who covered the left forward position for the losers and who secured four baskets from the floor. H. Chapman and Dackers also played well for the winners, while Tirrell and Holmes excelled for the losers. The summary:

Quincy A.A. 2d	Quincy Y.M.C.A. 2d
H. Chapman rf,	lb, Holmes
Dackers, lf	rb, Parker
Jenkins, c	c, Tirrell
Harmon, rb	lf Johnson, Morris

Between the halves a fast and interesting game was furnished by the Oak Stars and the Belnaps, the former winning 28 to 14. Flaherty and Saville starred for the winners, while McCarthy was the conspicuous player for the losers. The summary:

Oak Stars	Belnaps
Saville rf	lb J. Donovan
Flaherty lf	rb Fitzjerald
L. Donovan c,	c, McCarthy
Joyce, rb	lf Bennett
J. McDonald lb	rf Costello

Score Oak Stars 28, Belnaps 14. Goals from floor Flaherty 5, Saville 5, L. Donovan, Joyce, J. McDonald, McCarthy 4, Bennett, Costello, Fitzjerald. Goals from fouls Saville 2. Referee Dufour. Scorer, Manning, Umpire R. Joyce. Timer, King. Time 20 minute halves. Attendance 250.

OFFICIAL CABLE FROM ROME DENIES DEATH OF POPE PIUS

Private Despatch from Madrid Early this Morning Announced Death of Pope

Official Dispatch Received From Rome at 1.30 Denies Rumor

POPE PIUS X. ON THE THRONE.

A private dispatch received at Madrid, this morning from Rome, which was later confirmed at the Nonciature, announced the death of Pope Pius X. The report of the Pope's death reached several newspapers and news agencies almost simultaneously. It came as a vague rumor and all efforts to get confirmation were unavailing. Following the first reports cable service from Rome ceased which gave the impression that the wires had been seized by a censor.

LATEST.

An official cable dispatch from Rome received at 1.30, says that the Pope is not dead.

HOUGHS NECK ASSOCIATES

The Houghs Neck Associates held a regular meeting in Associates hall Wednesday evening, which was largely attended. Much discussion prevailed on the ministrel show, which is to be held on April 19 and 20 in the Palm Theatre. The reports of the various committees were read and accepted and much routine business was adopted. A committee was appointed to conduct the building committee of the City Council, round the dif-ferent sections of Houghs Neck next Saturday in an endeavor to secure a suitable site for a playground.

MOVEMENT FOR PARK BEAUTIFUL

Meeting of Wollaston Park Improvement Association

COMMITTEES

At its monthly meeting on Wednesday evening in the Hamilton bungalow on Elm avenue the Wollaston Park Improvement Association continued its program of community betterment.

A movement was started for beautiful grounds in Wollaston Park by the offering of prizes to children of a certain age. This was referred to the proper committee and will come up for action by the Association at its May meeting.

In the absence of R. T. Anthony, the secretary, W. J. Gaffney was elected secretary pro tem. A large number of new members were admited bringing the membership list within a score of the hundred mark. President E. O. Woodward was in the chair.

The association's petition for the reconstruction of Elm avenue will be presented to the City Council on Monday evening and bears a long list of signatures.

The association put itself on record as unanimously in favor of the acceptance by the city of Muirhead and Stanton streets.

Question of a permanent meeting place was brought up, the Hamilton bungalow being offered until such was secured. After a discussion it was referred to the house committee.

Hen houses as a nuisance were brought up, it being the sentiment of the association that except in one or two flagrant cases action was not necessary as nearly all were well kept.

One or two old unoccupied buildings that were a fire menace and a detriment to the community were brought up and steps made to investigate the conditions. Other nuisances and improvements were discussed.

Announcement was made of the appointment of committees for the year by President Woodward. These with a few exceptions are incomplete and will be filled as the association expands into the necessary districts.

The committees appointed were:

Membership—John L Hamilton, Wallace Egerton, William A. Field, Louis S. Cleaves.

GRANITE CITY CLUB ANNUAL

Holds Banquet and Entertainment at Colonial Hall

GRAND SUCCESS

The annual banquet of the Granite City club was held Wednesday evening at Colnnial hall, and not only was the attendance the largest in the history of the club, but the affair was the most successful in every way, of any previous banquet, this well-known social organization has ever held.

The banquet menu was unusually good and well served, the music by the orchestra lively, and plenty of it, and the entertainment excellent. With these three combinations and a jovial crowd of business men, it could not have been otherwise than a success.

EBEN W. SHEPPARD, President.

The banquet was announced for 6.30 and for half an hour previous to this, the members and their guests, who included several of the Argentine naval officers, stationed in Quincy at the present time, gathered in the club rooms where they were made welcome by President Sheppard and the officers of the club.

The banquet was served in Colonial hall and never did the hall look more attractive for a banquet. One table was arranged across the end for the officers and principal guests, while four additional tables ran lengthwise of the hall. Seats had been arranged for 116 and every seat was taken.

It was but a little after the appointed hour that announcement was made that all was ready and as the strains of the orchestral music was heard, the procession was formed for the march to the hall. This was led by President Sheppard, with James T. Penniman, the club's most venerable member Then came Mayor Stone and Vice President McQuarrie, ex-President Tilden and ex-Mayor Shea. Treasurer Cudworth and Nathan Ames of the House Committee.

These gentlemen occupied seats at the head table, the remainder of the party choosing any seat they desired At each plate was a carnation, and hardly had these been transferred to the lapel of the coat, than President Sheppard rapped for order and after briefly welcoming the members and guests, said that the club had lost one member by death since the last banquet, Col. Charles H. Porter. In accordance with the custom of the club he would ask all to rise and bow their heads in silent prayer for those that have gone before. For the next minute there was a death-like stillness as the members, with bowed heads, recalled to mind those whom they so well remembered. Then came the order "Gentlemen be seated," and for the next hour P. and J. Besse were kept busy serving the following menu:

Celery Olives Radishes
Consomme en tasse-Grisini
Creme Halibut en Ramequins
Fillet de Boeuf larde String Beans
Potatoes Punch a la Romaine
Lobster Salad Chicken Salad
French Harlequin Ice Cream
Frozen Pudding

BANQUET AND INSTALLATION

C. E. Society of First Presbyterian Church Annual Affair

OFFICERS INSTALLED

The vestry of the First Presbyterian church presented a most animated scene Wednesday evening on the occasion of the annual banquet and installation of officers of the Christian Endeavor society. The affair was successful in every way and proved an attraction for a large number. A feature was made of the decorations and the arrangement of the banquet tables, which formed the letter "E", also added to the effect. Large red flags bearing the inscription of the society, made in the form of crescents, were used generously. Every one present was given a Christian Endeavor banner, with ribbons of red and blue attached. Even the napkins bore a picture of the place where the Christian Endeavor movement was started, carrying out the thoughts and principles that the society embodies.

The banquet was served shortly after seven o'clock, the menu consisting of rolls, ham, creamed potatoes, potato salad, salmon salad, pickles, ice cream, cake, coffee and cocoa.

The banquet concluded, the president of the organization, Wendell Clark, arose and in a few well chosen words welcomed the gathering. He gave a brief resume of work accomplished during the past year and spoke of the influence and good it bids fair to exert in the future.

The first number on the postprandial program consisted of a yell, given by the Blues, the winners of the highest number of points in the recent Efficiency Contest, to the Reds, under whose direction the menu was provided. The yell was as follows:

Quin—z-e-e—C. E.,
The Red and Blue,
Contest is through,
Did the Reds Win?
"Not Quite"
But their supper's out of sight.

Two stanzas of "Onward Christian Soldiers" were next sung, followed in turn by a scripture reading by Mrs. J. A. Matheson and a prayer by Alfred Bishop, an honorary member.

The reports of the various officers and chairmen of the different committees were read and accepted with loud applause. The reports showed the society to be in a most prosperous and flourishing condition with over one hundred names on the roll. After further remarks by the toastmaster on diverse maters, the installation of officers took place, conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. A. Matheson, who also delivered a short address. The officers installed for the ensuing year included:

President—Wendell Clark.
Vice president—Miss Margaret J. Michael.
Recording Secretary—Miss Helen Kenn.
Corresponding secretary—Miss Mary F. Morrison.
Treasurer—John McLay.
Pianist—Miss Nettie Miller.

The Chairmen of the different committees are as follows:— , Lookout, Jessie Shirley; Prayer-meeting Ruth Kemp; Social, Susan Tytler;

CONNELLEY—CULLINAN.

There was great joy among the many friends of the contracting parties, when it was learned that Thomas E. Connelley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Connelley of 77 Whitfell street was united in wedlock Wednesday evening at 7.30 o'clock to Miss Catherine Cullinan, of Watson road. The wedding ceremony took place at the rectory of the Church of St. John the Baptist and was solemnized by the pastor, Rev. John J. Coan.

Only the immediate relatives of the couple were present. The bridesmaid was Miss Katherine Cullinan, of Charlestown, a cousin of the bride, while the best man was John Murphy, a well-known young man of this city. The bride was attired in a tan colored travelling suit and carried a bouquet of carnations. The newly married couple enjoy the acquaintance of a wide circle of friends to whom the announcement of their marriage is most pleasing.

Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Connolley left for New York where they will spend a two weeks' honeymoon and on their return will reside on Gay street.

Shoes: Spring Styles

For the Family

Durability is a factor to be reckoned with in the yearly shoe bill. A shoe that wears twenty per cent longer than another, at the same price, brings a decided economy in the yearly summing up of the family shoe bill---and the larger the family the greater the total saving.

The RALSTON--for men, the AMERICAN LADY--for women, not only well made of selected materials---and hence give the maximum of service---but they fit well; and the good fitting of a shoe adds to its length of service, because a shoe that fits isn't subjected to straining at wrong points.

Come in and be fitted correctly.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The candidate who only gets one vote never feels much doubt as to where his support comes from.

The National Guard will not flinch if called to Mexico. Our "tin soldiers" have never been afraid of lead.

The successful campaign manager is the man who can take rainbows and work them off on the public as all wool and a yard wide.

There isn't much news from the journalistic view-point in the death of an aviator. The real element of surprise comes when you find one alive.

The British coal miners are going back to work, as a holiday does not seem wholly enjoyable when you have only shoe leather soup for dinner.

It would be gratifying to many in the South Quincy district if some one would locate the proposed site for the Adams school and put a flag on it. Occasionally you hear some one say "Oh, yes, I know where it is" but when one gets as far as Madison avenue they don't know which from t'other.

Again we say "good for W. H. Teasdale" for by his personal efforts another train has been secured for Quincy,one much needed and wanted at 1.03 P. M. This train will be added when the spring timetable goes into effect, and others are contemplated.

The train at 7.03 P. M. and the proposed one at 1.03 P. M. are what has been demanded for some time. It has taken many conferences to bring it about and the personal attention and co-operation of the Board of Trade committee, headed by Mr. Teasdale.

This movement for better train service shows not only that some of us are alive to the needs of the city but that we can get what we want if we go after it in the right spirit. This will apply to other things as well as train service.

QUINCY—DEAD OR ALIVE?

The Women's club had a debate the other afternoon on, Quincy—Dead or Alive, and some pretty good points were brought out both in the affirmative and negative. We think it would be a good idea for the Board of Trade to take the same subject for one of its meetings and then for both associations to get together and thrash it out, pro and con, for if the negatives carried the day in the Board of Trade debate as in the Women's club and found Quincy was dead, it might be construed as a hopeful sign of life as showing the need of doing something to improve existing conditions, also the need of united action. What Quincy needs is co-operation, a fact we have often emphasized. We must give up saying "What is there in it for me? and say instead "What will it do for my city." It is good advice not to be a calamity howler but to get out and do something.

In union there is strength. Get together and do something even if it is nothing very big or wonderful. Co-operation is the key note of what Quincy needs.

AMERICAN INVESTMENTS IN MEXICO.

It was with cheerful optimism that many of our business men invested good money in "Marvellous Mexico" as it used to be called. Four, five, and six per cent in a home city looked pretty small compared with the boundless resources of this golden land. Reckoning ores and timber and crops at their value just across our line, it was easy enough to figure a "Get rich quick" profit on paper.

There is however, an immeasurable difference between the southernmost town in Arizona, Texas, or New Mexico, and the country across the border In one, the fundamental conviction exists, as the result of a national and racial inheritance, that laws must be obeyed and debts must be paid.

In the other, no such conviction has ever existed. The people under the despotism of Diaz never had the chance to make the partial advance in self government accomplished in the South American states. Timber is not worth much if any old dark skinned tramp can come along and burn it up, with nothing to forbid him save your gun.

All which goes to show that before our investors send money out of the country, they should examine not merely the resources on which they are betting, but the laws and social institutions which alone make those resources of value.

BLOODHOUNDS ON TRAIL.

The pursuit by bloodhounds of the Allen outlaws, for the recent Hillsville, Va., murders, will suggest to most people that the mountaineers are being pursued by large and ferocious beasts. Their eyes are pictured as glowing like coals of hatred, and their claws as tearing the quarry limb from limb should they overtake them in their mountain fastnesses.

The popular impression of bloodhounds is derived mostly from the wicked looking beasts carted around the country by the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" companies. These are not a pure bloodhound, being a cross between that animal and a great Dane or other ferocious and powerful dog. The real bloodhound, when he overtakes his prey, merely sniffs of the object of his pursuit, and wags his tail in joy at a task well done.

Such bloodhounds as there were in the South were exterminated by the Union soldiers during the Civil war, and the breed was considered extinct for years thereafter. In 1888 the Westminister Kennel Club of New York exhibited several of them imported from England. A Vermont breeder was so struck with their beauty, that he began raising them. They have become tremendously useful in overtaking criminals, particularly in the Western states, where many a train robber and outlaw has yielded to their supreme gift of following a human trail.

The modern outlaw and criminal is a resourceful person. He goes about his task with intelligence and quick wit. With keen foresight he apparently covers all trace of his presence. Yet he has left one intangible thing behind, the odor of the human body. This the bloodhound, and only the bloodhound can follow.

This wonderful creature will track him through crowded city streets, through railroad stations and populous haunts of men, will often follow him when he mounts into a carriage. One escaped Western criminal padded the hoofs of his mule, but occasionally got off the beast to see if the padding was all right. These occasional foot-prints enabled the hounds to do their work.

The bloodhound often seems the very finger of fate, when he follows this elusive trail through a populous town, and stops before the door of some citizen supposed to be upright and law abiding. He could conceal his evil deed from the eyes and cunning of man, from all agencies but the nose of the bloodhound. Truly a creature that can thus penetrate and defeat the devices of the wicked is a friend of man indeed, in these days of lawlessness and an increasing criminal class.

QUINCY POINT MEN'S CLUB

Gives its Second Annual Banquet and Entertainment

THE MENU

The Quincy Point Church Men's club held its second annual banquet in the vestry of the church Wednesday evening attended by about 125 people.

Promptly at 6.45 o'clock the Ladies' Aid society served the following menu:

Tomato Bisque
Olives Cold Ham Green Peas
Roast Beef Mashed Potatoes
Country Club Ice Cream
Bon Bons
Cake Crackers Coffee Milk

The tables were decorated in a very artistic manner with Easter lilies, ferns, geraniums and rubber plants. Pink, red and white carnations were placed at each place and were worn by the ladies and gentlemen for the remainder of the evening.

At the close of the banquet bon bons were brought on and at a signal a succession of snaps were heard after which every one put on a paper cap, much to the amusement of all.

At the head table were seated Rev. and Mrs. C. P. Marshall, E. A. Belcher, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hendry and Mrs. W. F. Perry.

J. W. Hendry, president of the club was the toastmaster. Mr. Hendry in welcoming the guests to the supper table said "Every man for himself and the women can come in where they can," after which everybody gave their attention to the supper and showed how Quincy Point stomachs may be filled in a very shout space of time

During the banquet music was rendered by the club orchestra which rendered several national and popular airs.

To start the ball rolling, Mr. Hendry requested everybody to sing "John Brown's Body" and several voices came out loud and strong showing that their strength had not all been used in eating.

The first speaker of the evening was J. C. Collingwood who spoke on the past history of the Men's club. He said 30 new members had been taken into the club. And there is a balance of $50 in the treasury, which looks good for the Men's club.

Business was next in order and a committee for next year was appointed by J. W. Hendry as follows: Rev. C. P. Marshall, John Larder, C. B. Newcomb and J. A. Fitton. The last Wednesday of each month will be a business meeting, and the club will meet every second and fourth Wednesdays from September to April inclusive.

The evening's entertainment included, vocal selections by, E. J. Miller, Mrs. W. F. Perry, A. T. McFarlane an Miss Mary Johnson. Humorous stories were told by E. P. Barrows, T. B. Pollard and C. W. Newcomb who were requested to repeat them several times. The stories were of the righ kind, and many knocks were passed off in the stories.

J. A. Fitton spoke on the Ladies' Aid and its help to the church and of the new women's class which he was trying to introduce into the church.

Charles Sherburne spoke on the Sunday school which now has 221 members. Good work is being done by the school and it is one of the best in the city.

E. H. Lee spoke on the change in the by-laws of the parish and of the prudential committee being raised from 3 to 10 so as to get into better touch with all the members of the parish.

Miss Catherine Yule gave a humorous reading on "The Inventor's Wife," which proved both interesting and successful.

Mrs. Percy A. Holman spoke on the Ladies' Aid and said the way to win the confidence of the men was to, "Feed the Brutes."

Rev. C. P. Marshall spoke of the work done by the children in the Sunday school, and the work of the Men's club in bringing the men together and the good fellowship among the members.

T B. Pollard spoke on fellowship, the church being the place to bring friends and the welcome of people which meant the development of good fellowship.

E. A. Belcher the next speaker believes in suppers and banquets which have a tendency to bring into closer touch, the men of the vicinity and to promote good fellowship.

The next speaker A. N. Murray spoke on the City of Quincy. He touched briefly on its past history saying if Quincy has had a past why not a future.

Dr. E. H. Bushnell spoke briefly on people in Quincy and of the church being the place for young people to prepare for the futur.e.

G. E. Russell, who took part in the recent entertainment of the club spoke briefly on the play part of the Men's club.

James Melville tried to impress on the people that he could not speak, and instead proved that he could.

The evening closed with the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

Everyone voted the banquet a great success and all are eagerly awaiting the next.

MRS. JOHN J. NICHOLS.

The funeral services for Mary A., wife of John Joseph Nichols of Station street, were held at the Hall Place M. E. church, Tuesday at 2 P. M., the pastor Rev. T. C. Martin, officiating.

Mr. Martin spoke of the membership of the deceased in the church, her trust in God and her faith and fortitude during her long illness. Miss Helen Martin sang two solos, and there was also singing by the Lodges in attendance.

At the close of the service by the pastor, English Ivy Lodge, Daughters of St. George and the Independent Companions of America held their ritualistic services. Interment was at the Hall Place Cemetery.

Mrs. Nichols was born in Cornwall, England, Sept. 22, 1863 and died at her home on Station street on Easter Sunday morning, aged 48 years. She has been in America 17 years.

Mrs. Nichols has been sick for three years. In the summer of 1909 she underwent a serious operation at the Massachusetts General Hospital, which was followed by another operation a few months later. Although she seemed better, the improvement was not lasting. Last summer another operation was attempted but was unsuccessful. Since that time she has gradually failed until on Jan. 5th she was forced to take her bed and even then her hope was good. Day and night has been one continuous round of suffering, each day the burden growing heavier and heavier. For weeks she was unconscious and passed away peacefully on Easter Sunday morning.

The floral tributes which were many and beautiful were as follows:

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

SCHOOL NOTES.

It is with great regret that the School Committee accepted the resignation of Mr. Howlett at the high school, as it realized how strong his influence has been in building up the school. By no means a martinet in discipline, his aim has been to develop a sense of responsibility in the individual boy and girl which would act for the good of the whole school. The High school under his direction has been a work shop where the pupils have met and worked like men and women. The scholarship of the school has improved wonderfully, during his term of office and the percentage of failure, due to the sympathetic and working interest on the part of his teachers has been reduced one-half. All in all, it has been a highly successful administration and one to which Mr. Howlett may look back with pride and satisfaction.

Mr. Ernest L. Collins who comes to take Mr. Howlett's place is already known to some Quincy people through his term of service at the Braintree High school. Mr. Collins has had a broad preparation for his work in Quincy, having been in charge for four or five years of a large High school in Athol and more recently having been the sub-master and for three months the acting master at the Everett High school in a building which cares for about one thousand pupils. He is much interested in athletics and music having been the athletic manager as well as the leader of the boys' glee club in the Everett High school. The school committee looks forward to a successful career for Mr. Collins in Quincy.

The superintendent of schools spoke to the High school boys in the assembly hall yesterday morning, in explanation of the new half time industrial school which the school committee plans to open next September. Boys of 15 years and over who are planning to leave school to go to work or boys who wish to change their course will have an opportunity by means of this school to gain their education at the same time that they enter upon purposeful and profitable employment. As the first year class will be limited to about 24 boys who may enter either the machinists' or the joiner's courses, is necessary to secure registrations in advance in order that boys who wish to enter the school may be placed in some position before fall. The school department urges no boys toward this course. Strictly speaking its attitude is simply to offer alternate weekly instruction to such boys as the industrial establishment choose to send to the school. In other words, the school will educate the employed boy while he is employed. As a matter of fact, when asked to do so, the school will bring the boy and the employer into touch so that the boy may secure employment and will assist the employer by recommending only such boys as are mechanically inclined. Hours of employment, wages, etc. are matters which are settled between the boy and the employer. The school will supply the education which will make the boy more proficient and capable in his calling and will follow up the boy during his weeks in the shop to see that he has an opportunity to secure training in all phases of his calling With the right support, there is opportunity to develop in this city one of the largest and most diversified schools in this country.

WILLARD SCHOOL.

The Willard and the Gridley Bryant schools have united in engaging the Samuel N. Wood Art Exhibit of Providence, R. I. for April 29 and 30. The Exhibit will be held in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy. Two hundred perfect reproductions of the masterpieces of sculpture and architecture will be on exhibition.

Several teachers from Malden visited the school, Tuesday forenoon, to observe the exercises in physical education and to witness organized games played at recess. They expressed themselves as much interested as educational work of a similar nature is soon to be introduced in their schools.

The baseball team has been putting in some strenuous practice this week, preparatory to the opening of the league next Monday. The nine promises to be stronger even than it was last year, especially in the box.

Mr. Charles H. Johnson will give his illustrated lecture on "Historic Quincy" at the next meeting of the parents and teachers which will be held in the near future.

WOODWARD INSTITUTE.

One of the cooking classes at the Woodward Institute gave a chafing dish luncheon this afternoon to the faculty of the school. In this as in the other luncheons given by that department, the entire work of marketing, planning, cooking and serving has been done by the girls, a small and limited sum having been allowed for each occasion.

The many friends of Miss Addie E. Towne for some years the teacher of French and German, who has been on a year's leave of absence, will regret to learn that her health has not recovered sufficiently to permit her to resume teaching and she has consequently resigned her position.

MASS. FIELDS SCHOOL.

An executive meeting of the Parent Teachers' Association is called to meet with Sidney Smith, president, on Friday evening. D. H. Goodspeed, Mrs. Douglas Wetmore and Louis Fleshman have been appointed a committee to nominate officers for the ensuing year.

Grade V. cleared nine dollars by their recent candy sale, which will be added to the art fund. Grade VI will hold a sale Friday afternoon.

The base ball team organized Tuesday noon and elected Waldo Fowler captain, and Ralph Lyons, manager.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

The regular meeting of the Wollaston Parent-Teachers' Association was held in the assembly hall Monday evening owing to the illness of Mrs. Pinkham, president and the absence of Albert Murray vice president the meeting was in charge of D. H. Goodspeed, master of the school.

Addresses were given by F. V. Thompson, assistant superintendent of schools, Boston, and A. L. Barbour, superintendent of schools in Quincy, on Vocational Training.

Mr. Barbour explained briefly the courses in vocational training which are to be added to our educational system in September.

Frank A. Page was elected a member of the art committee for school decorations.

Mrs. Alfred Richards, Mrs. George Perry, and J. Arthur Favreau were appointed members of the nominating committee.

Vocal solos by Mrs. James S. Perkins, accompanied by Mrs. Mary Chandler West, were very much enjoyed. Refreshments were served by mothers of pupils in the sixth grade.

The suits for the base ball team were delivered Monday. This year they have Wollaston G. S. instead of a monogram. The colors are red and gray. Wollaston promises to have a strong team in the Grammar School league.

The new school has many visitors. Teachers from Cambridge, Milton, Malden, Maine, Bridgewater, also many parents have visited the past month, nearly one hundred have been registered.

TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

The members and friends of the recently organized Quincy Teachers' Association are looking forward with much pleasure to its first regular meeting, Wednesday evening, April 17, in the Coddington School Hall.

The speaker of the occasion will be Professor Thomas Crosby, Jr., of Brown University. Professor Crosby is a reader of unusual note, which augurs a large and apreciative audience.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

New copies of old favorites have recently been added to the library which means the pleasure of reading fresh, clean books rather than well-worn and soiled ones. These comprise attractive sets of Thackeray, Victor Hugo, Scott, and George Eliot, and some of the more popular titles of Dumas; also the biographical edition of Robert Louis Stevenson's works. The latter is of special value as in each volume there is a preface by Mrs. Stevenson, explaining the history of the book, and the exact conditions under which it came to be written.

There is the new edition published by Houghton Mifflin Co., of Dana's "Two years before the mast," with illustrations by E. Boyd Smith, and a charming copy of Hawthorne's "Our old home" with excellent print and photogravure illustrations. The Charles Dickens' centenary has been made the occasion of the purchase of a new set of his books, Macmillan edition.

The works of Christopher Marlowe, edited by C. F. Tucker Brooke, comprises in one volume a serviceable edition of Marlowe's accepted writings.

FOR A FLIGHT OVER ATLANTIC

Atwood Would Like to Have Cruiser to Aid Him

PLANS TO FLY 3120 MILES

Aviator Points Out That No Birdman Has Been Killed In Long and Well Planned Flight—Asks Government to Station Swift Vessel at Point Where It Can Help Him If It Becomes Necessary

Washington, Aril 11.—Harry N. Atwood, the Boston aviator, is in Washington seeking to interest the government in his proposed transatlantic flight to the extent of detailing a cruiser or some other swift vessel to stand about 500 miles off the coast and render him assistance if necessary.

Atwood plans to start from Boston June 29 and fly to Newfoundland, 1280 miles, thence to England, a further distance of about 1840 miles. Arrangements which promise success are being made whereby the British government will station a vessel the same distance off the English coast and the aviator will take his own chances in the over-ocean fight between the two ships.

The flight will be made purely for scientific purposes. Atwood has no backers and he expects no immediate profit from the enterprise. Discussing the hesitation of newspaper managers, exhibition promoters and others to encourage long flights of this character, Atwood made a few eye-opening remarks:

"If you will study the history of aviation," said the birdman, "you will find that no aviator has yet been killed in long and well planned flight. The deaths all come from local exhibitions, where a purse has been put up and the people expect sensational acts. Rodgers, for example, flew safely across the American continent and then was killed in a local show.

Of course my transatlantic trip is experimental and I do not know what conditions I shall encounter, but that is why I want to make the flight. I have no fear of danger and ask nothing of the government except that as a precaution it will, if it can see its way clear, station a cruiser or some other swift vessel at a given point where it can help me if assistance is necessary.

"I hope to fly an average of fifty miles an hour, so of course nothing that floats will be fast enough to convoy me, but I will keep directly in the path of the transatlantic steamers and my progress will be reported. I have no wireless apparatus of my own.

"It certainly is surprising to me that the public should fail to distinguish the difference between a flight of this character, which to them bristles with danger, and that over an exhibition ground which appears to them harmless. The real danger to an aviator is in the air and nowhere else. If he can maintain his machine steadily without being called upon to execute any movement except those of correct manipulation to maintain a plain flight, he is as safe as on land provided his engine keeps going.

"I have now a letter from a very prominent man trying to dissuade me from this attempt and suggesting that I confine myself to exhibition flights at home. His fear is perfectly natural, but he does not realize that it is the exhibition flights which are dangerous. Yet it is almost impossible to get financial backing for any but a fancy flight."

most excellent one and pronounced by all to have been exceptionally good. During the serving of the banquet the Wollaston orchestra were kept busy. All the popular airs were played and the musical voices of the club members harmonized well with the music.

Near the end of the banquet, envelopes containing three cigars, the gift of John H. Johnson the well-known cigar man, were placed at each plate, and a little later John was toasted in fragrant cigar smoke.

The banquet over, the entertainment program was immediately put on. The entertainment was particularly good. It was given by the Standish male quartette, Walter C. Mooney, tenor; Otto E. Lesis, second tenor and accompanist; Robert L. Van Buskirk, baritone and entertainer, and William H. Corliss, bass. Assisting these were Herbert A. Clark, humorist and Bennett Springer, magician.

The program included selections by the quartette, readings and stories by Mr. VanBuskirk, character songs and impersonations, Mr. Clark, and magic by Mr. Springer whose tricks although done in the open were very mystifying. He however, said they were easy. The long program closed with "The Rosary" by the quartette.

The banquet and entertainment over the club rooms were again sought and an hour or more was passed in billiards, pool and cards. As noted above it was pronounced by all to have been an unqualified success.

Prominent Men Who Figure In the New York Situation

rality of 75,000, and Lorimer's candidate, Len Small, got only a little over a third of the votes Deneen polled.

Senator Cullom's defeat by Lawrence Y. Sherman for United States senator was another grave blow for the Lorimer men. They backed Cullom against Sherman, as they championed Taft against Roosevelt. It is estimated Sherman's plurality will run above 25,000.

Lorimer's big fight against Deneen was centred in Chicago. The governor will have more than 25,000 plurality here and his down-state vote will pile this up until the state executive's managers say it will reach 75,000.

T. R. IN PENNSYLVANIA

Says "We Knocked Them Over the Ropes In Illinois"

Philadelphia, April 11.—Theodore Roosevelt went campaigning across the state of Pennsylvania from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia yesterday, appealing for support at the primaries on Saturday.

It was the liveliest day of his campaign thus far. In no other state which he has traversed since he began his canvass has he found the crowds so large and demonstrative. Wherever he spoke he asked the people to do on Saturday what Illinois did Tuesday.

"We knocked them over the ropes in Illinois," he said, "and I want to see them take the count in Pennsylvania."

He gave for the first time his opinion of the outcome of the campaign, saying: "If we, as I believe we will, win in this fight, I want you to remember that our success must be made to turn for social and industrial justice."

PURITY HEAD'S VIEW

Canadian Cities Much More Moral Than Those In United States

Ottawa, April 11.—Rev. B. S. Stedwell of La Cross, Wis., president of the World's Purity Federation, told the Social Purity convention here that cities were more moral in Canada than in the United States.

"After visiting Canadian cities from the west coast to Toronto and Ottawa," he said, "I have to believe that they are ahead of the cities in the United States in morals as in natural beauty."

CLEAN SWEEP BY ROOSEVELT

All Maine's Twelve Delegates Are Pledged to Him

TAFT HURT BY RECIPROCITY

Delegates From Farming Districts In Solid Array Against President—Representation of Delegates For Vermont Is Taft Six, Roosevelt Two—New York Convention Adopts Resolution Urging State's Delegation to Chicago Convention to Vote For Taft

Bangor, Me., April 11.—Theodore Roosevelt won a sweeping victory in Maine over President Taft. The twelve delegates from this state to the Republican convention in Chicago will go pledged to Colonel Roosevelt.

In the Republican state convention the four Roosevelt delegates-at-large were elected over the Taft delegates by a vote of 739 to 497. The Second, Third and Fourth district conventions elected two delegates each favorable to the ex-president.

The First district elected Roosevelt delegates some days ago.

In the Second district convention the Roosevelt forces won by a vote of 180 to 104. This district includes Androscoggin, Sagadahoc, Lincoln and Knox counties.

In the Fourth district the delegates were instructed for Roosevelt by a vote of 184 to 75.

The stand taken by President Taft for reciprocity with Canada played a large part in the results here. The delegates from Aroostook and the farming districts in the central part of the state came to the convention in solid array against the president.

What strength Taft had was in the southern counties. The action taken by the district convention demonstrated, however, an overwhelming sentiment in the state for Roosevelt as against Taft.

The results of the vote here are of great significance. It means the death of the "Old Guard" in this state and puts Fred Hale of Portland to the front as the new leader of the Republican party.

TAFT IS COMMENDED

Delegates-at-Large Not Instructed but Favor the President

Montpelier, Vt., April 11.—Of the eight Vermont delegates to the Chicago convention of the Republican party, two will go instructed for Taft and two for Roosevelt, while the four delegates-at-large chosen are are unpledged, although all four expressed a personal desire for President Taft's renomination. The convention indorsed the administration of Taft and condemned some of Roosevelt's principles, including the recall of judges and of judicial decisions.

The Taft ticket won in the state convention. Two of the delegates were chosen unanimously, and the other two after spirited contests between the Taft and Roosevelt forces, in which the Taft majorities were 54 and 53, respectively.

Chairman Williams of the Republican state committee, and the principal Taft leader in Vermont, admitted that while the delegates-at-large were uninstructed he was sure they would vote for Taft.

IN THE EMPIRE STATE

But One Vigorous Opponent to the Taft Presidential Plank

Rochester, N. Y., April 11.—The Republican party of New York state at its spring convention here declared for the renomination of President Taft and adopted a resolution urging the state's delegation to the Chicago national convention to vote to that end.

The Taft presidential plank found an opponent in City Comptroller Prendergast of New York, who made a vigorous speech against the platform and declared that Taft could not be reelected. Prendergast was the Roosevelt delegate from Kings county, and his was the only speech made in opposition to the platform, which was adopted viva voce, with only a few dissenting votes, by the 1015 delegates.

Senator Root, one of the "big four" selected to go to Chicago, was the chief champion of the platform and made a speech in which he vigorously defended the American judicial system and sharply attacked the recall of judges.

ROOSEVELT'S BIG VICTORY

He Has Plurality of More Than 115,000 Over Taft in Illinois

Chicago, April 11.—Lorimerism was buried in practically every conceivable way as the full results of the primary became known. The independent voter put his shoulder to the wheel with the regular organization forces and routed the last vestige of Lorimerism from Illinois and Cook county.

Mr. Roosevelt carried Cook county by a plurality of more than 115,000. Governor Deneen, the "best hated" man in the state by Lorimer, came home a winner by an estimated plu-

RAILROAD CONSOLIDATION

Hundred Million Dollars Involved In Plans For Improvement

Boston, April 11.—"New England Lines" is the name of the big railroad concern which is to spend $100,000,000 for Boston under the terms of a bill which has the approval of Governor Foss, President Mellen and the legislative committee on railroads.

These words are to be written on cars, on stationery and on all the property of the New Haven which, however, does not lose its identity as a corporation.

The railroad bill, soon to come up in a message from the governor to the legislature, is the most gigantic piece of railroad construction work ever planned for New England.

It is quite independent of the Grand Trunk proposition, which is also favored by Governor Foss and the port directors.

The $100,000,000 bill is the merger bill of the New Haven and the Boston and Maine as the "New England Lines."

FINED FOR AUTO SPEEDING

Beatty Takes Air Route In Answering Summons to Court

Hempstead, L. I., Aril 11.—George W. Beatty, an aviator, who was arrested not long ago for automobile speeding, flew from his hangar at Nassau Boulevard to the courtroom at Mineola. There he pleaded guilty to exceeding the speed limit and paid a fine of $10, remarking that he had thought himself in the air and forgot his speed. Marshall Reid of Philadelphia, with his mechanic, Horton Hoover, also flew over in aeroplanes to act as witnesses for Beatty.

Justice Weeks was invited to take an aero joy ride, but declined. A large crowd was attracted to the courthouse when the aviators appeared.

GIANT TITANIC ON HER MAIDEN VOYAGE

Steamer Can Accommodate About 3500 Passengers

Southampton, Eng., April 11.—Bearing 1400 passengers, the new White Star liner Titanic, the biggest ship in the world, sailed from here for New York on her maiden voyage. The Titanic is of 46,000 tons displacement.

Many notables were among the passengers and officials of the company were present when the leviathan drew away from her docks. Great crowds gathered at the pier and cheered as the giantess under convoy of a fleet of tugs, got under way.

The Titanic was launched at Belfast on Feb. 21. It contains squash courts, a gymnasium, Turkish and electric swimming baths and accommodations for 3500 persons. She is a sister ship of the Olympic, 45,000 tons.

WAS DOING HOUSEWORK

Man Who Fails to Appear In Court Is Excused by Judge

Philadelphia, April 11.—When Robert J. Keck, accused of malpractice and perjury, failed to appear at the appointed time in court at Allentown the sheriff sent a detail of deputies to find him. They found him at home washing dishes.

When brought into court he explained that he had not thought his case would be called so early in the morning and since his wife had a broken ankle she made him do the housework, court or no court.

"Your excuse is accepted," said Judge Taylor. "A man who washes the dishes under such circumstances is not in contempt of court."

ORIGINAL STATES' DEMAND

Want Account For Money Received From Sale of Northwest Territory

Washington, April 11.—The senators of Virginia and West Virginia have begun a movement to require the United States government to account to the thirteen original states for the money received from the sale of the Northwest Territory, although a century has passed since the territory was given by Virginia to the federal government.

The sum probably would amount to more than $100,000,000.

Senator Chilton of West Virginia introduced in the senate a bill to give to the court of claims jurisdiction to settle the claim.

Held Prisoner by Orozco

El Paso, Tex., April 11.—An appeal for aid, directed to United States Senator Works of California, was received from C. A. Heberlein of Los Angeles, Cal., who is held a prisoner in a jail in Jiminez, Mex., by General Orozco, the commander-in-chief of the insurrectos in northern Mexico.

President Taft Lays Corner-Stone

Washington, April 11.—President Taft laid the corner-stone of the new University club building here. In an address the president said such institutions were useful in perpetuating in later life some of the elements of university life.

BULL MOOSE RUNS AMUCK

Vanishes Into Forest After Causing the Death of Two Cows

Lenox, Mass., April 11.—Albert Packard, owner of Brookville farm, near the foot of October mountain, heard a great commotion in the inclosure where some of his cows were browsing and, running out, saw a huge bull moose ramming the blooded stock right and left.

Some of the cattle had been driven through the fence and were running wild. Others were bellowing with pain. Before Packard could get back to the pasture from the house with his shotgun, the moose had vanished into the near by forest, closely pursued by Packard's collie dog. Two of the cows died.

Game wardens say the moose cannot be legally shot now during this close season on deer.

Plenty of Fish at Boston

Boston, April 11.—T wharf is swamped with fish. Sixteen schooners brought in over 1,000,000 pounds. Over half of this record lot was brought in by four vessels. Such a flood of fish glutted the market and the majority of it will be sent around to Gloucester to be cured.

A BIT OF ADVICE

First—Don't Delay. Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Quincy residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Quincy citizen who says that the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected years ago has proven permanent?

W. Charlesworth, 33 Cranch St., Quincy, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly an effective kidney medicine. They fixed me up in good shape some years ago, and since then I have had no kidney trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

The judge, his back to the light and his face in shadow, rested his left elbow on the desk and with his chin sunk in his palm, followed the Scratch Hiller's narrative with the closest attention.

"And General Quintard never saw him—never manifested any interest in him?" the words came slowly from the judge's lips; he seemed to gulp down something that rose in his throat. "Poor little lad!" he muttered, and again, "Poor little lad!"

"Poor Little Lad!" He Muttered.

"Never once, sir. He told the slaves to keep him out of his sight. We-all wondered, fo' you know how niggers will talk. We thought maybe he was some kin to the Quintards, but we couldn't figure out how. The old general never had but one child and she had been dead fo' years. The child couldn't have been hers no-how." Yancy paused.

The judge drummed idly on the desk.

"What implacable hate—what iron pride!" he murmured, and swept his hand across his eyes. Absorbed and aloof, he was busy with his thoughts that spanned the waste of years—years that seemed to glide before him in review, each bitter with its hideous memories of shame and defeat. Then from the smoke of these lost battles emerged the lonely figure of the child as he had seen him that June night. His ponderous arm stiffened where it rested on the desk, he straightened up in his chair and his face assumed its customary expression of battered dignity, while a smile at once wistful and tender hovered about his lips.

"One other question," he said. "Until this man Murrell appeared you had no trouble with Bladen? He was content that you should keep the child—your right to Hannibal was never challenged?"

"Never, sir. All my troubles began about that time."

"Murrell belongs in these parts," said the judge.

"I'd admire fo' to meet him," said Yancy quietly.

The judge grinned.

"I place my professional services at your disposal," he said. "Yours is a clear case of felonious assault."

"No, it ain't, sir—I look at it this-a ways; it's a clear case of my giving him the damndest sort of a body beating!"

"Sir," said the judge, "I'll hold your hat while you are about it!"

Hicks had taken his time in responding to the judge's summons, but now his step sounded in the hall and throwing open the door he entered the room. Whether consciously or not he had acquired something of that surly, forbidding manner which was characteristic of his employer. A curt nod of the head was his only greeting.

"Will you sit down?" asked the judge. Hicks signified by another movement of the head that he would not. "This is a very dreadful business!" began the judge softly.

"Ain't it?" agreed Hicks. "What you got to say to me?" he added petulantly.

"Have you started to drag the bayou?" asked the judge. Hicks nodded. "That was your idea?" suggested the judge.

"No, it wa'n't," objected Hicks quickly. "But I said she had been actin' like she was plumb distracted ever since Charley Norton got shot—"

"How?" inquired the judge, arching his eyebrows. Hicks was plainly disturbed by the question.

"Sort of out of her head. Mr. Ware seen it, too—"

"He spoke of it?"

"Yes, sir; him and me discussed it together."

The judge regarded Hicks long and intently and in silence. His magnificent mind was at work. If Betty had been distraught he had not observed any sign of it the previous day. If Ware were better informed as to her true mental state why had he chosen this time to go to Memphis?

"I suppose Mr. Ware asked you to keep an eye on Miss Malroy while he was away from home?" said the judge. Hicks, suspicious of the drift of his questioning, made no answer. "I suppose you told the house servants to keep her under observation?" continued the judge.

"I don't talk to no niggers," replied Hicks, "except to give 'em my orders."

"Well, did you give them that order?"

"No, I didn't."

The sudden and hurried entrance of big Steve brought the judge's examination of Mr. Hicks to a standstill.

"Mas'r, you know dat 'ar coachman George—the big black fellow dat took you into town las' evenin'? I jes' been down at Shanty Hill whar Milly, his wife, is carryin' on something scandalous 'cause George ain't never come home!" Steve was laboring under intense excitement, but he ignored the presence of the overseer and addressed himself to Slocum Price.

"Well, what of that?" cried Hicks quickly.

"Thar warn't no George, mind you, Mas'r, but dar was his team in de stable this mo'ning and lookin' mighty nigh done up with hard driving."

"Yes," interrupted Hicks uneasily; "put a pair of lines in a nigger's hands and he'll run any team off its legs!"

"An' the kerriage all scratched up from bein' thrashed through the bushes," added Steve.

"There's a nigger for you!" said Hicks. "She took the rascal out of the field, dressed him like he was a gentleman and pampered him up, and now first chance he gets he runs off!"

"Ah!" said the judge softly. "Then you knew this?"

"Of course I knew—wa'n't it my business to know? I reckon he was off skylarking, and when he'd seen the mess he'd made, the trifling fool took to the woods. Well, he catches it when I lay hands on him!"

"Do you know when and under what circumstances the team was stabled, Mr. Hicks?" inquired the judge.

"No, I don't, but I reckon it must have been long after dark," said Hicks unwillingly. "I seen to the feeding just after sundown like I always do, then I went to supper," Hicks vouchsafed to explain.

"And no one saw or heard the team drive in?"

"Not as I know of," said Hicks.

"Mas'r Ca'ington's done gone off to get a pack of dawgs—he 'lows hit's might' important to find what's come of George," said Steve.

Hicks started violently at this piece of news.

"I reckon he'll have to travel a right smart distance to find a pack of dogs," he muttered. "I don't know of none this side of Colonel Bates' down below Girard."

The judge was lost in thought. He permitted an interval of silence to elapse in which Hicks' glance slid round in a furtive circle.

"When did Mr. Ware set out for Memphis?" asked the judge at length.

"Early yesterday. He goes there pretty often on business."

"You talked with Mr. Ware before he left?" Hicks shook his head. "Did he speak of Miss Malroy?" Hicks shook his head. "Did you see her during the afternoon?"

"No—maybe you think these niggers ain't enough to keep a man stirring?" said Hicks uneasily and with a scowl. The judge noticed both the uneasiness and the scowl.

"I should imagine they would absorb every moment of your time, Mr. Hicks," he agreed affably.

"A man's got to be a hog for work to hold a job like mine," said Hicks sourly.

"But it came to your notice that Miss Malroy has been in a disturbed mental state ever since Mr. Norton's murder? I am interested in this point, Mr. Hicks, because your experience is so entirely at variance with my own. It was my privilege to see and speak with her yesterday afternoon; I was profoundly impressed by her naturalness and composure." The judge smiled, then he leaned forward across the desk. "What were you doing up here early this morning—hasn't a hog for work like you got any business of his own at that hour?" The judge's tone was suddenly offensive.

"Look here, what right have you got to try and pump me?" cried Hicks.

For no discernible reason Mr. Cavendish spat on his palms.

"Mr. Hicks," said the judge, urbane and gracious, "I believe in frankness."

"Sure," agreed Hicks, mollified by the judge's altered tone.

"Therefore I do not hesitate to say that I consider you a damned scoundrel!" concluded the judge.

Mr. Cavendish, accepting the judge's ultimatum as something which must debar Hicks from all further consideration, and being, as he was, exceedingly active and energetic by nature, if one passed over the various forms of gainful industry, uttered a loud whoop and threw himself on the overseer. There was a brief struggle and Hicks went down with the Earl of Lambeth astride of him; then from his boot leg that knightly soul flashed a horn-handled tickler of formidable dimensions.

MT. M'KINLEY PARTY FAILS

Fairbanks Expedition to Reach Top of Great Mountain

Fairbanks, Alaska, April 11.—The Fairbanks Times Mt. McKinley expedition, which left here Feb. 5, has returned, having been unsuccessful in the attempt to scale the mountain.

The party succeeded in attaining an elevation of 10,000 feet on the north side of the mountain, east of Peter glacier. Further progress was barred by precipitious ice cliffs and lack of supplies, and the lateness of the season made it impracticable to renew the attempt by another route.

QUITS THE HOSPITAL

Dr. Walker Dons Her Frock Coat and Starts For Home

New York, April 11.—Dr. Mary C. Walker has so far recovered from her serious three weeks' illness here that she was able to get up, don her frock coat and top hat and leave for her home at Oswego, N. Y.

Although her life was despaired of for a time, she rallied by sheer force of will and is now apparently well on the road to recovery.

Musical Parade of Strikers

Lowell, Mass., April 11.—A parade of 1500 strikers, with musical instruments of all sorts—drums, horns, fiddles and accordeons—formed in front of the Appleton and Hamilton mills and paraded through the streets of the mill district, shouting and singing.

Strike May Tie Up Railroads

New York, April 11.—Officials of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers admit that a strike is imminent which will tie up fifty railroads operating east of the Mississippi river and north of the Ohio river.

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR 1913

French Budget Shows Increase of $33,340,400 Over Present Year

Paris, April 11.—Practical expression is given in the French budget for 1913, introduced into the chamber of deputies, to the remarkable wave of patriotism now sweeping over France, where many public subscriptions to provide a greater aerial fleet have been opened and hundreds of public meetings have been held on behalf of a stronger France.

The estimates provide for $16,000,000 more than in 1912 for national defense. It is estimated that in 1913 the total expenditures of the French governnment will amount to $932,933,000, or an increase of $33,340,400 over that of 1912. Of the increase $5,200,000 goes to works of social reform, more especially for old-age pensions.

BANK BOOKKEEPER AN ALLEGED THIEF

Said to Have taken Funds to the Amount of $14,725

Stamford, Conn., April 11.—William H. Holly, bookkeeper of the Stamford Savings bank, has been arrested, charged with defalcation of the bank's funds to the amount of $14,725. He was bound over to the superior court in $15,000.

The officials of the Stamford Savings bank, it is stated, had been aware for some time that there was a shortage in the accounts and had employed a firm of experts to go over the books.

The Stamford Savings bank is one of the oldest institutions in the state. It was established in 1851. Holly had been connected with the bank since 1889, for the greater part of that time as chief bookkeeper.

CANNOT LAST VERY LONG

Montauk Point, L. I., April 11.—Wedged hard and fast on a reef 600 feet from the shore, the steamer Ontario, which was run on the rocks by her captain early Monday morning, lies a flame-swept and battered hulk, with a heavy surf raking her aft and threatening to break her to pieces at any moment.

Every pound of her cargo of cotton, resin, turpentine and whiskey, except what was jettisoned, went up in smoke during a gale. The decks, houses and woodwork of the entire interior were consumed, leaving only the steel hull, blistered and smudged, with the bow six feet above low tide and the stern almost buried in the water.

BANQUET AND INSTALLATION

Missionary, Mrs. Matheson; Flower, Elsie McLennan; Music, Minnie Miller, Good-literature, Jean Crammond.

After remarks by Alfred Bishop, an entertainment was provided by members of the Reds. Miss Lillian Mutch gave a number of piano selections and received loud applause. A duet by Misses Jennie and Helen Cumming was much enjoyed; the readings of Miss Georgie Michael were a source of much pleasure; while an orchestra composed of Miss Margaret Morrison, Nelson Lamont and Louis Marini rendered a repertiore of selections that evoke prolonged appreciation. The affair was brought to a close by the singing in unison of the Christian Endeavor song "Blessed be the tie that binds."

At the close of the program Mr. Matheson read a telegram which brought with it the greetings of a former president of the society, who is now in Tampa, Florida, R. J. Charles. Mr. Matheson then presented Wendell Clark, the newly-elected president, with a bunch of carnations from the society.

The general committee of arrangements comprised the following Reds—Miss Margaret Michael, chairman; Misses Jessie Shirley, Margaret Shirley, Georgie Michael, Minnie Miller, Margaret Miller, Mary Morrison, Edith Elrick, Margaret Morrison, Jean Crammond, Jennie Barton, Annie Walker, Bessie Beer, George Wilson, Wendell Clark, John Rashley, John McLay and George Shirley.

☞The present situation as regards tire prices is peculiar. Michelin announced a substantial reduction to users on February 19th, and another manufacturer followed suit last Sunday. Notwithstanding these reductions a third tire maker advanced prices on April 10th. The season is backward on account of the weather, but a big demand is anticipated as soon as conditions become more favorable.

MEETING WAS ENTHUSIASTIC

Many Delegates at Neighborhood Alliance Meeting

AT FIRST CHURCH

The neighborhood meeting of Quincy Alliance met in the chapel of First church Wednesday from ten to four o'clock. The morning was devoted to an informal reception, Mrs. George G. Saville and Mrs. Isabelle A. Davis acting as reception committee. Rev. Mr. Hudson the pastor extended a cordial welcome to the delegates in behalf of the church and the Quincy alliance.

Delegates were present from the Bulfinch Place church, Boston, Christ church, Dorchester, First parish, Dorchester, Walpole, Winchester, Neponset, Dedham, Braintree, Brockton, Wollaston, Randolph, Hingham, and the South Congregational church, Boston, and gave very enthusiastic reports of the work of their respective Alliances.

A generous lunch was served at one o'clock to which ample justice was done. Mrs. Edward B. Marsh was chairman of the lunch committee.

The afternoon session opened at two o'clock. Mrs. Emma Schufeldt Moore sang "I do not ask thee, Lord," accompanied by Miss Grace M. Farrington at the piano and Roscoe R. Ricker, violin, and in response to the encore gave the "Cradle Song."

The speaker of the afternoon, Rev. Sydney B. Snow of Concord, N. H., took as his subject, "The Unitarian Churches of the Pacific Coast." He said "I have been asked to speak to you this afternoon about the growth of our Unitarian churches on the Pacific coast. That may seem a strange topic to be assigned to a parson from Concord, N. H., but I have only been in New Hampshire a little over two years, and up till then, my entire service was in Palo Alto, California. To be sure that service was only three years, but three years is a long period of time as life is lived on the coast.

"At a recent conference held in my church at Concord, Dr. Eliot spoke of the conference as a source of inspiration to our churches. I recall the first conference I attended in Santa Barbara, Cal., and one might say in Paradise. Any of you who have been there, will bear me out: hills, valleys, farms, orchards, gardens, blue sea, blue sky, roses and sunshine. On the coast the conference is the one big denominational event, and the unspeakable interest and loyalty its people exhibit, as Santa Barbara is by no means a central place, and no easy matter getting there. I myself was twelve hours, and some in the northern part of the state were two or three days on the journey. Then again it was not an easy matter financially. On the Pacific coast, more than half of the churches are not as yet self-supporting, yet in most cases, these ministers were sent, some 1000 miles, by their people. That conference was worth something and the main feature, and what most interested the people, were the reports of the churches. I think my experience at the Santa Barbara conference was a somewhat remarkable spiritual education among those widely separated churches.

"The first Unitarian church was founded about sixty years ago about the time when California was in the first flush of the gold discoveries. It was given its first real impetus by Starr King, who went from the Hollis Street church, Boston just before the Civil war, and his name is a household word on the coast, as that of the man who saved California to the Union. Up and down that great state he went, in those days of stage coach travel, and preached and lectured, in pioneer communities, where nearly half of the people were Southern or Southern sympathizers.

"Starr King was buried under a great stone in the yard of his church, in San Francisco, but his best memorial is in the hearts of his people, for there is not a school boy in the state that does not know of him as all in our land know the name of Abraham Lincoln. His personality lives in the pulpits of California.

"The old church has always stood for the highest and truest in the life of that turbulent city, it is like a bit of Boston set down on one of San Francisco's hillsides, a bit of best of Boston. This church is flourishing and is supported by the most prosperous citizens. The Alliance is doing a grand and noble work for the state. In all parts of the state the influence of this church is felt; a combination of Boston puritanism and California energy.

"And my own church, the hearts of my people and the work of our hands were put into its construction. People who were not brought up to church habits, but who drifted into the church from curiosity perhaps, but we got along finely together. How many mistakes and missteps we made, but to me there never was such a church or such a people, and I hope they will think there was never such a pastor.

"When it came to painting our church we mixed the paint in an old wash boiler, and put it on with a horse brush, when finished you could hardly tell which had the most paint, church or pastor. The trees and shrubs were planted with our own hands, enough to stock a farm. Our organ was sent to us from Scituate and I spent much of my time in repairing it with tools I borrowed from an automobile garage. The heater which was put in against the advice of the oldest member, I had to oversee almost up to the time of going into the pulpit for fear of some awful disaster predicted.

"But I am grateful to God for the opportunity of putting something of myself into the fabric of a home for God; for humanity and the uplift of man. May God bless the churches of the Pacific coast, and give us peace and courage and we will leave the results in His hands."

A rising vote of thanks was given Mr. Snow for his interesting talk.

STRONG HOPE OF AGREEMENT

Coal Operators and Miners Open New Negotiations

Philadelhpia, April 11.—Representatives of the anthracite mine operators and of the miners' union went into secret conference yesterday afternoon in President Baer's reception room in the Reading terminal building in this city. All of those chosen to speak for both sides were present. They will consider demands made by the employes for increased wages and a new working agreement which will embody recognition of the mine workers' union.

Before entering the conference President White of the union made a statement on behalf of the employes in which he said:

"We are here to negotiate an agreement for the anthracite mine workers on the basis proposed when we last met the anthracite operators in New York. We will earnestly and faithfully endeavor to arrive at an agreement at this conference. The fact that the anthracite operators have withdrawn their previous answer in so far as it is a final and positive refusal to consider the miners' proposition makes it possible to reach an agreement here.

"The anthracite mine workers are all idle. Approximately 170,000 men have suspended work. They will remain idle until an agreement is reached, but the question as to whether a strike will be declared depends upon the outcome of this conference. We have in mind our plans and policies and shall intelligently and firmly insist upon securing that which is just and right."

The representatives of both sides enter the conference with expectations of mutual compromise. Three meetings have already been held, all in New York. At the last session on March 15 negotiations were broken off, and the present conference is the result of a request made by the representatives of the miners for another meeting.

It is believed that there will be a series of conferences and that before they are ended an agreement will be reached. The miners have received the impression from published interviews with operators in New York that they will be given an increase in wages of probably 10 percent and they will be greatly disappointed if the operators fail to make this concession. They also hope for recognition of the union and will press the demand. It is said, however, that if the 10 percent advance is granted along with the other concessions, the miners may instruct their leaders to withdraw the demand for recognition of the union.

The executive committees of the three anthracite districts, numbering thirty-two men, met in the forenoon and went over the situation. The sub-committee which will confer with the operators is made up of nine district officers and John P. White, national president of the United Mine Workers. There are ten members in the operators' committee.

QUINCY GIRLS HELP WIN GAME

Two Gym Girls Play on Bridgewater Normal Senior Team

SCORE 14 TO 8

The work of three Quincy girls enabled the senior team of Bridgewater Normal school to bring the interclass basket-ball season to a close at Bridgewater, yesterday afternoon, with a 14 to 8 victory aver the kindergarten class. All the points of the winning quintet were made by Miss Marie Goodhue and Miss Mildred Reinhalter. The former secured four baskets from the floor while the latter got three.

Both these girls were members of the fast Quincy Gym Girls' team and have already acquired enviable reputations, being considered among the best girl basket ball players in the state. Miss Harriett Burns, also of this city, played with the winners and acquitted herself in fine style.

Another local girl, Miss Helen Richards, was the conspicuous star for the losers.

The game was fast and interesting from start to finish and it was only in the last few minutes of the second session that it became evident that the seniors were to emerge in triumph..

BRIEFS

Charles Crane has moved from Franklin street to Fort street.

Those desirous of seeking advice from members of the legal profession in local circles, will not be able to get it this evening owing to the fact that our "legal lights" will be in attendance at the annual banquet of the Norfolk County Bar Association which is scheduled for 7.30 o'clock in Young's Hotel. Several local lawyers will undoubtedly participate in the post-prandial exercises.

For Example.

Reaction and action are equal;
'Tis nature's immutable law.
The coldest of snaps has a sequel—
The sloppiest, slushiest thaw.

A Knockout.

Wife (complainingly)—You're not like Mr. Knagg. They've been married twenty years, and Mrs. Knagg says her husband is so tender.

Husband—Tender! Well, he ought to be, after being in hot water that long.—Zion's Herald.

Not a Self Starter.

Red—What's the matter with that fellow's automobile? He's been stopped over there for an hour."

Greene—Why, he's just got a machine with a self-starter, and he's trying it out.

It Is.

"It ought not to be so expensive to get grand opera singers at private musicales."

"Why oughtn't it?"

"Isn't it true one can get them for a song?"

POINT OVERLOOKED.

Daughter—No use talking, father; I shall marry whom I please.

Father—Yes; but most men are hard to please.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Although our local fistic pride "Young" McDonald, was not successful in capturing the honors in the 125 pound class, in connection with the New England Amateur championship bouts, held last evening in Mechanics building, under the auspices of the B. A. A., he can feel that his efforts were not exerted in vain, for he had the satisfaction of knowing that he was defeated by "Eddie" Desmond of Boston, only on a refere's decision, and after three rounds of a most grueling nature had ensued. McDonald is still young in the game, and his many local admirers still seem to be possessed with a confidence that he will bear much watching in the future.

Harry Briggs, the player who covered the initial sack for the Quincy champs of the Old Colony league has signed a contract to play with the Greater Boston Baseball League. If his performances with the local team can be taken as any assurances of what he is to do this season, there is no reason why he should not be able to maintain a permanent berth.

GETS HIS OLD JOB

Wu Ting Fang to Be Chinese Minister at Washington

Shanghai, April 11.—Wu Ting Fang, for years minister to the United States from the old Chinese empire, was nominated by Yuan Shi Kai, president of the Chinese republic, to represent the new government in the United States.

News of the appointment of the former minister was received at his headquarters here from Pekin. Wu's wide acquaintance and popularity in the United States will make his services here of great value to the republic.

Simple Liniment.

A simple liniment that is good for a strained back after a siege of housework calls for four tablespoonfuls of strong ammonia, four tablespoonfuls of alcohol, two large tablespoonfuls of salt and about a quart of rain water. Put these ingredients into a bottle and shake well. As soon as the salt is dissolved it is ready for use. When needed rub the back with the liniment and continue the rubbing until the surface is warm with the friction.

SEMI-ANNUAL CONVENTION OF KING'S DAUGHTERS AND SONS

Norfolk County Association Holds All-Day Session at Bethany Church

Business Session and Address by Rev. O. P. Gifford in Afternoon

The twenty-seventh semi-annual convention of the Norfolk County association of the King's Daughters and Sons, was held in Bethany chapel, Thursday from ten to half past four o'clock.

The morning session was opened at ten by Rev. Benjamin Willmott pastor, conducting the devotional exercises. Mrs. William G. Shaw, leader of Unity circle extended a cordial greeting in a few well chosen words, Mrs. Helen M. Dean of Readville responding in the same happy vein.

The record of the October convention was read and the County secretary and County treasurer gave reports, which were very encouraging and gratifying.

The convention business being disposed of, Mrs. Irene Chipman Tirrell rendered a solo in her usual expressive manner.

Mrs. M. Wheatie Farley, state secretary gave a very interesting talk on "Summer thoughts." A quiet hour followed after which the guests were invited to the banquet room where a chafing dish lunch was served by Unity circle. The lunch was very generous and substantial and called forth many favorable comments.

In the afternoon, devotional services were conducted by Miss Susan R. Brokenshire, state treasurer. The roll call of circles, by Mrs. Susie P. Sampson recording secretary, resulted in finding delegates present from all of the Weymouths, Brookline, Readville, Sharon, Cohasset, West Medway, Wollaston, Dedham, East Milton, Franklin, Foxboro, Holbrook, Hyde Park, Islington, Pondville and Braintree. Circle reports were read by different secretaries, showing the good work accomplished and assistance rendered to the needy, sick, afflicted and the aged. Pond home, Gordon Rest home and the Islington home are all supported by the King's Daughters. Miss Eleanor E. Fales and Mrs. Etta E. Robart gave very interesting accounts of the Pond home which they visited frequently of the happy and harmonious conditions of the aged ones in the home and how grateful and appreciative they are for any presents or favors bestowed upon them. It is made a real home for them.

Quincy Branches Planning for Entertainment of Delegates

Quincy will be the Mecca next week for a large number of granite workers, representing the Granite Cutters unions from all parts of the country, who will gather here to revise the constitution of the Granite Cutters' union. The convention will convene Monday morning at Hibernian hall and remain in session every day until the work of the convention is completed.

It will be a rare experience for some of the delegates, for many of those from the middle west will have their first look at salt water. The three Quincy unions will endeavor to show their brethern that they know how to entertain and their hospitality will be unbounded. In addition to the convention work, many side trips are be-

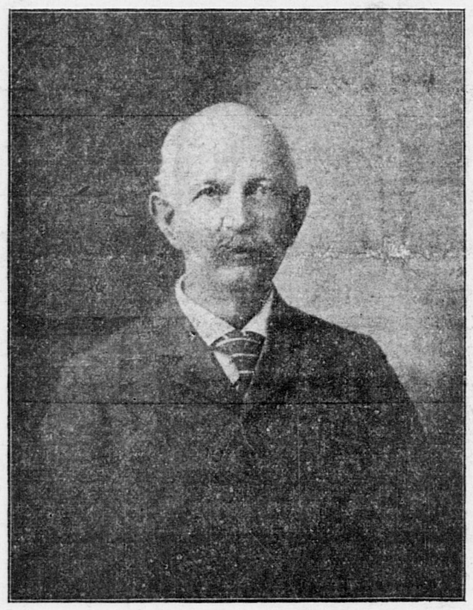
THE LATE MARSHALL P. WRIGHT



MARSHALL P. WRIGHT,
Who Died in California.

Word was received Thursday from Hollywood, Cal., announcing the death of Marshall P. Wright, a former well-known resident of Quincy. Mr. Wright was born in Quincy, Sept. 26, 1848, and was a son of Abel and Mary J. Wright. He was educated in the public schools of the, then town, and immediately begun his career in the granite business as a stone cutter. Subsequently, through his own exertion, he became the general manager of the O. T. Rogers Granite Co., which position he held for many years. About the year 1900 he retired from active business, having through his own industry and good business ability earned a competency. In 1896 he was appointed by Mayor C. F. Adams, 2d, as a member of the Board of Water Commissioners for a two-year term. Here he performed the duties of the office with great credit to himself and to the city.

At the election in 1901, he was elected as County Commissioner, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Edwin D. Wadsworth. Again at the election in 1902, he was elected for a three year term, as a Republican, Independent and Democratic candidate.

Some years ago he sold his handsome estate on Adams street, and moved to California, where he has since resided.

SAYS FAREWELL TO MRS. JOHNSON

More than 100 friends gathered in the vestry of the Swedish M. E. church Thursday evening, at the farewell party tendered to Mrs. Aleda Johnson, of Arthur street, who leaves presently for California. Her sons will accompany her to the coast, where she will join her husband, whom business has obliged him to assume permanent residence there.

Songs, jokes and games of a wide variety held sway during the evening and Mrs. Johnson was presented with a sum of money. Refreshments brought a most successful affair to a close. Many well wishes were showered upon Mrs. Johnson by the many acquaintances she enjoyed and considerable displeasure was felt that circumstances have compelled her to depart from Quincy.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Crazy Snake, the Indian, has at last acquired a moral character by the only way open to him, that of dying.

Many women will no doubt according to the color of the candidate's hair, just as many men vote according to his willingness to shake hands.

10,000 homeless people along the Mississippi. The government never thinks of fixing the levees until they are covered with water, and then it can't.

Why not a debate on Quincy—Dead or Alive" by the Board of Trade and the Women's club; the women to argue that Quincy is dead and the men that it is alive? We think it would be an inspiration—might be amusing, and even worth while to charge admission, for a large sum could be made which could be used to start a civic club with branches in each ward. A getting together a few times a year of progressive minds from all parts of the city would tend to awaken civic pride and loyalty.

It is gratifying in these days of growling about our city to have a former resident come to us for a short visit as did Mrs. Adelaide Claflin the other day at the Women's club and bring such an optimistic message. We wish men as well as women could have heard her. She told of many improvements since she moved from the city, all of which looked good to her. We have seen them come one by one and are accustomed to them but when one from outside the city can find so much that is good as did Mrs. Claflin there must be something in it. Quincy people probably need a broader outlook.

EMERGENCY TEL. SERVICE.

The New England Telephone and Telegraph Co., has spent quite an amount lately advertising its emergency service. As this service is entirely free to its subscribers and entails a direct loss to the Company it must be gratifying to them to know that the service is not only being used but appreciated. We in Quincy a few weeks ago had an opportunity to know something of the benefits of this service for the whole city was served. That the service was appreciated is voiced in the following letter:

District Traffic Chief,

Dear Sir:

On February 13 a large water main burst at Milton, and for a while the conditions in the water system were very serious. Realizing this the manager of the local exchange volunteered having the operators notify all the subscribers of the danger existing from lack of water supply and thus prevented damages to hot water boilers. I wish to extend my thanks and appreciation to the manager and operators of the Quincy erchange for the valuable assistance rendered.

Yours very truly
Frederick E. Tupper,
Commissioner of Public Works.

If there is an accident or any emergency arises in the home or office the best friend to turn to is undoubtedly the telephone. Call the operator and state that it is an emergency call and we are much mistaken if relief is not forth coming very shortly, if it is in the power of the operator to accomplish it.

WORTH THE TIME.

The postmaster of Boston has repeated his appeal to the business men to mail their letters early in the day, and it is taken in good part. But the business men do not like the giving up of the backstamping of letters received, which is now the office practice. This stamping means one more handling of the letter mail, of course, and that takes time, but many merchants believe it is worth the time. It is often of importance to know when a letter reached the local office and this is worthy of consideration.—Framingham News.

PINE TREE CLUB.

Thursday evening, the members of the Pine Tree club of Braintree held their regular meeting in G. A. R. hall South Braintree. The president, Stafford S. Bridgham was in the chair and a short business meeting was conducted after which an excellent program was rendered. Singing of popular songs of the day by a trio consisting of Miss Clara Day, C. Haven Belcher and Frank C. Allen gave much pleasure. They responded to repeated encores.

A laughable farce entitled, 'Champion of her Sex" was given by eight ladies. It went smoothly and contained many local hits which seemed to fit the occasion and caused much merriment. Those giving the farce were Mrs. Joseph H. Schraut, Mrs. Charles F. Luce, Miss Fannie Foster, Miss Mildred Dyer, Mrs. Stafford S. Bridgham, Miss Ruth Robbins, Miss Frances Dreghorn and Miss Jesephine Foster. At the conclusion of the farce, the trio rendered several songs which concluded the entertainment. Refreshments were liberally served by the committee in charge and dancing and chorus singing added to the pleasure of the young people. Those serving on the committee were Mr. and Mrs. Oakes A. Bridgham, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F Luce, Mrs. George E. Stone, Mrs. George L. Randall and Mr. and Mrs. Irving W. Bean. The president announced the names of the committee for the month of May meeting which will probably be held in the same hall.

BLUES ARE THE GUESTS OF REDS

Never let it be said that there are not good losers and fine entertainers at the Wollaston Methodist church.

On Thursday evening the Reds with Arthur Dewsnap as master of ceremonies gave an interesting program of readings and music which concluded with the one-act farce "The greatest plague in life."

The entertainment came as the result of a membership contest in the Epworth League between the Reds captained by Arthur Dewsnap and the Blues by Miss Rena Chamberlain.

As the Blues were the winners they came as guests and enjoyed a pleasant evening contributed by the Reds.

A piano duet by Mrs. F. G. Bennett and Miss Marion Nevers opened the program, followed by a reading "Fickle love" by Robert Bliss.

"An interesting travelling companion" was given by Chester Cleveland and a violin solo by Arthur Dewsnap accompanied by Mrs. T. N. Lane.

"Which is which" and "My poor brother" were contributed by Walter Sutermeister and a story on the college boy by F. G. Bennett.

"Papers" a more or less active number by Everett Sutermeister and "Mr. Blithkin's first baby" a reading by Miss Crothers were enjoyed.

"Safe in my father's home" was rendered by Frank Dunham after several stories and reminiscences by Mrs. Carter.

"The greatest plague in life" dealt with the servant girl problem. After a heartrending experience with a number of new servants Mrs. Bustle decides to do the housework with the assistance of her daughter Mary and Hazie Black.

The parts were all well taken and were as follows:

Mrs. Bustle — Mrs. J. A. Sedgwick
Mary Bustle, her daughter, — Mary Cleveland
Grandmother Bustle — Mrs. George Crothers
Biddy O'Rafferty — Beulah Collett
Kitty Clover — Alfreda Dewsnap
Miss Moonshine — Beulah Collett
Bridget Maguire — Mrs. Holmes
Hazie Black — Ida Hoyt

The program closed with the singing of "Mary's lamb" by the entire cast in response to an encore, Mrs. Crothers coming in strong at the finish.

Shoes : Spring Styles

For the Family

Durability is a factor to be reekoned with in the yearly shoe bill. A shoe that wears twenty per cent longer than another, at the same price, brings a decided economy in the yearly summing up of the family shoe bill---and the larger the family the greater the total saving.

The RALSTON--for men, the AMERICAN LADY--for women, not only well made of selected materials---and hence give the maximum of service---but they fit well; and the good fitting of a shoe adds to its length of service, because a shoe that fits isn't subjected to straining at wrong points.

Come in and be fitted correctly.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

PARK THEATRE.

Hattie Williams, Boston's favorite musical comedy star, returns to the scene of her former triumphs—the Park Theatre—on Tuesday evening, April 16th with an all-star cast in a new farce with music entitled "The Girl From Montmarte" which is now in the seventh month of a sensationally successful run in Berlin. Miss Williams—a Boston girl—has scored many big hits in a musical comedy productions, the most famous of which are the "Little Cherub," "The Girl From Kays" and "The Rollicking Girl" but in "The Girl From Montmarte" which had its first American presentation at Atlantic City, April 8th and comes direct from there to Boston, she is said to have an even greater vehicle for the display of her talents as comedienne, a singer and dancer.

"The Girl From Montmarte" is described as a farce with music and is said to be simply brimming over with clean, bright fun and aside-splitting situations. Charles Frohman is said to have surpassed all previous efforts in the mounting and casting of this production and called in the help of no less an important stage director than R. H. Burnside, formerly of the New York Hippodrome to complete the elaborate staging. The production reveals the very heart of Bohemian Paris with all its lights, brilliancy of scene, of saying and of song. Scores of handsomely gowned women will fill the eye while a half dozen of the cleverest comedians in the entire field of musical comedy will lend their efforts with those of the star in making the performance a notably brilliant one. There will be matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays and a special performance on April 19th.

HATTIE WILLIAMS,
In "The Girl From Montmarte," Park Theatre, Boston. April 16.

BOSTON THEATRE.

In "The Old Town," George Ade's musical comedy, is a farcically-inclined story which might as well be played without music as with the tuneful illustrative score furnished by Gustav Luders, providing of course, that David Montgomery and Fred Stone continued to play the two leading characters. They laid the foundation of their empire of fun in "The Wizard of Oz," strengthened and solidified it in three seasons of "The Red Mill," and now come in "The Old Town" with a preassured cordiality of welcome that belongs to the few of America's favorite entertainers. "The Old Town" ran nearly the entire season of 1909 at the Globe Theatre, New York, and the Studebaker Theatre, Chicago, five weeks at the Colonial Theatre, Boston, November, 1910, and two very successful weeks at the Boston Theatre, last season. Beside Montgomery and Stone in the cast are a number of well-known entertainers and the original English pony ballet. The pony ballet introduce several novel dancing specialities and a big number in which they all play characteristic Scottish music upon the Highland bagpipes. The burden of the fun making, of course, is borne by the two stars, Montgomery and Stone, and they are well equal to the task set them by the librettist.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Miss Billie Burke will begin her second week in "The Runaway" at the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, Monday evening. Miss Burke has made the biggest kind of a hit in her new play and her admirers are saying that she is on the way to becoming one of the very cleverest comediennes on the American stage. Of course there are some very enthusiastic persons who think she is that already. And certainly there is no other actress of the day who can more accurately depict the moods of innocent girlhood. Little Colette, the heroine of "The Runaway" is ingenuous to a fault. As her aunt says in one scene, she says just whatever comes into her pretty head and shows her love and her hate, her rage and her jealousy without reserve,—just as any little country girl of eighteen might and probably would do if suddenly placed in the Bohemian environment in which Colette finds herself in Paris.

At all events Miss Burke has completely conquered her audiences where ever she has appeared in this role and her receipts have been extraordinary. The packed houses have laughed with her in her joy and if they have smiled at her in her grief and passion, it has been because they knew that it would all come out right in the end and that the child's love for the kind hearted artist would be fully returned and with interest. Miss Burke's matinees are on Wednesday and Saturday with an extra one on Patriots' day.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

"Like a thunderbolt from a clear sky," is the best way to express the instantaneous success scored by "Alias Jimmy Valentine." Paul Armstrong's sensational detective-thief play with H. B. Warner, and a great cast, on its first presentation at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston, last Monday night. And again one might truthfully add that there was not a disappointed person in the large and fashionable audience that greeted this play, which is bound to have a long and prosperous run. The play is full of heart throbs and one that seizes your attention from start to finish and is unquestionably one of the strongest plays seen in Boston in years. The glowing tributes showered upon the play and players by Boston critics merely emphasizes the play's wonderful success and adds to its long list of metropolitan successes. To quote the Boston Herald: "It is a play that seizes your attention from start to finish, that tingles your nerve centres with acute sympathy for the hero, that fills you with creepy fear for him, that excites your liveliest admiration for the qualities of heart and head embodied in it and for the manner in which the actors display these qualities—that is 'Alias Jimmy Valentine.' Another, the Boston Journal said: "One can say unreservedly that it is one of the strongest plays that has been offered in Boston in years," while the Boston Globe says: "The closing scene is a 'thriller' of the most approved pattern, and is watched with almost painful interest through the few tense moments, with a happy finale to relieve the anxious spectators." A special matinee will be given on Patriots' day.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

The Aborn English Grand Opera Company, now on its third annual spring season at the Poston Opera House, will abdicate during the first half of the coming week, so that the Metropolitan Opera Company may occupy that famous temple of music for its visit of three days next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The Aborn organization will resume its run April 18, and for the latter half of the week, will present Ambroise Thomas' charming opera "Mignon." This popular work has not been given in Boston in many years, and its revival by the Aborn forces will therefore figure as an attractive novelty. Its music, many of the gems of which are familiar to music lovers in general, is in the opera comique class, more brilliant and vivacious than the accepted grand opera fare, therefore affording a welcome variety when given among heavier compositions. Its libretto is delightfully romantic and dramatic, based on Goethe's famous story of "Wilhelm Meister." There will be five performances of "Mignon," including Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, a special holiday matinee Patriots' Day and the regular matinee on Saturday.

The cast will be a notable one, with established favorites and important newcomers to the Aborn forces. Louise LeBaron will have the title role, Alice Kraft and Mabel Siemonn will appear at alternate performances as Filina, the soprano part, the two tenors selected to divide the five performances as Wilhelm are Domenico Russo and Litto Bernard. Wilmot C. Goodwin, basso, will be the Lothario, Zoe Fulton, mezzo-soprano, will be the Frederic, Philip Fein, buffo-baritone, is cast for Laertes, and John O'Neill for Giarno. Carlo Nicosia will remain as conductor for all five performances of "Mignon," and Charles H. Jones will direct the staging.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

What is unquestionably one of the strongest all-star bills ever seen in Boston is promised for B. F. Keith's Theatre next week, headed by Edward Abeles & Co., Eddie Leonard; and Lydia Barry. As the star of "Brewster's Millions," Edward Abeles has made thousands in all parts of the country laugh, and in his latest vehicle he has one of the best roles that ever fell to his lot. The comedy is entitled "He Tried To Be Nice," and deals with the mishaps that befall a young husband who attempts to be nice to his wife. He begins at the breakfast table by showing his wife all sorts of unusual attentions and consideration. The result of this unexpected kindness, however, is that the wife thinks hubby has suddenly gone crazy, and attempts to have him placed under observation. Moral: if you are a married man, don't treat your wife too considerately. The shock may kill her. Eddie Leonard, who last season headed his own big minstrel company, will appear in a new act, assisted by Mable Russell. As the author of "Big Brown Boolooh Eyes," Mr. Leonard is already famous, and his latest original songs are said to be even better than this classic. Lydia Barry, the singing comedienne, and daughter of Little Billy Barry, comes direct from a long engagement in New York City, where she played one of the longest runs on record. Miss Barry has an extensive reportoire of exclusive songs, all new, and she is bound to create even a bigger sensation than she did upon her last appearance here.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The Galloper," which John Craig is to give for the first time at the Castle Square next week, is one of the best and merriest of Richard Harding Davis's farces. Its author's novels, short stories and plays have made for him a wide reputation, and in it will be found the customary fund of incident and variety of causes for amusement. It is by no means an ordinary or a conventional farce. Its scenes are laid in Greece, its hero is a young American who is masquerading as a famous war correspondent, and he finds that he has got himself into a peck of trouble by so doing. For the war correspondent has left behind him a pathway of broken feminine hearts wherever he has gone, and his double naturally finds that he is being called to account for another man's indiscretions.

But it is all very entertaining and lively in action and dialogue. The picturesque surroundings of the ancient Greek city of Athens give a color and flavor to the play that is wholly novel, and there is not a moment in it that does not contribute to the smiles and laugher of the audience. Mr. Davis has invested it with a frank and genial humor that does not relax its hold upon the audience from the beginning to the end of the play. Something of the atmosphere of war comes to light during the three acts, but there is no actual battle, and at the end everything is peaceful and serene for all the participants in the plot. On the whole, "The Galloper" has been widely praised as doing full credit to the inventive genius of Richard Harding Davis. It will be acted for one week only at the Castle Square by Mr. Craig and his entire company.

TREMONT THEATRE.

Beginning Monday evening, the latest of motion pictures, telling the whole story of Homer's Odysses will be shown at Tremont Temple, they will reveal the famous characters and scenes that are described in the great Greek poet's famous epio, and they come direct from Italy, where they were made by the Milano Company, 1000 people having been engaged in their production, and the total expense being more than $200,000. The story told by the pictures involves the adventures of Ulysses, his departure from Ithaca to Troy, and his return homewards after the siege of that famous city. They promise much in the way of entertainment and as an educational influence, and they will attract not merely the general public, but also the many thousands of student and scholars who are familiar with the Greek poet and his masterpieces of literature.

The pictures will continue to be shown in Tremont Temple every afternoon and evening the engagement being strictly limited. The prices will range from 25 cents to 75 cents.

TROOPS KEEP TAFT MEN OUT

Rioting at Gathering of Republicans In Michigan

ROOSEVELT MEN HOLD FORT

They Are Finally Ousted and Proceed to Hold Rump Convention—Two Sets of Delegates Chosen, but Colonel's Followers Appear to Have Wrong End of Argument—Two Conventions In Progress After Order Is Restored

Bay City, Mich., April 12.—Living fully up to predictions born of the primary conventions throughout the state, riot, police, national guards, general bedlam and a rump convention of the Roosevelt delegates featured the state convention of the Republican party of Michigan.

Two sets of six delegates to the national convention at Chicago were elected, each claiming to be regular.

State Chairman Knox, former rough rider and an adherent of Roosevelt, was ousted from his office, and Alex J. Grosbeck of Detroit, a Taft man, elected to succeed him.

Truman H. Newberry, Roosevelt's secretary of the navy in the concluding year of his administration, who was ousted from the office of temporary chairman of the convention by the state committee, Wednesday night, refused to preside over the rump Roosevelt convention.

During the riotous scenes at the door of the armory preceding the admission of the delegates to the hall, he rested on a doorstep across the street, simply a spectator.

Wednesday night after the banquet of the McKinley club, the Taft forces stationed fifty assistant sergeants-at-arms in the hall to prevent the meeting place of the convention being seized by Roosevelt men. When Chairman Knox learned of this he telegraphed Governor Osborn to call out the local company of the guards ostensibly to guard the state armory from damage in case of riot, but in reality, it is alleged, to prevent the Taft forces from entering and organizing their convention.

When the Taft delegates arrived from Detroit they found the doors locked, the Roosevelt delegates massed in front ready to rush the hall the moment the doors were opened, and armed soldiers patrolling the interior ready to eject any Taft men who might try to enter.

The Roosevelt delegates, with the aid of the guards, held the fort until noon.

Finally they agreed to admit the members of the state committee to the hall. The latter, once inside, proceeded at once to the platform and demanded that Knox call the committee to order. Knox refused and Secretary King acted in his stead. Knox jumped to his feet and shouted that the meeting was illegal because only the chairman had a right to preside.

But the Taft men proceeded to do business, under the rule that a majority can call a special meeting in case the chairman fails to act, or refuses to act.

The committee instructed the sergeant-at-arms to admit none but delegates holding tickets signed by King. He had fifty assistants stationed at a side door and admitted them, instructing them to exclude all delegates bearing the Roosevelt credentials.

Three or four hundred of the Roosevelt delegates were uncontested and held red tickets as well as white. These got into the hall.

When the police had restored order two conventions were in progress. Both factions had a cut and dried and typewritten program. The Roosevelt delegation will base its title to regularity on which the contest at Chicago will be made on the contention that meetings of the state committee held without the call of Chairman Knox were illegal.

They appear to have the wrong end of the argument, however, because the rules of the committee provide that the committee can convene upon written request of a majority of the members. This was the procedure followed.

NO COMPROMISE CANDIDATE

Taft Men Deny Rumor and Dixon Has Something to Say

Washington, April 12.—Taft headquarters issued a statement declaring that "the talk of a compromise candidate is a Roosevelt offer to 'save their faces.'"

Senator Dixon, in an interview with newspaper men, asserted there would be no "compromise candidate."

Colonel Roosevelt is the dark horse, the old gray horse, the white horse," he said. "The Roosevelt delegates will not be turned to any one else."

BRAINTREE TOWN MEETING.

The special town meeting held in Long's hall Thursday evening was called to order at 7.30 o'clock by the town clerk, Henry A. Monk, who read the warrant. Benjamin H. Woodsum, Jr., was the unanimous choice of the citizens for moderator.

Article 2 which is to see if the town will rescind the recent vote to purchase an auto chemical and vote instead to buy a chemical combination automobile pumping engine was first taken up for discusison.

Mr. P. C. Spring moved that the speakers on the question be restricted to a time limit but the motion was lost. The moderator decided that article 2 could for purposes of convenience be divided.

Mr. H. F. Kneeland contended that the first part of the article relative to rescinding was contingent upon the last part and vice-versa. He thought that the word "instead" made it necessary for the whole of the article to be considered and that no division should be made. The decision of the moderator that the article could be divided was sustained by a large majority.

There followed a long discussion by the citizens as to the merits of pumping engines versus auto chemical trucks and the argument became at times so heated that the moderator was obliged to call a gentleman to order for branding as false the statements of the previous speaker. The greater part of the evening was used up by the various orators in urging their contentions upon the citizens.

The appropriation committee through its chairman Henry F. Arnold recommended that the town rescind the vote to buy a chemical and that the whole matter be left until the next annual meeting. Mr. H. A. Bryant moved that the matter be indefinitely postponed but this was lost by a vote of 97 to 78. The motion to rescind was carried 102 to 78.

William May's motion that the sum of $8500 be appropriated for a pumping engine was voted down. By a vote of 92 to 79 the motion of Elmer E. Abercrombie was carried. This is to the effect that the whole matter of fire apparatus be left in the hands of the selectmen, they to report to the citizens at the next annual meeting, which occurs in March 1913.

Under article 5 the salary of the Town clerk was increased to $650. This ended the proceedings of the evening and the meeting was adjourned at 10.15 o'clock.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

Supt. Barbour Talks to Adams Parents' Association

ITS GREAT VALUE

The Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Adams school held a meeting Thursday evening which was one of the most enjoyable of the year. Superintendent Barbour gave a very interesting discourse on the plans for the coming year setting forth in an able manner the advantages of vocational training in connection with the public school education of the present day. "The people of today realize that good citizenship is to be achieved only by an educational process."

"There are many children attending the public schools who are simply fooling their time away for the reason that their work is not suited to them and they are only waiting for an opportunity to specialize in some thing that is more to their liking." Mr. Barbour referred to the expense incurred if such a line of work were decided upon and said that the state was anxious to co-operate with the city in this work and would share half the expense, he also believes that the manufacturers would find such a school to be of advantage to them, in that it would enable them to obtain skilled workmen.

The musical program was of a very pleasing character consisting of solos by Miss Katharine Walsh accompanied on the piano by Miss Eva Hubert also a violin solo by Miss Alice Barry, both artists being heartily encored.

Chairman Miller spoke a few well-chosen words on the possibility of the new school building after which a committee was appointed to nominate officers for the coming year. The meeting adjourned to the lower hall where ice cream and cake were served.

JAMES F. GLOVER.

James Francis Golver. son of Elisha and Sarah Glover was born in Quincy, Jan. 23, 1820. He was educated in his native city and also learned the trade of shoe-maker there. Sept. 19, 1847, he was united in marriage to Miss Susan S. Thayer, daughter of Isaiah and Sarah Thayer of Braintree, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Jonas Perkins, pastor of the Union Congregational church at East Braintree. The young couple lived in Braintree for a time moving later to Lanesville, a town about six miles from Gloucester. There Mr. Glover was associated in business with the well-known granite firm, Barker Brothers of Lanesville and Quincy. It will be remembered that this firm furnished the granite for the post office and Masonic buildings in Philadelphia, Pa. While at Lanesville, Mr. Glover became a member of the Congregational church and was deacon of that church for forty-eight years.

Mr. and Mrs. Glover came to Quincy about this time finally locating in Braintree nineteen years ago and making their home with their daughter Mrs. Jennie F. Hawes of Middle street. A little over a year ago Mrs. Glover died and those who understood him best think that from that time he began to fail gradually, although that condition was not apparent to all. Mr. Glover and his daughter have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Saunders of Hancock street since the first of the present year and the elderly gentleman seemed in his usual good health until about a week ago.

Easter Monday morning about three o'clock he passed away, his death being due to a general breaking up of the system. The funeral was held from Mr. Saunders' home Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock and was attended by the Rev. Tyler E. Gale, pastor of the South Congregational church. The flowers were very numerous and beautiful. The interment was in the family lot at the Mt. Wollaston cemetery, Quincy. He is survived by his son, George B. Glover of Quincy, his daughter, Mrs. Jennie F. Hawes, two grandchildren, one sister Mrs. Carrie Roundy of Boston, two brothers, Edward Glover of Montpelier, Vermont, John Glover of Denver, Colorado and two nephews, William C. Glover and Frank H. Glover of Roxbury.

He was a member of the I. O. O. F. of Weymouth and a charter member of the Weymouth brass band playing the instrument then known as the ophicleide, a musical wind instrument of brass or copper, which has ceased to be used in orchestral work being superseded by the present bass tuba in E flat. Mr. Glover was a life-long Republican and always took an interest in state and town politics and voted at the time of the last state election.

He possessed all his faculties until quite recently when his eye-sight failed him and it was a great cross to him because he had always been a great reader and was especially fond of history. His many friends will remember him as a pleasant even tempered gentleman and extremely devoted to his wife and home. Since her death and long before he has been tenderly cared for by his devoted daughter who did everything in her power for his health and happiness. Wednesday relatives came from South Hamilton, Bridgewater, Boston, Lynn, Nantasket beach, Dorchester and the Braintrees to pay their last respects to the memory of a worthy citizen and honored friend.

SEMI-ANNUAL CONVENTION

The King's Daughters quartet, Mrs. Edith Cary Page, first soprano, Mrs. May Ryder, second soprano, Mrs. Louise Rice, first alto and Mrs. Edith Fitts second alto, rendered a selection with Miss Margaret Carruthers at the piano.

The address of the afternoon was given by Rev. O. P. Gifford of Brookline, who said: "I was invited to Quincy to address the King's Daughters and Sons, but when I entered the room I thought I had fallen into a suffragette meeting, but my spirits rose when I saw another man enter, and I was delighted I assure you. A man is like a telegraph pole, useful on some occasions.

"It was my privilege yesterday to talk to a company of D. R. At the close they put this question to me: 'what can we do?' I wasn't prepared to cut out work for them I had not the pattern, but with you King's Daughters it is different; you have a definite, specific work all planned, you have the ability to organize and bend your efforts to a certain line of work.

"I recently watched a marble house in process of construction in a large city. Each block of marble packed in wood, was taken out very carefully and hoisted into position. I asked one of the men how he knew just where to put the marble, he replied, 'We have a blue print and every block is numbered and corresponds with the number on the print.' And that is my idea of your work. I have listened to your very interesting reports and have been filled with admiration for the helpful, kindly, loving spirit revealed, and the executive ability in whch it is carried out. Benevolence is beauty, and if we have the spirit of the beautful in our lives we can appreciate the noble and true and attain a larger usefulness.

"Once in a while we find a man who is a captain of industry, he can plan work for a thousand men, but the average woman can run a house, her husband and tend to outside business besides. A woman has to understand thirty-two trades to run a house, she organizes her work systematically and then carries it out faithfully.

"It is quite common to adopt children, but you have adopted a father, you are daughters of the King, may you be strong in the sweet assurance that the coming years will be full of blessing and do the will of Him by ministering to the needs and wants of those around you, bearing other's burdens and sharing their joys, thus being true and faithful daughters of the King.

"We read in the Bible of a mother who, fearing for the life of her little son placed him in his cradle and hid him in the bulrushes. He was found by a king's Daughter, she adopted him and taught him the wisdom and knowledge of the times.

"Queen Victoria never looked behind her, she was so sure her chair would be placed in position by a faithful servant. Mark Twain tells a story of the prince and pauper who met face to face, same cast of features, curly hair, same age, the prince asked the pauper to change clothes with him, the butler coming in, took the ragged boy and thrust him out, despite his exclaiming 'I am the king's son,' but the prince always conducted himself with dignity, but the pauper showed his inferior blood.

"Be true to your adopted father; I beseech you in all your work, represent your elder brother. You are doing what Christ did, pitiful for the need and sorrows of humanity. As our dying Christ gave His mother into the hands of the one he loved, I leave you in the care of God. I am glad to spend these few moments with the King's Daughters."

The meeting closed with the benediction by the pastor.

GENERAL GRANT IS DEAD

End Comes as Physician and Ambulance Are Hurriedly Sent For

New York, April 12.—General Frederick D. Grant died this morning at the Hotel Buckingham. He had been ill for several weeks with a disease similar to that which caused the death of his father, General U. S. Grant.

General Grant took a turn for the worse shortly before midnight last night and shortly afterward a physician and ambulance were hurriedly sent for, the purpose being to take him to a hospital, but the general died before he could be removed.

Reports of the serious illness of the general had been repeatedly denied up to two days ago.

PEACE EXPECTED IN HARD COAL FIELDS

Joint Sub-Committee Begins Its Active Negotiations

Philadelphia, April 12.—The joint sub-committee of the miners' and operators' appointed at Wednesday's conference has begun a practical discussion of the demands of the anthracite mine workers.

A survey of the situation by those interested in the labor troubles in the hard coal fields leads to the belief that before the sub-committee gets through with its work it will have arrived at a working arrangement that will meet with the approval of the general committees of the miners and operators.

The submission of the dispute to arbitration by referring it to the anthracite coal strike commission, as proposed by the operators, will not come about unless there is absolutely no chance of the sub-committee coming to a satisfactory understanding.

BOTH SIDES ASK DELAY

Case of Alleged Boy Slayer Is Continued In Providence Court

Providence, April 12.—Antonio Mariano, held as the slayer of 12-year-old William Mather, whose body was found on Moses Angell hill after the lad had been missing for almost a month, was brought into the district court to face trial, but by agreement of counsel for both sides the hearing was postponed for two weeks.

The prosecution sought to have the case continued for two weeks, during which time an effort will be made to unearth more conclusive evidence against the suspect that has yet been secured.

The attorney for the boy desired one week to secure evidence which he declares will demonstrate that the Mariano lad was not concerned in the killing.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHEN WE HAVE WATERCRESS.

WATERCRESS makes a useful spring salad. It may also be stewed, served in soup or combined with meat or vegetables. It is the best garnish for fish.

Placed between slices of whole wheat bread with thin slices of hard boiled egg and properly seasoned it makes wholesome sandwiches for the children's lunch.

Plain Salads.

The simplest salad is with French dressing.

Watercress With Oil.—Pick the cress carefully, removing all the fine rootlets, throw into cold water, in which it should be allowed to soak for a couple of hours. Dry with a cloth and serve with a French dressing made as follows:

To two tablespoonfuls of olive oil allow one of vinegar, a half saltspoonful of salt, a quarter of a saltspoonful of white and of cayenne pepper. Mix these ingredients well with a fork and serve with the watercress.

Combination Salad.

The cress may be combined with other vegetables, as in this case:

Watercress and Potato Salad.—Take one pound of potatoes, two bunches of watercress, a chopped onion, French dressing and a hard boiled egg.

Wash and peel the potatoes, boil them until tender, drain and while warm cut into thin slices. Wash the watercress, pick all the leaves from the stalks and mix with the potatoes and onion. Before serving pour the French dressing over the salad.

Soups and Stews.

Watercress Soup.—Take a pint and a half of white soup stock and heat it. Add to it watercress leaves that have been washed and parboiled and stewed in two ounces of butter for about five minutes and then passed through a sieve. Let the stock with the leaves simmer for a few minutes; then thicken with the yolk of an egg, butter and milk beaten up together. When serving garnish with a few leaves of watercress.

Stewed Watercress.—Clean the watercress by laying it in strong salt and water. Pick and wash it and stew in water for about ten minutes. Drain, chop, season with pepper, salt and butter and return to the stewpan until well heated.

Serve on slices of toast or fried bread with slices of hard boiled egg. A little vinegar may be added to the cress when it is eaten or it may be taken with melted butter alone.

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barony. The place is to be sold, and its history and that of the owners, the Quintards, is the subject of discussion by Jonathan Crenshaw, a business man, a stranger known as Bladen, and Bob Yancy, a farmer, when Hannibal Wayne Hazard, a mysterious child of the old southern family, makes his appearance. Yancy tells how he adopted the boy.

The judge, Yancy and Mahaffy, sprang from their chairs. Mr. Mahaffy was plainly shocked at the spectacle of Mr. Cavendish's lawless violence. Yancy was disturbed, too, but not by the moral aspects of the case; he was doubtful as to how his friend's act would appeal to the judge. He need not have been distressed on that score, since the judge's one idea was to profit by it. With his hands on his knees he was now bending above the two men.

"What do you want to know, judge?" cried Cavendish, panting from his exertions. "I'll learn this parrot to talk up!"

"Hicks," said the judge, "it is in your power to tell us a few things we are here to find out." Hicks looked up into the judge's face and closed his lips grimly. "Mr. Cavendish, kindly let him have the point of that large knife where he'll feel it most!" ordered the judge.

"Talk quick!" said Cavendish, with a ferocious scowl. "Talk—or what's to hinder me slicing open your wooz-en?" and he pressed the blade of his knife against the overseer's throat.

"I don't know anything about Miss Betty," said Hicks in a sullen whisper.

"Maybe you don't, but what do you know about the boy?" Hicks was silent, but he was grateful for the judge's question. From Tom Ware he had learned of Fentress' interest in the boy. Why should he shelter the colonel at risk of himself? "If you please, Mr. Cavendish!" said the judge, nodding toward the knife.

"You didn't ask me about him," said Hicks quickly.

"I do now," said the judge.

"He was here yesterday."

"Mr. Cavendish—" again the judge glanced toward the knife.

"Wait!" cried Hicks. "You go to Colonel Fentress."

"Let him up, Mr. Cavendish; that's all we want to know," said the judge.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Colonel Fentress.

The judge had not forgotten his ghost, the ghost he had seen in Mr. Sam's office that day he went to the court house on business for Charley Norton. Working or idling—principally the latter—drunk or sober—principally the former—the ghost, otherwise Colonel Fentress, had preserved a place in his thoughts, and now as he moved stolidly up the drive toward Fentress' big white house on the hill with Mahaffy, Cavendish and Yancy trailing in his wake, memories of what had once been living and vital crowded in upon him. Some sense of the wreck that littered the long years, and the shame of the open shame that had swept away pride and self-respect, came back to him out of the past.

He only paused when he stood on the portico before Fentress' open door. He glanced about him at the wide fields, bounded by the distant timber lands that hid gloomy bottoms, at the great log barns in the hollow to his right; at the huddle of white-washed cabins beyond; then with his big fist he reached in and pounded on the door. The blows echoed loudly through the silent house, and an instant later Fentress' tall, spare figure was seen advancing from the far end of the hall.

"Who is it?" he asked.

"Judge Price—Colonel Fentress," said the judge.

"Judge Price," uncertainly, and still advancing.

"I had flattered myself that you must have heard of me," said the judge.

"I think I have," said Fentress, pausing now.

"He thinks he has!" muttered the judge under his breath.

"Will you come in?" it was more a question than an invitation.

"If you are at liberty." The colonel bowed. "Allow me," the judge continued. "Colonel Fentress—Mr. Mahaffy, Mr. Yancy and Mr. Cavendish." Again the colonel bowed.

"Will you step into the library?"

"Very good," and the judge followed the colonel briskly down the hall.

When they entered the library Fentress turned and took stock of his guests. Mahaffy he had seen before; Yancy and Cavendish were of course strangers to him, but their appearance explained them; last of all his glance shifted to the judge. He had heard something of those activities by means of which Slocum Price had striven to distinguish himself, and he had a certain curiosity respecting the man. It was immediately satisfied. The judge had reached a degree of shabbiness seldom equaled, and but for his mellow, effulgent personality might well have passed for a common vagabond; and if his dress advertised the state of his finances, his face explained his habits. No misconception was possible about either.

"May I offer you a glass of liquor?" asked Fentress, breaking the silence. He stepped to the walnut center-table

"I Had Flattered Myself That You Must Have Heard of Me," Said the Judge.

where there was a decanter and glasses. By a gesture the judge declined the invitation. Whereat the colonel looked surprised, but not so surprised as Mahaffy. There was another silence.

"I don't think we ever met before?" observed Fentress. There was something in the fixed stare his visitor was bending upon him that he found disquieting, just why, he could not have told.

But that fixed stare of the judge's continued. No, the man had not changed—he had grown older certainly, but age had not come ungracefully; he became the glossy broadcloth and spotless linen he wore. Here was a man who could command the good things of life, using them with a rational temperance. The room itself was in harmony with his character; it was plain but rich in its appointments, at once his library and his office, while the well-filled cases ranged about the walls showed his tastes to be in the main scholarly and intellectual.

"How long have you lived here?" asked the judge abruptly. Fentress seemed to hesitate; but the judge's glance, compelling and insistent, demanded an answer.

"Ten years."

"You have known many men of all classes as a lawyer and a planter?" said the judge. Fentress inclined his head. The judge took a step nearer him. "People have a great trick of coming and going in these western states—all sorts of damned riffraff drift in and out of these new lands." A deadly earnestness lifted the judge's words above mere rudeness. Fentress, cold and distant, made no reply. "For the past twenty years I have been looking for a man by the name of Gatewood—David Gatewood." Disciplined as he was, the colonel started violently. "Ever heard of him, Fentress?" demanded the judge with a savage scowl.

"What's all this to me?" The words came with a gasp from Fentress' twitching lips. The judge looked at him moody and frowning.

"I have reason to think this man Gatewood came to west Tennessee," he said.

"If so, I have never heard of him."

"Perhaps not under that name—at any rate, you are going to hear of him now. This man Gatewood, who between ourselves was a damned scoundrel"—the colonel winced—"this man Gatewood had a friend who threw money and business in his way—a planter he was, same as Gatewood. A sort of partnership existed between the pair. It proved an expensive enterprise for Gatewood's friend, since he came to trust the damned scoundrel more and more as time passed—even large sums of his money were in Gatewood's hands—" Fentress' countenance was like stone, as expressionless and as rigid.

By the door stood Mahaffy with Yancy and Cavendish; they understood that what was obscure and meaningless to them held a tragic significance to these two men. The judge's heavy face, ordinarily battered and debauched, but infinitely good-natured, bore now the markings of deep passion, and the voice that rumbled forth from his capacious chest came to their ears like distant thunder.

CLAIMS TAX IS UNJUST

Executor Will Allow Mrs. Eddy's Concord Home to Be Sold

Concord, N. H., April 12.—Pleasant View, the Concord home of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, founder of Christian Science, is to be sold on May 23 for taxes. The levy amounted to $417, a sum which Henry M. Baker, one of the executors of Mrs. Eddy's estate, considered unjust and extortionate.

It was at Pleasant View that Mrs. Eddy passed many years of her life and wrote several of her books. The mansion is an old-fashioned frame structure, commanding a fine view of the surrounding country. It was there Mrs. Eddy addressed thousands of Christian Scientists who made pilgrimages to her home.

Free Trade Is Not the Problem of Today, According to MacVeagh

New York, April 12.—Secretary MacVeagh made the prediction last night that free trade will be the policy of the United States and all the rest of the world sometime in the dim and distant future.

Speaking here at the annual banquet of the National Metal Trades association, the secretary pointed out, however, that the fall of tariff walls would be reserved for posterity, and that the problem today was the further revision and reduction of duties. He said he had been a free trader, but was now a tariff reformer.

Fatal Boxing Bout

New York, April 12.—John Goldberg, 21 years old, who sustained a fractured skull in a bout at the Sharkey Athletic club Wednesday night, died yesterday. The police are searching for the fighter who figured as Goldberg's opponent, but they have not learned his identity.

MANY THOUSANDS KILLED

Story of Volcanic Eruption In Panama Told by Sea Captain

Mobile, Ala., April 12.—Thousands of persons have been killed and whole Indian villages swept away by the eruption of Chiriqui peak, near Bocas del Toro, in Panama, according to Captain Olsvik of the United Fruit steamer Fort Morgan, which has arrived here.

Captain Olsvik says the eruption occurred April 5, while the Fort Morgan was berthed near Bocas del Toro.

Watchman Slain and Burned

Buffalo, April 12.—The charred body of Thomas Perino, 52 years old, a watchman employed by Palmer & Sons, florists, was found in the boiler room of the greenhouse. Perino had been beaten to death with a heavy coal scoop. His body then was set on fire.

Walks to Doctor After Being Shot

Providence, April 12.—Clotilda Lisa, 19 years old, was shot in the back, probably by a stray rifle bullet, as she was walking along Harris avenue. She kept on to a doctor's office and afterward was removed to a hospital.

SCHOOL BASE BALL LEAGUE

Grammar School Begins its Spring Schedule Monday

DATES OF GAMES

The grammar school league baseball season opens Monday afternoon, and from the schedule arranged by Dr. H. Gardiner Smith, physical director in the public schools of this city it looks as if the teams in the league will furnish some fast and interesting games. The idea of having a baseball league composed of grammar school players, was tried out last year, by Dr. Smith and was productive of such good results, as to warrant its continuance.

Every grammar school in this city is represented. The youngsters have been practicing diligently the past few weeks and three good games bid fair to be in order Monday.

Some of the games on the schedule will be played at Merry Mount park, both upper and lower fields, and at the Ward Three playground. Massachusetts Fields school team will play its first game on the upper field against Wollaston. Coddington school will open its season with Atherton Hough, on the lower field, while the Willard boys will cross bats with the Gridley Bryant team at the Ward Three playground.

Last year the Massachusetts Fields team captured the championship of the league, after a series of interesting contests. Cranch school finished second, Willard three, and Adams fourth.

The schedule of 66 games as arranged by Dr. Smith, is as follows:

BACK TO THE SOIL

Titled Britishers to Earn Their Living on Farm In Canada

New York, April 12.—Lord and Lady George H. Hyde of Hertfordshire, Eng.; their son and daughter, and Lord Arthur Somers, Lady Hyde's brother, have arrived on their way to Canada, where they intend to settle on a farm and till the soil.

The cost of living and excessive taxation in England have driven Lord Hyde and his brother-in-law back to the land, and they have crossed the Atlantic with the firm intention of handling spade and hoe until they have placed their newly purchased farm on a paying basis.

While Lord Hyde was discussing his plans Lady Hyde stood between the children. With a hand on either of the children she suddenly said:

"We are going to teach our children to forget the titles of aristocracy and buckle down to hard work."

ANNUAL CONCERT AND BALL OF STREET RAILWAY EMPLOYEES

Mayor Stone and Officials of the Bay State Street Railway Co. are Special Guests

Good Music, Efficient Committees Make Evening Enjoyable

That the employees of the Bay State street railway, comprising Local 253 of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees of America, are popular was shown by the very large attendance at the tenth annual concert and ball of the association, held Friday evening at Music hall. It was an unusually large party and enjoyable in every way. Not only were guests present from Quincy, but Brockton sent down a special car load, and there were many from other centres such as Weymouth, Braintree, Hingham, Rockland, etc. as well as a few representatives from the divisions north of Boston.

JOHN C. FAIRCLOTH
President.

Mayor Stone was one of the principal guests of the evening and participated in the festivities. Other guests were Assistant General Superintendent John Conway, with Mrs. Conway and Miss Conway, Division Superintendent Thomas Gammon and Mrs. Gammon, Supt. of Lines, Frank Yates, Supt. of Repairs, John Cutley, the Misses Mackenore from the Boston office of the company, President Charles C. Hearn of the Quincy Board of Trade, Chief of Police Thomas Fitzgerald of Weymouth, Representative William J. Leslie and others.

The decorations were confined to the platform and were as usual elaborate and under the direction of Derringer. Across the front of the platform was a row of potted plants and fernery which almost hid the orchestra from sight, while in the centre was a floral electric car over which on an arch were the floral letters "Local 253"

The music was furnished by Wilson's orchestra which gave an exceptionally fine concert from 8 to 9 o'clock the program including the following numbers.

March, "2d Conn." Reeves
Overture, "Stradella" Flotow
Concert Waltz, "Dream on the Ocean" Jos. Gung'l
Selection, "Red Widow" Gebest
Xylophone Solo Selected
Gerald A. Sullivan
Finale, "The Headlight" H. Alberti

The ball proper opened at 9 o'clock with a grand march, participated in by upwards of one hundred couples. The march was very prettily executed, circling the hall first by couples, then fours, eights and by sixteens. As the latter front came down the hall, they made an exceedingly pretty picture and received well deserved applause.

The march was led by John C. Faircloth, president of the local who was also chairman of the committee of arrangements and floor marshal. He was accopanied by Miss Elizabeth F. O'Neil. Immediately following was Mayor Eugene R. Stone and daughter Miss Edith Stone, Frank W. Sampson, the Floor Director, and Mrs. Sampson, Representative William J. Leslie and Miss Josephine. Then came other officers of the ball and guests in general.

JOHN J. KELLEY,
Secretary.

The march over, general dancing was in order until 3 o'clock, at which hour special cars left for all points. The dance order was made up of 22 numbers but encores and extras brought the number considerably higher. It was unusually well made up, for while the majority of the numbers were the more modern dances there was a fair sprinkling of the square dances, which were appreciated by some of the five stripe men. Every dance number was dedicated to some person or association as well as containing some of the sentiments that came into daily use by the conductors, such as "No. coppers, please," "Move up forward, please," "Step Lively," etc.

From 11.30 supper was served in the annex by Whittemore and was partaken of by most of the party.

The guests were well looked after by an efficient reception committee headed by A. L. Blanchard, the treasurer of the local who was assisted by W. Gould, J. Conlon, Wm. Kelley, J. Ford, A. Barteaux, W. Belyea, F. Eldridge, J. L. Cronin, W. J. Coyle, A. Cappellini, W. Barnard, H. Fuller, D. Kearns, Jas. Brady, H. Chadwick, J. Burke, T. Forrest, W. Fay.

As stated above the committee of arrangements was headed by President J. C. Faircloth as chairman, while J. J. Kelley was secretary, J. J. Moriarty was the treasurer. Others on the arrangement committee were F. W. Sampson, C. G. Batson, T. A. Ferguson,

DANCING PARTY AT WOLLASTON

One of the most charming dancing parties of the season took place in Brasee hall, Wollaston, last evening. It was given by Wellen Knapp and Charles Tavender, two popular young men of that section of the city and was attended by a number of their intimate friends, many of whom came from surrounding towns. The affair began at eight o'clock and concluded at midnight.

The musoc for the occasion was furnished by Pinkham's orchestra, and refreshments were served during the short intermission which was in order at ten o'clock. The matrons were Mrs. W. J. Tavender, Mrs. S. Daniels, and Mrs. S. S. Knapp. The ushers included Ryder Gay, Vet Brown and George Daniels. Among those present were:—Misses E. Pratt, B. Tavender, M. Newcomb, L. Churchill, M. MAKES HIS MAIDEN SPEECH

Rep. Leslie Speaks In Defence of Spanish War Veterans

GETS GREAT APPLAUSE

Representative Leslie, of Quincy, made his maiden speech on the floor of the House Friday, and it was recognized by his colleagues in that body by loud applause when he finished. The matter under consideration was a bill which provided that veterans of the Spanish war shall receive a credit of 5 per cent extra in civil service examinations. Mr. Leslie spoke in favor of the bill, and incidentally told a story of some correspondence he had with Theodore Roosevelt which scored a hit with his listeners. It seems that some time ago, a Boston paper printed a story crediting Mr. Roosevelt with saying that the soldiers of the Spanish war who did not see actual fighting in the war with Spain were entitled to less consideration than those who did, even though they were willing to go to the field of battle. Mr. Leslie cut out the story and sent it to Mr. Roosevelt asking if he had been correctly quoted and Teddy sent back the characteristic reply "It is an unqualified falsehood" and the Boston paper was admitted to the Ananias club.

REP. W. J. LESLIE.

The bill was finally carried by a large majority, and Rep. Leslie came in for a great deal of congratulation by his fellow members.

HOLDS INITIAL DANCING PARTY

Members of the South Quincy baseball Association held their first grand dance last evening in Alpha hall. Owing to the carmen's affair, it was thought that the baseball devotees would not make their initiatory bow under favorable auspices, but the hall was comfortably taxed and a genuine good time was in order througout the evening.

Delegations from various baseball organizations were present in large numbers, also friends from Boston, Braintree, Weymouth, Abington, Hyde Park and Somerville.

The music was by Carey's orchestra and dancing was enjoyed till midnight. The dance order comprised 20 numbers,, the feature of which was the "National pastime waltz."

The floor was in charge of William Galvin. The assistant floor director was Frank Gillis, who was ably aided by Joseph Ford, George Barry, Joseph Commolli, Gustave Erickson, Fred Erickson, Vivian McCarthy, Joseph Berluchi, John S. Higgins, David Dackers and Charles Knight.

CIVIL SERVICE FOR FIRE CHIEF

Chief Litchfield Gets Boquets at Legislative Hearing

NO OPPOSITION TO BILL

Mayor Eugene R. Stone, ex-mayor John O. Hall, Councilman Studley, and Representative Piper and Leslie all appeared before the committee on Public Service Friday in favor of the mayor's petition wherein he asks that the provisions of the civil service act be extended to the Chief of the Fire Department in Quincy. The meeting was conducted by Rep. Piper, who briefly explained the bill and introduced the speakers. He said that it had seemed to the city officials that the office of the fire department head should be under the same restrictions and granted the same privileges as the office of the police department head.

AMOS L. LITCHFIELD,
Chief Engineer.

The mayor spoke in favor and said that at present the city charter allows the removal of the chief of the fire department by the mayor with no redress or hearing. The chief of police is governed by the civil service laws and cannot be removed without just cause and a public hearing. To unify matters he had this bill introduced. He thought it would be greatly to Quincy's interest to make sure that the present incumbent of the chief's office should be protected by the civil service laws. He spoke in the highest terms of the ability of Chief Amos L. Litchfield and said Quincy is fortunate in having such a man at the helm of one of its most important departments. The mayor said that it was merely a suggestion bill, and the people of Quincy will be the judges of the merits of it.

Mr. Hall, in his capacity as secretary of the Board of Trade, said he considered Mr. Litchfield the best firefighter Quincy ever had. "He is just the man for the place" said Mr. Hall, "and we want to be sure we can keep him. Not only is he an excellent chief but his skill in handling his subordinates is perfect and, he is well liked among the men of the department."

President Whitman of the Merchants Association told the committee it is a matter of vital importance that the merchants of the city have a man at the head of the fire department in whom they can trust. "We think we have the man, and we want to keep him" said Mr. Whitman.

Representative Leslie said he favored the bill because it is a matter that has been discussed in the city and thought to be necessary. The feature of the bill wherein provision is made for referring the matter to the voters of the city, makes it eminently fair, according to Mr. Leslie. If the voters are given the chance to pass on the measure, as provided for in section 3 of the bill, there can be no objection to their verdict.

NEW ORGANIST.

Miss Alice M. Shepard of Roxbury who is to begin her work as organist and director of music at Bethany church tomorrow, is a musician of splendid reputation. She has held church positions at Fields Corner, East Milton, Newton and South Natick and is well known as a conductor of choral classes in church and school work and as a teacher of piano, organ and harmony. Her engagement by the music committee of Bethany church has aroused much interest among local singers and the committee has received numerous applications for admission to the church choir. All such applications will be carefully considered by Miss Shepard and it is certain that all singers whom she accepts will be worthy additions to the fine choir which is already established.

As a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, Miss Shepard was the recipient of unusual honors, being the only organist in a large class selected to play at the commencement exercises. She has taken special courses in choir directing and is a member of the American Guild of Organists, an honor to which all ambitious organists aspire, as the Guild counts among its members the best-known organists in the country and only musicians of the highest standard are admitted.

Miss Shepard comes to her new position fully equipped for the work and will without doubt keep the singing up to the high standard which has already become so well established a part of the Bethany church service.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Be sure to have some smoked glass ready to view the eclipse of the sun next Wednesday, and then when the eclipse comes, remember to hold the glass right, so as not to smut your nose.

According to a new law, which goes into effect today, vegetables, nuts and fruit sold at retail must be sold either by weight or by numerical count "Six dandelions and a pound of potatoes, please!"

The Mexican revolutionists took lots of trouble and risk to dynamite the El Paso bridge, but if any one had suggested that they go blast a few stumps out of the cornfield, they would have been too tired.

The latest scheme for a Greater Boston is a union of 41 cities and towns into six districts. While this is being digested there will be time to devise a few more. And so on ad infinitum.

Now is the season when Washington is overrun with High school excursions. It is much more important for the young to study the art of getting office than arithmetic or history.

The Framingham Tribune makes a suggestion which is valid in Quincy when it says: "Don't forget your duty to your community. Front yards, back yards, and side yards should be cleaned, raked, spaded, sodded, and planted." Now is the appointed time.

A TALE OF BRIDGE.

A smoking room yarn from the steamship Olympic is to the effect that two passengers on the last voyage, after doubling and redoubling at bridge whist, found that the contents of the "pot" thus created was $104,857.

Although the obligations of this redoubtable "kitty" are reported to have been squared for $500 each yet the tale will make Uncle Reuben exclaim "Well, I snum!" Aunt Samanthy will wish Reuben, Jr., would not risk both his soul and his skin by venturing out in this wicked world where "such works" are going on.

We have often heard it remarked that the gambling habit is increasing. That is certainly the superficial impression as you look at modern bridge in Smart Society. Very different from the simple days when Uncle Josh and Uncle Si used to assemble before the blazing hearth stone, to try their mettle and the favor of the gods at redoubtable 1000 point winter jousts at "high, low, jack, game." There was never a thought of stake then, other than the neighborhood reputation as gamesters.

Some of us used to think it a pretty sporty proposition when we used to play draw poker with matches. What would happen to the Freshman youth who would suggest that sort of game on Fifth avenue, today?

There is a vast body of men and women in the plainer walks of life, however, who still play cards for the pure fun of it. They are so old fashioned as to think, that when you have to spur interest by the feverish force of dollars, it is because you are not alert minded enough to feel the human interest of a battle of wits.

And when you read the tales of the pirate gambling of the old times, here and abroad, modern card playing compares favorably.

At a famous English gaming house at the beginning of Victoria's reign, it is said that $5,000,000 would sometimes change hands in one night. Back in the simple early days of our republic, when presidents rode up alone on horseback to get inaugurated much as they would take a job in an office, there used to be some sporty play in stately old Philadelphia. The memoirs tell of the men and women of fashion who thought nothing of losing $2000 of a night. Even in Washington 40 years ago, there was baccaret in which many high officers of the government indulged. That would not be a favorable card to play to the voters of the year 1912.

EASTER MEMORIALS.

At St. Chrysostom's church Easter Sunday the altar was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies and the baptistery font was filled with the same exquisite blossoms, also potted lilies were placed at each side of the chancel steps. Following the usual happy custom of the parish these flowers are always memorials to relatives and friends. This year they were in loving remembrance of George H. Penfield, Albert D. Fowler, Emma B. Fowler, Mrs. M. A. Fowler, Christina K. Landess, Jane Clean, Helen Blair Simmons, Ethel Abbie Baker, Mary L. Rundlett, Harry Beckwith, Ethel Beckwith, Louisa Stalher, Edwin Russell Price, Chrissy Haglestein, Horace Carver, Marion Carver, Isabelle Channing, Thomas Hoyt Foster, Katherine W. Sherman, Ruth Kelley, Charles T. Kelley, Jr., Mary B. Palmer, Henry P. Alletzhausser, Edwin C. Coleman, Mrs. C. Coleman, Delilah E. Hirtle, Delia A. McClintock, George W. McClintock, Jr., Lilla Wetmore, Elizabeth Hiscox, Davis R. Howe, Carrie Florence Anderson, Charles William Anderson, Roland Hyde Clarke, Augusta Packard, Percy Wentworth MacWilliams, Effie Hasty, Jane Elkins, Fred Wheeler, Annie Elizabeth Cushing, Mary A. Hamilton, Mary Elizabeth Hamilton, Jeannie P. H. Silo, Wallace Sedgewick Rice and George Sedgewick Rice.

A TRIBUTE.

The April 6th Musical American under the heading of Boston's Musical Events of Week has a pleasant word of praise for our townsman John D. Buckingham as follows:

J. D. Buckingham, for many years of the faculty of the New England Conservatory of Music, now teaching privately, with his studio at Steinert hall, and his duties as director of music at Woodward Institute, Quincy, leads a busy life. His class numbers about fifty members. The chorus of 150 girls at the institute is justly noted.

Where and under whom people of note were educated is always of interest. Among Mr. Buckingham's pupils have been Dr. A. S. Vogt, conductor of the famous Mendelssohn choir of Toronto; Alvah Glover Salmon, the noted lecturer on Russian mnsic; Gertrude Rennyson of the Bayreuth performances; Margaret Rich, of the Metropolitan Opera. Boston musicians of note, who studied with Mr. Buckingham, are F. Addison Porter, of the New England Conservatory; Marie Dewing Faelten of the Faelton Pianoforte school; William Howard, director of the Municipal concerts; John Craig Kelley; George P. Maxim, of the Faelton school, and at least a score more of successful teachers in Boston and vicinity.

MUST TELL NATURE OF THEIR BUSINESS

Lindbergh Explains Bill Relating to Banking Committee

Washington, April 13.—Representative Lindbergh of Minnesota, whose bill provides that members of congress shall file statements showing their business connections, and who is trying to secure a prompt investigation of the "money trust," has issued an explanation to the banking and currency committee.

Lindbergh thinks that many members of the banking and currency committee are "sitting in judgment between the public and their own personal interests." On the banking committee are bankers who are also members of the American Bankers association, organized among other things to lobby congress. No one object to a member having business of his own, but if the nature of it is such that it would disgrace him to make a statement of it, then let him get out of congress or state it.

IN FINAL RESTING PLACE

Body of General Kearny Laid Away In Arlington Cemetery

Washington, April 13.—Just under the crest of a little hill that slopes away through the woods of Arlington cemetery to the broad Potomac and facing the south, where he gave his life for the union, the body of Major General Philip Kearny, one of the dashing figures of the Civil war, was laid away.

President Taft, Secretary Stimson, Major General Wood, hundreds of men in the blue of the G. A. R. and thousands of citizens paid honor to the dead soldier. President Taft and others made speeches, while Bishop Cranston of Washington delivered the invocation and the benediction.

The firing of three volleys over the grave and the sounding of "taps" completed the ceremony.

BIRTHDAY OBSERVANCE.

Lucile, age 3 and Louis age 5, children of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. O'Malley of Botolph street observed their birthdays Sunday afternoon in a very fitting manner. Their little friends were invited for 3 o'clock.

The dining room table looked very pretty with the birthday cake and the huge pie of renowned fame upon it. The four and twenty black birds were soon seen by the bright eyes and when the pie was cut each child was surprised to find a box of bon bons in his piece. In this instance the contents were eatable but not the pie it not being made of flour and the usual ingredients necessary for a pie. Ice cream and cake were served and delicious candies as well, after which the little folks retired to the parlor where an hour was pleasantly spent reciting pieces, singing songs, and telling stories after which they went home all wishing Lucile and Louis many more happy birthdays.

MISS CLARA BARTON

Devoted Her Life to Cause of Humanity

LIFE DEVOTED TO HUMANITY

Clara Barton Was Called "Angel of World's Battlefields"

HER GREAT SELF-SACRIFICE

Results Will Be Felt Wherever Calamity, Plague, Famine, Flood or Fire Are Combatted—Wounded In Foreign Wars as Well as Our Civil War Had Reason to Bless Woman Who Has Passed Away

Washington, April 13.—The cause of the death of Miss Clara Barton, founder of the American Red Cross founder who passed away at her home in Glen Echo, Md., yesterday, was chronic pneumonia with which she was stricken about a year ago. Her brother, Stephen Barton of Boston, was with her when she died.

Miss Barton had been confined to her home "Red Cross," at Glen Echo since last fall, when she returned from a visit to New England. It was thought that her trip had been beneficial, but soon afterward she was taken seriously ill. Miss Barton celebrated her ninetieth birthday anniversary Dec. 25, when she received messages of congratulation from all parts of the world.

Just as Florence Nightengale was the "Angel of the Crimea," so Clara Barton was the "Angel of the World's Battlefields." Miss Barton's name will go down in history linked with that of the Civil war, the Franco-Prussian war, the Spanish-American war and the Russo-Japanese war.

But over and above all that, in all wars and on all battlefields, wherever the Red Cross may carry comfort and healing, it will also carry the name of Clara Barton. Nor are wars to be the ultimate limit. Wherever calamity, plague, famine, flood or fire are combatted, there also will be felt the influence of this woman's immortal work.

Her name has already gone into every nation and every clime as a synonym for quick and efficient relief to the starving, the homeless and the afflicted.

All the great disasters of the last twenty-five years are milestones in the life of this noble woman, who took up the work of Florence Nightengale and developed it, from a merely national movement on the part of England for the benefit of English troops, to an international movement for the benefit of humanity itself.

Clara Harlowe Barton was born in Oxford, Mass., on Christmas day, 1821. She came of Puritan stock and was a real Daughter of the Revolution, her father having served in the army of Mad Anthony Wayne. She was the youngest of a family of five.

CAUSE OF GRANT'S DEATH

His Doctor Says It Was Caused by Blood Clot on Heart

New York, April 13.—Official announcement has been made that the cause of the death of General Frederick D. Grant, commander of the department of the east, was cardiac trombossis, the formation of a blood clot on the heart. The death certificate giving this cause was drawn up by Dr. Abbe, physician of the late general.

It is persistently reported that a cancerous growth such as was responsible for his father's end, really caused the death of Grant. Dr. Abbe admitted there had been an operation. Grant was secretly removed to the hotel from St. Luke's hospital, where he was operated on for a cancerous growth at the base of the tongue.

Bacon's Rule for Study.

Lord Bacon laid down the rule that in our studies we should select those things that please us most, because we then develop our talents, and all the things that displease us most, because then we discipline the mind. He insisted, furthermore, that the latter studies are the more important of the two. It would be well to have these old truths recalled, revived and retaught. They should be put back not only into our public schools but into our national life.

Monday evening the Billiken club gave a luncheon and handkerchief shower at the home of Miss Barker to Miss Louise Hinkley and Miss Ardelia Barber, who have recently announced their engagements. The shower was a complete surprise to both. Covers were laid for eight. The color scheme of white and yellow was carried out in the dainties served, as well as in the decorations. In the center of the table was a large vase of jonquils and around this was arranged bon-bons, tied with white ribbon leading to each place. The place cards were appropriate for the Easter season, being bunnies and the ice cups had bunnies clinging to the handles. After the table was cleared all pulled their ribbons and Miss Barber and Miss Hinkley found attached to their bon-bons, dainty handkerchiefs. A most enjoyable evening was spent after the luncheon. Those present were Misses May Buckley, Mary Farrell, Cora M. Harding, Florence M. Hill, Georgiana Priest, Martha Jenkins, Louise Hinkley and Ardelia E. Barber.

Model for All Fathers.

The Suitor (rather diffidently)—Mr. Carrington, I have come to ask you if I— to say, that is, that I—

Mr. Carrington (beaming)—That you want to marry Ethel, is that it? Take her, my boy, and be happy. She's a good girl, and I'm glad to see that she's going to get a good man. I've known how things were with you and Ethel, my boy, and I've been waiting to congratulate you both.

The Suitor—You know, of course, Mr. Carrington, that I am not a wealthy man, that in fact, I cannot support Ethel in the style to which she has been accustomed. I can give her a good home and we won't starve, but we'll be pretty poor.

Mr. Carrington—Don't let that worry you, Albert. If I'm any judge of men you'll be a lot better off than I am when you're my age, and it's a mighty good thing for a young couple to go through the years of struggle together. I was poor when I married Ethel's mother and we had a lot of fun out of being poor. Shake, Albert, and have a cigar.

VOTES SALARY FOR TREASURER

Want Adams Academy Used by Public School System

DIRECTORS' MEETING

A well attended meeting of the directors of the Quincy Board of Trade was held Friday evening at the rooms of the board in the Adams building, President Hearn, presiding. Several matters concerning the welfare of the club were discussed. One of the important matters was the question of salary for the treasurer. It was voted that the salary of the treasurer be fixed at $50 per year.

Another matter which came up was the using of the Adams Academy building. This building has been idle for some time and the feeling is that it should be put to some educational use. It was pointed out that some years ago an effort was made to turn the building over to the use of the public school system. At that time, however, Dr. Everett was alive and sentiment played an important part, with the result that the negotiations, then under way were dropped.

The directors of the Board of Trade believe that the time is again ripe to take up the question and see if something can not be done so that the building may be used for the higher high school branches, which would be supported in part by the income of the fund under which the school was formerly run.

It was understood that some move had been made in this direction but nothing definite had as yet developed Now that the project has again come up it is probable that the board will push the matter and see if some plan can not be adopted to put the building into use.

SUDDEN DEATH MRS. JANE FRYE

Some of the older residents of Quincy will recall the family of Capt. E. S. Frye, which resided at Quincy Point, in the early seventies, and will be pained to learn of the death, at Highland, Cal., April 2, of his wife Mrs. Jane B. Frye, her death coming with scarce a moment's warning. She had been slightly indisposed for two weeks, but her death was caused by an acute attack of heart trouble.

The family resided in Quincy for upwards of ten years and made many fast and firm friends. Leaving Quincy they first moved to Hyde Park, and in 1892 to California where they have since resided.

The family comprised four children, Capt. T. W. Frye, a well-known mariner, Mrs. H. F. Bradstreet, Alex E. Frye, who is well known in the educational world, being the author of Frye's geography. He it also was that was selected by President McKinley to go to Cuba and establish a school system on that island. Later he brought a number of his pupils to the summer school at Harvard, and while there quite a few of the young ladies came to Quincy and visited the quarries and other places of interest. The youngest is Albert Frye a well-known mechanical engineer in New York city.

Mrs. Frye was a woman or rare attainments, and one who endeared herself to all with whom she came in contact. She was a lineal descendant of the Mayflower Pilgrim, Stephen Hopkins, one of the Pilgrims who harbored on Clark's Island in Plymouth Harbor, on the cold snowy Sabbath day, December 19, 1620, landing the next day on the world-famed Plymouth Rock. Later the entire Pilgrim band sailed across from Provincetown and settled in Plymouth.

Stephen Hopkins was from London. With him on the Mayflower came his son, Giles Hopkins, whose daughter Mary married William Merrick. Their daughter Lydia married Jonathan Sparrow of Eastham, Cape Cod, son of the old cavalry captain of the same name, who led his troop in the swamp fight against King Philip, the Indian chief. The daughter, Lydia Sparrow, married Isaac King, and they went to Nova Scotia with the great band of young people that tried to build up the whaling business for the Plymouth colony.

Then came the Revolutionary war, and the King family moved back to help the American colonists in the struggle for liberty. But one son of Isaac King, also named Isaac, stayed in Nova Scotia and took care of the property. This son had a son, Thomas King, who had a son, Samuel, the father of the beloved mother now mourned by her children. Mrs. Frye spent much time helping her son, Alexis E. Frye, trace the family history, with the result that having proved every record officially from the Mayflower Pilgrim down to today, the son was last year made a life member of the Massachusetts society of Mayflower descendants.

DIVORCED FROM SISTER

Couple Married Two Years Before Discovering Relationship

Cincinnati, April 13.—A strange story, which resulted in John P. Ruch, Jr., aged 22 years, being divorced from his sister, Helen H. Ruch, 24, was related in the insolvency court here. The brother and sister were married Oct. 25, 1910, neither at the time knowing of the blood relationship between them. The discovery of the relationship was disclosed a few weeks ago and the action for divorce followed.

It was explained to the court that the mistake had been possible because of the fact that the mother, for a private reason, had hidden from the children the fact that they were brother and sister, allowing them to believe that the girl was only an adopted child.

The petition for divorce, filed by the husband, was upon the formal ground of neglect. The divorce was granted upon that ground for the purpose of protecting the young couple, so far as possible, in the record. Ruch was given custody of the two children, the youngest being only a few weeks old.

Heavy Failure of Contractor

Portland, Me., April 13.—Morris Wheeler of Lewiston, a building contractor with offices in Boston, filed a petition in bankruptcy here. The schedule shows liabilities of $156,800 and assets of but $4220

—It is the duty of apostles of progress to disseminate any new information regarding that social institution of highest beneficence, the "shower." The latest adaptation of the shower is reported from Indiana. It is the "chicken shower." Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Keats, recently married, entertained 80 guests each of whom brought a chicken or hen. The couple found that they had enough poultry to stock their farm.—Taunton Herald.

SETTLEMENT IS NOT IN SIGHT

But Miners and Operators May Reach a Compromise

CONFERENCE IS DEADLOCKED

Workers Manifest Determination to Insist Upon Recognition of Union—Apparently Hopeless Situation Arising From Their Nine Demands Expected to Be Smoothed Over by End of Another Week

Philadelphia, April 13.—With indications pointing to a long struggle, the sub-committee representing the anthracite miners and operators are in session here again. None will make a direct statement, although all indicate a belief that peace will be reached ultimately. It is reported that concessions probably will be made by both parties to the dispute. Nevertheless the miners' representatives manifest a determination to carry through their demand for union recognition or break off the negotiations.

William Baxter, national organizer of the United Mine Workers of America, said:

"Only recognition of the union will stop the strike in the anthracite fields. The men will accept no peace offer unless the union is recognized."

At the present rate the conference will continue for another week. Nearly 200,000 unemployed union men await the sub-committee's decision.

The full conference committee of twenty and the sub-committee of eight, which since early March have been wrestling with the miners' demands, have not even settled one demand. There are now nine demands, as follows:

A one-year agreement; an eight-hour working day; recognition of the union; a more convenient and quicker method of adjusting grievances; 20 percent wage increase; minimum of $3.50 per day for miners and $2.25 minimum for laborers; not more than two laborers to one contract miner; a fairer weighing system; and that the coal be mined and paid for by the ton of 2240 pounds.

Notwithstanding this seemingly hopeless situation, the sub-committee resumed its deliberations confident of agreeing ultimately on some sort of a compromise to recommend to the larger conference.

This faith is partly forced on the operators' side. They do not want a strike declared, and when the miners refuse to put the case up to an arbitration board the operators find themselves forced to choose between conferring with the unionists whom they decline to recognize formally and a strike.

Overcharging and Rebating Charged Against Express Companies

Buffalo, April 13.—Two indictments, one containing ten counts against the American Express company and one containing five counts against the Adams Express company, were returned when the federal grand jury made its final report to Judge Hazel.

The indictment against the American company charges it with overcharging in ten specific cases on shipments originating at Aliquippa, Pa., and passing through this district. The maximum penalty is a five of $5000 for each offense.

The five counts against the Adams Express company charge that a rebate was allowed shippers at Arcade, N. Y., in return for bringing their goods to the company's station.

DOOMED TO EARLY DEATH

Ex-Convict Banker Morse, With Six Months to Live, Plans Gay Life

Florence, Italy, April 13.—Doomed to death by the specialists of Florence, Charles W. Morse, the American ex-convict banker, has begun his final fling at life. The half-score of eminent specialists who examined the American financier here were convinced that he cannot live six months, and the banker has planned a gay luxurious tour of southern Europe, as his last earthly pleasure.

Instead of retiring to a sanatarium, or taking to the health resorts of the Riviera, when the Florence physicians passed sentence upon him, Morse took to the bright life of the Italian hotels, refused to succumb to the ravages of the numerous ailments which afflict him, and made the pursuit of health a merely incidental feature of his European travels.

Gilmore lives in Bucksport. The indictment alleges embezzlement in fifteen counts, involving an aggregate of $10,575, taken on seven dates in sums varying from $300 to $2550.

Women Have No Right to the Ballot In New Jersey

Trenton, April 13.—Justice Kalisch of the New Jersey supreme court rendered an opinion that the constitution of New Jersey does not give females the right to vote.

Justice Kalisch dismissed a rule to show why a writ of mandamus should not issue compelling the members of the board of registration and election of Passaic township to register the name of Harriet F. Carpenter that she might be qualified to vote. The fight was carried to the supreme court upon the refusal of the board to register the woman.

The act of 1884 calling for a constitutional convention to decide the right of women to vote, which excluded women from the vote, is the fundamental law of this state, the justice said.

It Secures Freedom For Five Suffragettes In English Jail

London, April 13.—By resorting to a hunger strike and impairing their health to such an extent that the jail officials feared fatal consequences, Dr. Frances Ede and four other suffragettes who were recently sentenced to imprisonment for window smashing obtained their release from Aylesbury jail before their terms had expired.

Dr. Ede says that twenty-five of twenty-eight suffragettes imprisoned in Aylesbury jail started the hunger strike April 5 and that it was not discovered by the jail officials until April 9, when a system of forcibly feeding the women was instituted.

A demonstration will be held in Hyde Park to protest against the forcible feeding of the suffragettes.

Vatican Is Probing False Report of Death of the Pope

Rome, April 13.—A rigid investigation to determine whether any church official was responsible for the report of the death of the pope, widely circulated, has been ordered by the Vatican.

The Vatican itself was almost as much shocked by the report as the outside world, and the papal secretary of state determined to endeavor to locate the source of the rumor.

The pope is in the best of condition, without the slightest sign of acute illness. He received a number of visitors in audience yesterday.

Shoes : Spring Styles

For the Family

Durability is a factor to be reckoned with in the yearly shoe bill. A shoe that wears twenty per cent longer than another, at the same price, brings a decided economy in the yearly summing up of the family shoe bill---and the larger the family the greater the total saving.

The RALSTON--for men, the AMERICAN LADY--for women, not only well made of selected materials---and hence give the maximum of service---but they fit well; and the good fitting of a shoe adds to its length of service, because a shoe that fits isn't subjected to straining at wrong points.

LYNN MURDER IS MYSTERIOUS

No Known Motive For Killing Marsh, a Wealthy Citizen

TRAGEDY IN AN AUTOMOBILE

Indications That Slayer Was In Front Seat When Soap Manufacturer Was Shot as He Sat In Rear—Body Put Over Fence and Laid on Rocks—Victim's Watch, Money and Private Papers Not Disturbed

Lynn, Mass., April 13.—That George E. Marsh, 75 years old, president of the Good Will Soap company, and a wealthy resident of Lynn, was murdered in an automobile and his body then placed inside of the fence of the State boulevard, near West Lynn, where it was found with four bullet holes in the body and one on each ear, is the contention of the Lynn police.

To support the theory that Marsh was murdered while riding in an automobile, the inspectors working on the case point to the common string which was tied around the soft gray frieze hat which Marsh wore, and which was found within three feet of his body. The string dangled from the hat. The officers believe that the string was used to prevent the hat being blown from Marsh's head while he was riding in an automobile.

Another point which they are inclined to believe supports the theory that Marsh was in an automobile was that his overcoat was buttoned tightly with the exception of the lower button, and that when the body was found the overcoat collar was turned up about the neck.

Further to support the theory that Marsh was shot while in a sitting position is that on the left side of the abdomen were what at first appeared to be three bullet holes, but when Medical Examiner Pinkham performed the autopsy on the body it was shown but two bullet holes were in the left side of the abdomen.

When a man of Marsh's build (he was nearly six feet tall and weighed 185 to 190 pounds) is seated, the flesh about the abdomen forms a roll, and one of the bullets passed through this roll of flesh twice before entering the body.

The bullet with the one which entered the abdomen straight passed into the body in a downward course to the base of the spine.

Another fact is that two bullets which did not enter the body of the murdered man struck him on each side of his head at the ear and tends to show that Marsh was in a sitting position and that the murderer was in the front seat and turned, faced Marsh and blazed away with a six-shooter automatic revolver using 32-calibre steel capped bullets.

The autopsy showed that Marsh had not eaten any food since he partook of his noon meal at his home Thursday, which consisted of lamb and green peas which were of the canned variety.

Another fact was that when the body was found there was no dirt on the clothing, showing that the body had been carefully lifted from the automobile and put over the three-foot fence on the boulevard and equally carefully laid on the rocks on the embankment.

Marsh's eyeglasses, which were of the kind which fastened behind the ears, were found unbroken and resting on the bridge of his nose. Twelve dollars and some papers were in his pockets, as was his valuable gold watch, which goes to show that the murder motive was not that of robbery.

The police are all at sea as to where Marsh spent his time from 6 o'clock Thursday night, and as to what hour the murder took place and where. They have found three witnesses who place Marsh with 100 yards of his own home walking on Chatham street at 6 o'clock or thereabouts on that day.

After that moment Marsh drops completely out of sight until the hour when his body is found by Thomas Brennan, who was picking wood in the marshes.

The police state that the are all at sea as far as ascertaining any motive for the murder. They declare that the murderer carefully planned his crime, and that he had successfully covered his tracks.

It is figured that the murderer, knowing Marsh's habits of reaching home at about 6 o'clock every evening, laid in wait for him with an automobile and enticed him into the car and rushed him to some distant part of the community where the crime was committed.

The police have obtained no evidence which would show that any one might be interested in the disposition of Marsh's fortune. They have inquired into this phase of the case very closely.

Marsh was assessed for more than $100,000 in Lynn proper and owned numerous pieces of property elsewhere which required the services of an agent.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Women Talk Too Much, Says Harvard Lecturer—Many Words Mar Looks—Burglars Should Study Human Nature, a Boston Incident Proves—Old Married Hacks Don't Reply, "Yes, dearie,"—Hubbite Young People of 21 Have Had Two Years and More Added to Their Working Expectations — Suffragists Invade Senator Lodge's Bailiwick.

The necessity for burglars to know human nature, and to ascertain whether the occupants of a designated house are newly-weds or a settled-down married couple is impressed upon one by the recent unsuccessful attempt of a Boston member of the profession to pass himself off as the man of the house. The burglar was busily rifling the sleeping husband's pockets when the wife awoke and said, "Is that you, John?" The burglar answered in a low voice, "Yes, dearie. It's me." Whereupon the wise lady rose in immediate suspicion and grabbed the intruder as he attempted to leave by a window. If he had grunted "Uh-huh" she would doubtless have turned over and gone peacefully to sleep again.

The gift of real estate valued at $1,500,000 made by Francis Bartlett to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts again stirs a feeling that it is a pity that the museum must needs be supported almost entirely by a little circle of wealthy trustees and friends instead of the great and general public. Of the three million people in and within easy distance of Boston a shamefully small proportion have never been inside the new museum building, although many remarkable exhibitions have been held there in the period since its removal to the Fenway site. If one in every fifteen of these three million people would go once a year and contribute their twenty-five cents admission fee, these contributions would aggregate $50,000, which would not only pay the deficit (last year amounting to about $28,000) but would allow $22,000 over for the purchase of additional works of art, for running expenses, or other useful purposes. Those of the general public who live within reasonable distance of the Hub should surely be willing to put their quarters against Mr. Bartlett's $1,500,000. It is interesting and gratifying to note that the value of the New England metropolis as an art centre is appreciated by art students and others in cities outside of the state, as evidenced by the pilgrimage made by the art class of the Thursday club of Biddeford, Maine, which covered several days and was undertaken for the purpose of visiting all the art exhibitions with which the Museum and various private galleries are now filled.

The quiet little town of Nahant, "cold roast Boston," stronghold of Senator Lodge, and heretofore unruffled by political disturbances as affecting its womankind, has been invaded by the suffragists, who are intent upon organizing the community in the campaign for equal suffrage. Mrs. Thomas P. Curtis, a well known Back Bay society woman and summer resident of Nahant where her estate adjoins that of the Massachusetts Senator, is conducting the campaign and hopes to make suffragists not only of the townspeople but of the unconverted summer residents, that the latter may return to their various homes and spread the propaganda. Senator Lodge has long been looked up to and deferred to as the town's leading beacon, but perhaps he will find that he has some questions to answer this summer when he returns for his summer rest.

Courageous man to say what many a man has thought, in discreet silence Dr. Charles M. Green in a lecture at the Harvard Medical School had the hardihood to assert before a hall packed to the doors with feminine listeners that women talk too much. Not many men, certainly, would dare to make this statement in the presence of such an overpowering number of adversaries. "Women talk too much," said Dr. Green. "If they would listen more they'd be better looking. That's why they are so nervous. They spend energy talking that should be applied to other ends." Yet even a woman may admit that the truth of this statement is easily realized if one will but notice how nervous, irritable of fagged (according to individual make-up) the average woman is after two or three hours of animated chatting at social affairs or otherwise. Dr. Green emphasizes again the need of and benefit from a daily hour of quiet when one can lie down and relax physically and mentally. Incidentally, girls, note that less talk makes for better looks!

Young people of 21 who live in Cambridge or other western suburbs of Boston have been granted more than two extra years of working existence by the opening of the magnificent new subway to Harvard square, according to figures which a Hubbite statistician presents. Many complimentary things are heard of this latest and finest of trnasportation tubes. Its appearance is admirable. The cars are the most commodious and comfortable yet devised for rapid transit service. The ventilation is apparently faultless, proving that subway atmosphere need not be inferior to the air of the streets. But after all, the real excuse for spending twelve million dollars on a hole in the ground is to save the time of the traveling public and that is eminently what the new tube does, as witness the following caluculations:

Running time, Harvard square to Park street, via surface, 25 minutes. Running time, Harvard square to Park street, via Cambridge subway, 8 minutes. Saving, 17 minutes. Twice a day equals 34 minutes. Three hundred and four working days per year, multiplied by 34 minutes per day, equals 172,2 hours' saving each year, or an equivalent of 17.2 working days of 10 hours each year. The American table of mortality, used by all the life insurance companies, states that the average expectation of life of a person 21 years old is 41.53 years. Therefore, 41.53 years, multiplied by 17.2 working days per year, equals a total of 715 10-hour working days saved, or the equivalent of 2.13 years of 304 working days per year.

In a few days now still another great trunk line of transit will have been opened by the Boston Elevated Company—the East Cambridge Elevated extension over the handsome new concrete viaduct at the foot of the Charles River Basin. This, too, will annually save whole days of valuable time for the benefit of residents of Cambridge, Somerville and other suburban cities and will increase the community's sense of indebtedness to the progressive traction management under which greater Boston is endowed with the best urban transportation facilities of any metropolitan city.

Granger & Son and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, at the end of Book 403, being same parcel of land conveyed to me by Lafayette G. Blair by deed of even date.

That your petitioner upon the 21st day of October 1886 conveyed by mortgage deed, for the alleged consideration of one dollar et al, the said estate to Clifford A. Luce as guardian of Emily W. That your petitioner has during all this time and still holds full, absolute, open and undisputed possession of the said premises under claim of right in fee simple absolute.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barony. (Continued from last issue)

"This friend of Gatewood's had a wife—" The judge's voice broke, emotion shook him like a leaf; he was tearing open his wounds. He reached over and poured himself a drink, sucking it down with greedy lips. "There was a wife—" he whirled about on his heel and faced Fentress again. "There was a wife, Fentress—" he fixed Fentress with his blazing eyes. "A wife and child. Well, one day Gatewood and the wife were missing. Under the circumstances Gatewood's friend was well rid of the pair—he should have been grateful, but he wasn't, for his wife took his child, a daughter; and Gatewood a trifle of thirty thousand dollars his friend had intrusted to him!"

There was another silence.

"At a later day I met this man who had been betrayed by his wife and robbed by his friend. He had fallen out of the race—drink had done for him—there was just one thing he seemed to care about, and that was the fate of his child, but maybe he was only curious there. He wondered if she had lived, and married—" Once more the judge paused.

"What's all this to me?" asked Fentress.

"Are you sure it's nothing to you?" demanded the judge hoarsely. "Understand this, Fentress, Gatewood's treachery brought ruin to at least two lives. It caused the woman's father to hide his face from the world; it wasn't enough for him that his friends believed his daughter dead; he knew differently, and the shame of that knowledge ate into his soul. It cost the husband his place in the world, too—in the end it made of him a vagabond and a penniless wanderer."

"This is nothing to me," said Fentress.

"Wait!" cried the judge. "About six years ago the woman was seen at her father's home in North Carolina. I reckon Gatewood had cast her off. She didn't go back empty-handed. She had run away from her husband with a child—a girl; after a lapse of twenty years she returned to her father with a boy of two or three. There are two questions that must be answered when I find Gatewood: what became of the woman, and what became of the child; are they living or dead; did the daughter grow up and marry and have a son? When I get my answer it will be time enough to think of Gatewood's punishment!" The judge leaned forward across the table, bringing his face close to Fentress' face. "Look at me—do you know me now?"

But Fentress' expression never altered. The judge fell back a step.

"Fentress, I want the boy," he said quietly.

"What boy?"

"My grandson!"

"You are mad! What do I know of him—or you?" Fentress was gaining courage from the sound of his own voice.

"You know who he is and where he is. Your business relations with this man Ware have put you on the track of the Quintard lands in this state. You intend to use the boy to gather them in."

"You're mad!" repeated Fentress.

"Unless you bring him to me inside of twenty-four hours I'll smash you!" roared the judge. "Your name isn't Fentress, it's Gatewood; you've stolen the name of Fentress, just as you have stolen other things. What's come of Turberville's money? Damn your soul! I want my grandson! I'll pull you down and leave you stripped and bare! I'll tell the world the false friend you've been—the thief you are! I'll strip you and turn you out of these doors as naked as when you entered the world!" The judge seemed to tower above Fentress; the man had shot up out of his deep debasement. "Choose! Choose!" he thundered, his shaggy brows bent in a menacing frown.

"I know nothing about the boy," said Fentress slowly.

"By God, you lie!" stormed the judge.

"I know nothing about the boy," and Fentress took a step toward the door.

"Stay where you are!" commanded the judge. "If you attempt to leave this room to call your niggers I'll kill you on its threshold!"

But Yancy and Cavendish had stepped to the door with an intention that was evident, and Fentress' thin face cast itself in haggard lines. He was feeling the judge's terrible capacity, his unexpected ability to deal with a supreme situation. Even Mahaffy gazed at his friend in wonder. He had only seen him spend himself on trifles, with no further object than the next meal or the next drink; he had believed that as he knew him so he had always been, lax and loose of tongue and deed, a noisy tavern hero, but now he saw that he was filling what must have been the measure of his manhood.

"I tell you I had no hand in carrying off the boy," said Fentress with a sardonic smile.

"I look to you to return him. Stir yourself, Gatewood, or by God, I'll hold so fierce a reckoning with you—"

The sentence remained unfinished, for Fentress felt his overwrought nerves snap, and, giving way to a sudden blind fury, struck at the judge.

"We are too old for rough and tumble," said the judge, who had displayed astonishing agility in avoiding the blow. "Furthermore we were once gentlemen. At present I am what I am, while you are a hound and a blackguard! We'll settle this as becomes our breeding." He poured himself a second glass of liquor from Fentress' decanter. "I wonder if it is possible to insult you," and he tossed glass and contents in Fentress' face. The colonel's thin features were convulsed. The judge watched him with a scornful curling of the lips. "I am treating you better than you deserve," he taunted.

"Tomorrow morning at sun-up at Boggs' race-track!" cried Fentress. The judge bowed with splendid courtesy.

"Nothing could please me half so well," he declared. He turned to the others. "Gentlemen, this is a private matter. When I have met Colonel Fentress I shall make a public announcement of why this appeared necessary to me; until then I trust this matter will not be given publicity. May I ask your silence?" He bowed again, and abruptly passed from the room.

His three friends followed in his steps, leaving Fentress standing by the table, the ghost of a smile on his thin lips.

As if the very place were evil, the judge hurried down the drive toward the road. At the gate he paused and turned on his companions, but his features wore a look of dignity that forbade comment or question. He held out his hand to Yancy.

"Sir," he said, "if I could command the riches of the Indies, it would tax my resources to meet the fractional part of my obligations to you."

"Think of that!" said Yancy, as much overwhelmed by the judge's manner as by his words.

"His Uncle Bob shall keep his place in my grandson's life! We'll watch him grow into manhood together." The judge was visibly affected. A smile of deep content parted Mr Yancy's lips as his muscular fingers closed about the judge's hand with crushing force.

"Whoop!" cried Cavendish, delighted at this recognition of Yancy's love for the boy, and he gleefully smote the austere Mahaffy on the shoulder But Mahaffy was dumb in the presence of the decencies; he quite lacked an interpreter. The judge looked back at the house.

"Mine!" he muttered. "The clothes he stands in—the food he eats—mine! Mine!"

NABBED AT CHICAGO

Nesbitt Is Charged With Wrecking a Bank at Toronto

Chicago, April 13.—William B. Nesbitt, known in Chicago as George Coleman, was arrested here, charged with wrecking the Farmers bank of Toronto, from the ruin of which he is alleged to have made $250,000.

Nesbitt is a former member of the Canadian parliament and was highly respected during a long career in the Canadian capital. Complaint charging him with being a fugitive from justice was made before United States Commissioner Foote by British Consul Nugent.

POLICE AND FIREMEN FAIL TO QUELL RIOT

Disgraceful Actions of Valparaiso University Students

Valparaiso, Ind., April 13.—Three thousand students of Valparaiso university swept down on the business section of this city and smashed windows, fired revolvers, broke up a vaudeville performance and defied the police and city firemen to check them.

The demonstration is supposed to have resulted from the arrest of eleven students recently for playing baseball in the streets.

The trouble followed a class rush. For an hour the students fought among themselves. Then the entire crowd came down town, entered a theatre and caused several hundred persons to flee in terror. Finally the lights were turned out and the students left the building.

Fearing to attack the students with a small force, the chief of police called on firemen to turn streams of water on the rioters. The students threatened the firemen, who promptly withdrew.

TRIAL IN SEPTEMBER

Beach May Remain Abroad With Wife Throughout the Summer

Aiken, S. C., April 13.—Frederick O. Beach, the New York millionaire for whom a warrant has been issued here on the charge of cutting his wife's throat several weeks ago, will not be compelled to hurry back from his trip to Europe to stand trial.

Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., has furnished bonds of $1000 for Beach's appearance at the September term of court. The bond has been accepted and this practically ends the case until that time.

It is stated here that Beach, who now is in Paris with his wife, probably will remain abroad until the latter part of August.

IN FAVOR OF STRIKE

Overwhelming Sentiment of Engineers of Eastern Railroads

New York, April 13.—Engineers of fifty eastern railroads have voted overwhelmingly for a strike. The count of the votes has just been completed.

Of the 25,700 engineers who responded to the referendum vote 93.3 percent voted in favor of the walkout.

The territory affected lies east of the Mississippi river and north of the Ohio and the Norfolk and Western railroad.

PLOTTERS ARE BEHEADED

Twenty Agents of Manchus Are Put to Death at Nanking

Nanking, April 13.—Twenty persons were arrested here and immediately beheaded. They were charged with complicity in a plot to dynamite the Yamen and kill Huang Sing, who has been put in control of the Nanking sphere.

Papers found prove that the plotters were agents of the Manchus, who are offering big rewards for the assassination of President Yuan Shi Kai, ex-President Sun Yat Sen, General Li Yuen Heng and other prominent republicans.

FAMILY OF FIVE SLAIN

Religious Fanatic Believed to Be Responsible For Butchery

San Antonio, Tex., April 13.—William Burton, his wife, two children and Len Evers, his brother-in-law, all negroes, were murdered while asleep in their home here. The head of each victim appears to have been crushed with an axe and butcher knives were found sticking in all bodies except those of the children.

The police believe that a negro fanatic is responsible. The manner in which the negroes were butchered was in every way similar to that in which negro families were recently murdered in Louisiana where a negro woman, her mind affected by devotion to a peculiar religious sect, later acknowledged the crimes.

REV. HENRY A SUICIDE

Wife's Body, With Throat Cut, Found Lying Beside "Messiah"

London, April 13.—A double tragedy was brought about by another 'brainstorm' affecting Rev. Samuel Henry, the self-styled "Messiah," who on Feb. 26 caused a sensation in the house of commons by firing several shots from a revolver at the ceiling of the lobby.

Henry was discovered dying in his home with two revolver bullets in his head and by his side lay his wife's dead body with the throat cut.

Couldn't Use It.

Agent (to sour-faced but rich old lady)—Madam, I am soliciting funds to start a benevolent enterprise for the poor blacks of Africa, and I thought—

Sour-Faced Lady—I can't give you money, sir; I have been swindled too often. All I can do is to lend my countenance to the scheme.

Agent (sadly)—That would simply ruin it.—Tit-Bits.

Neutral.

This controversy 'bout the blonde
Surpassing the brunette,
Is one that we aren't very fond
Of mixing in, you bet!

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for the many kind acts and expressions of sympathy during the illness and death of our loved one, also for the beautiful flowers.

RESIGNATION OF CITY HALL CLERK

Miss B. C. Ross, for many years, clerk in the office of the City Clerk at City Hall, has resigned her position to take effect early in May. Miss Ross resigns to accept a position at an increased salary in the Mt. Wollaston National bank. The position held by Miss Ross is one of the most important at City Hall. The office of the City Clerk as is well known is one in which there is a large amount of important detail work, and where accuracy is first and last most essential, and Miss Ross' long experience in the office made her services most valuable. While it is generally regretted that she is to accept another position, the officers and clerks at City Hall wish her all success in the new position she is to take.

MISUSE OF FLAG.

Editor Quincy Ledger:

Replying to the letter of Mrs. C. W. Nelson in which she claims that the costume, made of American Flags worn by her to a recent masquerade party was not a misuse of the national emblem and that my protest is "far-fetched". Permit me to say, that if any one desires to personate the Goddess of Liberty it can be more properly done by the use of the red, white and blue bunting and a liberty cap—never by the use of the Ameican flag.

General U. S. Grant, once walking down the streets of Galena, Ill., with General J. C. Smith, having his attention called to a large garrison flag thrown across the streets, bearing the names of Grant & Colfax, their candidates for president and vice president, stopped and said, "General, I wish you would have that flag taken down and those names taken off. There is no name so great that it should be placed upon the flag of our Country." It is equally true that no one is so great that they should clothe themselves in the flag of our country.

The American Flag Association was organized fifteen years ago, and numbers today over 250,000 patriotic American men and women and has secured legislation in nearly every state in the Union to prevent the improper use of the American Flag. In a circular of informaion issued to its members in which many other "desecration of the Flag" are cited, I find on Page 8 Section 12, "Making clothing of the Flag for clowns, and representations of Uncle Sam and Columbia."

Therefore you will see that my protest is officially endorsed by the executive committee of one of the largest patriotic organizations in America.

BASKET BALL GAME TONIGHT

The return game of basket ball between the New England Championions, Quincy, A. A. and the Y. M. C. A. first team will be played tonight at the Y. M. C. A. gym.

Although the Y. M. C. A. was defeated Tuesday night at St. Mary's hall, the players feel confident the score will be reversed tonight, as they claim the small floor-space handicapped them exceedingly.

The Y. M. C. A. team will line up as follows: Trask and Pinel, forwards, Tirrell, center, and Parker and Holmes at guard.

Between the halves the annual game between the Old Timers and the Y. M. C. A. second team will be played.

Granite Cutters' Delegates Welcomed By Mayor Stone

CONVENTION OPENS

The convention of the Granite Cutters' association, which is to revise the constitution of the association convened in Quincy this morning and will remain in session, until the business for which it was called has been completed. There are 107 delegates entitled to sit in the convention and practically all of them were present this morning. The delegates came from all parts of the country as well as from the states and provinces.

Many of the delegates will make their headquarters in Boston, owing to a lack of accommodations in Quincy. They assembled at the headquarters of the union in City Square at 9.30 this morning and half an hour later proceeded to Hibernian hall where the sessions will be held.

Immediately after convening Mayor Stone was introduced and briefly welcomed the delegates to Quincy, and extended to them the key of the city. The Mayor in his welcome address said: Gentlemen:—

"It is a pleasure for me to welcome here today the Delegates of the International Granite Cutters' Union. I am glad to welcome you, gentlemen, because you represent the industry that has made our City what it is today and because I have always found the class of people connected with this industry represent a high class of citizenship.

"We welcome you, gentlemen, to one of the best cities in the country. We want to make your stay a pleasant one and when you return to your several homes located, I suppose, somewhere between the hills of Maine and the shores of California, we hope you will have a good word for the grand old City of Quincy. I trust your visit here will be as productive of good for you as I am sure it will for us.

"Mr. President, through you as Mayor of the city I extend the key of the city to the International Granite Cutters' Union. Wishing your organization the best of success not only during their visit here but in the future and thanking you for your invitation to be present here this morning, I will not take up more of your time but leave you to go on with the business of your organization."

International Secretary-Treasurer James Duncan then briefly welcomed the delegates in behalf of the International association and outlined the work for which they were called in convention. The convention then immediately got down to business.

Many things have been planned for the entertainment of the delegates, which include a banquet to be given them on Thursday evening by the three Quincy branches. On Wednesday evening they will be addressed by President Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, Hon. Karl Legein, President of the German Trades Union and General Secretary of the International Secretariat and others.

DEATH OF DR. H. C. HALLOWELL

Had Been City Physician for the Past Seven Years

HIS CAREER

It is with genuine regret that the citizens of Quincy will learn of the death, Saturday night, of Dr. Henry Carleton Hallowell, who for nearly twenty-five years has been one of the leading practicing physicians of this city. Dr. Hallowell had been in poor health for several months, and while his death was not unexpected it was hoped that he might survive the winter. He was a man universally liked and respected, not only as a physician, but as a citizen. He possessed a most genial disposition, and made many fast and firm friends. He was a close student, fond of books and with all, one who took a deep interest in affairs that were of interest to the city. He had held several offices in the city, in all of which he had proved himself a man eminently fitted for the position to which he was appointed or elected.

Dr. Hallowell was born in Bangor, Maine, November 12, 1847. He was fitted for college at the Bangor schools, entering Colby College, where he graduated in 1868. Before entering college he enlisted for sixty days in a company that was assigned the duty of protecting the Portsmouth Navy Yard from private attacks by Rebel privateers.

After his graduation he was Principal of the Methuen and Chicopee Falls High schools and later was Master of the Collins Grammar school of Gloucester. In 1881 he went to Kansas and for five years engaged in banking and real estate business. Later he entered Hahnemann Medical school in Chicago, where he graduated in 1887.

His medical practice has been confined to two years in Auburn, Maine, and nearly twenty-five years in Quincy. His scholarly attainments fitted him for acceptable work on the Quincy School Board where he served for eleven years and for two years he was its chairman.

At the time of his death he was City Physician of Quincy and was entering upon his seventh year of service. He was a man of rare social qualities—a popular member of the local Grand Army Post and a member of the Granite City Club.

In 1881 he married Miss Elizabeth Scannon of Portland, Maine, who survives him with their two children Elizabeth Hallowell, a teacher in the Bourne High school and Henry Carleton Hallowell, Jr.

Dr. Hallowell was one of six children of Abner Rice and Susan (Clement) Hallowell, the late Professor Susan M. Hallowell of Wellesley College, the late Henrietta T. Hallowell of the Milton High school, Mrs. Elizabeth H. Hart of East Dennis, Mass., Lucy M. Hallowell of Quincy, and Dr. Clement H. Hallowell of Norwood, Mass., the last three of whom survive him.

WILL CONSIDER BUDGET TONIGHT

Tonight's meeting of the City Council will be a most important one. It will also doubtless be one at which there will be more or less debate. The main question of debate will be on the report of the Finance Committee, on the new annual appropriation order, as offered at the special meeting last Monday evening, and which was passed upon by the Finance Committee at its meeting Thursday evening.

Another important matter that will come up will be the report of the Committee on Licenses on the application for permits to transport liquor. All of the permits now in force expire May 1, and as there will be no more regular meetings before that date it will be necessary for the orders granting permits to be acted upon tonight. The Committee on Licenses have held several meetings on the matter and will make their report tonight.

There are also other important matters that will doubtless come up at the meeting so that, as stated above, it will be an important session.

MAYOR APPOINTS ASSISTANT CLERK

Miss Marguerite S. Lyons, has been appointed by Mayor Stone as clerk to the City Clerk, to fill the position made vacant by the resignation of Miss Ross which takes effet early in May, and enters the office today to familiarize herself with the duties of the office. Miss Lyons has been acting as private clerk to Mayor Stone, having filled a similar position under ex-Mayor Shea.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Patrick Allen, aged about 60 years of Wendell road and employed as a riveter at the Fore River died Sunday at the home of James McKerlie on 112 East Howard street. Allen had called there, and complaining of not feeling well was invited to lie down. Later Mrs. McKerlie went into the room to see how he was and found him dead. The body was taken to Hall's undertaking rooms. Death was probably due to heart disease. It is reported that Allen has a daughter residing on Cleverly court.

TENNIS CLUB MASQUERADE

Motley Assemblage at Wollaston Tennis Club Annual

THOSE IN COSTUME

A more motley and varied assemblage could hardly be imagined than gathered to make merry at the third annual masquerade of the Wollaston Tennis club at Wollaston hall on Saturday evening.

The event proved to be the most interesting of a number of successful social affairs held by the club the past winter.

Costumes were in evidence from the Chinaman who takes your laundry check and the organ grinder and his monkey to the Hindu and Japanese of the Orient.

Clowns mingled with pickaninnies, sailors with ghosts, tamborine girls with cardinals all making an attractive and ever changing scene.

The fact was made known that it was the "third annual" by a flashing electric sign while green and white streamers and crepe paper shades formed effective decorations. Music was played by Campbell's orchestra and refreshments were served.

The masquerade was under the efficient management of a committee, consisting of Roy C. Baker, G. Ernest Carr and Harold Green and was a success in every way.

The next and final social event of the winter season will be a May party given by the club on the evening of the first of May. Everything will be appropriate to the day, a huge May pole forming an important feature.

Among the costumes on Saturday evening was a group of girl triplets consisting of Miss Grace Knight, Miss Gertrude Jones and Harry Sutton with Wallace Brown as colored mammy.

Other costumes included J. W. Crossley as a Clown, Mrs. J. W. Crossley as an Indian, H. A. Stevens as Cardinal Richelien, Mrs. H. A. Stevens

SURPRISED BY YOUNG PEOPLE

A surprise party was tendered Mrs. McDonald of 335 Granite street, Saturday evening. A large number of young people from Quincy and Cambridge were present and a most pleasant evening was spent. Music and games were enjoyed until 11.30 the music being furnished by Peter McLeod of Copeland street and James McDonald of Jackson street. Refreshments were served during the evening after which Mrs. McDonald was presented with a well-filled purse.

The affair was in charge of Miss Ethel McLeod of Franklin street and Miss Mary McKenzie of Adams street being ably assisted by Craig Matheson, Mack McLeod and Dan Nicholson.

The principal event of the evening was a song by the well-known singer Stephen Tenny which was highly appreciated. The young people returned to their homes feeling that they had spent a most enjoyable evening.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Fashionable New York was more interested Easter in the Paris styles than in the garments Jesus wore when he emerged from the tomb.

While we are firmly convinced that the people should rule, it would be a much safer gamble to place your money on the people's wives.

There were smart styles on the Atlantic City board walk Easter day, but the Easter hats were louder than the roar of old Ocean's surf.

Having turned vast spongy watersheds into a naked street gutter by cutting off forests about the headwaters of streams, we are bound to have bad floods for many years.

Gov. Wilson's campaign letters have been stolen. He must learn that a candidate should never sign anything more incriminating than laundry bundles.

Our pugilistic editor is being worked overtime handling the news from the conventions where the Taft-Roosevelt-LaFollette scrap is being fought out.

While Dad and Ma in the flooded districts are having a time of anxious worry, the kids have the ecstatic joy of navigating the parlor in the wash tub.

Great difficulties are encountered by the photographers in getting flood pictures, but we judge that many camera men encountered nothing worse than the dust on last year's plates.

Preservation of our forests has been considered a fad of theorists, but if the forests had not been cut, 30,000 homeless people in the flooded districts would be sleeping peacefully in their beds tonight, instead of having to ask shelter.

SYNDICATED CAMPAIGNING.

Ten or fifteen years ago it was customary to make up a schedule of about three speeches a day for the more energetic political spell binders. They would be given an audience of farmers in some agricultural center for the afternoon. Then there would be two evening speeches in large towns, situated handily together by railroad train. Other speeches would alternate, keeping the crowd contented in both places, while the leading candidate was going between the two halls.

These speeches were set and formal examples of oratory. They had florid introductions, in which the speaker tried with astute diplomacy to reach some common ground of sympathy with the entire audience on a general basis of good government. Only after this skilful preparation of the soil did he try to plant his seeds of partisan conviction.

The man who ostensibly was merely trying to get your vote for another man, was more concerned with convincing the hearer that he himself was a modern Demosthenes, destined to climb higher on the ladder of fame.

Then there were elaborate peroration, in which the general maxims of statesmanship and flowers of rhetoric were elaborated into a top-heavy forensic structure, appearing largely to the emotions of the voters.

During the coming campaign, the plan of syndicating one speech with slight modifications to a long string of places, reached largely by automobile, will be in evidence more than ever before.

Col. Roosevelt gave evidence of the kind of thing the modern candidate will be up against Monday, when he delivered a dozen more or less extended talks in Illinois and Indiana.

The five and ten minutes talk can be made exceedingly effective by the man who has the newspaper gift of "boiling it down." But a great many candidates cannot get away from the oratorical forms of the old style rally. By the time they have got their introduction out of the way and are just about laying down primary political doctrines, the "honk honk" of the chauffeur closes the lid on the oratory. A gathering of patriots is due to assemble on the village common 20 miles away in just 10 minutes, and if they have to wait more than 10 minutes, they will vote the other ticket.

COAL WAGE SCALE.

The great coal strike in the anthracite fields will serve to call attention to the wage scale. The men who work the mines say that they can not live on the money they receive. They merely exist. We believe this statement is admitted as wholly within the fact. The wage scale in the United States is higher than the miners in England are asking for. The wage that is satisfactory in England would be hooted in this country. The general difference in the situation must be kept in mind.

At bottom there is involved something fundamental. A living wage scale should be paid. If it is not there is something wrong. Our sympathy is with the miner. We believe fully in a fair share for labor. The people pay a round price for coal under a schedule fixed by the coal operators. Dividends to coal roads are huge. It is plain that the wages of the miners in the coal fields of this country can be made just plainly decent without taking from capital any part of a legitimate return and without advance in coal prices. We say this apart from any technical points that may be involved in the present controversy.

Neither capital nor labor has solved its problem in this country nor will they until frankness and fairness controls on both sides. The weakness of capital is that it lacks heart. The weakness of labor is that it is not always sincere. One seeks by cold methods to secure dividends; the other by similar processes to reduce efficiency. Both are wrong.

Capital is entitled to a good reward for risk and the employment of ability in managerial capacity, that will keep men employed. Labor is entitled to a good wage for efficient work. The quicker the two sides appreciate these relations, the sooner will true prosperity be established. The question involves moral thinking. This is too often left out of the considerations. What is right? What is fair?—Haverhill Gazette.

NEW CODE OF CATHOLIC LAWS.

Pius X, recently issued instructions for the speedy completion of the new code of laws by which the Roman Catholic church throughout the world is to be governed for the future. Forty of the church's most learned canonists besides a commission of cardinals; have been working on this colossal task for the last eight years. They have already occupied three years beyond the time originally alloted to them, but owing to the stimulus now given by Pius X. who looks upon this as the great work of his pontificate, the code will be ready for production during the coming year. It is the first time in the history of the papacy that a universal codification has been attempted. It will eliminate an immense number of local or obsolete laws and establish new legislation applicable everywhere and suited to modern times. One of the important features of the new codification, which concerns the United States as well as other countries, is the abolition of some of the impediments which make marriage invalid between Catholics. Thus, according to the new law, marriage between third cousins will be allowed, and no obstacle to marriage will be created by sponsorship at baptism. The American bishops will be granted extended powers of jurisdiction in matters which they are now obliged to refer to Rome.—Framingham News.

THE ANGELL MEMORIAL.

The executive committee of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is appealing for help and we are glad to publish its "battle cry:"

"The Society has a great work before it; and it earnestly asks the aid and prayers of every man and woman in Massachusetts who believes in God, and has sympathy for his suffering creatures.'

"With these words George T. Angell, the founder of our societies in April 1868, closed an ardent appeal for money and help in all the Boston papers. This was the beginning forty-four years ago.

"These words we constitute now our 'battle cry' to raise the funds necessary, to build not only an 'Angell Memorial Animal Hospital,' but to erect in connection with this a building suitable for a permanent home for the societies he founded, and that will afford the means of materializing and perpetuating the ideals for which he gave his life and substance. For years the societies have been greatly handicapped in their work by lack of proper facilities and funds.

"Every man and woman in Massachusetts 'who believes in God' must enlist in this army of helpers and bring to this work all that is best in him and her to assist the societies to accomplish their great task.

THE FAMINE IN CHINA.

We know so little of China and the Chinese, yet have grown so unconsciously familiar with the stupendous calamities which from time to time affect that great country, that only the "intermittent alarm" or frequent famine stories bring to us a real sense of the horrors—the suffering and death, in the great flood-stricken area of China—horrors not alone of mere starvation but of that stalking, ghastly "famine fever" we call "Typhus" and the raging small pox, which has already laid its black hand upon thousands of the impoverished, starving multitudes.

Just as the Chinese themselves feel regarding the beggars who throng the city streets and country roads, that only a tiny fraction of them can be helped, and that fraction only temporarily, why, therefore, attempt to aid any; so we are apt to get into a position of indifference regarding the famine of China, since some portion of that great land seems always afflicted by flood or drought epidemic or famine.

The present famine, unlike the drought famine of 1878, has been due to the excessive rains, followed by typhoons and floods, affecting an area of over 80,000 square miles and a population of 3,000,000 people.

Past experience has rendered possible the distribution of famine relief on a most systematic and economical basis. The pauperizing effect resulting to some extent from relief operations in other famines, due to affording support to thousands during prolonged periods of enforced idleness, has been practically eliminated in this. The famine fund will be largely used in employing the famine sufferers to reconstruct their own dykes and roads destroyed by the floods. Thus the idle and despairing people will be enabled to earn a living while waiting for another harvest, and will at the same time be helping to restore normal conditions and to prevent future occurrences of this nature.

It is natural that the afflicted people should abandon their lands and turn to beggary. This migration will be checked by the system of relief based on honest work. The recent state of civil war greatly increased the distress caused by failure of crops and destruction wrought by flood, and the unsettled political conditions existing, make it impossible for the new government to do much in aid of the sufferers. For this reason it becomes imperative that the United States, always China's friend, should come generously to the front with help. The remarkable patience under suffering of the Chinese makes relief comparatively easy, if only the means are supplied. In no land will a dollar accomplish so much; $3 means the saving of a whole family for a month, and there are 600,000 families starving, with no possibility of a crop before May.

Mr. Jameson the Red Cross Engineer in the field, writes of processions of gaunt, starving people wandering aimlessly, hopelessly along the roads, falling and dying in the mud when they can go no farther. Day after day he passed dead bodies of men, women and children lying where they had fallen.

Tree bark and roots have been devoured and even cannibalism is resorted to in the unbearable gnawnings of starvation. Smallpox and the dread typhus fever sweep down on the miserable wretches shivering in straw huts or lying along roads, making scenes that would melt the hardest heart.

Rev. Rufus B. Tobey of Wollaston, office room 444 at 49 Federal street, Boston, is the corresponding secretary of the Red Cross committee for Massachusetts having the China famine relief in charge.

ACCEPT OFFER OF 10 PERCENT

Vote of Greek Operatives at Lowell Is Unanimous

FAVORED BY TEXTILE UNION

Members of the I. W. W. Want Assurance In Writing That Advance In Wages Will Be Granted—General Rejoicing Over Agents' Announcement That Mills Will Open Next Monday—Strike Has Been Peacful

Lowell, Mass., April 15.—Next Monday the mills which have been shut down will open with an advance in wages on a basis of 10 percent over the schedule in force before March 25.

This was announced by President Wadleigh of the Mill Agents' association and was received with a general rejoicing by business men as well as operatives.

Organizations of the United Textile Workers will meet early this week to take formal action on the offer of the mill agents and the recommendation of the national officers that these terms be accepted.

There are members of the I. W. W. who are still sceptical of the report of any increase in wages and it was decided to have representatives from each mill wait upon the agents and receive assurance in writing that an advance of 10 percent in wages will be granted. A general meeting of the I. W. W. will then be held on the South common.

The Greek operatives, who have maintained an independent attitude during the three weeks' struggle, by an unanimous vote decided to accept the offer of 10 percent.

Secretary Reagan of the local branch of the United Textile Workers said:

"We asked for a 10 percent increase and now it is granted. It is up to us to accept it."

The strike and lockout in the Lowell mills occurred rather unexpectedly, March 25, when nearly 2000 operatives in the Appleton and Merrimac mills walked out as a protest against an advance of about 7 percent offered.

The Appleton mills were shut down immediately, but the others continued in operation for the day. The manufacturers, however, decided to close all the cloth mills and they have been shut down since, nearly 15,000 workers losing their positions temporarily.

The mill owners declined to grant 10 percent, but when the treasurers of other cotton mills in northern New England increased the rate of the March advance the Lowell manufacturers faced a difficult situation.

The strike and lockout have been conducted with little disorder, and at no time was the situation such that the police department could not handle it. The strikers were allowed to parade freely and hold meetings.

ENGINEERS GRANT TRUCE

An Hour's Warning to Be Given Railroads In Event of Strike

New York, April 15.—A truce until next Wednesday was declared by the conference committee of the fifty railroads and the delegates of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. The conference committee of managers will meet that day.

Chief Stone was asked: "Will you call a strike if at Wednesday's conference the managers fail to grant an advance in wages or offer to reopen the discussion?"

"I will advise the members of my committee to leave the city for their homes," replied Stone. "What will happen after that I cannot say."

"In event of a strike, how much time will you give the roads?"

"About an hour."

PANIC IN THEATRE

Cry of Fire When Films Ignite In a Moving Picture Show

New York, April 15.—A cry of fire raised when a roll of films ignited in a moving picture theatre in the Bronx caused a panic among 500 spectators. A number of persons were painfully injured by being trampled on in a wild rush to escape from the building.

The hurts of none of the victims are serious. Most of those injured were children. The flames were quickly put out with a fire extinguisher.

In the Paddington borough of London, if you operate a tenement or apartment house, you must sweep the floors of all rooms once a day, wash them once a week and open the windows of all sleeping rooms for at least one hour in each day or pay a fine of $25. It may not be possible to make the people moral by law, but the borough council of Paddington believes much can be done to make them healthy.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

Mrs. Caroline C. Barney, supervisor of Universalist Sunday schools in Massachusetts, occupied the pulpit at the Universalist church, Sunday morning and it is to be regretted that more did not avail themselves of the opportunity of listening to a talk on Sunday school work by one well-qualified to speak on the subject. Mrs. Barney's pleasing personality and her thorough knowledge of her subject made the hour's talk seem of but short duration.

Mrs. Barney was present at the Sunday school session, visiting the classes and making suggestions where needed. At three o'clock she met the teachers and officers in the Sunday school room explaining the new system of graded lessons which will probably be introduced.

The Dorcas society meets Tuesday evening with Mrs. B. G. Barnes, Faxon avenue, it being the ninth anniversary of their re-organization.

Wednesday, at two o'clock, the Woman's Universalist Missionary society of Massachusetts meets in the church auditorium. Mrs. Eben Prescott of Braintree, vice-president of the Third district will preside. Mrs Leslie Hayford of Brookline will speak on, "Social Service and the Immigrant" and Rev. Charles Conklin's subject will be "The Missionary Opportunity." The public is invited.

Thursday evening at 8 o'clock will occur the annual parish meeting.

The Old Colony association of Universalists meets at North Weymouth, Wednsday, April 24, for an all day session with lunch at noon served by the entertaining parish. Rev. C. F. Henry of North Attleboro is to speak at the morning session and Rev. J. K. Mason, D. D. of Waltham in the afternoon.

The young men of the Play Square club will give a supper and entertainment in the church vestry Thursday, April 25, and the young ladies of the Murray club having their annual sale of May baskets and candy the same evening.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL

In spite of the unfavorable weather a large congregation was present at the morning service to listen to Rev. Edward Norton, who, by special request repeated a sermon which he preached in the same church about fourteen years ago. His subject was, "Say so," and his text was Psalms 107:1-2. "O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth forever. Let the redeemed of the Lord say so." He said in part:

"The whole Psalm is a call to God's people to recognize not only in silent meditation His marvelous goodness, but to sound it out in vocal praise. In true piety indebtedness is acknowledged, and gratitude finds expression. I want in my sermon to apply some phases of this truth in our individual lives.

"How often other lives overshadow ours with blessings. Some of the best things we all of us have to acknowledge we know come to us through other lives. Has it been our habit to say so? We often have feelings for others which, if spoken, would send a whole world of sunshine into those other lives. We ought to say so!

"Some say 'Actions speak louder than words. Is it not better to speak in deeds,' No, it is better to speak in both. The dear relations of home are what they should be only when we make open recognition. Take the relation of children to parents. How often is there lack of this appreciation which would enrich the whole life. You who know of parental love, poured out of the treasures of their hearts for you, say so!

"There are others to whom children owe a debt of gratitude, the teachers in the public schools. Who, except the parents come so near giving their lives for the children as the teachers? Let us, parents and teachers, never forget what a power there is in a word of encouragement spoken at the right time, in the right way. This truth runs through all the relations of life where one life comes in contact with another.

"Of all the flowers we can strew in the pathway of a friend the most beautiful is loving appreciation. Is it our habit to speak of God's goodness, to say so? What are any other riches compared to the riches of God's goodness, to you and me? If God has manifested His goodness in some wonderful way, why not cultivate the habit of saying so?

"In every congregation in the land there are men and women who have trusted Christ, and are trying to live the Christian life; they hope in Jesus Christ and yet they never said so. If I speak to one such today, take home with you the text, and as you go into this week, oh give thanks unto the Lord for his goodness, for His mercy endureth forever. Let the redeemed of the Lord say so."

The Sunday school met at 12.15, in charge of Supt. C. A. Randall; lesson: 'The Birth of Christ."

The Christian Endeavor meeting at 6 o'clock was led by Rev. Edward Norton, subject: "How can we Enrich our Sabbaths" Mark 2: 23-28. Several honorary members were present.

This afternoon at four o'clock the Sunbeam club meets with Mrs. Murray, Newport avenue. This evening the executive committee of the Christian Endeavor meets with Miss M. K. Morse.

Charles A. Randall, Mrs. E. R. Johnson and E. S. Tenney were appointed delegates to the Suffolk South Conference at the Romsey church, Dorchester on Wednesday.

Members of the Christian Endeavor society are planning to attend the C. E. County Convention on Friday, at Bethany Church, Quincy.

Friday evening, at the mid-week prayer meeting, Rev. Edward Norton will preside; topic: "An Evening with the hymn, 'Nearer My God to Thee.'"

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

Rev. J. Hamilton Woodsum, pastor of the First Baptist church of Milton, preached Sunday morning in the Wollaston Baptist church in exchange with the pastor. Subject of the sermon was "The Principles of the Kingdom," Romans 14:17. Portions of the Sermon on the Mount were read as a scripture lesson and the sermon was able and interesting. Mr. Woodsum also led the discussion in the Walther Men's class in the absence of the teacher.

The Sunday school was well attended, subject—"The Use of the Sabbath."

The Junior Endeavor society met at 3.30 and held an interesting meeting under the leadership of Miss Ethel M. Campbell, superintendent. The Y. P. S. C. E. met at 6 o'clock subject "How can we enrich our Sabbaths?"

At 7 o'clock in the auditorium the pastor preached on "Hindering the Gospel of Christ."

This evening the Rand class, Charles M. Roach president and J. Arthur Sparrow, teacher, will observe ladies' night in the chapel. There will be an interesting program after which refreshments will be served.

Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock the W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Wesley Wiggin, 52 Brook street, subject: "Medical Missions"; leader, Mrs. F. H. Bishop. At 4 o'clock the pastor's first class in the Fundamental principles of the Christian Faith will meet at the parsonage, and at 7.45 a cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Porter, 109 Taylor street, John E. Leavitt, leader.

Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, the pastor's second class in the Fundamental principles of the Christian Faith will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Grass, 52 Ardell street, Montclair, and at 6.30 the annual supper and business meeting of the church will be held in the chapel. All the adult members of the congregation as well as the members of the church are expected and invited to be present.

There will be no Friday evening prayer meeting this week because of the convention which will be held in Bethany church Quincy, beginning at 2 P. M. and continuing through the evening under the auspices of the Norfolk Union of Christian Endeavor Societies. All the people are urged to attend the meetings of the convention.

The new bi-pocket envelopes will be used for the first time next Sunday and it is hoped all members of the church and congregation are supplied. If there are any who have been overlooked they are urged to speak to any of the ushers or members of the church or Benevolent Offering committee.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

The minister holds himself in readiness to perform any service within his power for any one he can help at any time.

Rev. Carl G. Horst will attend tomorrow, the annual Unitarian Minister's Retreat to be held in the First Parish church at Chestnut Hill.

The members and friends of the Wollaston Unitarian church are under deep obligation to Frederick H. Bishop, who for the third season now has had charge of the music for the vesper services and has given us the pleasure of hearing some of the best musical talent. The vesper services will be resumed next fall.

The new officers of the Wollaston Unitarian club are: president—Louis F. R. Langelier, vice president—Arthur W. Rolin, treasurer—Charles Loring, secretary—John E. Simmons, executive committee—A. B. Hillman, William Burrell and Rev. Carl G. Horst.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

At the First United Presbyterian church yesterday the morning topic was: "Christ's interpretation of the law of the Sabbath." Matthew 2-27. The attendance was small.

There was a fairly good attendance at the Sabbath school session at noon.

The young people's meeting was not largely attended.

A. F. Bromley secretary of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. was the speaker at the evening service. His address was practical and helpful. Graham Patterson sang "O love that will not let me go." in a way that deeply impressed the audience. There was a much better attendance in the evening.

MEMORIAL CHURCH.

At the morning service yesterday, Rev. Thomas W. Davison spoke on the "Honor of the Christian life." Mr. Davison said "this is looked upon as a superficial age. The books that are coming so rapidly from the press, the newspapers that cover our tables are largely superficial. The books are untrue to the title—the news is unreliable. The same thing is also true of the stage—the actors do not think the thoughts and feel the emotions. And what ought to stir the audience is often dry and listless. This same superficiality is possibly true of the christian church and also of the pulpit if it is not close to the one sublime personality of the ages.

"We have a superficial idea of honor which is seen in our clubs, lodges, political offices, and also in church officers. Honor is a trust and confidence men place in us, an assurance of our integrity and high moral worth. The honor of the christian life is that we are called to be co-workers with God—to be examples of righteousness in a world of sin, to mold lives into the divine likeness of Him whose whole soul was truth.

"The nobility of the Christian life is seen in its spirit of toleration which is growing rapidly among men of all creeds in the love that is lifting us above prejudice and giving us a wide vision of interest and the claims of humanity. Our aim for Christian unity today is not from any lack of conviction or because we lack stability but we have a God who is the Father of the race. This makes our fellowship sacred. It is no longer religious clannishness or bigotry, but one in sympathy with the mind and purpose of Christ."

BOTH SIDES WARNED

Stern Reminder Is Sent From Washington to the Mexicans

Washington, April 15.—Warning has been issued by the United States to the Mexican government, as well as to General Orozco, chief of the revolutionary forces, that "it expects and must demand that American life and property within the republic of Mexico be justly and adequately protected, and that this government must hold Mexico and the Mexican people responsible for all wanton or illegal acts sacrificing or endangering American life or damaging American property or interests."

The attitude of the United States as expressed to both the federal and rebel authorities is that any maltreatment of American citizens "will be deeply resented by the American government and people and must be fully answered for by the Mexican people."

GIVES ADDRESS ON "GRATITUDE"

Rev. Fr. Patrick J. Scannell, spiritual director, delivered a powerful and eloquent address on "Gratitude" to members of St. John's Holy Name Society, in the lower church last evening. The services concluded with benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament.

In the course of his remarks Fr. Scannell scored the existing evils of the present day and took to task those who have made certain conditions most deplorable as a result of their selfishness. He linked gratitude with friendship and selfishness with evil and went on to show how the proper effusion of one's faith is the strongest asset in baffling the most unfavorable circumstances and establishing the brotherhood of men as ordained by Christ.

At the conclusion of the services, the gathering repaired to the basement of the Parochial school, where a business meeting was held.

It was announced by the entertainment committee, composed of James C. Grant, Thomas Curtis and Leo P. Noonan, that the president of the society, Edward J. Lennon would give a talk to the members in St. John's Parochial school, on the evening of Patriots' day, subject: "My Three Years' Experience in the Civil War."

Mr. Lennon, who is an inspector in the department of the Board of Health is a prominent member of Paul Revere Post, G. A. R. and it is expected a large crowd will be in attendance.

TAFT MANAGERS ARE OPTIMISTIC

Say President Needs Only 202 Delegates to Be Renominated

CLAIM THAT HE HAS 337

Pennsylvania, However, Where Roosevelt Has Made Great Gains, Omitted From Latest Tabulations—Illinois Gives Clark Big Lead Over Other Democrats—Roosevelt Warmly Greeted In New Hampshire

Washington, April 15.—President Taft's supporters count as safely his 337 of the 490 delegates thus far chosen to the Republican national convention. As 589 votes are necessary to nominate, the president now lacks only 202 delegates of enough to nominate him on the first ballot.

This does not take into account the result in Pennsylvania, where sixty-four delegates were balloted for. With Pennsylvania only twenty-five of the forty-eight states of the union have thus far chosen any Republican delegates. During the past week 138 delegates (not including Pennsylvania) were named. Taft obtained fifty-nine of them and Roosevelt the other seventy-nine. It was the best week Roosevelt has yet experienced, due mainly to the big vote which he rolled up in Illinois, where he counts upon fifty-six of the fifty-eight delegates chosen.

The latest computation of Manager McKinley of the Taft bureau concedes fifty-six of the Illinois delegates to Roosevelt and claims but two of them for Taft. The Roosevelt bureau concedes two of the Illinois delegates to Taft, and this is the only thing on which the rival managers agree, except that La Follette has thirty-six delegates and Cummins four.

Champ Clark was put head and shoulders above his Democratic rivals as a result of the landslide for him in Illinois, which added fifty-eight delegates to his column. Not counting Pennsylvania, the Clark strength is now 137.

BUT NINE FOR TAFT

Roosevelt Gathers In All the Other Delegates In Pennsylvania

Philadelphia, April 15.—Late returns show that Taft delegates, outside of Philadelphia, have been elected in but a single district in Pennsylvania. With these two delegates from the Ninth, or Lancaster district, and seven from the city, the president will have but nine delegates from Pennsylvania.

As against this Roosevelt will have not only fifty-five delegates which were elected Saturday, but he has completely swept the control of the state convention out of the hands of the state machine, and his followers will control that body when it meets in Harrisburg May 1, and give him no less than sixty-seven votes at the Chicago convention. The victory is most decisive, and the people of Pennsylvania have gone on record as being almost unitedly for the principles laid down for them by the former president.

Taking the thirty-two districts of the state and averaging about 15,000 votes cast in each, which is probably very conservative, there were polled over 480,000 votes at Saturday's primaries. Of these the popular plurality for Roosevelt will exceed 210,000. The singular thing about the election is the fact that the voters made no attempt to defeat for renomination senators or assemblymen who were allied with the state organization.

FOSS OR CLARK?

Each Is Named as Probable Nominee at Democratic Convention

Boston, April 15.—Governor Foss was named at the Boston City club as the "dark horse" which is to "issue forth at the psychological moment and lead the Democratic hosts to victory." The prediction was made by Thomas P. Riley, chairman of the Democratic state committee, at the Jefferson day dinner of the Democratic Club of Massachusetts.

At the same meeting Congressman Curley expressed his belief that Champ Clark would be chosen at Baltimore but that Massachusetts would also be honored by the nomination of Foss for the vice presidency.

ON PRESIDENT'S TRAIL

Roosevelt Warmly Greeted by the People of New Hampshire

Manchester, N. H., April 15.—Over the path his successor to the presidency rode a few weeks ago, Mr. Roosevelt came into New Hampshire to tell the people why he, rather than President Taft, should be given the Republican nomination.

The crowds and the enthusiasm were not, in all respects, equal to those when the president came here under the direction of the Taft league, but Roosevelt was greeted with notable warmth and his speeches were listened to with keenest attention.

At Concord there were 5000 people in front of the capitol when he had finished his address in the auditorium, the principal effort of the day. That display of numbers and noise was equal to the president's reception. Three thousand people gathered in one hall here to hear him.

Mr. Roosevelt placed emphasis on his achievements as a man of peace and said that he had accomplished more than whose who had pursued a less vigorous policy.

The purpose of the incursion into this state was to influence the voters to come out to the caucuses April 23 and vote for Roosevelt delegates.

HAS NOT SOLVED PROBLEM

Riley Says Washington Is a Failure on the Race Question

Haverhill, Mass., April 15.—Dr. Jerome Riley of New York, the first negro to matriculate in Illinois, attacked Booker T. Washington scathingly in an address delivered at the Y. M. C. A. here. Riley spoke on the finality of the race problem solution, and in his remarks said:

"I differ with Dr. Washington and have since the dawn of freedom, believing that the traditional history of the white race in solving the racial problem was the only safe guide. Dr. Washington has had the right of the road for twenty years and now admits that he is solving no problem, notwithstanding his great success in gaining contributions.

"Our greatest need is white leaders and guides in obtaining home settlements, as we are the white man's burden throughout the country and must needs be for the next three centuries to come. The hoe and the potato patch under good white leadership will solve the problem, for through such leadership we would come to own not only the hoe, but also the potato patch."

DRANK HUSBAND'S WHISKY IN DISGUST

Suffragist Failed to Quit After Taking First Nip

Pittsburgh, April 15.—Mrs. Lydia Ayers, who is active in the suffrage cause, was before Magistrate Saam on a charge of intoxication. According to her story, her husband came home late at night with a bottle of whiskey. He placed it on a table, where she eyed it in disgust.

Mrs. Ayers told the magistrate that, acting on her right to do as her husband did, she took a drink. Her disgust changed to recklessness, she said, and the contents of the bottle steadily decreased. She was arrested several blocks away from her home, unable to walk steadily. The magistrate fined her $3.

TO BE DEPORTED

Two Members of the I. W. W. and Others Shipped From California

Los Angeles, Cal., April 15.—In charge of five guards, two members of the Industrial Workers of the World, named Prasher and Bowling, and seven alleged "undesirable characters" were ordered by the federal court to be taken to New York and Boston and to be deported to Great Britain, Canada and Italy. The trip was begun immediately. Prasher and Bowling are alleged to be anarchists.

Three hundred arrests have been made in San Diego of I. W. W. agitators, and the police announce that the dangerous element has been eliminated. During the campaign of the I. W. W. against the existing government citizens organized what has been called a vigilance committee, and threats of lynching were made before the agitators quit the fight.

CAUSE OF GRANT'S DEATH

Again Asserted to Have Been Due to Cancer of the Throat

New York, April 15.—In spite of the many denials, it is learned from authoritative outside sources that General Frederick D. Grant died from cancer of the throat like his father.

An operation was performed by Dr. Abbe, who was in constant attendance upon the general, and Dr. Denich, whose specialty is cancer of the throat.

The body of Grant will be buried in the Memorial cemetery on the government's military reservation at West Point. The ceremony will be delayed ten days to give General Grant's daughter, Princess Cantacuzene, time to reach this country from Russia.

Conspired to Loot Bank

Detroit, April 15.—Henry M. Deering, the aged cashier who, it is alleged, wrecked the Albion, Mich., National bank by misappropriating $200,000, pleaded guilty on an indictment which charges that he conspired with his son, Palmer Deering, to misappropriate the bank's money by forgery.

Fire Kills Banker's Daughter

New York, April 15.—Miss May Windmuller, aged 25, daughter of a banker, died from burns suffered in her home in Woodside Heights, L. I. Her gown was blown against the kitchen range, and instantly caught fire.

POLICE HUNT FOR SUSPECT

Said to Have Strong Evidence In the Marsh Tragedy

DISAGREEMENT OVER MONEY

Slain Soap Manufacturer Was Executor of Estate of Adopted Daughter of Brother In California—Woman's Nephew Hurriedly Left For New England a Short Time Ago, Leaving Borrowed Motorcycle on Wharf

Lynn, Mass., April 15.—That George E. Marsh was shot to death in the vicinity of Marianna street around midnight Friday morning is indicated by the testimony of six different persons who heard shots at that time.

This street is near the Good Will soap factory, of which Marsh was the official head, and he may have met his death there or in a neighboring house.

It can be definitely stated that the Lynn police have narrowed their search down to two men and the evidence against one is so strong that last night two inspectors left hastily to search for this man in Maine, while two other detectives took an express to California.

The man whom the police are most anxious to talk with now is he of the mysterious runabout who loitered about the Marsh home for several days previous to the murder and has since disappeared. He is said to be a relative of Miss Orpha Marsh of Stockton, Cal., niece of George E. Marsh.

George E. Marsh, who was very wealthy, was executor of the estate of Orpha Marsh and an examination of the murdered man's papers shows that the two had not agreed. Money was said not to be sent as often as Miss Marsh believed was her due and she had written about coming on.

Instead of coming on herself, a relative from Stockton visited Lynn in her interests, and it is supposed saw Marsh. The police would very much like to interview him and learn just when and where he last saw the dead soap manufacturer and what took place.

Arthur Marsh, nephew of the murder victim, said, when asked what he knew about Miss Orpha Marsh, that she was the adopted daughter of the late James Marsh, brother of George, is 40 years old and single, and that she had not been in Lynn, so far as he knew, for the past twenty years.

He said that when last in Lynn she visited her uncle by adoption, George. He said he did not know any of her acquaintances, nor of any one who is keeping company with her.

Facts Gleaned at Stockton

Stockton, Cal., April 15.—Orpha Marsh of Stockton, an adopted daughter of James Marsh, brother of George E. Marsh of Lynn, Mass., could not be located at her home in this city, and friends stated that she had been in the country for a week; that she was expected home soon and that upon her arrival they believed she would refuse to be interviewed concerning the murder of her uncle.

Five weeks ago William A. Dorr, nephew of Miss Marsh, disposed of his interest in a motorcycle garage in this city and disappeared very unexpectedly, leaving a borrowed motorcycle standing on a wharf. Miss Marsh stated that Dorr had left hurriedly for New England to look after her business affairs. Dorr left here for San Francisco by boat, and Miss Marsh said at the time that he went from there on east.

Orpha Marsh was adopted when only a few months old by James Marsh, who was engaged in farming east of Stockton for many years. He died from blood poisoning at a local hospital six years ago. Since then Miss Marsh has made her home in this city, residing in apparently comfortable means in her own cottage in the residential section of the city. William Dorr resided with her.

Friends of Miss Marsh know nothing of her parentage and state that Miss Marsh supposed herself the daughter of James Marsh until after his death. Friends said Miss Marsh had not discussed her business affairs. Dorr is an expert motorcyclist and sang at many social functions. Both he and Miss Marsh moved in the best circles.

Veteran Says He Did Not Know Civil War Relic Was Loaded

New Haven, April 15.—Held for killing his son, Charles W. Reynolds, 37 years old, Curtis W. Reynolds, a Civil war veteran, who used the same gun in the fatal shooting which he carried during the war, declared that he did not know that the weapon was loaded.

He told the police that he grabbed the dust covered gun from the wall to frighten his son, who had come home intoxicated.

"It never struck me before," said Mr. Wimpleton, "but Doctor Temple stopped me this morning to tell me what a big, handsome, manly-looking fellow our son had grown to be."

"I don't see how you could help noticing it," his wife replied. "I have been aware of it all the time; but I guess a mother is more likely to look for such things than a father is."

"Oh, I've realized that Will was handsome and manly-looking, all right. You never have been any more proud of him than I have been."

CHAPTER XXV.

The Bubble Bursts.

At about the same hour that the judge was hurling threats and insults at Colonel Fentress, three men were waiting ten miles away at the head of the bayou which served to isolate Hicks' cabin. Now no one of these three had ever heard of Judge Slocum Price; the breath of his fame had never blown, however gently, in their direction, yet they were preparing to thrust opportunity upon him. To this end they were lounging about the opening in the woods where the horses belonging to Ware and Murrell were tied.

At length the dip of oars became audible in the silence and one of the trio stole down the path, a matter of fifty yards, to a point that overlooked the bayou. He was gone but a moment.

"It's Murrell all right!" he said in an eager whisper. "Him and another fellow—the Hicks girl is rowing them." He glanced from one to the other of his companions, who seemed to take firmer hold of themselves under his eye. "It'll be all right," he protested lightly. "He's as good as ours. Wait till I give you the word." And he led the way into an adjacent thicket.

Meantime Ware and Murrell had landed and were coming along the path, the outlaw a step or two in advance of his friend. They reached the horses and were untying them when the thicket suddenly disgorged the three men; each held a cocked pistol; two of these pistols covered Murrell and the third was leveled at Ware.

"Hues!" cried Murrell in astonishment, for the man confronting him was the Clan's messenger who should have been speeding across the state.

"Toss up your hands, Murrell," said Hues quietly.

One of the other men spoke.

"You are under arrest!"

"Arrest!"

"You are wanted for nigger-stealing," said the man. Still Murrell did not seem to comprehend. He looked at Hues in dull wonder.

"What are you doing here?" he asked.

"Waiting to arrest you—ain't that plain?" said Hues, with a grim smile.

The outlaw's hands dropped at his side, limp and helpless. With some idea that he might attempt to draw a weapon one of the men took hold of him, but Murrell was nerveless to his touch; his face had gone a ghastly white and was streaked with the markings of terror.

"Well, by thunder!" cried the man in utter amazement.

Murrell looked into Hues' face.

"You—you—" and the words thickened on his tongue, becoming an inarticulate murmur.

"It's all up, John," said Hues.

"No!" said Murrell, recovering himself. "You may as well turn me loose—you can't arrest me!"

"I've done it," answered Hues. "I've been on your track for six months."

"How about this fellow?" asked the man whose pistol still covered Ware. Hues glanced toward the planter and shook his head.

"Where are you going to take me?" asked Murrell quickly. Again Hues laughed.

"You'll find that out in plenty of time, and then your friends can pass the word around if they like; now you'll come with me."

Ware neither moved nor spoke as Hues and his prisoner passed back along the path, Hues with his hand on Murrell's shoulder, and one of his companions close at his heels, while the third man led off the outlaw's horse.

Presently the distant clatter of hoofs was borne to Ware's ears—only that; the miracle of courage and daring he had half expected had not happened. Murrell, for all his wild boasting, was like other men, like himself. His bloodshot eyes slid around in their sockets. There across the sunlit stretch of water was Betty—the thought of her brought him to quick choking terrors. The whole fabric of crime by which he had been benefited in the past or had expected to profit in the future seemed toppling in upon him, but his mind clutched one important fact. Hues, if he knew of Betty's disappearance, did not connect Murrell with it. Ware sucked in comfort between his twitching lips Stealing niggers! No one would believe that he, a planter, had a hand in that, and for a brief instant he considered signaling Bess to return. Slosson must be told of Murrell's arrest; but he was sick with apprehension some trap might have been prepared for him, he could not know; and the impulse to act forsook him.

He smote his hands together in a hopeless, beaten gesture. And. Murrell had gone weak—with his own eyes he had seen it—Murrell—whom he believed without fear! He felt that he had been grievously betrayed in his trust and a hot rage poured through him. At last he climbed into the saddle, and, swaying like a drunken man, galloped off.

When he reached the river road he paused and scanned its dusty surface. Hues and his party had turned south when they issued from the wood path. No doubt Murrell was being taken to Memphis. Ware laughed harshly. The outlaw would be free before another dawn broke.

He had halted near where Jim had turned his team the previous night after Betty and Hannibal had left the carriage; the marks of the wheels were as plainly distinguishable as the more recent trail left by the four men and as he grasped the significance of that wide half circle his sense of injury overwhelmed him again. He hoped to live to see Murrell hanged!

He was so completely lost in his bitter reflections that he had been unaware of a mounted man who was coming toward him at a swift gallop, but now he heard the steady pounding of hoofs and, startled by the sound, looked up. A moment later the horse man drew rein at his side.

"Ware!" he cried.

"How are you, Carrington?" said the planter.

"You are wanted at Belle Plain," began Carrington, and seemed to hesitate.

"Yes—yes, I am going there at once—now—" stammered Ware, and gathered up his reins with a shaking hand.

"You've heard, I take it?" said Carrington slowly.

"Yes," answered Ware, in a hoarse whisper. "My God, Carrington, I'm heart sick; she has been like a daughter to me—I—" he fell silent, mopping his face.

"I think I understand your feeling," said Carrington, giving him a level glance.

"Then you'll excuse me," and the planted clapped spurs to his horse. Once he looked back over his shoulder; he saw that Carrington had not moved from the spot where they had met.

At Belle Plain, Ware found his neighbors in possession of the place. They greeted him quietly and spoke in subdued tones of their sympathy. The planter listened with an air of such abject misery that those who had neither liked nor respected him, were roused to a sudden generous feeling where he was concerned; they could not question but that he was deeply affected. After all the man might have a side to his nature with which they had never come in contact.

When he could he shut himself in his room. He had experienced a day of maddening anxiety; he had not slept at all the previous night; in mind and body he was worn out; and now he was plunged into the thick of this sensation. He must keep control of himself, for every word he said would be remembered. In the present there was sympathy for him, but sooner or later people would return to their sordid unemotional judgments.

He sought to forecast the happenings of the next few hours. Murrell's friends would break jail for him, that was a foregone conclusion; but the insurrection he had planned was at an end. Hues had dealt its death blow. Moreover, though the law might be impotent to deal with Murrell, he could not hope to escape the vengeance of the powerful class he had plotted to destroy; he would have to quit the country. Ware gloated in this idea of craven flight. Thank God, he had seen the last of him!

But, as always, his thoughts came back to Betty. Slosson would wait at Hicks' place for the man Murrell had promised him, and, failing the messenger, for the signal fire, but there would be neither; and Slosson would be left to determine his own course of action. Ware felt certain that he would wait through the night, but as sure as the morning broke, if no word had reached him, he would send one of his men across the bayou, who must learn of Murrell's arrest, escape, flight—for in Ware's mind these three events were indissolubly associated The planter's teeth knocked together He was having a terrible acquaintance with fear, its very depths had swallowed him up; it was a black pit in which he sank from horror to horror. He had lost all faith in the Clan which had terrorized half a dozen states, which had robbed and murdered with apparent impunity, which had marketed its hundreds of stolen slaves. He had utterly collapsed at the first blow dealt the organization but he was still seeing Murrell, pallid and shaken.

COMPROMISE IS EXPECTED

Anthracite Sub-Committee to Resume Conference In New York

Philadelphia, April 15.—Having been unable thus far to reach an agreement on matters at issue between the anthracite mine workers and the coal operators, the sub-committee adjourned to meet in New York tomorrow.

The failure to agree after three days' discussion does not mean a hitch has occurred, but is due to complicated conditions encountered in trying to reach a basis of settlement for the entire hard coal fields. The methods of mining coal and paying the mine workers differs in each of the three principal anthracite fields.

It is fully expected a compromise will be reached without much more delay.

CLAIMS KIDNAPPED BABE IS HER OWN

Girl Who Took Little One From Hospital is Found

New York, April 15.—Annie Boyarsky, the 17-year-old girl, whose mother instinct, which had become a mania, led her to kidnap 10-month-old Ruth Flieschman from Mt. Sinai hospital on Thursday, was found wandering in the rain on Lexington avenue, the little one clasped in her arms. A white coat protected the child's head.

Annie was accosting passersby for carfare "to take my baby to a sanitarium," when a policeman took "the little mother" to a police station.

"You took the Flieschman baby from the hospital, didn't you, Annie?" questioned a police lieutenant gently.

"Why, no. This is my baby," said Annie. "This baby belongs to me. I am 20 years old and I am married."

Annie finally broke down and asked sobbingly for her own mother. She was taken to Bellevue hospital for observation as to her mental condition. The baby had apparently received the best of care from its temporary mother.

RESPONSIBLE FOR $250,000 SHORTAGE

Admission of Bank Cashier Who Is on His Death Bed

New Berlin, N. Y., April 15.—Officers of the First National bank of New Berlin, which has closed its doors, reporting a shortage of $250,000, say that Frank Arnold, formerly the cashier, now believed dying, has made statements showing his responsibility for the shortage.

It is also stated that several men will be implicated in the affair and that recently safe blowers were hired to come here to break into the vaults of the bank and destroy the evidence of the shortage. The failure of this scheme is said to have led to the blackmail of Arnold by a man who was arrested. He said he was A. Charles Holland. Holland was immediately bailed by a man named Brooks. Both have disappeared.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. HOLD PARTY FOR CHILDREN

The Quincy Women's club house was the scene of a delightful children's party Saturday afternoon and from 2.30 until 4.30 it was a merry time for the little folks.

Mrs. Edward B. Marsh chairman of the Program committee under whose auspices the party was given proved a charming hostess to the children and with her able assistants made it a festivity long to be remembered by them. For many of the little tots it was their first real party.

The dolls' reception and games were in charge of Mrs. Walter Burke and Miss Milly Wainwright. Dolls of all descriptions from small infants dressed in long clothes to life size French dolls, exquisitely dressed, even Dinah and the Teddy bears were there..

A number of games including puff billiards furnished no end of amusement.

The program was: march, two step, caprice, waltz, barn dance, Polka, Spanish waltz, dolls' march and the duchess. After refreshments dancing was resumed with the following program: Spanish waltz, barn dance and the Boston.

Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard looked after a dolls' march which gave the little ones lots of enjoyment. At the close just before the march upstairs for hats and wraps, Mrs. Burke arranged a "Grand splash" of peanuts and "kisses" which was true to its name.

Miss Annie Harding of Botolph street entertained a party of friends at a heart party on Saturday evening.

The house was very artistically decorated in red and white hearts and carnations. The color scheme was also carried out in the table decorations, red and white crepe paper being suspended from the ceiling to the corners of the table. At each cover was a small red crepe paper box, decorated with hearts. These boxes contained candies, nuts and a souvenir. In the center piece was a large plateau with a pretty boquet of red and white carnations. The heads of carnations at the base of the plateau, were tied with red ribbon which extended to each place and at a signal each girl pulled her ribbon. To her surprise, at the other end of the carnation was tied a white heart, on which were two small red hearts. On one was written 'Annie," and the other "Coyle." To Miss Harding's carnation was tied her beautiful diamond ring. A shower of congratulations were given Miss Harding in the announcement of her engagment to Mr. Coyle S. Allan of Dorchester.

After enjoying the dainty luncheon hearts was played until a late hour.

QUINCY A. A. 24—Y. M. C. A. 11.

The Quincy A. A. 2d team administered a severe beating to the Y. M. C. A., team on Saturday night on the latter's floor, the score being 24 to 11. It was expected that the Y. M. C A., team would give their opponents a hard game after the showing they made on Tuesday night at St. Mary's hall. However, the A. A. boys developed a "come-back" that was unexpected and after the first ten minutes of the game the result was never in doubt.

The first half ended 15 to 3 in favor of the Athletic club players, the large score being made possible by the accurate shooting of H. Chapman and Jenkins. Tirrell scored the only goal made by the Y. M. C. A., while Trask scored two points from the foul line. Johnson replaced Pinel about the middle of the period and the scoring immediately stopped, as Johnson broke up the passing, in which his opponent Harmon had figured so prominently.

The second half was much more closely contested as only 9 points were scored by the Quincy A. A., while the Y. M. C. A. boys made 7 points. Alstein replaced Tirrell at centre after 13 minutes had been played in this period and while not aiding in the scoring or passing as Tirril had done, he gave a good account of himself and gives much promise of making a good man, with more experience.

For the Quincy A. A. Jenkins and H. Chapman played great basket ball, several shots caged by the latter being very sensational. M. Chapman succeeded in shutting out Henry Trask, the star High school team center. This is the only time this has been done this year and shows that Chapman must have developed considerably during the past season.

For the Y. M. C. A., the work of Holmes and Tirrell stands out as best for Holmes shut out Dackus without a score, in fact the popular forward of the A. A. team had only about a half dozen tries at the goal during the entire game.

Between the halves the Y. M. C. A. 2d and the old timers played their annual game, the score ending 36 to 32 in favor of the 2d team.

The old timers were considerably weakened by the refusal of Maloney and Lynch to come on the floor. The former developing a case of 'Stagis-Frights" and the latter an acute case of "Coldus-Feetus."

The first half ended in a tie score 16 to 16, but during the 2d half, the 2d team pulled away toward the end owing to the exhaausted condition of the old timers centre.

Hoyt of the Old Timers, proved to be out of condition as he has not played for several months. He formerly played with the professional teams around Boston such as E. Boston, Hyde Park, Randolph and Gloucester.

Kemp and Thomas excelled for the 2d team while Rich and Morris did good work in the second half for the Old Timers. "Billy" Manning proved to be a veritable "gold mine" as a referee, his only trouble being in distinguishing the Old Timers from the 2d team.

MEN'S CLASS MEETING.

There were 47 present at the meeting of the Men's Class of the Washington Street Congregational church, Sunday evening and a most interesting meeting was in order from 5.15 until 7.15 o'clock. There were many members, from the East Braintree Methodist Church in attendance as guests of the class. A social hour was enjoyed, which was followed by an interesting discussion on "Was Jesus a Social Teacher?" Many took part in the discussion. Rev. C. P. Marshall, pastor of the church and Rev. Mr. Thayer of Barre, Vermont, were among those present.

Breaks the Chain of Washing and Ironing Drudgery

Hot water and hot irons may be yours without the intense heat of a coal range or the chance of a poor fire. Wash day is robbed of its terrors if you heat your water and your irons on a gas stove. Let us install one for you and furnish the fuel for it. You'll thank us for the suggestion.

HORRIBLE LOSS OF LIFE WHEN THE TITANIC GOES DOWN

World Is Stunned By Greatest Sea Disaster In History. 1500 Lost

Was the Biggest, Costliest and Most Luxurious Floating Palace

New York, April 16.—In the darkness of night, and in water two miles deep the Titanic, newest of the White Star fleet and greatest of all ocean steamships, upon her maiden trip sank to the bottom of the sea at 2:20 o'clock yesterday morning.

Dispatches received late last night from the Cape Race wireless station in Newfoundland and admissions reluctantly made at the same time by the New York officials of the White Star company warrant the fear that of the 2200 persons who were aboard of the great vessel when she received her mortal wound in collision with an iceberg, more than 1500 have gone to their death in her shattered hull, while 675, most of whom are women and children, have been saved.

Should these grim figures be verified, the loss of the Titanic—costliest, most powerful, greatest of all the ocean fleet—while speeding westward on her maiden voyage, will take rank in maritime history as the most terrible of all recorded disasters of the sea. There is yet no information as to who are among the saved and the greater number of the unfortunates who must be numbered with the lost. The officers of the White Star company themselves, have been able to learn no details of the horror that will carry grief into a thousand American homes, some of them among the proudest in the country.

Women and Children First

One point is known from which may be derived a sad satisfaction. In a desperate situation where the salvation of all was not possible, the women and children were cared for first. These were sent away in the first of the boats launched from the sinking ship—the only boats apparently which did not share the fate of the mammoth vessel. America and Britain are spared the horrors that attended the sinking of the La Bourgogne, in 1898, when the women and children were trampled under foot and cut down with knives amid the mad rush of the panic stricken crew for first places in the ship's boats.

The first reports of disaster indicated that the Titanic had been in collision with an iceberg not long after 10 o'clock Sunday night. It appears, therefore, that this most splendid of modern steam power creations, equipped with every device for safeguarding of life at sea, remained afloat only a little more than four hours after she

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM

The Men's club of St. Chrysostom's parish held its regular meeting in the parish rooms Monday evening with its president, George A. Vibert in the chair.

Owing to a sudden call to Washington, John J. Higgins, district attorney of Middlesex county who was to have spoken, was unable to be present.

In his place the club listened to an instructive discourse on the "Initiative referendum and recall" by John Herbert of Somerville, a well-known Boston attorney.

Mr. Herbert did not announce his views on these questions but simply explained the measures in a clear and definite manner.

A number of questions were asked the speaker and a short discussion followed. Refreshments and a social hour were enjoyed.

In addition to the routine business of the club the matter of the coming minstrel show came up for discussion.

LIQUOR PERMITS AND ANNUAL APPROPRIATION ORDER DEBATED

License Committee Reports 21 Liquor Permit Orders but the Council Cuts the Number Down to 14

Important Ruling by City Solicitor Relative to Fire Department

Discussion on the granting of permits to transport liquor and on the annual appropriation order prolonged Monday night's meeting of the City Council to near the hour of midnight. The Committee on Licenses had reported orders granting 21 permits to transport liquor. These were acted upon separately and when they were all through fourteen had been granted. Some had been rejected and still others had been laid on the table. It looks therefore as if the limit had been reached and that the applications now pending would have a slim chance of getting by.

The discussion on the budget was a long one. The report of the Finance Committee made some changes in the amounts as mentioned in the new budget introduced at the special meeting. The Committee had increased some of the items and decreased others. The total however as recommended was $1,786 in excess of the sum named in the order as offered by Councilman Studley. During the discussion the amount for pay of permanent men of the fire department was increased from $30,710 as recommended by the committee to $32,246 as mentioned in the order as introduced. An effort was made to suspend the rules that the order might be passed but the motion to suspend the rules failed to receive the necessary two thirds vote.

Ex-Mayors Bryant and Shea were present at the meeting and were invited to, and accepted seats on the platform with President Hobbs.

Councilman Thompson was the only absent member.

SCHOOL HALL.

A communication was received from the Quincy Parents' and Teachers' association asking that the hall in the Quincy school be completed. To Committee on Public Buildings.

ASSISTANT ASSESSOR.

A communication from the Mayor appointing Charles R. Sherman as assistant assessor was confirmed.

LIQUOR PERMITS.

A communication was received from the ministers' association protesting against the granting of liquor permits to John Callahan, John Maloney and the Adams express. On the former the communication said that Callahan claimed but 33 per cent of his express business was liquor while upon good authority it was understood that he transported from 90 to 100 per cent liquor. John Maloney and the Adams express were objected to because they failed to make their daily reports. The communication was laid on the table.

WOLLASTON PLAYGROUND

The Wollaston Parents' and Teachers' association petitioned for the use of the old Wollaston school lot as a playground. Referred to the Committee on Public Buildings.

DEFICITS.

A communication was received from the City Auditor giving notice of a deficit in the 1911 Board of Health appropriation of $507.42. Referred to Finance Committee.

ADAMS SCHOOL.

A communication was received from the School Committee recommending that the plans for the Wollaston building be used as the plans for the new Adams building. To Committee on Public Buildings.

APPOINTMENTS.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing David Frazier as a public weigher and Leo Moran as a constable. Confirmed.

From the Mayor appointing the following election officers to fill vacancies.

James R. McCormick as clerk Ward Four, precinct one.

Laurence H. Abbott as deputy clerk Ward Four, precinct one.

A. Merton Turner as deputy inspector Ward Four, precinct one.

Albert C. Farnham as Deputy Inspector Ward Four, precinct one.

PETITIONS.

Councilman Mahoney presented a petition for laying out Nelson street. To Street Committee.

Councilman Barker presented a petition to accept Norfolk street. To Street Committee.

Councilman Boyd presented a petition to accept Doble street. To Street Committee.

A number of petitions for minor licenses were received and referred.

A petition of the Town River Yacht club to keep and sell gasoline was laid on the table.

A petition to accept Fairmount way was referred to the Street Committee.

Petitions of the Bay State St. Ry Co. and Telephone Co. for attachments were granted.

A petition to establish a grade on Elm avenue and place the car tracks in a reserved space was referred to the Street Committee.

An application for a junk license was admitted under suspension of the rules.

SIDEWALK APPORTIONMENTS.

The Finance Committee reported several orders apportioning sidewalk assessments. Adopted.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported a slight amendment to the order for $666.02 for the new Wollaston school, making the order read to meet deficit bills. Referred to Finance Committee.

AGAINST A WART.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported no legislation necessary on the communication from the Mayor relative to enlarging City Hall, by building a so-called wart on the rear of the present building.

LIQUOR PERMITS.

The Committee on Licenses reported orders granting the following parties permits to transport liquor:—W. F. Loud & Son, N. DiPonfilio, An-

LADIES' NIGHT OF RAND CLASS

Entertainment, Refreshments and General Social Hour

THE PROGRAM

Ladies' night was observed by the Rand class of the Wollaston Baptist church in the chapel, Monday evening, a large number of the young men and their fair companions being present.

The evening opened with selections by an orchestra composed of Max O. Pinkham, Charles Sayward, Ernest Pletsch, Roger Bates, and Miss Dorothy Sayward.

Although disappointed by a Boston newspaper cartoonist who was to have given an illustrated talk, those present were amply repaid with a talk by J. Arthur Sparrow, teacher of the class.

Mr. Sparrow had a never ending fund of stories and anecdotes and kept the audience in smiles and laughter a good part of the time.

Two humorous readings 'Ann and Agnes" and "The boy next door" were contributed effectively by S. F. Kimball of Boston and were well received.

Cornet solos by Roger Bates found favor and the evening closed with selections by the orchestra.

Refreshments and a general social hour followed. The affair was in charge of a committee consisting of George Drew, Ralph Ford and Ernest Roberts.

MAN STABBED AT FORE RIVER

Alleged Assailant Arrested by Officer Johnson

TRIES TO ESCAPE

Luigi M. Antonolli, of 138 Canal street, was arrested at the Fore River Ship Yards shortly after ten o'clock this morning, charged with having assaulted Thomas Leonard, of 500 South street, with a knife. It seems that both men were working on a ship at the yard, when the stabbing is alleged to have taken place. Leonard was taken to the hospital in the yard and treated by Dr. Blanchard, the attending physician. It was stated that the wound, which was inflicted on his forearm, was not very serious.

It is alleged that Spano stabbed Rucher during a quarrel in a boarding house in South

If the politicians don't stop their wrangling soon, the taxpayers may get some of the pie which they are paying for.

Edwin Abbey, a world famous artist, left an estate of $24,340, almost as much as he could have earned by being a house painter.

All these strikes may be quite valuable to the manufacturers as a means of persuading the public that they have got to pay higher prices.

The attention of the crowd of 200,000 at Atlantic City was given Easter to what the women wore, but in summer it goes to what they don't wear.

Uncle Shelby Cullom has served his country well, but at the age of 82 one is more efficient in recalling the weather of his youth than in securing post offices for his constitutents.

The hours of the day are to be renumbered at Paris from 1 to 24. This has long been necessary as they usually sit up in Paris about twelve hours later than anywhere else.

Mannish derby hats were worn by many women in the Easter parade, but they will lose all their beauty when it is learned that they can be bought for $3.

Although all of our presidential candidates have been called Pilates, Ananiases, and Judases, we have the feeling that if we lent any of them $5.00 we would get it back.

The preservation of the peace of Europe is not giving us so much anxiety now as the question how to discourage assault and battery at the Chicago convention in June.

Senator Heyburn complains that the newspapers treat Congress as a joke. The trouble is that one hardly knows whether to look at it as a funeral or a circus.

If the Psychical Research Society hear the door knob rattle, they should look to see if it isn't the cat trying to get in, rather than the spirit of Dr. Funk.

Senator Jeff Davis of Arkansas has grossly shaken our confidence by appearing in a dress suit, but if he will tuck his trousers into his boots, he may still possibly be accepted as a tribune of the people.

PREVENTING FLOODS.

The government attitude toward the Mississippi and other flooded streams has been something like that of the negro toward his leaky roof. When it rained, he could not get out to mend it, and when it was pleasant, the roof was all right.

While a snow blanket of very unusual thickness the past winter may be the principal cause of this high tide of freshets, yet there are other causes that are more under control than the whims of the storm clouds.

People who do not believe that cutting of forests about the head waters of streams will increase floods should read a recent bulletin of the government forest service, dealing with floods in the Castle valley of Utah.

Previous to the settlement of this valley in 1878, there were no floods. Later when cattle and sheep were pastured on its hillsides, destructive floods became very common, and would even follow a sharp summer rain. A committee of stock growers and farmers investigated the subject, and decided that the close cropping of the forage by cattle and sheep had let the water run off quickly into the valleys. Since grazing was restricted, the floods have largely ceased.

If such a slight obstruction as the light grass of the hillsides operates to hold water back and equalize its flow, how much more must the rich vegetable mould that gathers on and in the soil under the leafy protection of a thick forest?

Something like 60 miles more levees are needed to complete the present Mississippi system, and there are two theories as to how they would work. Some say that confining the flood water within the levees would deposit so much sediment that the river would rise, and the levees would all have to go higher. Others say that the result would be just opposite, scouring out the river bed by the force of the current, so that eventually the levees would not need to be at the present height.

Little Holland with its sleepy windmills lives in peace and comfort behind the dykes that keep out the whole ocean. It would seem as if Uncle Sam were big enough to take care of his rich garden spots that any year may be converted into sand banks.

THE DEMAND OF THE ENGINEERS.

The $4 or $5 a day earned by the great majority of locomotive engineers looks big to the factory operative, with his average day's pay of $2 to $2.50, more or less. He will scarcely understand how 93 per cent of the locomotive enginemen could risk this comparative affluence on the gamble of a strike, as they have just voted.

He will have to recognize however, that the calling of the engineman has vastly increased in difficulty and responsibility during recent years. Times have changed since a whole village would turn out to see a 32 ton locomotive go through. Now 100 ton locomotives are common sights.

The veterans say you could put one of their little dinky old machines in the ash pit of the modern mogul. The bigger these great steel beasts grow, the worse they pound and wrench their cyclopean limbs, the more constant attention is needed to keep them in good humor for pulling long trainloads.

The requirement of the Inter-State Commerce law that engineers take a certain proportion of rest, keeps the freight engineers out a long time from their families. Many of them spend quite a good slice of the pay envelope at hotels.

Those experiences are by no means festive. It does not promote physical elasticity to curl yourself up like a cat on an engine cab. And an engineer was telling us the other day, that weary of such cramped quarters he and his train crew washed up the best they could, presented themselves at a hotel, and asked for supper and a night's lodging. As they had on overalls, they were turned away hungry and weary.

It takes a high type of mechanic to run one of these great snorting sulky creatures, get pulling power out of him, take a dozen or two dozen orders, keep them all in mind, dodge in and out of passing extras with safety and dispatch—mostly dispatch.

Railroad men are well paid as compared with other mechanics. This endless chain of wage increases must stop somewhere, or Uncle Sam will have to take the poor debtor's oath. But at any cost, the travelling public will want to keep a high type of men as pilots of these great ships of steel.

New York, April 16.—All grades of refined sugar were twice reduced yesterday, making a total reduction of 20 cents per hundred pounds.

—By the way of Chicago comes the word that 2 per cent of the taxicab drivers in Paris are women. This is probably a gross exaggeration, but it is called forth by application of the first woman in Chicago for a taxicab driver's license. Her example has promptly been followed by other young women, among whom is one who proposes to teach her husband as soon as she has thoroughly mastered the job herself.—Taunton Herald.

TIDE TURNING TO ROOSEVELT

Local Issues Are Helping Him In His Campaign

PARTY IS CLOSE TO A SPLIT

Colonel May Lead Independent Movement If Closely Defeated In Convention—If Successful He May Have Bryan as Opposition Candidate—Politicians Look Upon Coming Bay State Primaries as "Barometer"

Washington, April 16.—Political results in Pennsylvania convince the politicians here that the Republican party in two years will be broken in two. The contest between Taft and Roosevelt will go on as before. Taft probably will be renominated, but continuously since he entered the campaign Roosevelt has served notice that the president could not be reelected.

The magic name of Roosevelt again has caught the country and the colonel is again showing his wonderful political genius in taking for granted the personal support which former Republicans would give him. It is believed here that should Roosevelt capture the Republican nomination Bryan would be the Democratic nominee. Men who have toured the west are confident that this is the program, whether the Democratic machine leaders know it or not; and they say that the business interests of the west would support Bryan.

A peculiarity of Roosevelt's campaign and one upon which he cleverly figured is that in going into states like Illinois and Pennsylvania he could count upon the anti-machine sentiment to support him. As many Taft Republicans as Roosevelt men were glad to see the Pennsylvania machine overthrown, and Roosevelt made Penrose an issue and tied him up with Taft in his speeches.

Nothing is weaker than a political machine when the voters are thoroughly aroused against it. The voters of Pennsylvania preferred dictation by Roosevelt to machine control by Penrose.

That Roosevelt, if narrowly defeated at Chicago, would lead an independent personal movement and in any event assume the leadership of such a movement during the next four years leading to 1916 is an unavoidable conclusion.

The result in Pennsylvania has set house Republicans thinking pretty seriously of the Taft prospects in the Bay State. So conservative a man as Representative Harris of New Bedford says that under normal conditions Massachusetts would, in his opinion, be about 3 to 1 for Taft, but that since Illinois and Pennsylvania the case looked to him quite different.

Harris has been in Massachusetts lately and has had many opportunities to test sentiment. He says that the Roosevelt movement consists largely in gathering local "irritation" and that it is not so much a pro-Roosevelt step as it is an anti-Taft one.

There is a disposition among politicians in Washington to look upon the coming primaries in Massachusetts as very significant. One man went so far as to say that Massachusetts is going to be the "barometer" state for the Republican convention.

FUNDS ARE DWINDLING

300,000 Chinese Must Die Unless Contributions Soon Pour In

Shanghai, April 16.—With hundreds dying daily of famine throughout eastern China, it has become apparent that unless relief measures of some sort are taken the entire new republic will be swept as if by plague.

The relief organization will exhaust by April 30 the funds with which it is now endeavoring feebly to combat the famine. There will be no harvest to save the starving before the first of June.

An attempt will be made to secure funds by public contributions throughout the world. Unless $3,000,000 is contributed, 300,000 persons must die.

TRIUMPH FOR WRITER

FLASH OF THOUGHT SAVED THE SITUATION.

Frederick Upham Adams Turned Joke on O. H. P. Belmont, Being Helped Somewhat by His Experience as a Novelist.

Table sagacity is not invariably confined to picking out the right fork or spoon or to tilting either at the proper angle, writes Drury Underwood in the Chicago Post. A fledgling diner out, theoretically, may keep up a conversation with his designated companion and also an eager eye on a model across the way. A merely casual hesitancy will allow him to stall until he sees what weapon to choose for the fish.

The chances for the majority of us to decide what to do in an emergency, are remote, but are to be considered. Place yourself in the situation of Frederick Upham Adams at Newport.

Mr. Adams had accepted an invitation from the O. H. P. Belmonts—the male one, to be exact—and after a Scotch overture luncheon was announced.

"Grizzly," said O. H. P., "Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish is to lunch with us, but that need not make any difference."

"Certainly not," said Griz. "Nobody can make me unhappy."

The meal proceeded smoothly, with the assistance of an assortment of butlers and a waiter for each person, but there was a crisis ahead.

The doors of the serving room flew open and a flunky came in, staggering under an imposing dish. It was a castle constructed of meats, with a wall of jelly and a moat of rice. There were parapets and towers and a portcullis; likewise a porte cochere, but this probably was a gastronomic anachronism.

Mr. Adams never batted an eye, because, being a novelist, he had to be familiar with such scenes for a proper standing in fiction. He had a tricky host to deal with, however, for O. H. P. indicated by a glance that the open spot in front of Mr. Adams' plate was to be the terminal for the pie.

Grizzly looked in vain for the sign of a mistake. Instead there was confirmation in the stony eyes of O. H. P. There was nothing for him to do but to proceed. He recalled "Ivanhoe" and the carrying of the castle by assault, but in brief reflection saw that the dismantling of the wall would be to undo the work of some chef, who, in all likelihood, had put in two or three days on the job. So he disengaged a rampart of ham without pulling down the structure and removed a chicken tower flying a flag of carved radish.

Then O. H. P. relaxed and gave a momentary gleam of approval.

"It was the quickest thought of my life," said Mr. Adams in review of the incident as he ordered pork shanks.

Tears in the Contract.

A southern lawyer has gained statewide repute for his success in pleading criminal cases. His claim to fame is that he sheds real tears while urging juries to save his innocent clients, and the clause "No tears, no pay!" is a part of every contract he makes.

He had a case not long ago that seemed easy on the start, but developed later into a most difficult one. Not long after he had turned on the tears the attorney had 11 of the jury weeping also. One stony-hearted juror sat and glared at him. Tears had no effect on him. The attorney redoubled his efforts and his tears. He devoted himself entirely to this adamant juror. Tears splashed from his eyes and dewed his whiskers and his waistcoat. He talked eloquently and cried still more eloquently. Presently the set features of the determined juror relaxed a bit.

Brushing away most of the tears the attorney turned his back to the juror and bent down to get a glass of water. As he stooped he whispered to his law partner, who sat near him:

"John, I've never lost one yet! That darned old sucker can't hold out two minutes more."

And he didn't.—Saturday Evening Post.

Don't Talk About Your Troubles.

Learn to keep your own affairs locked up in your heart, but be willing to listen to others' sorrows.

That's the way to do.

There is no use in the world in harping on the crazy tear-making events of life.

Be patient with the faults of others and be patient with your own. But don't talk about the worries and trials of everyday existence.

There is no sense in that at all. It is a tremendous waste of energy. No one wants to hear about individual troubles. Constant talking about one's troubles is a sure path to chronic fault finding, bickering, and family rows that cause more misery than anything else on earth. And what good does the talking do? The sympathy you get doesn't amount to a row of pins.

Individuals of the right sort resent being pitied. Don't be a sympathy beggar.

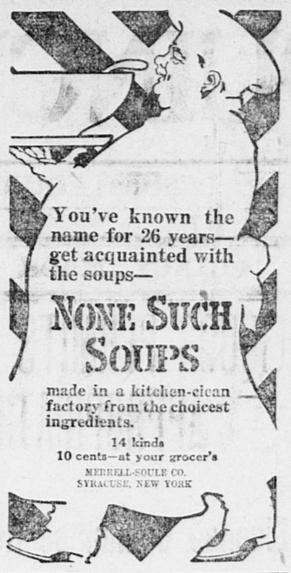
Smiles lead you back to youth, tears drag you quickly to old age.

A Truthful Girl.

"I am very sorry, Captain Snobb, that circumstances over which I have no control compel me to say no."

"May I ask what the circumstances are?"

"Yours."—Lippincott's.



BUDS AND BLOSSOMS.

Josephine Canning.

The heralds of the spring are here—
The blue-bird and the wren—
And from the woodlands, ringing clear,
Their songs greet us again.

The frost that long has held the streams
In thraldom to his will,
Unbends before the golden beams
That kiss the mountain rill.

Forth leap the waters with a bound
From glens and wooded sides;
While gently, with its rippling sound
The silver brooklet glides.

From dreamless sleep the willows wake,
And yield their fragrance sweet;
And maiden hair and fronded brake
Spring up beneath the feet.

The vales are decked with misty sheen,
And in their changing lights,
New charms appear to grace the scene
From cloud-topped mountain heights.

The air with subtle incense woos
The rosy blush of morn;
And softly, like the dove that coos,
Come murmurs of the dawn.

With buds and blossoms comes the spring,
Fair harbingers are they,
Whose gently opening petals bring
The breath of balmy May.

THINKS THAW IS SANE

Mother of White's Slayer Secures a Writ of Habeas Corpus

New York, April 16.—On application of Clarence J. Shearn, a writ of habeas corpus was signed by Supreme Court Justice Stapleton in Brooklyn, directing Dr. Russell, superintendent of Matteawan insane asylum, to produce Harry K. Thaw in the supreme court in Brooklyn Friday for a judicial inquiry into his present mental condition.

Thaw was acquitted of the murder of Stanford White, the noted architect, four years ago "by reason of insanity," and since has been an inmate of the asylum for the criminal insane at Matteawan. The application for the writ was made on behalf of Mrs. Mary C. Thaw, mother of Thaw. It says that for several months she has coused her son to be carefully examined by eminent physicians, who have advised her that Thaw is now sane.

SETTLEMENT IS NEAR

Belief That Anthracite Miners Will Soon Return to Work

Philadelphia, April 16.—The anthracite coal miners have entered upon their third week of idleness as the result of the failure of the union and the coal operatives to agree on a new working arrangement, but the next few days are expected to bring developments that will send the men back to work at an early date.

Negotiations for a new agreement have been transferred from this city to New York, where the deliberations of the sub-committee, made up of four officers of the mine workers' union and four general managers of big coal companies, will be continued.

—Merchants' week in Brockton this year will be from June 1 to June 8. No man living can safely wager anything on New England weather, says the Brockton Enterprise but the chances are that in this period there will be warmth, and at least a portion of the time brightness and genial sunshine. With these conditions, and the attractions that are likely to be provided to draw the crowd, to say nothing of what the chief attractions will be in the form of most striking and useful stocks in the stores, there would seem to be reason to believe that Brockton will see great crowds within the city limits. It ought to be a gay and interesting season, and valuable to the men who sell and to the people who buy. Brockton will be glad to greet the visiting thousands that week, and will do her utmost to give them a good time in every good way.

GUEST NIGHT OF CATHOLIC CLUB

"The Loan of a Lover" Presented by Members of Club

PRESENTATION

The annual ladies' guest night of the Quincy Catholic club was held Monday evening at Colonial hall. The affair was a most enjoyable one and was unusually largely attended. Not only was the club itself represented by many of its members but there were an unusual large number of guests.

The evening was in charge of a committee composed of Miss Mary R. Lyons , Miss Anna Walsh and Miss Helen H. Gavin and it proved itself most efficient.

The entertainment provided for the guests was a laughable play entitled "The loan of a lover." The cast called for several gentlemen's parts, but as gentlemen were rigidly excluded, these parts were taken by ladies, who impersonated their several characters in a manner that was aid to be true to life.

Previous to the entertainment Miss Mary L. Gavin, the club's energetic president, briefly welcomed the guests. In her remarks she outlined the work of the club and told in a brief and concise manner what it had accomplished during its four years of existence, and extended a cordial invitation to all ladies, eligible, to become affiliated with the club. The evening was then turned over to the committee who presented the play mentioned above, the cast being as follows:

Captain Amersfort	Anna J. Walsh
Peter Spyk,	Mary R. Lyons
Swysel	Elizabeth Mahoney
Delve	Lulu Crowley
Gertrude	Helen Galvin
Ernestine Rosendaal	Josephine Colligan

Accompanist Miss Mary McConaty.

It would be unfair to single out any one character and say that she, or he, excelled for all were equally good. Following the entertainment there was a social hour during which the committee served ice cream and cake.

One of the pleasing features of the evening not down on the program occurred when Miss Mary R. Lyons, said to be the best looking gentleman present, after briefly extolling the high esteem in which Miss Gavin the clubs president was held by the club, presented her with a basket of beautiful carnations.

Miss Gavin in accepting the gift thanked the members for their loyalty to her, and assured them of the deep interest which she took in the club and that it would always be her aim to make the club a successful one.

ANNUAL DANCE OF HEPTASOPHS

Alpha hall was the cetre of attraction for one of the most largely attended dances in its history, Monday evening, it being estimated that more than 400 were in attendance. The occasion was the third social dance of Granite conclave, No. 779, Improved Order of Heptasophs and its success was thoroughly attested to by the crowd of dancers that taxed the hall to its capacity.

The guests of the evening included Representatives Walter E. Piper and William J. Leslie, Senator George L. Barnes of Weymouth and a number of officers from various other conclaves of Heptasophs. All the guests were presented with white pinks as they entered the hall.

The music for the affair was furnished by Provost's orchestra, which was forced to respond to repeated encores for nearly every dance. There were eighteen regular numbers on the program and two extras.

At ten o'clock a short intermission took place, during which refreshments were served in Union hall. Dancing was enjoyed till midnight. The event was pronounced the best ever held by the local conclave.

Joseph J. Mullen, wearing a white rose in the lapel of his coat, was floor director. His assistant, who wore a red rose was John V. Kolson. The aids, all of whom wore red pinks, included T. F. Raiche, E F. Brown, W. N. Eaton, W. DeCoste, A. R. Mackay, T. J. Kennedy, W. J. Canty, J E. Bryon, A. A. Austin and G. F. Heal.

The officers of the conclave are:—
Archon—J. J. Mullen.
Past Archon—A. R. Mackay.
Provost—E. F. Brown.
Prelate—W. DeCoste.
Inspector—M. H. Irving.
Warden—J. V. Kolson.
Sentinel—W. N. Eaton.
Financier—F. P. Hill
Treasurer—J. Q. Cahill.
Secretary—M. B. Gill.

Doing Good

"I'm kind of uneasy about my health, doctor," said the major. "I have been suffering from shooting pains in my right side, where my heart is, and all my organs seem out of whack in one way or another, so I thought I'd ask you to examine me and tell me what's wrong and give me a prescription."

"I'll be glad to examine you and prescribe, Major Standoff," replied the doctor, "when you have settled that old account of yours, which has been running for three years. At the last meeting of our county medical association we passed drastic resolutions forbidding members to have dealings with certain people, who are notoriously bad pay, and your name was the first mentioned in this connection."

"Well, great guns!" cried the major. "That I should have to be insulted by a lanternjawed sawbones right here in this town, which owes its very existence to my heroism and self-sacrifice in the times that tried men's souls! This surely must be an evil dream from which I shall presently wake! It doesn't stand to reason that any man, much less a one horse doctor, would dare to hand such an insult to the pioneer who made the wilderness blossom as the rose!

"Why, sir, I have been the best friend you ever had since you hung out your shingle. I have boosted you in season and out of season. I took an interest in you from the first, and whenever a friend of mine fell sick I would say to him: 'Call on Doctor Condiment! He is the most divinely gifted physician in these parts.'

"When old John Bonehead fell sick he was going to send for one of the old established doctors, but I labored with him and exhausted all my eloquence to get him to send for you. Now, I ask you, as man to man, did he send for you on my recommendation or did he not?"

"He certainly did, and I've always felt that it was a low trick on your part. Here I was a stranger in a strange land, a young physician trying to establish a practice, and you unloaded that old deadbeat on me and nearly broke me up in business! I treated him for six months and as soon as he was able to move he jumped the town and I haven't had a cent from him to this day."

"That's your idea of gratitude, sir, is it? When I go forth to the hedges and highways to find patients for you, you think I should be responsible for the bills they run up! I suppose you have forgotten who called you up when old Mrs. Toplofty fell sick. Just as soon as I heard of her illness I nearly foundered myself rushing to a telephone to notify you, knowing that you needed patients. I suppose you have forgotten that kindness?"

"No, I have not forgotten, major, and if it hadn't been for your gray hairs I'd have shown my appreciation with a wet elm club. I was just getting a footing in some of the wealthy homes of the town then. There was a mild epidemic of measles, and I was quite busy and the outlook was encouraging. Then you sent me your confounded telephone message, and I rushed down to see Mrs. Toplofty, and found that she had the smallpox! When my wealthy patrons learned that I was treating a smallpox patient they closed their doors to me. That experience set me back two years, and now you have the nerve to come here reminding me of it!"

"Well, of all the shameless ingratitude that ever defaced the annals of our glorious country this is the worst! This is the reward a man gets for helping the poor and needy, for straining his hind legs rustling around trying to do good! A man may shed blood and sever his heart-strings trying to aid struggling young men, and after years they turn and rend him!

"Well, you can go to thunder with your medical association. I don't suppose you could tell an attack of glanders from a lunar eclipse, anyhow, and so your diagnosis wouldn't be worth a cent. If I had a sick cow I wouldn't let you prescribe for her. The undertaker was telling me only yesterday that he'll have to buy an extra hearse if you stay here. So I bid you good morning."

To Make Advertising Pay.

"Use good bait, fresh bait, and patience," is the advice Izaak Walton years ago gave to fishermen, and fishing after all is what men engage in—fishing for business. Have for bait good live copy; fresh, up-to-date "set up" and patiently fish in one pool. You never heard of a successful angler who rushes first to one pool and then to another. Get the best pool known by experience to contain the fish, and lure him on by offering the best bait in your kit. Fishing and advertising are alike.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Have Confidence in Fellow-Men.

He who is suspicious not only does injustice to others but injures himself. It is our duty to regard others as being good until they prove themselves to be the contrary. According to this principle I have always treated everybody with whom I have had to deal. Of course, one will have some unpleasant experiences, but one must not be discouraged. One must always approach life and humanity with renewed confidence.—Emperor William of Germany.

Squelched.

"Say, can't you read the sign?" asked the elevator boy.

"I beg your pardon," replied the man with the cigar, "were you speaking to me?"

"It says: 'No Smokin' in the Car.'"

"Does it? Where does it say that?"

"There. Can't you see?"

"But it doesn't say: 'No Smokin' in the Car' there."

"G'wan, you highbrow.'"

Art and Its Rivalries.

"I don't believe that story about Nero fiddling while Rome burned."

"Why?"

"Any true musician would have known better than to try to hold an audience while the fire department was turning out."

Saying Nothing.

"There is a rumor afloat that Old Goldrox is dead," said the editor.

"Yes," replied the reporter; "I was just down to the house."

"Is it so?"

"Well, his wife said that her husband would neither confirm nor deny the rumor."

Why It Was Hard.

"I want you to understand that I got my money by hard work."

"Why, I thought it was left you by your uncle."

"So it was, but I had hard work getting it away from the lawyers."

A Witness.

"Although I am positive you saw Jimpson take your umbrella just now, you made no effort to stop him."

"Well—er, you see, Jimpson happened to be standing by when I got that umbrella."

CERTAINLY.

The Philosopher—It's the man with a pull that gets ahead.

The Politician—Yes; but it's the man with the head that gets a pull.

Meaning Mrs. Lot.

I know this joke is rather old
And you'll think me a dubber;
Before she turned to salt, we're told,
She first had turned to rubber.

Her One Lack.

Nora (just landed)—Bridget, must I buy many clothes whin I git mesilf a job?

Bridget (old hand)—Indade, no; you'll need nothin' but a goin' away gown."—Harper's Bazar.

Cutting Him Short.

Boreleigh—Ah! good morning, Crusty. How do I find you this morning?

Crusty—Your finding me this morning is purely accidental, I assure you.

Why She Drew Herself Up.

Nell (reading from a novel)—He kissed her on the forehead. The proud beauty drew herself up.

Belle—I suppose that was to get her cheek up to the proper height.

Men That Are Clever.

"Do you think men are more clever than women?"

"Some men are."

"Who are they?"

"The single men, my dear."

Taking Care of It.

"Would you call that government official a conservationist?"

"I should say so," replied Farmer Corntossel. "He has made one office last him nearly a lifetime."

Easy Enough.

Marks—So you think Miss Bloom is both pretty and intellectual? Huh! You can't make anyone believe that.

Parks—Can't I? I made her believe it.—Tit-Bits.

All It Had Been Represented to Be.

"Did you find the play to be as artistic as it had been reported to be?"

"Yes. It was about the dullest three hours I ever lived through."

CITY COUNCIL

drews Express, Peter Cacicia, C. L. Hazelton, Joe Mercurio, John Callahan, C. Saltalmachia, N. T. Murphy, John Maloney, Charles W. Miller, N. E. Alley, Carl Lilja, Jerry Bizzozero, Bruce & Warner, Thomas H. Farrell, H. H. Lowe, Kenneth McKenzie, Frederick Evans, M. J. Connelly.

Quite a lengthy discussion followed this report. Rev. A. M. Thompson of the Ministers' committee was invited before the council to state his objections to some of the applicants. Inspector Goodhue of the police department was also called before the council and questioned in regard to some of the applicants.

The City Solicitor was also asked for a ruling as to what constituted an expressman. He gave his opinion which was to the effect that it was not necessary for an expressman to go into Boston to be an expressman. He also said that under the law it would be necessary for a permit for an expressman to transport liquor in the city. This was in relation to the Electric Express company. While the company might bring the liquor to Quincy, Messrs Loud could not transport it within the city without a permit.

It was also brought out that of the arrests for drunkenness during the year a very large per cent was of persons who came from Boston on the trains and brought hard liquor with them and that the per cent of drunkenness from soft liquors such as beer and ale was very small.

An hour or more was spent in discussion of these permits and when the atmosphere had cleared it was found that permits had been granted as follows:

Peter Gacicia, W. F. Loud & Son, Bruce & Warner, Abbott & Miller, Frederick Evans, Carl Lilja, G. Saltamachia, H. H. Lowe, Thomas H. Farrell, M. J. Connelly, Joe Mercurio, N. T. Murphy, N. DiPanfile, Andrews Express.

Jerry Bizzozero, Boynton & Russell, and Kenneth McKenzie were rejected.

John Maloney, John Callahan and N. E. Alley were laid on the table.

The same committee reported leave to withdraw on the applications of G. Meclini, and Luigi Romeri.

STREET WATERING.

The Committee on Streets reported an amendment to the street watering order adding several streets to the order. The report was accepted, the rules suspended and the order passed.

DEFICIT BILLS.

The Special Commitee on Financial Investigation reported an order appropriating $756.09 to meet deficit bills that had been properly itemized and vouched for. Ordered to a second reading.

A public hearing was held at 8 o'clock on petitions of the Electric Light Co. for location for poles.

MINOR LICENSES.

The same committee reported orders granting many licenses as common victuallers, Sunday fruit licenses, job wagons, etc. Adopted.

SEWER ORDINANCE.

The same committee reported ought to pass on the order amending the sewer ordinance which compels abutters of the sewer to connect their premises with the same within two years from the completion of said sewer. Order passed under suspension of the rules.

BUDGET.

The Finance Committee reported on the annual appropriation order recommending the following amendments. That the following paragraph be added:

That the several sums named herein be and are hereby appropriated for the payment of the expenses of the City of Quincy for the financial year beginning January 1st., and ending December 31st. 1912, to be expended by and under the direction of the several officers or boards as herein designated, in accordance with the provisions of the Charter and Ordinances relating thereto .

No contract shall be made, nor expenditure authorized in any case, unless the same shall have been provided for herein, or unless provision shall have been made by special transfer from some of the appropriations herein contained, or by creating a loan.

Also that the order be further amended as follows:—

BOARD OF HEALTH.

Strike out the figures "$5,000" after the words, "Contagious diseases" and insert in place therefor the figures "$7,000."

Strike out the figures $6,300" after the word, "Garbage" and insert in place therefore the figures "$6,000."

Strike out the figures "$6,000" after the words "Scavenger maintenance" and insert in place therefor the figures "$5,500."

CITY CLERK.

Strike out the figures "$2,300" after the word "Miscellaneous" and insert in place therefor the figures "$2,424."

COMMISSIONER OF PUBLIC WORKS

Strike out the figures "$8,000" after the words "Repairing public buildings, etc" and insert in place therefor the figures "$10,000."

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Strike out the figures "$32,246" after the words "Pay of Men" and insert in place therefor the figures "$30,710."

And as thus amended the order ought to pass.

The several amendments were taken up separately.

The amendment relative to the appropriation for contagious diseases was adopted.

The amendments to the amounts for scavenger maintenance, garbage, and City Clerk were also adopted.

Councilman Richards offered an amendment making the amount for Public Library $10,999 instead of $10,500 as stated in the order.

This provoked a long discussion during which W. Ward Whitcher of the Library trustees took the floor and spoke at length in favor of increasing the amount. The trustees desired to open a branch at Atlantic similar to that at West Quincy. It could not do it unless the appropriation was increased.

During the discussion on this item the Mayor took the floor and said that the amount $10,500 was an increase of $1,500 over last year and he believed that the trustees could get along with that amount.

President Hobbs called Councilman Studley to the chair and taking the floor spoke at length in favor of the amendment to make the amount $11,000.

Councilman Studley only occupied the chair for a few minutes, and then called Councilman Richards to the chair.

Strong arguments were made by President Hobbs and other Ward Six men for the amendment while Mayor Stone and others spoke against.

The motion to change the amount was lost, on a rising vote 7 voting yes and 13 no.

The amendment to increase the amount for repairs of public buildings from $8,000 to $10,000 was voted.

Councilman Sandberg moved to make the amount for street lighting $36,000 instead of $34,000.

A brief argument followed during which it was shown that there would be a saving on lights this year owing to some changes in the form of lights used and the motion to amend was lost.

Councilman Richards moved to make the amount for highways $46,000 in place of $40,000.

This motion resulted in another argument but it was voted down.

Councilman Sodergren stated that the street committee had found the streets in very bad condition.

Mayor Stone stated that the amount this year was larger than last year and with the efficient commissioner this year he believed the department could get along.

Councilmen Cunningham, C. A. Ross, Studley, Richards and Abele spoke on the question. The motion was rejected by a vote of 9 yes and 10 no.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The interesting debate of the evening cames when Councilman Studley moved to make the amount for pay of men of the fire department $32,246. He asked Councilman Richards a number of questions as to how the committee arrived at the amount it recommended.

Councilman Richards replied that it was after consultation with the Chief.

The whole difficulty with this appropriation was the difference in the understanding of just how many permanent men the fire department was composed of. It was brought out that the Chief had said, to the committee, that the department was composed of 23 men and that when he took charge he found 25 on the pay roll. He had tried to straighten the matter out and the Civil Service Commissioners had told him it was up to the City Solicitor to say how many men there were in the department.

The Finance Committee's understanding of the matter was that there was but 23 men in the department and the amount it had recommended was based on that number.

Councilman Studley was not making much headway with his questions when Councilman Craig asked the City Solicitor for his ruling.

City Solicitor McAnarney said that he had given the Finance Committee his ruling in writing, that the department contained 25 permanent men. There was no question but this was a fact.

When the City Council adopted the new fire department ordinance in 1909 there was a Superintendent of Fire Alarm, Captain, Lieutenant and eighteen men. The council in passing the new ordinance repealed the old ordinance so that it provided that the department should consist of a chief, three assistant engineers, Superintendent of Fire Alarm, Captain, Lieutenant and eighteen men. Since that time the council had added four men so that as the department stood today it was composed of a Supt. of Fire Alarm, Captain, Lieutenant, and 22 men making 25 in all.

This seemed to settle the question for the council by a rising vote of 14 yes and 6 no adopted the amendment of Councilman Studley.

The order then took its second reading.

Councilman Boyd moved to suspend the rules that the order might pass. This motion was lost 11 voting yes and 7 no.

Adjourned at 11.44 until May 6.

TOOL THAT MEANT VICTORY

Properly Tempered, It Always Will When In the Hands of a Man Who Means to Succeed.

"You can't!"

He did not exactly count the voices, but it seemed to him as if every voice in the world screamed at him, and from all sorts of queer places:

"You can't!"

When the voices had hoarsed themselves into silence, rude hands scrawled the words on bits of bark and paper and thrust them before his eyes.

Once the words formed themselves into opposing rocks in his path and he fell over them.

Again, they multiplied themselves like drops of water into an unfriendly sea and he nearly drowned.

He listened vainly at the lips of his kin for one fair word of cheer.

He prayed nightly to a stony-hearted and busy God and took back to his torn heart only the hollow echo of his prayer.

He saw many fingers tapping upon foreheads and knew that the motions of the fingers spelled Fool.

In the vales the brooks sang taunting songs to him; as he swung up the steep places in the forest the squirrels from the trees pelted him with empty, symbolic shells; upon the plains the wind, having a good chance, cut the skin of his cheek and scudded away through the grasses with sardonic laughter.

The hand of sickness pinned him to his cot for long seasons; his competitors in the race for achievement ran away from him as if he were tied; the very bigness of the looming cities leered at him as he struggled with disappointment and delay.

"You can't!"

It stung him into greatness.

Somewhere within the locker of his being he found a tool and sharpened it. The tool was labeled Will. With this, through many patient days, he wrought upon the sneering face of Fate to make it smile. The while he worked the voices spat their jibe—"You can't!" "Gibe on!" he cried. He let his kin go hang. He ceased to rail at God's indifference. He discovered a mighty divinity within himself and bent him anew to his task. His Work—the Will to do it—these were his friends, his life, his all.

The work was never finished, quite—no good work ever is—but when at last his hands were still, upon his slab men carved the paradoxic phrase:

"He did!"—From the Magazine Business.

As a Last Resort.

"Do you think any girl ever proposes in leap year, as they say, Jennie?" he asked.

"Not unless she is obliged to," answered the maiden.

"H'm! I hadn't thought of that," he said, after a pause.

"But, George," she said, laying her hand affectionately upon his arm and looking into his eyes, "you, I am sure, will never force me to that humiliation."

"No—er—that is to say—of course not. I—"

The ice was broken, and three minutes later George was Jennie's accepted.—Tit-Bits.

WORLD'S MOST AWFUL SEA TRAGEDY

sustained the mortal thrust that sent this ten million dollar creation to the bottom of the sea with her precious freight of human lives ere ever she had completed her first transatlantic trip.

Of the conditions which made the disaster possible as little definite information is available as accurate knowledge of its terrible results. It is a natural assumption that such an accident could not have happened except in a dense fog. The weather service station at Cape Race, N. F.., however, reported that at noon yesterday the weather was fair and that a fresh wind was blowing from the west. The temperature was slightly above the freezing point. The barometer at that time registered 30.20 inches, indicating an absence of fog.

THE OLYMPIC'S REPORT

Less Than 700 Saved Out of About 2200 Persons on Board

Cape Race, N. F., April 16.—The steamship Olympic of the White Star line, which hastened to the relief of her sister ship as soon as she received word by wireless that the Titanic was in distress, reports that the Carpathia reached the Titanic at daybreak yesterday, but found empty boats and wreckage only.

She reported that the Titanic had foundered at about 2.20 o'clock Monday morning, in latitude 14.6 north and longtitude 50.4 west. The message advised that about 675 souls were saved, nearly all women and children. There were in all aboard the giant liner about 2200 persons.

Should it prove that no other vessel picked up any passengers of the sinking ship, few of the men on board have been saved, as the number of the women and children among the passengers was large.

The same facts would also indicate the doom of practically the entire crew of 289 men. In the cabins were 230 women and children, but it not known how many there were among the 740 third class passengers. In the first cabin there were 128 women and fifteen children and in the second cabin seventy-nine women and eight children.

The report from the Olympic states that the Leyland liner California was remaining and searching the vicinity for survivors. The Carpathia, it was stated, was returning to New York, bringing the survivors, who can hardly be expected to reach that city in less than two days.

Even the survivors of the Titanic disaster have gone through hardships of exposure and peril which may have left many of them in a serious condition. Those rescued by the Carpathia were picked up from a "small fleet" of lifeboats at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning. It was eight hours before that that the Titanic is reported to have gone to the bottom.

Many Rich People on Board

The combined wealth of the first cabin passengers totals more than $420,000,000. Among those on board the vessel and their estimated wealth are the following:

Mrs. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor	$150,000,000
Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Widener	10,000,000
Benjamin Guggenheim	95,000,000
C. M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk railway	1,000,000
Henry B. Harris of New York and Boston	3,000,000
Frederick M. Hoyt	1,000,000
J. Bruce Ismay, chairman and managing director of the White Star Steamship company	2,000,000
Mrs. Isidor Straus, wife of the New York merchant	10,000,000
Washington A. Roebling	25,000,000

TRAINS CANCELLED

Preparations Had Been Made to Start From Boston For Halifax

Boston, April 16.—The first intimation that the Titanic had gone down with 1500 souls on board in the treacherous waters off Cape Race became known in Boston at 7 o'clock last evening when John H. Thomas, local manager for the White Star line, in a brief telephone message to the Boston and Maine, cancelled the order for five special trains which were then ready to leave for Halifax to bring back the supposed rescued from this gigantic liner.

That 1500 persons, including more that half the passenger list and the crew, had perished on that bleak coast was the import of Thomas' brief orders over the wire.

Almost simultaneously with the instructions to start the five trains came the countermanding orders inspired in New York by official news of the grim catastrophe. In fact, one train was already ten minutes on its way, but a red lantern at Reading effected the purpose of preventing this train from going on a useless run of twelve hours.

The early messages from New York to the local office were very brief. They came by telephone. The lines were open but a few seconds. But in that time came a flash that means mourning to thousands.

ABOUT THE TITANIC

Great Steamship Was Ftted Up Like a Modern Hotel

The Titanic was the exact counter part of her sister ship, the Olympic, which began its service between New York and England last year. The Olympic has become known as a "Jonah," and her ill-name among seafaring men seems to have been extended to the Titanic.

It is almost impossible to conceive of the magnitude of these two great vessels. The following figures, however, may give some idea:

Length over all	882ft. 9in.
Length between perpendiculars	850ft.
Breadth, extreme	92 ft. 6 in.
Depth, moulded, keel to top of beam bridge deck	73 ft. 6in.
Total height from keel to navigation bridge	104 ft.
Height from top of funnel to keel	175 ft.
Gross tonnage	45,000 tons
Load draft	34 ft. 6in.
Displacement	66,000 tons
Indicated horsepower of reciprocating engines	30,000
Shaft horsepower of turbine engine	16,000
Speed	21 knots

The stern frame casting weighed 190 tons, and the rudder 101¼ tons. While referring to these numerical details, it may be well to point out that the largest plates employed in the hull are 36 feet long, weighing 4½ tons each, and the largest steel beam used is 92 feet long, the weight of this double beam being four tons.

Further, the anchors weigh 15½ tons and each of the two "wing" propellers 38 tons. The huge after "boss-arms," from which are suspended the three propeller shafts, tip the scales at 73½ tons, and the forward "boss-arms at 45 tons. It is also interesting to note that each link in the anchor chain weighs 175 pounds.

The Titanic had ten decks, and the bridge, promenade, and boat decks were all over 500 feet long. She had accommodation for 2500 passengers, and her full crew numbered 860.

The new liner, with its beam of ninety-two feet, gave the main saloons an area never before seen afloat. The steamers were not only designed to be the last word as regards their size, but in their novelty of equipment as well. There was a large entrance hall, an elaborate dining room, smoking room, library, women's parlor, grill and lounging rooms elaborately furnished to the last detail.

In addition to these familiar cabins there were many apartments which rendered the illusion of a great hotel complete. One of the upper decks was completely enclosed to serve as a ballreed. By day this enclosure was used as a sun parlor and promenade. It was large enough to accomodate several hundred passengers.

Captain Smith's Misfortune

Bad luck has come to Captain E. J. Smith, commander of the Titanic and commodore of the White Star line, after forty years on the sea, during which time he worked up from apprentice to commander of the largest steamship in the world.

During all this time, up to last September, when his steamer, the Olympia, then, as now, with the sinking of the Titanic, the queen steamship of the world, crashed into the British cruiser Hawke, he did not figure in a single disaster.

Since then, however, misfortune has come thick and fast, for in February the Olympic struck what is believed to have been a submerged wreck and lost a blade from one of her propellers, which made it necessary to put her in dry dock, and last Wednesday the Titanic, in leaving Southampton on her maiden voyage, narrowly missed colliding with the New York of the American line, which had been pulled from her anchorage by suction from the new ocean giant.

It was undoubtedly because of Smith's previous fine career that the officers of the White Star line retained him in its service after the mishaps to the Olympic, thus violating a deep sea tradition that has been more rigorously maintained by the British merchant marine than by any other nation.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

COOKING THE SPECKLED TROUT.

SEASONABLE fish are trout, and those who will not eat any other are fond of these. Nothing flatters the family fisherman more than a new and delicious way of serving the fish which he brings home.

Broiled Brook Trout.—Split down the back and clean, removing the gills, fins and the blood vessels along the spine. Wash and dry the fish. Season, dip in olive oil and broil from ten to fifteen minutes or longer if the fish is large. Keep turning that the skin may not burn. When the fish has begun to broil hold it farther away from the fire until it is done. Serve with sprigs of parsley or watercress.

Hints For Broiling.

While the process of broiling is going on the fish should be basted with oil or butter once or twice.

The broiler should be heated and oiled before the fish is put into it, and it should be turned about every fifteen seconds while the broiling is going on.

Broiled fish may be served with maitre d'hotel butter.

Trout Saute.—Clean, cut into pieces and wipe dry after washing. Salt and pepper the fish, roll in sifted cracker crumbs and saute in hot pork fat until a golden brown. Serve with parsley and slices of lemon.

How to Cook Small Fish.

Baked Trout With Forcemeat.—Clean and dress and through a slit fill the fish with forcemeat made by pounding in the mortar fish from which skin and bones have been taken and to which has been added the whites of two eggs and half a cup of cream. When the trout have been stuffed brush with melted butter or olive oil. Season the fish, lay on slices of bacon or salt pork and wrap in sheets of buttered paper. Bake in a hot oven, and when ready to serve remove the papers and lay on thin slices of toasted bread. They may be served with tomato sauce.

Fried Trout.—Clean the fish, wash and drain. Sprinkle with about half a teaspoonful of salt and roll in a mixture of sifted cornmeal and flour. Take salt pork, using about an eighth of a pound of pork to each pound of fish. Cut the pork into thin slices and place in the frying pan. Fry to a crisp brown. Now take out the pork and lay the trout in the frying pan. Fry brown on both sides. Serve with the pork and sprigs of watercress.

NOW SHRIMPS ARE IN SEASON.

SHRIMPS are in season from March 15 to June 1 and may be served in many novel ways. Canned shrimps may be bought almost anywhere, and if you care to try them do not deprive yourself of these little crustaceans because you cannot get them fresh from the ocean.

Shrimps are very much like lobsters, only much smaller. If you are fond of lobsters you will probably like shrimps.

Fresh shrimps have the head and shell removed before cooking. They are boiled in salted water for five to ten minutes.

Served In Salads.

Plain Shrimp Salad.—Shell a quart of boiled shrimps. Lay them on lettuce leaves in a salad bowl. Chill some mayonnaise dressing, pour over the shrimps and serve.

Shrimp and Asparagus Salad.—Cut some asparagus stalks into short lengths so that the hard ends may be dispensed with. Add a small can of shrimps that have been drained and rinsed in cold water. Put in a saucepan on the fire. Toss in a little butter and onion juice, but do not allow to brown. Serve with mayonnaise or boiled dressing, using a few chopped capers, a little dry mustard and minced parsley. Garnish with lettuce.

Ways of Cooking.

Creamed Shrimps.—Take a can of shrimps and after removing the refuse melt four teaspoonfuls of butter, add one tablespoonful of flour and stir till smooth. Add one-quarter of a cupful of cream and the shrimps and stir very gently until they are heated. Then add the beaten yolks of two eggs, stirring all the while. As soon as the eggs are in season with salt and pepper and serve on toast.

Fried Shrimps.—Fried shrimps are nice for luncheon. They may be prepared quickly. Open a can of them and after washing and removing the shells dip in egg, well beaten, and roll in cracker crumbs. Put butter into the frying pan, and when it is hot drop in the shrimps and fry quickly. Serve with tartar sauce.

A Novel Dish.

Shrimp Croustade.—With a big biscuit cutter stamp out as many rounds of bread as there are persons to be served, and with a smaller cutter stamp a round out of the center, leaving a hollow, but not cutting the bread clear through. Fry the cases in a basket in deep, hot fat and fill the center with shrimps picked into pieces and mixed with white sauce.

MONTH'S VACATION FOR LIFE CONVICT

All His Ills Will Be Settled by Warden of Prison

Newman, Ga., April 16.—Believing all work and no play makes convicts dull boys, Captain Nash, the oldest convict warden in the state in point of service, on May 1 will give a month's vacation to his cook, who is a life timer, sent up on a murder charge.

During the time he is off on his vacation he will be absolutely free, at liberty to go where he selects and to do exactly what pleases him. The warden will pay the bills.

"Will he come back?" repeated the warden, when asked the question. "Why, certainly; he will be back on the day and on the hour set for him."

—How rapidly the Civil war veterans are responding to the last call is seen in the annual reports of the Massachusetts department of the G. A. R. During last year the 209 Posts in the state lost by death 892 members, and the total membership of the department dropped from 12.769 to 11,965.—Medford Mercury.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barony. The place is to be sold, and its history and that of the owners, the Quintards, is the subject of discussion by Jonathan Crenshaw, a business man, a stranger known as Bladen, and Bob Yancy, a farmer, when Hannibal Wayne Hazard, a mysterious child of the old southern family, makes his appearance. Yancy tells how he adopted the boy.

CHAPTER II.—Nathaniel Ferris buys the Barony, but the Quintards deny any knowledge of the boy. Yancy to keep Hannibal. Captain Murrell, a friend of the Quintards, appears and asks questions about the Barony.

CHAPTER III.—Trouble at Scratch Hill, Yancy's home, when Hannibal is kidnaped by Dave Blount, Captain Murrell's agent. Yancy overtakes Blount, gives him a thrashing and secures the boy.

CHAPTER IV.—Yancy is served with a warrant for assaulting Blount. Yancy appears before Squire Balaam, and is discharged with costs for the plaintiff.

A step sounded in the hall and at instant later Hicks entered the room without the formality of knocking Ware recognized his presence with a glance of indifference, but did not speak. Hicks slouched to his employer's side and handed him a note which proved to be from Fentress. Ware read and tossed it aside.

The Planter's Knees Knocked Together.

"If he wants to see me why don't he come here?" he growled.

"I reckon that old fellow they call Judge Price has sprung something sudden on the colonel," said Hicks. "He was out here the first thing this morning; you'd have thought he owned Belle Plain. There was a couple of strangers with him, and he had me in and fired questions at me for half an hour; then he hiked off up to The Oaks."

"Murrell's been arrested," said Ware in a dull level voice. Hicks gave him a glance of unmixed astonishment.

"No!"

"Yes, by God!"

"Who'd risk it?"

"Risk it? Man, he almost fainted dead away—a damned coward, Hell!"

"How do you know this?" asked Hicks, appalled.

"I was with him when he was taken—it was Hues—the man he trusted more than any other!" Ware gave the overseer a ghastly grin and was silent, but in that silence he heard the drumming of his own heart. He went on. "I tell you, to save himself, John Murrell will implicate the rest of us; we've got to get him free, and then, by hell—we ought to knock him in the head; he isn't fit to live!"

"The jail ain't built that'll hold him!" muttered Hicks.

"Of course, he can't be held," agreed Ware. "And he'll never be brought to trial; no lawyer will dare appear against him, no jury will dare to find him guilty; but there's Hues, what about him?" He paused. The two men looked at each other for a long moment.

"Where did they carry the captain?"

"I don't know."

"It looks like the Clan was in a hell-fired hole—but shucks! What will be easier than to fix Hues?—and while they're fixing folks they'd better not overlook that old fellow Price. He's got some notion about Fentress and the boy." Mr. Hicks did not consider it necessary to explain that he was himself largely responsible for this.

"How do you know that?" demanded Ware.

"He as good as said so." Hicks looked uneasily at the planter. He knew himself to be compromised. The stranger named Cavendish had forced an admission from him that Murrell would not condone if it came to his knowledge. He had also acquired a very proper and wholesome fear of Judge Slocum Price. He stepped close to Ware's side. "What'll come of the girl, Tom? Can you figure that out?" he questioned, sinking his voice almost to a whisper. But Ware was incapable of speech, again his terrors completely overwhelmed him. "I reckon you'll have to find another overseer. I'm going to strike out for Texas," said Hicks.

Ware's eyes met his for an instant. He had thought of flight, too; was still thinking of it, but greed was as much a part of his nature as fear; Belle Plain was a prize not to be lightly cast aside, and it was almost his. He lurched across the room to the window. If he were going to act, the sooner he did so the better, and gain a respite from his fears. The road down the coast slid away before his heavy eyes; he marked each turn, then a palsy of fear shook him, his heart beat against his ribs, and he stood gnawing his lips while he gazed up at the sun.

"Do you get what I say, Tom? I am going to quit these parts," said Hicks. Ware turned slowly from the window.

"All right, Hicks. You mean you want me to settle with you, is that it?" he asked.

"Yes, I'm going to leave while I can; maybe I can't later on," said Hicks stolidly. He added: "I am going to start down the coast as soon as it turns dark, and before it's day again I'll have put the good miles between me and these parts."

"You're going down the coast?" and Ware was again conscious of the quickened beating of his heart. Hicks nodded. "See you don't meet up with John Murrell," said Ware.

"I'll take that chance. It seems a heap better to me than staying here."

Ware looked from the window. The shadows were lengthening across the lawn.

"Better start now, Hicks," he advised.

"I'll wait until it turns dark."

"You'll need a horse."

"I was going to help myself to one. This ain't no time to stand on ceremony," said Hicks shortly.

"Slosson shouldn't be left in the lurch like this—or your brother's folks—"

"They'll have to figure it out for themselves, same as me," rejoined Hicks.

"You can stop there as you go by."

"No," said Hicks. "I never did believe in this damn foolishness about the girl, and I won't go near George's—"

"I don't ask you to go there; you can give them the signal from the head of the bayou. All I want is for you to stop and light a fire on the shore. They'll know what that means. I'll give you a horse and fifty dollars for the job."

Hicks' eyes sparkled, but he only said:

"Make it twice that and maybe we can deal."

Racked and tortured, Ware hesitated; but the sun was slipping into the west; his windows blazed with the hot light.

"You swear you'll do your part?" he said thickly. He took his purse from his pocket and counted out the amount due Hicks. He named the total, and paused irresolutely.

"Don't you want the fire lighted?" asked Hicks. He was familiar with his employer's vacillating moods.

"Yes," answered Ware, his lips quivering; and slowly, with shaking fingers, he added to the pile of bills in Hicks' hand.

"Well, take care of yourself," said Hicks, when the count was complete. He thrust the roll of bills into his pocket and moved to the door.

Alone again, the planter collapsed into his chair, breathing heavily, but his terrors swept over him and left him with a savage sense of triumph. This passed; he sprang up, intending to recall Hicks and unmake his bargain. What had he been thinking of—safety lay only in flight! Before he reached the door his greed was in the ascendant. He dropped down on the edge of his bed, his eyes fixed on the window. The sun sank lower. From where he sat he saw it through the upper half of the sash, blood-red and livid in a mist of fleecy clouds.

It was in the tops of the old oaks now, which sent their shadows into his room. Again maddened by his terrors, he started and backed toward the door; but again his greed, the one dominating influence of his life, vanquished him.

He watched the sun sink. He watched the red splendor fade over the river; he saw the first stars appear. He told himself that Hicks would soon be gone—if the fire was not to be lighted he must act at once! He stole to the window. It was dusk now, yet he could distinguish the distant wooded boundaries of the great fields framed by the darkening sky. Then in the silence he heard the thud of hoofs.

HUMAN BONES FOUND IN "HAUNTED" HOUSE

Believed to Be the Remains of Three Young Women

Chicago, April 16.—Evidence of the existence of another "Holmes Castle" in Chicago was unearthed by the police. In the basement of a ramshackle frame building at 3155 and 3157 Groveland avenue a small market basket filled with human bones was found.

Traces of quicklime were found in the basement, and the police believe wholesale murder has been committed. At least three humand bodies, evidently of young women, supplied the bones discovered in the basket. The building where the discovery was made contains four flats.

According to gossip among neighbors at least two families left the building within a few months because of strange noises heard in the basement. The house was supposed by negroes to be "haunted."

Balfour Sees Little Good In Government of Ireland Bill

London, April 16.—Ex-Premier Balfour resumed the debate in the house of commons yesterday afternoon on the "Government of Ireland bill," which was introduced in parliament April 11 by Premier Asquith.

Balfour ridiculed the government measure for Irish home rule, describing it as an "unsymmetrical and botched federal scheme utterly unworthy of British statesmanship. Was this lop-sided scheme imitating the architect of the great federal system beyond the seas?"

The alleged supremacy of the imperial parliament, Balfour declared, was about equivalent to the ancient claims of British sovereigns to be king of France.

ABANDONED HIS AUTO IN BOSTON

Police Want to Interview Dorr About Marsh Murder

VALUABLE CLEWS ARE FOUND

Winchester Rifle Under Seat of Machine Which Was Purchased by Californian About Two Weeks Ago —Reward Offered For Arrest of Man Who Has Not Been Seen Since Day Wealthy Man Was Murdered

Lynn, Mass., April 16.—Lynn and Boston police are sending requests broadcast for the arrest of William A. Dorr of Stockton, Cal., whom they wish to question in connection with their investigation of the murder of George E. Marsh, the wealthy Lynn soap manufacturer, whose body was found near the Point of Pines last Friday morning. All steamships sailing from Boston, New York and Portland are being carefully watched to prevent him from getting on board without being seen by officers.

The police found that a runabout auto, which Dorr bought about two weeks ago of Connell & McKone company, Boston, had been abandoned in Stanhope place. Inspector Thorne of Lynn, Captain McGarr and Inspectors Pierce, Wait and Lynch of Boston went to make an investigation and they found that a runabout, No. 23,-364, had been found abandoned in the yard of Kenneth A. Skinner's garage and near the repair shop of the Connell & McKone company, at 10.45 o'clock on Thursday night.

Dr. Putnam of Boston, who keeps his car at this place, ran into the runabout as he was driving into the yard, not seeing it because of the absence of a light. The doctor told the night man about the abandoned car, and it was pushed to one side and the tail lamp lighted. Early the following morning a patrolman was informed, and he took the number and reported it.

Later the car was taken to Connell & McCone Co.'s place, where it was kept until 1.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Then it was driven to Lynn in charge of Inspector Thorne. There was nothing the matter with the car, except that its gasolene supply was about exhausted.

A twenty-two calibre, automatic collapsible Winchester rifle was found under the seat and aside from this the only contents of the car were robes and a pair of men's gloves. The car which had been abandoned is the one which was licensed on April 3 in the name of Willis A. Dow, who gave his address as 254 Tremont street, Boston, which is the New Richwood hotel.

When Dorr or Dow took out his license he said that he was born on Feb. 23, 1883, that he was five feet eight inches tall, weighed 145 pounds. He was of sallow complexion, smooth shaven and had dark brown hair and sunken blue eyes. At that time he wore a black suit and a long gray overcoat.

Chief of Police Burckes of Lynn frankly told the newspaper men that he is seeking W. A. Dorr, who left Stockton, Cal., on March 14 and arrived in Boston on March 24, registering at the New Richwood hotel, Boston, under the name of Augustus A. Dow. From April 3 until the morning of the murder of George E. Marsh on April 11 Dorr lived in an apartment house on School street, Lynn. It is claimed that a part of the rifle found in the auto previously had been located in Lynn where Dorr roomed.

Chief Burckes says that he has been informed that at 11 a. m. on the morning of the murder Fletcher Taylor, who formerly lived in San Francisco, and now lives in Providence, where he is employed as a drug clerk, met Dorr on Tremont street, Boston. Taylor said that he knew Dorr quite well in the west and that they talked together for a few minutes when they met. That is the last report of anyone having seen Dorr.

Arthur Marsh, nephew of the dead man, has offered a reward of $1000 for the apprehension of W. A. Dorr. The city of Lynn previously had offered $500 for information regarding the murderer of Marsh.

Mrs. Napoleon Derosiers of Saugus took to the Lynn police station yesterday afternoon the cane belonging to George E. Marsh and a mixed-brown auto cap which the police claim to have indentified as one worn by Dorr while he was boarding in this city. Mrs. Derosiers said that both had been picked up on the boulevard by her husband on Thursday night, the night of the Marsh murder.

DEMOCRATIC CITY COMMITTEE

A meeting of the Democratic City committee was held at their headquarters, 17 Temple street Monday evening. There was a large attendance and many plans were formulated in the interests of the organization.

The principal business was confined to the election of officers. Ex-councilman Jonn J. Smith could not be prevailed upon to accept the presidency for a third term, and Alfred J. LaCroix was elected to the position. Thomas Griffin was chosen vice-president; William Kelley secretary; and Charles C. McCue was re-elected treasurer.

All of the new officers are prominent in the Democratic party and have frequently taken active parts in the welfare of the Democratic party. Considerable routine business was also transacted and preparations made to form a large Democratic organization.

QUINCY MURDER CASE

Quincy, in which several men and women participated.

There were 129 jurors present but when the panel had been completed, only 53 had been called. The members of the jury are George R. Sparrell of Milton, merchant, foreman; Frank H. Winslow of Norwood, farmer; James T. Nettles of Weymouth, janitor; Jeremiah J. McCarthy of Dedham, contractor; Duncan MacKellar of Quincy, salesman; Joseph G. Spear of Braintree, farmer; William B. Carson of Quincy, stone cutter; Leonard Belcher of Holbrook, shoeworker; Charles T. Deeg of Sharon, teaming and jobbing; Jeremiah F. Donovan of Norwood, car shop employee; Charles W. Adams of Norfolk, boss carder: J. Winthrop Foster of Brookline, stock broker.

After the indictment had been read against Spano, the members of the jury were taken to the scene of the alleged stabbing. Deputy Sheriffs Wragg and Capen were in charge and accompanying the jurors were district Attorney Barker, Assistant District Attorney Katzmann for the government and Jesse Gove and Henry T. Richardson for the defense. After a survey of the place had been made, the jurors were permitted to repair to their homes.

Of the jurors not accepted, 21 were opposed to capital punishment, one was excused by the court, one had difficulty in his hearing, two had already formed an opinion, four had passed the age limit, eleven were challenged by the Government and one by the defense.

FIRST GAMES IN SCHOOL LEAGUE

Over 1,000 See Three Opening Games in Grammar Leagues

THE SUMMARIES

That the great national game of base ball is a source of especially attraction to local fandom was clearly proven Monday afternoon, on the opening of the Grammar school base ball league. The season was ushered in under most favorable auspices, for it is estimated that fully 1000 witnessed the three games that were played. Early in the morning it was feared that the weather would not permit the playing of the games, but when "Old Sol" began to pour forth his rays shortly before noontime, the enthusiasm that began to pervade the hearts of the followers of the different teams that constitute the league was of the inexplicable variety and when play was called, circumstances indicated that this season was to be more prosperous than ever for the youngsters.

On the upper field of Merry Mount park, the Wollaston school opened its season by annexing a victory over the Massachusetts Fields team. The Coddington school players took the Atherton Hough boys into camp on the lower field, while the Gridley Bryant school triumphed over its Willard school neighbors in a fast and interesting game on the Ward Three playground. The best and most largely attended game of the three was the last mentioned.

Over six hundred ardent fans saw the contest and the Ward Three diamond presented the spectacle in its history.

The game was evenly played for four innings, when the Gridley Bryant team secured five runs. The losers made a rally in the next inning but were unable to overcome the lead. Quinn twirled in an able manner throughout the game, and allowed but one hit. Only two hits were made by the winners, although they batted against two pitchers. The summary:

Gridley Bryant	1	0	0	5	0	0	—6
Willard	1	0	0	0	2	0	—3

WOLLASTON 10—MASS. FIELDS 0.

The Wollaston Grammar school team opened it season Monday afternoon on the upper field, Merry Mount park, by whitewashing the Massachusetts Fields combination, 10 to 0. The winning team displayed superior work in every departemnt of play and both Cox and Isbister were very effective. Fowler also twirled well, but lack of good catching prevented him from showing up to advantage. The summary:

Wollaston	4	2	3	0	1	0	—10

Batteries, Wollaston—Cox, Isbister, and Hamlin. Mass. Fields—Fowler, Rannigan, Doring, Witcher.

CODDINGTON 10—ATHERTON 1.

Displaying superior work in every department of play the Coddington school team easily triumphed over the Atherton Hough players at the lower field, Merry Mount park, Monday afternoon, the score being 10 to 1. Errors were largely responsible for the defeat of the Houghs Neck youngsters and the need of a slab artist was clearly in evidence, for the winners hit both Atherton Hough pitchers almost at random. Thompson and Cheverie did the battery work for the winners while Lemons and Jackson twirled for the losers, with Goodwin behind the bat.

MAN STABBED

When the affair happened, Antonelli started to run out of the yard but was soon captured by Officer Johnson, who took him into custody. At the police station Antonelli denied having used a knife on Leonard and claimed that when the latter was falling from the ship, he cut himself. Leonard, however, asserted that Antonelli stabbed him and knocked him over. According to the workmen who were nearby at the time, it was said that both men had some words, but it has not been definitely learned as yet what the cause and circumstances of the alleged stabbing were.

—A Malden sealer of weights and measures has started a campaign against short weight by candy dealers, and found in many cases that boxes of candy sold for pound packages contain but 12 ounces. He says the box and contents may weigh 16 ounces, but the purchaser is not supposed to pay for boxes, tinfoil, etc. The law requires that 16 ounces be given for a pound, exclusive of boxes, trays, paper, etc.—Athol Chronicle.

NEW YORK SPRING FASHIONS.

Silhouette Still Tube-Like But Minor Changes Make a Difference—Buttons Galore Shadow Laces and Cockades.

Fashions won't burst upon the vision any more, they grow. All we fashion writers have a way of saying that there is nothing distinctly new in the season's sartorial productions, still a last year's hat or gown or even suit, unless it is plain tailored, is recognizable to the experienced eye, if not brought up-to-date wth new trimmings and accessories.

THE SILHOUETTE.

Outlines remain quite straight and willowy slenderness is the modish type toward which all designs tend, yet I venture to say that the stout woman has never had a better chance to look her best than in present modes judiciously selected and modified to suit her individual needs.

AN INDISPENSABLE GARMENT.

It is not difficult to secure a well fitting dre ss or suit if a woman pays proper attention to securing just the right kind of a corset and brassiere. for now that fashion demands a corset with a long skirt and short top the brassiere is indispensable for either slight or stout people. The newest style of these shapely and useful little waists has a patent strap arrangement that is easily adjusted just at the top of the corset in the back, giving the smooth flat line that everyone desires. The "La Reine" brassiere has also a little hook that catches on to the corset laces and prevents the slipping that is the fault of so many of these garments.

BUTTONS GALORE.

Buttons without end are employed as trimmings and afford an excellent chance to smarten up a last year's rig, or improve a too plain costume. For make-overs these are invaluable aids, as are also the little frilled and scalloped trimmings used on the newest frocks. Pearl buttons are very popular, both in white, smoked and combinations. Suits of black or blue serge are made chic by white buttons in flat or ball shapes, with shanks, or sewed through. In many instances these are accompanied by fancy buttonholes bound with white or simulated in white braid. Some of the buttonhole devices are very elaborate and almost an impossibility for anyone but a skilled tailor to produce.

PATCHY COATS.

Patchy coats with the waist line raised, sometimes half way up the back are seen on every side. This mode was notable during the Fall and Winter, but what was exceptional then has now become the rule. Of course plain tailored styles hold their own as ever, with coats just to the hips if the figure will stand it, or lower if that is more becoming.

PANNIER INFLUENCES.

Panniers are with us in increasing vogue, and the pannier influence is seen in the great number of coats that follow the same lines, rounded off toward the hips and with a decided dip in the back. The present type of pannier is not bouffant but sets close to the figure, and is apt to trail off into some droopy form, like a sash or coat-tails in the back. Later we may get the regular Watteau outlines bunched out on either hip but there is small indication of these outlines at present.

MADE TRIMMINGS.

Trimmings made of the dress material, especially if that be taffeta, are exceedingly fashionable. All the old time skimpy frills and ruches, shell trimmings, and tiny pleatings which trim the edges of coats, panniers, fichus and reveres are in evidence, while puffings finished at either side by cords or frills are as much as ever in the running. In fact these latter have invaded even hat trimmings. A black hemp hat rather wide as to brim and with a low round crown had a two inch puffing of red and black changeable taffeta at the line of the under brim which was looped high on the side under a matching cockade of the same silk.

TAFFETA CROWNS.

Taffeta crowns of all sorts appear on every variety of hat. The ones that look as if they were pasted on, are as a rule, smarter than the draped effects but of course, it makes a difference whether a masterhand or novice does the draping. Trimmings are scant on the hats, and there is not yet much indication for flowers. Cockades like spreading paint brushes made of feathers, hair or even of spun glass are very much worn.

TEMPERAMENT IS ALL RIGHT

Quality the World Seems Ever Willing to Condone, but Beware of Temper.

Of the prima donna who throweth a dish of spaghetti at her butler the world saith: "She hath the artistic temperament." And of the washerwoman who scaldeth her husband with a pot of bean soup the husband's relatives saith: "She hath a devilish temper."

Cultivate temperament if thou wilt, but beware of temper. The rich man, in a burst of temper, bursteth a blood vessel and droppeth dead. The poor man getteth hot in the collar, and the collar, being celluloid, igniteth and burneth him to death. While angry at the woman he loveth, a man marryeth a woman he doth not love. And, behold, it costeth him half his fortune to regain his temper—and his freedom.

Yet temper hath its uses. It giveth a man courage to do that which he lacketh the nerve to perpetrate in cold blood. And it serveth as an admirable excuse. If he saith: "Pardon me, I have such an ungovernable temper," he is forgiven, as if he were a lunatic and not responsible.

Temper maketh Johnny to go into tantrums. And, behold, his mother announceth proudly: "Johnny is such a high-strung child. So much temperament, don't you know." Which remark Johnny often overheareth, and, being wiser than thou wouldst expect of such a mother, he stringeth her some more and himself still higher, until father steppeth in with a shingle paddle and breaketh the string.

Temper maketh madam to snap at the hand of her husband when it petteth her. And hubby, saying; "She is so nervous," putteth on a glove that his hand may not be lacerated, and caresseth her more tenderly than ever.

Temperament, like temper, is greatly overworked as an excuse. The man who defraudeth the barber and doth his best to keep the clothescleaner and presser from earning a living, pleadeth in extenuation the poetic temperament. And the one who keepeth irregular hours and worse company, and whose shirt bosom feeleth the imprint of a rouged cheek more often than the touch of a laundress' hand, attributeth his delinquencies to the Bohemian temperament. The supposed possession of a literary temperament hath led many a woman to take a course in the literature of the Italian renaissance when the needeth far worse a course of treatment by a manicurist, a modiste and a hairdresser. Verily, yea, verily, a sweet temper is more to be desired than a sweetheart, and is easier to keep—Terrell Love Holliday, in Puck.

Changed Circumstances.

"I can remember when you had to work eight hours a day," said the old-time friend.

"Yes," replied Dustin Stax; "things are different. Now I have to worry sixteen hours a day."

Hard to Excite.

"Jibble must have nerves like iron."

"Why do you think so?"

"He had the rare privilege yesterday of looking at a dozen yard eggs and he did so without so much as a quiver of his eyelid."

Proof Positive.

"She was the most beautifully gowned woman at the ball!"

"You seem very positive about it."

"I am. Even the woman who was gowned second best admitted it."

It Does.

It takes a guy
Whose purse is fat
To occupy
A city flat.

A Regular Solomon.

Old Gentleman—Which one of my daughters do you wish to marry?

Young Man—Oh, just let them fight it out among themselves, sir, and I'll take the one that puts up the poorest fight.—Puck.

SAMUEL COMPERS AND HERR LEGEIN ADDRESS GRANITE MEN

Great Labor Leader Pays Tribute to Men Who Made Union What it is Today

Herr Legein Speaks on Labor Conditions in Europe and America

Tuesday's sesion of the Granite Cutters' International Union delegates was devoted largely to the appointing of committees to consider the various sections of the constitution. Each committee will go into the matter in detail, section by section, for careful consideration after which their reports will be made to the general convention.

Today is a red letter day with the convention, for its has the unusual distinction of having with them, two of the world's greatest labor leaders. Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor and Hon. Karl Legein, President of the German Trades Union, and General Secretary of the International Secretarit, and who is also a member of the German Reichstag.

These two leaders in the labor world, arrived in Quincy at 10 o'clock this morning and were escorted immediately to Hibernian hall, where the convention is in sesion.

The gallery of Hibernian hall, on Franklin street, was thrown open to the public when the convention of the Granite Cutters' International Association of America was called to order at 10 o'clock by secretary-treasurer James Duncan, who is also vice-president of the American Federation of Labor. A large German flag, linked with the stars and stripes, played a conspicuous part in the decorations of the platform. Seated on the platform, in addition to chairman of the convention Duncan, were Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, Herr Carl Legien, a member of the German Reichstag, and General Secretary of the International Sectariat, the World's council of labor organizations, his secretary, Albert Baumeister, who is also president of the Cooks', Waiters', and Resturant Employees' Union of Germany and of the international branch of Europe, and James Garvey, of Milford, Mass., secretary of the convention.

In introducing the first speaker Mr. Duncan pronounced an enconium on Samuel Gompers that was the cause for continued applause and after the ovation had subsided and a badge worn by members of the convention had been pinned on him by chairman

DR. HALLOWELL LAID AT REST

Many Friends Attend Services of Late Physician

BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS

The funeral of Dr. Henry Carleton Hallowell, for nearly twenty-five years one of Quincy's well-known practicing physicians, was held Tuesday afternoon from his late residence on Hancock street. Out of respect to his memory the flags on the public school buildings and at City Hall were at half mast and City Hall was closed to business during the hour of the services.

There was a very large attendance at the services. Aside from representatives of many families, whose physician the deceased had been for many years, there were several present and past members of the School Committee, several of the physicians of the city and the following city officials. Mayor Stone, ex-Mayor Shea, City Clerk Crane, City Treasurer, Tilden, Commissioner Tupper, Overseer Elcock, Tax Collector Child, City Messenger Tirrell, City Auditor Fairbanks, Clerk of Council Magee, Dock and Water Front Commissioner Crane, and ex-City Clerk McGilvray.

The School Committee was represented by Chairman Miller, Supt. Barbour, Dr. Bushnell, John D. McKay and Dr. Hunting. The Granite City club was represented by President Sheppard and many of its members. There was also a large delegation from the New England Order of Protection and Paul Revere post 88 G. A. R. was present in a body.

The casket was placed across a corner of the room, near the window where the Dr. spent many of his leisure hours in reading, and the room contained a wealth of beautiful flowers, testifying in silence to the high regard in which he was held. There were set pieces from all of the organizations with which he was affiliated as well as from the officials at City Hall and from the School Committee. In addition to these there were many bouquets of fragrant flowers sent by loving friends.

The services were of a simple nature, in keeping with the ritual of the Episcopal church, and were conducted by Rev. Richard E. Armstrong, rector of Christ church. During this service Mrs. Moore and Miss Coe sang "Abide with me" and the hymn, "The day of Resurrection."

Immediately following the religious service the burial service of the New England Order of Protection was read by the officers of the lodge.

The last service was that of the Grand Army which was conducted by Senior Vice Commander F. P. Loud, and Chaplain Wyman Nightingale, assisted by comrades Mark E. Hanson and Warren Dunbar.

An opportunity was then given to say the last farewell to the deceased.

After the services a larger part of the flowers were taken to Mt. Wollaston cemetery and placed on the Grand Army lot.

TENTH ANNUAL PLAY AND DANCE

Copeland Club Holds a Session of the Deestrict Skule

ST. MARY'S HALL

Diverging from their time honored custom of holding an annual minstrel show, members of the Copeland club gave an entertainment and dance at St. Mary's hall, Tuesday evening which was as much or more of a success than all their previous functions.

The entertainment was furnished by the St. John's Dramatic club and an audience which taxed the hall to its capacity was treated to a splendid production of "The Deestrict Skule," given under direction of Andrew J. Dinegan.

From beginning to end, the play kept the audience in a continual state of laughter. Every one in the cast presented his or her part in a manner that savored of professional ability. Jokes of a wide variety were sprung and many West Quincy residents were made targets for such jocosities.

The first scene was laid in the rooms of the school committee and was devoted entirely to the receiving of applicants for the position of teacher of "The Deestrict Skule." The school committee, Uriah Perkins, Jacob Billaker and John Smith, was cleverly impersonated by Daniel Driscoll (chairman) Peter J. Collagan and Walter Ferguson. The applicants included Miss Dashaway, who proved to be Miss Helen Desmond; Miss Belinda Sharp, cleverly acted by Miss Louise Driscoll; Miss Sally Simple, who failed to make a hit, Miss Harriet Daly; Miss Getthere, who almost did, Miss Mary Gilrain; Miss Bridget O'Toole, whose singing did not prove as successful as she expected, Miss Mary Driscoll and Rudolph Pendergrass, none other than the well-known Andrew J. Dinegan, who was adjudged the best candidate by school committee and given the position.

The second scene was laid in the school room, with a full attendance of pupils, the new teacher in charge. The opening number was a song, "School Days" rendered by the entire student body. The reading, arithmetic and geography classes were then taken up in turn and each class occasioned laughter and applause. A recess was then taken for lunch and still more fun was in order.

Miss Evon Bouchard made a decided hit with her song, "I'm on to you, Chappy, Old Boy" and responded to repeated encores. James C. Grant, whose fame in minstrelsy is too well-known to need any further announcement sang "I want to be a regular Rah Rah Boy," clad in typical regalia, and evoked great applause for his work.

The spelling, history and rehearsals for parents' day occupied the first part of the third scene and the laughter continued. Daniel J. McGrath sang "Then will your dream come true" and prolonged applause caused him to respond with a second song.

Matthew Fay made his usual hit in whistling solos and Fred McDonald came in for his full share of applause in his impersonation of an Italian. He

EUROPE AND ITS CUSTOMS

Col. Henry L. Kincaide Gives Talk Before Odd Fellows

LARGE ATTENDANCE

The brothers of Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows, who attended the meeting Tuesday evening were fortunate, for they had an opportunity of hearing an unusually interesting talk by Col. Henry L. Kincaide on personal observation in European countries. Col. Kincaide was one of the Boston Chamber of Commerce party who made a trip through Europe a year ago, and was thus able to see and learn more of the customs and conditions in foreign countries than usually falls to the lot of a European traveller.

That he was thoroughly conversant with his subject was immediately apparent and he was closely followed during his talk of over an hour.

Prominent in his remarks were references to city, or town planning as carried on in the greater cities of both England and Germany, Municipal housing, which is replacing the buildings in the slum districts in large cities was also fully explained.

Co-operation between employer and employee and the great growth of co-operative stores were briefly referred to. The workings of the great trade and technical schools in Germany and their bearing on the development of young men, also received serious consideration in his remarks, and the growth of socialism, burdens of European taxation, High cost of living and low wages of the working people were explained in detail.

Of special interest was the talk on government handling of public utilities and municipal ownership. Road building, traffic regulation and many other topics of interest were spoken of much to the delight of his hearers.

In addition to the members of Mt. Wollaston lodge present there were a large number of visitors who included a number of the delegates from other parts of the country who are attending the granite cutters' convention. A social hour followed the meeting, during which ice cream and cake was served.

NEW GREATER BOSTON BILL

Dock and Water Front Commissioner Crane was among the speakers Tuesday evening at the dinner of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, at the Boston City club. About 41 of the communities it is proposed to incorporate into a general municipal government by the Greater Boston bill of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, a hearing on which was held this morning at the state house.

Commissioner Crane said that Quincy with its Fore River Ship Building Co., its granite industry and Tubular Rivet Co., was assured of $20,000,000 of business this year. As far as he could learn the sentiment in Quincy was that the bill of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, was the most acceptable of any that had been proposed.

HIGH OFFICERS PERFORM WORK

A most successful class initiation was conducted in Hibernian hall, Franklin street, Tuesday evening, under the auspices of St. Kevin court, M. C. O. F., of Atlantic. Delegates from other courts were present in large numbers and twenty-five candidates were initiated.

The degree work was performed by Cornelius M. Duggan, H. C. R., of Atlantic, James Dignam, H. V. C. R. Daniel H. Maguire, H. S. and T., Edward M. Clancey, H. S. C., Cornelius F. Buckley H. J. C., and Joseph G. Brennan, H. O S. assisted by the membrs of the degree team of Brockton Court.

Addresses were made by all the aforementioned officers of the order and the gathering was also addersed by District Deputy Michael Mullane of Brockton. The courts of the order represented inmluded St. Kevin St. Francis and St. Ambrose, of Quincy and Brockton and St. Louise of Brockton. Refreshments and dancing followed.

Friday, April 19th, being a legal holiday the office of the QUINCY DAILY LEDGER will be closed all day.

Contributors are requested to get their copy in early.

From the battered condition of all these hats in the ring, none of them will look very handsome when hung up behind the White house door.

In the present condition of the Mississippi river, the battleship New Hampshire could get very close up to Lake Itasca.

Reducing the subscription to the Congressional Record will not popularize it unless they add a woman's page and run a voting contest.

J. P. Morgan and Kaiser Wilhelm are to meet April 25, at Venice. They should leave their automobiles at home, as they would not run well in the streets of that city.

If you want delegates, don't try to get them at retail by speeches and newspaper articles. You have got to do business with the wholesalers who deliver them in case lots.

It is reported that when a Congressman wanted a copy of the Constitution the other day, he had to send out to an old junkstore to get one.

Great excitement was caused in Washington by the news that a straw ballot of the New York kindergartens showed 7346 majority for Santa Claus for president.

It will no doubt be all right to electrocute the Hillsville bandits, but we trust that they are not subjected to the cruel and unusual punishment of having to hoe the garden.

It having been learned that there are seven doubtful voters in Skaguay, Alaska, all the presidential candidates are expected to address the Snow-shoe Club of that city on the issues of the campaign.

LIQUOR PERMITS.

The question was again before the City Council this week as to how many permits should be granted to bring into, and deliver liquor in our city. Each year the people vote no, yet it is not difficult to get all the liquor one wants as the records last year show 10 gallons for every man, woman and child.

We are glad some of the applicants were turned down. While not advocating giving any one express company the monopoly we would restrict the permits as far as possible and keep watch over the business done.

If our city is willing, as it is, to do without the money for liquor licenses, and thus prohibit the sale of liquor by those who would be willing to pay well for the privilege, it must be evident to the dullest comprehension that it should not allow the sale by the kitchen bar rooms or other evaders of the will of the city. The fact that the citizens of the city turn over to their executive officers the enforcement of these laws does not mean for a single moment that they have dismissed the subject from their minds or are indifferent to these matters. As a matter of fact many of our best citizens are constantly alive to the conditions as was shown at the Council meeting and are ready to commend or criticise as occasion calls for. We hope our officials will realize this for it is surely a fact, and they may go about their duties knowing that they have back of them this strong force for righteousness and clean administration.

GIVE THE BOYS A CHANCE.

Juvenile delinquency appears to be increasing in all our larger cities in spite of the modern spirit of leniency toward erring youths, the rapid spread of the probation system and the rise of many philanthropic child saving agencies.

Some of the reasons are evident. City boys have lost the free open country which gave them a chance to roam and work off their savage impulses and surplus energy with the least possible harm. In the country the taking of fruit is not considered a crime, only by a mean man, and he usually has to suffer. In the city the same offense is considered a serious misdemenanor. In the country the boys outgrow their anti-social life by exercise, but this method is not practical in our modern city life. Boys need therefore in our present social order more chance for free play and more careful guidance.

If one studies the records in the Juvenile courts he will discover that boys usually get into trouble between the hours of 4 and 10 o'clock at night. Any institution which will help to fill in these dangerous hours under safe and sane guidance is a good investment to the city says the Taunton Herald in approval of the boys' club recently organized in that city. Our own boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. is doing a great work along these lines.

THE JOINT DEBATE.

The challenge given by Congressman A. P. Gardner to Mr. Roosevelt for a joint debate is an incident a bit out of the ordinary routine of political campaigning.

The joint debate has had some vogue in the South and West, more than in the East. But as a whole the political rally seems something like a church service, where the minister holds the floor exclusively, and an interruption from the sacrilegious pews would scandalize the meeting.

The one-sidedness of the typical political rally has not helped popular education in political science. Over in England, where the audiences behave much worse than with us, the rally is really more educational. The rooters storm the platforms and hustle unpopular candidates into the back seats, or display their marksmanship with antique eggs. Interruptions and interjections of dissent are expected and are promptly met.

In spite of all this silly disorder, the strict party man gets through the give and take of joint debate, a glimpse of the attitude of the other side which broadens his convictions. If it does not convert him, at least he sees where his traditional faith must be altered to meet the points where his opponents are strong.

The one-sidedness of the average political rally is tiresome to the non-political business or working man. It is like giving a lawyer the chance to talk to a jury with the other lawyer and the judge absent.

The joint debate and the English custom of "heckling" a candidate place at a disadvantage the man who cannot think quickly enough for the rough and tumble of debate. A man may read human nature like an open page, may be able to organize a great enterprise, and yet if it takes him a minute instead of ten seconds to see the weak point in his opponent's attack, he may be useless on the platform.

But in so far as public men are able to meet opponents face to face, the joint debate tends to dissipate the sanctimonious exclusiveness of the political partisan.

A political faith is not of much use unless one knows all the articles and arguments of his opponents' creed, and has studied them enough to find all the holes in them.

Sunshine set to music!
Hear the sparrow sing!
In his note is freshness
Of the new-born Spring;

In his trill delicious
Summer overflows—
Whiteness of the lily,
Sweetness of the rose.

Splendor of the sunrise,
Fragrance of the breeze,
Crystal of the brooklet
Trickling under trees,

Over moss and pebbles,
Hark! you have them all
Prophesied and chanted
In the sparrow's call.

SURVIVORS OF TITANIC DISASTER

There Are None Save Those Who Are on Carpathia

LIST OF THE RESCUED IS STILL PROBLEMATICAL

Small Number of Men Able to Find Place With Women and Children in the Few Boats—Story of Broken Families and Partings Sadder Than Imagination Can Grasp—Those Left to Life Belts or Wreckage Soon Destroyed by Exposure—Captain Was Doubtless on Bridge When His Ship Struck—Said to Have Been Warned of Presence of Danger

Cape Race, N. F., April 17.—A wireless message from Captain Haddock of the steamship Olympic, relayed by the Celtic, reads as follows:

"Please allay rumors that the Virginian has any of the Titanic's passengers. Neither has the Tunisian. I believe that the only survivors are on the Carpathia. The second, third, fourth and fifth officers and the second Marconi operator are the only officers reported saved."

The officers mentioned as being saved were doubtless ordered by Captain Smith to take charge of the boats which were lowered away from the doomed steamer, and the occupants of which were later picked up by the Carpathia. The Marconi operator also was undoubtedly in charge of a boat.

BUT FEW MEN SAVED

Rule of the Sea Sent Women and Children to the Boats

New York, April 17.—Nothing that came through the air yesterday mitigated in any degree the pity and the horror of the Titanic tragedy except as individual distress was abated by the gradual addition of names to the list of the known survivors. There are no known survivors that are not on the Carpathia. The Virginian was too late and found none, and no other ship has reported finding any.

In the icy fog smothered seas where the Titanic sank, exposure must soon have destroyed those who were left to life belts or wreckage when all the boats had gone and no help had come and the great steamship foundered. The receding Olympic, whose powerful wireless began on Tuesday morning to recite the names of the living, continued the work of relaying the Carpathia's dispatches and the successive bulletins kept many a despairing man or woman waiting all day and sent others away rejoicing.

It is practically a certainty now that nearly all of the men of the Titanic's company went down with the ship when she plunged two miles toward the ocean floor, or that they perished miserably while clinging to wreckage or life preservers in the icy waste that betrayed them. They gave up life within sight of the little rocking boats that held their women and children.

Noted Men Lost

It cannot be doubted now that among those were John Jacob Astor, Isador Straus, Major Archibald W. Butt, aide to President Taft, George W. Widener of Philadelphia, Karl H. Behr, the tennis champion, Jacques Futrelle, the writer; William T. Stead, the London editor; Francis D. Millet, the American artist; Charles M. Hays, the railroad president, and many, many more, who were known on both sides of the Atlantic. The toll of the Titanic's dead will be felt the world over.

The names of the survivors include a small number of men, who were able to find a place with the women and children in the few boats. Such good news as there is places among the living Henry Sleeper Harper of the publishing firm of Harper & Co. and Mrs. Harper, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Frauenthal and Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Frauenthal. Mrs. John Jacob Astor, with her maid, is on the Carpathia, which is hurrying the survivors to New York, and which should arrive Thursday night.

Among the others rescued are J. Bruce Ismay, the managing director of the White Star line, Mrs. George D. Widener of Philadelphia, Sir Gordon and Lady Cosmos Duff, Mrs. Jacques Futrelle, Mrs. Charles M. Hays, Mrs. Henry B. Harris and Mrs. Washington Dodge of San Francisco. The list of survivors includes women and children from first cabin, second cabin and steerage. No distinctions were made when the rule of the sea sent women and children to the boats and left the men to their fate.

Eight Hundred Survivors

The first message from the Olympic that filtered through stormy air early yesterday morning that there were 868 survivors on the Carpathia was modified later in the day to "about 800," but whether one message al-

MONTHLY SOCIAL AND BANQUET

The Wollaston Social society observed its monthly meeting Tuesday evening in the Wollaston Unitarian vestry with an informal banquet to its members folowed by speaking and an entertainment. The affair was in a measure a jollification over the success of the recent show and among the guests present were those who had assisted the club in making the occasion to be remembered. A fine menu followed the invocation by Rev. Carl G. Horst.

The exercises of the evening were opened by an address by the president, Irving L. Shaw in which he spoke of the pleasure in welcoming those present to what was developing into the biggest and best meeting of the year.

Financially the year had been the greatest in the history of the club and the club had succeeded in doing things. To progress means application and that every member must do his part.

Dr. Charles S. Adams, president of the parish spoke humorously of his ambition to preside over a ladies' society but being a married man he had no choice.

He congratulated the society on its success and believed it the duty of the parish to foster societies of this nature.

A short business meeting was held during which the secretary's report was read by Mrs. B. F. Bowles and a nominating committee consisting of Ralph W. Oldham, William A. Mann and Mrs. G. Ernest Carr was appointed.

Vocal solos "Because your heart," and "If I but knew," by Albert L. Hayden of Quincy, accompanied by Mrs. Frank A. Page were enjoyed.

The feature of the program was an evening's entertainment furnished by Carleton Chapman of West Upton. This versatile young man, an amateur performed a large number of diversified stunts.

Opening with selections on various musical instruments he also showed his ability as a singer with various popular songs and their variations The conclusion of this part of the program was marked by the famous "Houn' Dog" song.

As a prestidigitator Mr. Chapmen presented a number of bewildering tricks including card manipulation, spirit slate writing, hat and handkerchief experiments.

The decorations of the tables were jonquils while a Jacquemot rose was found at each place. Serving as waiters were the following young men: Arvin Page, Raymond Hall, Elden Howe, Leon White and Winslow Weston.

sang "Cristo Columbo" receiving loud applause. "Take a little tip from father" was sung by Andrew J. Dinegan in great style.

A most successful entertainment was brought to a close when Mr. and Mrs. Daniel McGrath were kept before the audience for a considerable length of time with their duets "Ragtime Violin" and "Everybody's doin' it."

The following comprised the pupils of the school.

At the conclusion of the entertainment, the floor was cleared for dancing, which was enjoyed till early morning; music by Wilson's orchestra, which also assisted during the entertainment.

Refreshments were served in the lower hall.

The dance order comprised twenty numbers, each of which was encored. The affair, which was the tenth annual play and dance of the popular West Quincy club, was pronounced the best in the history of the organization.

The entertainment committee which was in charge, included Richard Barry, George Kelly, Arthur Leary, Edward Desmond and William Laurandea.

The officers of the organization are.

President—William C. Martell.
Vice president—Henry W. Donaher.
Treasurer—Levi G. McLeod.
Financial secretary—George Hebert.
Recording secretary—Joseph J. Desmond.
Executive committee—William Ogle Joseph Dunn, Cornelius Driscoll, Alphonse LeClair and James Franklin Edwards.

—A wholesome lesson in respecting public property was given the other day by a judge in San Francisco to a man whom he saw thoughtlessly defacing the fine white wall in the corridor, rubbing his foot on the surface as he stood with his back to the wall. Instead of fining the man or sending him to jail, he sentenced him to clean off the grime he had rubbed in. It took two hours of hard work under the vigilant eye of an officer, and the time was well spent.—Milford Gazette.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

Friday club members had a most delightful meeting last week with Mrs. Dexter E. Wadsworth of Presidents' hill as hostess and Mrs. Zenas S. Arnold as chairman of the program. The last literary meeting will be on April 26 with Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis of Spear street as the hostess for Mrs. Otho A. Hayward who is unable to have the club on account of illness in her home. The business meeting will be on May 3.

Doris Sampson of Dixwell avenue entertained the Katharyn Crane club this afternoon. The final meeting of the season is to be held May 8th with Mrs. E. L. Crane and a field day on May 22.

"The efforts of the club women of Vermont to get rid of the house fly are certainly well directed; and we know of few organizations that are in a better position to prosecute the work" says the Barre Times of that state. "It is to be hoped that the appeal which the federation has sent out will receive wide-spread attention, for there are some excellent suggestions outlined in it. To get rid of the breeding places of the flies is the first proposition which should come before the general public in the attack on the pest; and the efforts in this direction will be of no avail if there is not co-operation. Therefore, let all assist in the movement, by a little care and effort in their own province.

The Hospital Aid Association meets on April 25 with Mrs. Joseph A. Dasha of Washington street.

* * *

Monday club of Weymouth closed its season, April 15.

* * *

The Philergians of Braintree wound up their season Tuesday afternoon holding an election and social tea.

* * *

The Quincy Young Women's club has plans well under way for its annual gentlemen's night on April 27th, which also brings its series of meetings to a close for this season.

* * *

Quincy Alliance holds its annual meeting on Monday afternoon in the chapel of First church. As the elections are biennially there will be little business, so that a closing of the season's entertainments has been arranged with Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis in charge, a guarantee of a pleasant afternoon.

* * *

The Junior Friday club is to be entertained on Monday afternoon for its last literary meeting of the season by Mrs. Perry Lawton of Presidents hill instead of at the home of Mrs. Russell C. Low as scheduled on the program. Alexander Hamilton will be the subject of papers under the leadership of Mrs. Ernest D. Gourd of Needham. The business and closing meeting of the season on May 6th will be at the home of Miss Georgiana C. Lane.

* * *

The legislative committee of the Quincy Women's club Mrs. Wm. Ward Whitcher, chairman, has arranged a very attractive program for Tuesday afternoon, April 30, at 3 o'clock at the clubhouse when Mrs. Glendower Evans will lecture on the "Minimum Wage Question" and Mrs. Robert E. Park will give a ten minute outline of the Child Welfare Work now before the Legislature. There will be songs by Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell and at the close of the lecture a social hour with light refreshments. Mrs. Evans is an able and convincing speaker and all club members and friends are cordially invited to attend.

STATE FEDERATION NOTES.

By invitation of the Wellington club the annual meeting of Massachusetts state federation will be held in Templeton, during the first week in June. The official headquarters will be at the Templeton Inn.

Mrs. Philip Carpenter of New York is one of the candidates for the presidency of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and her name will be presented at the convention to be held in San Francisco, June 25. Mrs. Tod Helmuth is chairman of the New York committee which will manage Mrs. Carpenter's campaign. She was nominated by Sorosis. Another candidate is Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker of Texas. Both of these women visited Boston during the biennial convention in 1908.

The delegates to the biennial from Massachusetts will leave the South Terminal station, Boston, June 17, at 10 o'clock in the morning, for Denver, They will visit places of interest while there, going to Manitou, ascending Pike's Peak, driving in the Garden of the Gods and viewing other scenes. They will stop at Salt Lake City and will reach San Francisco, June 24. Four routes will be available for the return trip, all of which are scheduled to leave San Francisco on the evening of July 5.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The club season is fast drawing to a close only two more meetings being scheduled for the Quincy Women's club, that of April 23, a loan exhibit social by the Art Committee and on May 14 the annual meeting.

There was a largely attended meeting of the class in parliamentary law at the clubhouse Tuesday morning. Another meeting will be held this month on April 30, at 10.30 A. M.

Members are taking up the 1912-1913 membership tickets so rapidly that it looks as though few intended to drop out this year. The waiting list steadily grows longer but the prospect of becoming full members remains doubtful as the membership is limited to 350. Many hope there will be an enlargement if the waiting list continues to grow.

Mrs. John W. Sanborn, chairman of the Education committee has preparations well in hand for the annual children's festival at Quincy Music hall on April 27. May baskets are being made and the entertainment arranged for. There is great demand for tickets as usual and the hall will be taxed to accommodate.

A lecture is to be given at the clubhouse on Tuesday afternoon, April 30 at 2.30 by Mrs. Glendower Evans of Boston, subject: "The Minimum Wage." Mrs. Robert E. Park will also speak on "Child Welfare" and "Pensions for Mothers." The lectures will be preceded by a business session.

BROCKTON WOMAN'S CLUB.

The annual meeting of the Brockton Woman's club was held Monday afternoon. Among the interesting reports was that of Mrs. Folger, chairman of the Civics committee. She said:

"No publicity has been given to the first work taken up, that of endeavoring to influence the Bay State Street Railway Co., to establish a comfort station especially for women and children at or near Centre street. We have been given repeated assurance that negotiations were under way but up to the present time no definite results have appeared but I feel confident that this matter will be satisfactorily adjusted.

"Our president represented the club at a hearing given by the officials of this same company to representatives of the federated clubs when a plea was presented for less crowded street cars and for lower steps. We hope to see good results from that meeting. Some work has been done by the committee in regard to censoring the picture shows and we hope this matter will be vigorously pushed in the future.

"Our most complete work is that of teaching a domestic science class of 25 girl pupils of the 9th grades who do not expect to attend the High school. The Brockton school board very willingly granted the committee the use of the High school laboratory, and the services of Miss Lucy Studley were secured. Ten lessons make up the course.

"Much time and work has been spent upon theso-called 'curfew law,' endeavoring to secure support to have some ordinance passed to help protect our boys and girls. I hope within a few days there will be a meeting of prominent men and women of this city who will decide upon some rational measure to present to the ordinance committee which will be acceptable not only to it but to the city government as a whole.

"The last work started was the endeavor to establish a free dental clinic for the poorer children in the public schools. With much valuable assistance from Dr. Andrew F. Hall, we secured the pledges of 15 dentists to give free service.

"As representing the Woman's Club on that committee I will simply report that a request has been made for the appropriation of $2 000 as the scheme does not look feasible unless the city will help in the way of money."

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES

New Secretary Reports Having Had a Busy Two Weeks

A RESIGNATION

The first regular meeting of the Associated Charities since the coming of the general secretary was held at the Women's Club house Tuesday afternoon. The following letter was read:

Mrs. Wilson Marsh,
Clerk of the Associated Charities,
City of Quincy:
My Dear Mrs. Marsh:

I have, as you know, passed on to other hands the place which I have held in the Quincy schools. One by one I have been giving up the activities that have been mine in city and in county, in order that I may be free to take up my duties in another field, not later than June. I come now to the last office, and one from which I am very reluctant to part. My duty, however, is clear. So I tender herewith my resignation as President of the Associated Charities, to take effect not later than May 21st, 1912.

My decision in this matter, as I have suggested, has not been reached hastily and must be regarded as absolute. I make it so not for my own sake, but for the sake of the society. The one who is to follow me will have to make plans for next season, and it is very necessary that these plans be made before the summer vacation. The month of June will give little enough time for this.

In laying down the office with which you have honored me, I do not hereby sever my connection with the society. Whether you do or do not retain my name on your membership roll, you shall retain my interest and my affection, for these were given to be perpetual.

To all my fellow-workers, as loyal and congenial a band of workers as man has ever known, I offer the full measure of my appreciation, an appreciation too deep for words.

Most respectfully and sincerely yours
James D. Howlett.

Quincy, April 16, 1912.

The Association upon motion of Rupert F. Claflin accepted with great regret the resignation of Mr Howlett, with deep appreciation of his interest in and services to the association. An executive committee was appointed, a part of its duties being to secure a new president.

Miss Purchase, the new secretary, reported a busy two weeks, having to make over 45 calls. Has written over 50 letters and had the needs of 10 families referred to her, involving problems of interim and because of accident, tuberculosis, care of children, support of widows, etc., etc. These were referred to her by different agencies, societies and individuals She told the Association that she stands ready to help when called upon and has the following form prepared for distribution but does not visit any family unless asked to do so by some responsible organization or person:

Please mail this card or telephone to Associated Charities, 148 Goffe street, Women's Club House, Quincy, Mass.

When appealed to for assistance or when needy families are called to your attention Prompt investigation will be made, relief immediately provided when necessary, and a report returned. All information confidential.

Address.
Date.

She is willing to investigate for other societies and give all advice and assistance possible to help them continue their care of families in which they may be interested.

The meeting adjourned to visit the Associated Charities office in the Women's clubhouse which is most attractive. It is hoped that the telephone may soon be installed and that the office may be of more and more service to the people of Quincy. Miss Purchase has the assistance of two volunteer workers, one a stenographer, two days in the week. Let us co-operate in making this a center of social service to our city.

LADIES' NIGHT.

In response to invitations a goodly number of the townspeople gathered at the annual ladies' night of the men's club of the South Braintree M. E. church Tuesday evening. The affair was held in the church and was a most enjoyable function from start to finish. The auditorium was bright with the gowns of the ladies while potted plants furnished by E. T. Newcomb lent a pleasing effect to the scene.

In the receiving line were president of the club, I. Wendell Gammons and Mrs. Gammons, the pastor of the church Rev. Archibald Lowell Ryan and Mrs. Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Snow, William F. Rodgers, Mr. C E. Thomas and Miss Florence Parkhurst. During the reception and throughout the evening delightful music was furnished by Jones' five piece orchestra of Boston, adding much to the pleasure of the occasion.

Henry T. Cushman was master of ceremonies and announced the various numbers of the program. After an opening prayer by the pastor, a delightful vocal solo was rendered by that sweet singer, Mrs. Fred A. Swallow. Rev. Mr. Ryan then gave a short address, bright, witty and containing many jokes, several of them on himself, all of which seemed to please the audience immensely. There was another fine solo by Mrs. Swallow and then an address by Mr. I. W. Gammons. His remarks were many and varied and his "little note book" so voluminous as to necessitate laying it on the pulpit. From this adantage point the portly president looked quite ministerial and the humorous gems which he read from the aforesaid note book kept his auditors in roars of laughter.

As a fitting ending of the evening, delicious ice cream and cake were served and a social hour was enjoyed The club is to be congratulated on the success of its ladies' night for the fair sex was out in force and all present declared it a most delightful evening Miss Florence Rogers as accompanceptably at the piano as accompanist to Mrs. Swallow.

The following gentlemen acted as ushers; Stephen B. Gammons, William D. Dyer, Ralph L. Wiggin, George O. MacDonald and James W. Dickinson.

The committee of arangements: Henry T. Cushman, James R. Dickinson, George O. MacDonald, A. H. Clark, C. W. Woodruff and I. Wendell Gammons.

Vastness of the Ocean.

To stow away the contents of the Pacific ocean it would be necessary to fill a tank one mile long, one mile wide, and one mile deep every day for 440 years. The figures of the other oceans are in the same startling proportions. It would take all the sea water in the world 2,000,000 years to flow over Niagara.

THE TITANIC DISASTER

lowed for the boat crews and the other did not was not made clear. There is no absolute certainty here as to how many souls were on the Titanic when she hurled herself against a giant berg. The first estimate of the line here was 2180, the London offices estimate 2385, and an estimate here yesterday was 2210, made up of 325 first cabin, 235 second cabin, 710 steerage and 890 crew.

With the lowest total and the highest list of saved there would be 1306 lost, and with the highest of both, 1500. But no comparison can lessen the dreadful story of broken families, of partings sadder than the imagination can grasp of weak and suffering women wrenched cruelly from dear ones, whose life was a matter of hours. Perhaps it was easier to die than to live in that short space of time, while the Titanic staggered in her shroud of fog.

Captain Warned of Peril

Her veteran captain, E. J. Smith, knew the peril that lay ahead of him along the westerly track of steamships. Only a few hours before the Titanic shattered her tremendous bulk, the Hamburg-American liner Amerika wirelessed to the Titanic that there were two large icebergs a little east by south of the place where the White Star colossus was finally in collision. That was on Sunday.

Very shortly after receiving the news the Titanic herself relayed it to a land station from which the hydrographic office heard of it. And then, there seems little reason to doubt, the Titanic plunged onward and hurled herself against these very bergs.

A shadowy hint of what followed then has come from that area of waters that are ruled by fog and frost. The wireless, modern miracle as it is, could not achieve the impossible and snatch toward the Titanic in time to save her people the greyhounds that were hundreds of miles away. It has not recounted clearly and faithfully the episodes of the terrible four hours while the great ship, struck from happiness and peace to horror and despair, lay stricken among the groaning bergs.

Captain at Post of Duty

The story of the wireless has been maddening snatches, bulletins which skimmed the top of surmise a few figures, some conjectures, and finally an ugly picture of a green sea strewn with wreckage and imperilled by grinding icebergs. But between the flashes of the Marconigrams and with the stories of the captains who came too late, something of the tragedy of the Titanic can be written.

While the greatest of all ships was driving steadily westward in the night toward a country that was awaiting her with all of that country's interest in a fine new thing, Captain Smith was on the lofty bridge. There can hardly be a doubt of that, for shipmasters in dangerous seas, and few stretches of ocean are more trying at this season of the year to navigators than the waters that run between Cape Race and Cape Sable, remain on watch night and day, foregoing rest for many hours at a stretch.

Going at Great Speed

It seems to be clear that the Titanic was running at great speed, or else the shock of the collision could hardly have crushed a vessel that was regarded as unsinkable by her builders and by the captain himself. Perhaps, indeed probably, the fog played its greatest devil's trick, lifting now, clearing now, always intangible, treacherous, the blanket of invisible evil. Some such shroud must have descended with little warning upon the Titanic and blinded her to the fate just ahead. Perhaps a whim of the polar currents, whose pulse has never been gauged by seafarers with absolute accuracy, drifted the great berg squarely in the Titanic's path.

The wireless has told of the bitter cold in the air, the accompaniment always of the ice packs that tear loose from the Arctic glaciers and sag southward with the currents. But no warning chill served to deflect the ship from her course. She strove ahead as destiny pointed her, and no invention of man or interference of providence swerved her from a fatal course. Her ears, the submerged telephones placed on either side of the vessel just below the water line to tattle of the proximity of solid objects near and distant, gave no warning in time. And it happened swiftly that she went headlong into icy derelicts that were more substantial than the work of man's hand—vast bulks of ice—there to make a mockery of human ingenuity.

NOTABLE PASSENGER LIST

Men Prominent In the Public Eye May Have Been Lost

It was indeed a notable passenger list that the Titanic carried. Men and women whose names are familiar the world over, statesmen, captains of industry, bankers and publicists of renown were aboard the ill-fated steamship. Below are named some of the well-known passengers. Whether they are dead or alive is not yet definitely determined.

LIFE SAVING EQUIPMENT

Ships Not Required to Have Boats Enough For All on Board

Washington, April 17.—Statistical information of the life saving apparatus of the Olympic, sister ship of the Titanic, was given out by the bureau of inspection of steam vessels. Figures of the Titanic are not available, but as the two ships are almost identical in size, it is not likely that their life saving equipment materially differs.

The Olympic has sixteen lifeboats and four rafts calculated to accommodate 1171 people. This means about one-third of the total number of passengers and crew together, which is 3447, can be accommodated. It was stated at the bureau of inspection that no ship is required to have sufficient boat room to accommodate its complete passenger and crew list.

The Olympic carries 3455 life preservers and forty-eight life buoys and these equipments are made in compliance with the regulations of the British board of trade. The United States bureau has no power except to see that each steamship meets the requirements of its home government.

LOSSES ARE STAGGERING

Insurance Companies Stand to Lose Several Millions of Dollars

London, April 17.—Whether the underwriters that carried policies on the ill-fated Titanic will be able to meet their obligatons will not be known for several days. The losses are staggering, the greatest in the history of marine insurance.

Just how large they are cannot be definitely stated for some time, but in addition to vessel, cargo and contents of her strong box there was a big registered mail shipment, and the women passengers in the first cabin carried with them many thousands of dollars' worth of precious jewelry. All this is now more than two miles below the surface of the ocean.

All of the insurance that the White Star people could have written on this steamer was $3,700,000, and they carried some $750,000 of it themselves. They had tried to write policies for $5,000,000, but the continental and British markets could not carry that amount.

There was a large consignment of diamonds on board, estimated at from $2,500,000 to $5,000,000, which is a total loss and is covered by insurance. There was also a large quantity of bonds, but the numbers and value of these are known and they can be replaced.

The underwriters will also have to pay enormous sums on personal baggage. One woman on board carried an insurance policy of $600,000 on a collection of pearls, and nearly every society woman there had her jewels that she was carrying insured.

The actual value of the Titanic is in dispute. The company said at the time she was launched that when she went into commission she would represent $12,000,000. Other men said this was too great a figure, but it seems certain that the vessel and furnishings must have represented $9,000,000.

GILMORE PLEADS NOLO

Maine's Ex-State Treasurer Is Fined $1025 For Misuse of Money

Augusta, Me., April 17.—Ex-State Treasurer Pascal P. Gilmore of Bucksport paid a fine of $1025 in court, ending the prosecution against him for misuse of fundss while state treasurer between the years 1907 and 1911.

Indictments were recently returned against him on fifteen counts, alleging misuse of funds amounting to $10,575. All but one of the counts against him were dropped. The one charge pressed alleged the misuse of $1025 by using that amount of money in his own business and depositing a personal check as security.

The fine imposed is a forfeit of the amount in question. Gilmore pleaded nolo contendere.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

ORANGE MARMALADE.

NOW that oranges are inexpensive no cupboard should be without a supply of orange marmalade.

English Orange Marmalade.—Allow for each orange used a half pound of sugar, a pint of water and the peel of one lemon to six oranges.

Peel and slice the oranges thinly, taking out the seeds. Chop the lemon peel and place it in a saucepan with the sliced oranges and a little water. Let these stand all night. Next day boil the oranges for five hours. Then put in the sugar and boil for an hour longer. When cold put away in air tight jars.

A Delicious Preserve.

Dark Marmalade.—If you like a dark colored marmalade try the following: Weigh the oranges to be used. For every pound of the fruit allow three-fourths of a pound of sugar. The grated rind and juice of a lemon should be used for every five oranges. Take the skin off the oranges in quarters. Boil it until tender. Then drain and leave it to cool. Take the seeds out of the oranges and scrape as much of the pith from the skin as possible. Boil the peel with sugar, and when cool take the pith away and chop coarsely. Add this to the orange pulp and boil until it is as thick and dark as you like.

Clear Marmalade.—Slice twelve oranges and two lemons, taking out all the seeds. For each pound of fruit pour over the oranges and lemons three pints of cold water. Let it stand on the oranges twelve hours, then boil till tender. Allow this to stand till next day, then weigh it and to each pound allow one and a quarter pounds of sugar. Boil the whole till it jellies and is transparent. Meanwhile the marmalade must be stirred. Pour into pots and cover at once.

A Cheap Marmalade.

Mock Orange Marmalade.—A cheap marmalade may be made with orange peel. Save it whenever oranges are served. When peel from two or three dozen oranges accumulates boil until tender. Scrape off the white pith. Then chop the peel fine and put it in an enameled saucepan, covering with water. Add a cupful of sugar to a cupful of peel, boil and put aside.

Peel some rhubarb and cut into small pieces. Allow a half pound of sugar to a pound of the rhubarb. Put into a saucepan or preserving kettle and let the rhubarb stand overnight with the sugar. This is to extract the juice. Strain off the juice and add the cooked orange peel to it, using two to four pounds of the rhubarb to a quart of the orange.

HOW TO SERVE TRIPE.

TRIPE contains much that is nutritious and can be easily digested Physicians often recommend it for invalids.

Tripe is really the stomach tissue of the ruminating animals.

Before cooking scald the tripe and loosen the inside coating so that it may be scraped off unless it has already been taken away.

Tripe must be well washed in boiling water; half a dozen baths are not too many. Then soak it in clear cold water overnight. The next day give it another scraping and wash. When it is white and absolutely clean it is ready for cooking.

A Delicious Soup.

Tripe Soup.—Take half a pound of well cleaned tripe, three pints of water, a turnip, carrot, two onions, some chopped parsley, a pint of sweet milk and two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch and any herbs preferred for flavoring. Scald the tripe and cut it into small pieces. Then set it on to boil in cold water with the herbs.

Chop the vegetables into small pieces, add to the tripe and let them boil together for an hour and a half.

Now take the cornstarch and make a paste of it with a little cold water. Stir it into the soup and let the saucepan remain on the stove for ten minutes. Then add the chopped parsley and season to taste.

A Small Stew.

Tripe Stew.—Take half a pound of well cleaned and blanched tripe, an onion, a teaspoonful of flour, a pint of milk and a sprig of parsley.

Cut the tripe into small pieces and put it in a saucepan together with milk, onion and herbs. Let it simmer for a couple of hours. Make a paste of the flour with cold milk and stir it into the stew. Season to taste and serve hot.

Baked Tripe Roll.—Take a piece of cleaned and blanched tripe large enough to fold over and make a stuffing with breadcrumbs, sage and chopped onions.

Put a layer of this on the tripe and roll it up. Then sew the edge so the stuffing will not come out.

Put into a baking pan with a few slices of bacon on top of the tripe. Bake for about an hour. Serve on a hot dish with brown gravy.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barony. The place is to be sold, and its history and that of the owners, the Quintards, is the subject of discussion by Jonathan Crenshaw, a business man, a stranger known as Bladen, and Bob Yancy, a farmer, when Hannibal Wayne Hazard, a mysterious child of the old southern family, makes his appearance. Yancy tells how he adopted the boy.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Judge Names His Second.

"Price—" began Mahaffy. They were back in Raleigh in the room the judge called his office, and this was Mahaffy's first opportunity to ease his mind on the subject of the duel, as they had only just parted from Yancy and Cavendish, who had stopped at one of the stores to make certain purchases for the raft.

"Not a word, Solomon—it had to come. I am going to kill him. I shall feel better then."

"What if he kills you?" demanded

"It Will Be Quite Informal, the Code Is Scarcely Applicable."

Mahaffy harshly. The judge shrugged his shoulders.

"That is as it may be."

"Have you forgotten your grandson?" Mahaffy's voice was still harsh and rasping.

"I regard my meeting with Fentress as nothing less than a sacred duty to him."

"We know no more than we did this morning," said Mahaffy. "You are mixing up all sorts of side issues with what should be your real purpose."

"Not at all, Solomon—not at all! I look upon my grandson's speedy recovery as an assured fact. Fentress dare not hold him. He knows he is run to earth at last."

"Price—"

"No, Solomon—no, my friend, we will not speak of it again. You will go back to Belle Plain with Yancy and Cavendish; you must represent me there. We have as good as found Hannibal, but we must be active in Miss Malroy's behalf. For us that has an important bearing on the future, and since I cannot, you must be at Belle Plain when Carrington arrives with his pack of dogs. Give him the advantage of your sound and mature judgment, Solomon; don't let any false modesty keep you in the background.

"Who's going to second you?" snapped Mahaffy.

The judge was a picture of indifference.

"It will be quite informal, the code is scarcely applicable; I merely intend to remove him because he is not fit to live."

"At sun-up!" muttered Mahaffy.

"I intend to start one day right even if I never live to begin another," said the judge, a sudden fierce light flashing from his eyes. "I feel that this is the turning point in my career, Solomon!" he went on. "The beginning of great things! But I shall take no chances with the future; I shall prepare for every possible contingency. I am going to make you and Yancy my grandson's guardians. There's a hundred thousand acres of land hereabout that must come to him. I shall outline in writing the legal steps to be taken to substantiate his claims. Also he will inherit largely from me at my death."

Something very like laughter escaped from Mahaffy's lips.

"There you go, Solomon, with your inopportune mirth! What in God's name have I if I haven't hope? Take that from me and what would I be? Why, the very fate I have been fighting off with tooth and nail would overwhelm me. I'd sink into unimportance—my unparalleled misfortunes would degrade me to a level with the commonest! No, sir, I've never been without hope, and though I've fallen I've always got up. What Fentress has is based on money he stole from me. By God, the days of his profit-taking are at an end! I am going to strip him. And even if I don't live to enjoy what's mine, my grandson shall! He shall wear velvet and a lace collar and ride his pony yet, by God, as a gentleman's grandson should!"

"It sounds well, Price, but where's the money coming from to push a lawsuit?"

The judge waved this aside.

"The means will be found, Solomon. Our horizon is lifting—I can see it lift! Don't drag me back from the portal of hope! We'll drink the stuff that comes across the water; I'll warm the cockles of your heart with imported brandy. I carry twenty years' hunger and thirst under my wes-coat, and I'll feed and drink like a gentleman yet!" The judge smacked his lips in an ecstacy of enjoyment, and dropping down before the table which served him as a desk, seized a pen.

"It's good enough to think about, Price," admitted Mahaffy grudgingly. "It's better to do; and if anything happens to me the papers I am going to leave will tell you how it's to be done. Man, there's a million of money in sight, and we've got to get it and spend it and enjoy it! None of your swinish thrift for me, but life on a big scale—company, and feasting, and refined surroundings!"

"And you are going to meet Fentress in the morning?" asked Mahaffy. "I suppose there's no way of avoiding that?"

"Avoiding it?" almost shouted the judge. "For what have I been living? I shall meet him, let the consequences be what they may. Tonight when I have reduced certain facts to writing I shall join you at Belle Plain. The strange and melancholy history of my life I shall place in your hands for safe keeping. In the morning I can be driven back to Boggs'."

"And you will go there without a second?"

"If necessary; yes."

"I declare, Price, you are hardly fitted to be at large! Why, you act as if you were tired of life! There's Yancy—there's Cavendish!"

The judge gave him an indulgent but superior smile.

"Two very worthy men, but I go to Boggs' attended by a gentleman or I go there alone. I am aware of your prejudices, Solomon; otherwise I might ask this favor of you."

Mr. Mahaffy snorted loudly and turned to the door, for Yancy and Cavendish were now approaching the house, the latter with a meal sack slung over his shoulder.

"Here, Solomon, take one of my pistols," urged the judge hastily. "You may need it at Belle Plain. Good by, and God bless you!"

CHAPTER XXVII.

Bess Leads to Betty.

Just where he had parted from Ware, Carrington sat his horse, his brows knit and his eyes turned in the direction of the path. He was on his way to a plantation below Birard, the owner of which had recently imported a pack of bloodhounds; but this unexpected encounter with Ware had affected him strangely. He still heard Tom's stammering speech, he was still seeing his ghastly face, and he had come upon him with startling suddenness. He had chanced to look back over his shoulder and when he faced about there had been the planter within a hundred yards of him.

Presently Carrington's glance ceased to follow the windings of the path. He stared down at the gray dust and saw the trail left by Hues and his party. For a moment he hesitated; if the dogs were to be used with any hope of success he had no time to spare, and this was the merest suspicion, illogical conjecture, based on nothing beyond his distrust of Ware. In the end he sprang from the saddle, and leading his horse into the woods, tied it to a sapling.

A hurried investigation told him that five men had ridden in and out of that path. Of the five, all coming from the south, four had turned south again, but the fifth man—Ware, in other words—had gone north. He weighed the possible significance of these facts.

"I am only wasting time!" he confessed reluctantly, and was on the point of turning away, when, on the very edge of the road and just where the dust yielded to the hard clay of the path, his glance lighted on the print of a small and daintily shod foot. The throbbing of his heart quickened curiously.

"Betty!" The word leaped from his lips.

SHOT IN BROAD DAYLIGHT

Police Now Think Marsh Was Murdered Where Body Was Found

Lynn, Mass., April 17.—Careful weighing of the facts in their possession has convinced the Lynn police that instead of being slain while in an automobile, George E. Marsh, the wealthy soap manufacturer, was shot down after he had clambered over the state boulevard fence to the spot where his body was discovered, and they fix the time as between 3:50 and 4:50 Thursday afternoon.

No clue has been gained as to the present whereabouts of William A. Dorr. The Lynn police admit that he has covered his tracks well, but they have not given up hope of finding him.

The police theory is that the murderer wheeled his automobile close to the boulevard fence after he or a gust of wind had flicked Marsh's hat from his head over the railing, and that as the latter straightened up when he recovered the headgear the shooting began.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

—"You will never find a busy man meddling with other people's business, nor one who is well versed in general science. A well stored mind has not the room for gossip nor has the mind of a busy man space for the need of tale bearing. Education and business preoccupy and lift humanity above such low and debasing depravity. It is the idler who becomes the gossip peddler. His brain is the veritable workshop of the devil. Backbiting, slandering, gossiping, and lying are not members of busy, intelligent minds."—Wellesley Townsman.

—Over $50,000 in duty were collected recently at New York on 6,000 tons of potatoes, and for the past few weeks the movement of potatoes to this country from abroad has been very extensive. Boston alone has received nearly one million bushels of this staple, and on account of the crop shortage in this country they found a ready sale. It is not often that potatoes have to be imported, and the presence of a protective tariff does not seem necessary. The home producer certainly does not need protection at this time—Old Colony Memorial.

TO FORM MEN'S CLUB.

A dozen or more men of First church met Tuesday evening in the chapel to niscuss the matter of organizing a men's club. There was much enthusiasm for it. Rev. A. L. Hudson pastor of the church was prepared with data from many similar clubs and the facts presented appealed to those present.

The men of the church will probably be invited to meet at an early date to form a First Church Men's club, to organize this spring so as to be ready for meetings next fall. The club will be similar to other clubs in the city, holding monthly meetings, with a supper, speakers, etc., and will doubtless prove popular in the social life of this old church.

—A daily steamboat service between this country and Europe is the latest scheme in shipping circles.

COMING EVENTS CALENDAR.

Under this heading will be published forthcoming entertainments in the city. A one-line announcement will be inserted free of charge, but if any committee desires more publicity as to place, hour, date, admission, etc., it will be inserted at 25 cents per line each insertion. Look the list over, and if your entertainment is not included, send it in.

GRANITE CUTTERS

Duncan, the great labor leader proceeded to deliver his eloquent and powerful address, which consumed a period of forty minutes. In his exordium, Mr. Gompers stated that he esteemed it a pleasure to be present at the convention, but regretted that he felt at a loss to speak with effect upon organized labor, owing to the fact that the Granite Cutters were so well organized. Mr. Gompers easily commanded the attention of his hearers and among other things said:

"I firmly believe that in all our dealings we should have recourse to facts and because such, may at times apply to certain individuals is no reason why we should ignore facts. Your organization has always had in its secretary-treasurer, a man who is in himself an executive head, who is ready at all times to carry out any problem in the interest of his fellow associates.

"I cannot let this occasion go by without paying my respects to "Tom" Murch, than whom a better man never lived. Always desirous of helping his fellow citizens, never relinquishing any worthy cause which he had espoused, he laid the foundation of this great structure which you have finally built. And I must also say that our heartiest thanks should be showered upon "Joe" Dyer, another man who always did the best he possibily could."

Referring his remarks to chairman Duncan, president Gompers added "I would not utter one word concerning the next man whom I am about to make mention of, had he not been opposed by men in his own organization whose views and sentiments were far different than his own. You cannot fail to recognize his sterling qualities and his worth alone has forced us to acknowledge that ability, persistency, sincerity and loyalty are to be found in no man in greater measure than they are in your present General Secretary "Jim" Duncan. When he was elected vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, he did not represent the Granite Cutters, except as he represented his respective branch at the Baltimore convention. That council elected him over a large field of delegates who represented international unions. He was elected by unanimous vote as a delegate to the convention at Budapest, Germany, last year, on the occasion of the international secretariat. These things don't count ordinarily for they are results of proper recognition exercised by fellow workmen who see in such a man an ideal leader. For four months he performed all the duties and functions of the president while the latter was ill and during that time he proved himself an able and efficient head. None know him better than you, but I take second place to no man in declaring that a man never showed himself possessed of a thorough knowledge of his work or truer to his trust and the worth placed in him than has 'Jim Duncan."

Continuing at length upon the conditions of the day, Mr. Gompers declared that "men of stout hearts and big minds must deal with the problems of the day." Confining his remarks to the delegates, the speaker said, "You have shown wonderful self control. That you have continued without frequent convention is an evidence of this fact and the progress that you have made thus far will go a long way in making for the proper democratization of social conditions, regardless of their limitations."

Mr. Gompers said that he believed 32 years was too long a period to go without a convention and advocated that one be held at least every ten years. He touched briefly upon dues in the organization of the effect an increase in them would have, saying, "Remember that any money you may have contributed from time to time had aided a hundred fold in the shaping of wages, employment and hour of employment for working men The trades' unions look after the best interest of the toiling masses, its principles respond to every meritorious cause, making men of cowards and even heroes of brave men. You have done wonders in this time of natural miracles, conflicting as this statement may be seen. We must do our share in the great common uplift in order to bring about the firm establishment of freedom, liberty, union and brotherhood." Mr. Gompers was loudly applauded at the conclusion of his remarks.

The next speaker was Carl Legien, the German Labor leader. Herr Legien delivered his adress in German, owing to the facttha t he is unable to speak English. His remarks took about fifteen minutes. The European was given thunderous applause at the beginning and end of his speech and was also presented with delegate's badge by Chairman Duncan. Fololwing the remarks in German, Herr Legein's secretary arose and gave the contents of the speech in Engglish. In part it was as follows "I have come here for the purpose of studying the methods and tactics of America labor organiaztions and am glad on my second day that I can find nowhere no better material than this present convention. It is my aim to make a thorough survey of all details and in this I shall use my greatest efforts, in order to obtain a thorough knowledge of labor dealings in the United States and thus be able to make a comparison o fthem with those in my own country. The light of labor organiaztions is going on in the whole world and the great obstacles are being daily encountered."

The German leader then went on to pay a tribute to Mr. Gompers and Mr. Duncan, whom he thanked for coming to the boat which conveyed him from Europe, in order that he might safely land in the United States. Herr Legien then spoke of the ships of Europe and aded that the greatest precautions are taken by those in charge oc crafts for the preservation of human safety and life and described any lack on the part of those who would not be alert to the welfare of humanity. Continuing he said "Although the difficulties to be met with by labor organizations are greater in this country than in Europe, and although conditions as a whole are different, the aim and goal of labor organizations are the same throughout the world. Labor organizations ought to have great influence and their greatest good can often be accomplished through proper legislation. In Germany we have 110 members of the labor party out of 397 deputies. No law is too good for the working people."

He congratulated Americans in having the eight hour law and said that Granite Cutters in Germany enjoy the same privilege. Concluding he said "All labor organizations in Germany feel inclined towards you in the same manner as you do toward them and it affords me great pleasure to draw my remarks to a close by conveying to you the best wishes of success from the laboring men of my own country."

Chairman Duncan then called upon Albert Baumeister to make a few remarks and presented him with a badge. He too was given a great ovation. He said that he was able to converse in seven languages. He talked of the conditions in Europe and American magazines and literature dealing with labor movements and had acquired practically all his knowledge of labor organizations from them. He said that greater difficulties were to be met with in this country than in Europe and congratulated the Granite Cutters on their splendid organization. He spoke of the different nationalities in New York and the terrible state of conditions that had come under his observation while in that ciyt and added that the proper movement on the part of labor men would eventually bring a stop to employees dissimulating conditions and bringing foreigners into this country to take the place of the skilled workman. He also said that he hoped the German labor organizations would soon attain the standard set up in this country and concluded by saying that his visit in company with Herr Legien was bound to be productive of great good.

William O'Brient, an ex-sheriff of New York city and a delegate to the convention was given the floor when the speaker concluded. He thanked the distinguished guests for coming to what he termed an "isolated spot where their was no chance to return the favor by serving the usual refreshment that attended a convention. He deplored the lack of dryness and other unfavorable obstacles noticeable in this city and then moved that a rising vote of thanks be given to the guests. The motion was adopted before chairman Duncan had a chance to put it to a vote. The gathering broke up shortly before noon and repaired to the First Church, where the photographer took a picture of all the delegates and guests. After luncheon the convention resumed to discuss the by-laws and the meeting adjourned shortly before three o'clock.

Longevity Calculations.

According to Buffon, the life of man "can" last six times as long as it takes him to become fully developed; according to Bacon and Hufland, eight times as long. Now, since man is not considered in the anatomical sense completely mature before the twenty-fifth year of age, his life, according to the last named two authorities, "could" last 200 years. But, as a matter of fact, outside the Bible, there is no record whatever of such long lives. Among the extraordinary cases of longevity on record and well attested is that of the Englishman, Thomas Parr, who lived happily at Shropshire to the age of 152 years. The celebrated Harvey, who dissected him after death, found his body in excellent condition, and stated that had it not been for his intemperance he might have lived much longer. A census taken under Emperor Vespassin showed in the relatively small territory of Italy alone 80 persons over 100 years old, and among these are two had reached the age of 140. The census of the United States for 1900 shows 3,981 centenarians, and that for 1910 3,504 (males 1,271, females, 2,333). These figures have only a dubious value, and merely because the vanity of some old people causes them to claim their age much higher than it really is, but for the fact that the majority of these centenarians are ignorant persons (2,533 negroes, 111 Indians and three Mongolians), whose statements as to their ages cannot be relied upon. —Christian Herald.

UNIVERSALIST MISSIONARY WOMEN'S DISTRICT MEETING

Address on "The Problem of the Immigrant" by Mrs. Leslie Hayford at Quincy Church

Subject One in Which Churches Should Take Moral Interest

The third district of the Woman's Universalist Missionary society held a meeting at the Universalist church, Wednesday afternoon, under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary society connected with the church.

Mrs. Thomas A. Addison president welcomed the guests saying: "It is my pleasure to extend the cordial greetings of the Missionary Circle of this church, to the friends of our city churches, who are present, to the speakers, who have come with their messages of instruction and to our associate workers in the cause."

Mrs. Eben Prescott, vice president of the third district presided at the meeting, and in response for the guests said: "You all know this is my first year as vice president. I am much interested in missionary work. We are all endeavoring faithfully and earnestly to increase this noble cause and we have every reason to be grateful."

After a solo, by Mrs. Edith Carey Page, "My Reedeemer and My Lord" by Dudley Buck, Mrs. Prescott introduced Mrs. Leslie Hayford of Brookline, who spoke upon "The problem of the Immigrant." Mrs. Hayford said in part:

"The subject I am to speak upon this afternoon, the problem of the immigrant is a most important one, and one in which churches, colleges, clubs, civic organizations, settlements and individuals should take a moral and spiritual interest. I feel it a privilege to say a word in their behalf and we should think seriously of this problem. It demands the special treatment of the church, and the public is called upon to exert itself. It is not alone the work of Christian men and women, it takes in all classes. The Jews are doing a great and good work among their own people.

"If you were to stand in your own home and watch a vast procession pass in file 10,000 every day, men women and children, for eighty-seven days, almost three months that line would pass without ceasing, before all who entered this country only last year had gone by. HEARING ON BOSTON BILL

Is Advocated by Real Estate Exchange. Many Favor

SOME OPPOSITION

Ex-Mayor John O. Hall, secretary of the Quincy Board of Trade was among those to speak in favor of the Massachusetts Real Exchange bill for a Greater Boston at the hearing Wednesday before the legislative committee on Metropolitan Affairs. There was some opposition to the bill.

Pres. John J. Martin of the Real Estate Exchange said that the area covered by the bill includes 426 square miles, a population of 1,500,000, and a valuation of about $2,500,000,000. He said that the proponents did not wish to affect the autonomy of any city or town. The Exchange he explained, does not favor annexation.

Chairman Washburn of the Legislative committee of the Exchange gave reasons why the bill should become law. It would give Boston the rank of fourth city in the country and 10th among the cities of the world The movement in connection with the development of the port, would attract merchants throughout the world, and there would be greater activity in real estate, manufacturing and general business.

Boston, as the metropolis of New England, would not only gain, but the State and New England, too, would be benefited. The combination of municipal functions would tend to closer relations of cities and towns and by confederating them there would be only one unit of control.

The bill, he said, provides that these ends could be achieved without asking the Legislation to assume responsibility of action and seeks to have the Legislature submit questions to the people who will rule.

Sec. Briggs of the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange, appearing as an individual, said that, to the satisfaction of the district assembly, there has been a combination of intersts in the Park, Sewerage and Water Departments, and much the same plan can be adopted for the Police and Fire Departments.

George W. R. Harriman of Malden said he believed strongly in the need of one municipality to embrace this great area.

Henry C. Long said this is the last great community in the world that is disorganized and that this bill only picks up the threads to perfect an organization too long delayed.

Ex-Mayor Byron B. Johnson of Waltham called the bill the "most stupendous humbug that this year of 1912 has evolved."

"The bill," he continued, "supersedes the powers of Selectmen, highway surveyors and County Commissioners and enables the board to wipe out all by-laws or ordinances without appeal."

City Solicitor Arthur G. Wadleigh also opposed the bill in behalf of the Municipal Council of Lynn. Lynn, he said, is just now much more interested in making a greater Lynn than contributing to make Boston a city of 1,500,000. Her product is known the world over as the Lynn shoe, and he didn't think it would improve its sales any to have that changed to the product of Greater Boston or the city of Boston.

"Moreover," he asked, "what right has the town of Weston to say by its vote that the city of Lynn shall be annexed to Boston?"

He opposed what he called the ripper referendum on this bill, a referendum that has made Pittsburg infamous.

Finance Commissioner Frank A. Turnball of Lynn, Atty. Thomas L. Buttimer of Hull, Samuel C Bennett of Weston, town counsel and others opposed the bill.

Chairman Washburn of the Legislative committee of the Exchange, closing for the bill, said that if this is all the opposition, the duty of the committee is plain. The hearing was closed.

BANQUET OF GRANITE MEN

But little business was done Wednesday morning at the Granite Cutter's convention as nearly the whole morning was devoted to the reception of the two great labor leaders, Samuel Gompers and Herr Legein. These two guests took their departure on the 12.04 train. The convention convened again at 1 o'clock and the afternoon was given up by the several committees in the consideration of the sections of the constitution. Wednesday evening was the regular meeting night of Quincy branch of the union and many of the delegates were in attendance at the meeting.

During the afternoon Wednesday those whose duties did not confine them to the convention, paid some of the quarries a visit of inspection. Tonight the delegates will be entertained at a banquet given by the three Quincy branches. The banquet will be served at Hibernian hall and a pleasant evening is promised. Tomorrow being a holiday there will be but little business done, but the day will probably be given up to sight seeing.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

NOTICE!

Friday, April 19th, being a legal holiday the office of the QUINCY DAILY LEDGER will be closed all day.

The WEEKLY PATRIOT will be published Thursday night, and the BRAINTREE OBSERVER as usual on Saturday morning.

Contributors are requested to get their copy in early.

So much waste paper and other litter is blowing about the streets that they must seem very homelike to some people.

Our fathers fought, bled, and died to found the republic, but we are too indifferent to walk half a mile on caucus night to save it.

If President Taft wants to know what to say to Senator Lodge about Magdalena bay, the newspapers have kindly saved him the trouble of looking it up.

The big vote that Roosevelt is getting signifies how deeply the Republican masses rebel at the alliance the administration made with Aldrich and Cannon in passing a tariff bill.

One of the great names in American history will be chosen for the new German liner. We suggest Hans Wagner, which would be complimentary and appropriate to both ends of the line.

Mayor Shank of Indianapolis pitched a potato over the plate to open the season. This may be all right, but if they get to playing ball with tomatoes, our best girl can't wear light dresses to the games.

IRISH HOME RULE.

There are some lessons from popular government in the United States that the English conservatives will be exceedingly wise to learn and apply in dealing with the Irish home rule question, now before Parliament.

One is that the less self-control is given to a people, the fiercer the red flag of revolution waves. In Germany for instance, the control of the government is centralized in an autocracy, and great and growing cities are almost ignored in the parliamentary representation.

The result is that the Socialists cast about a third of the total vote at the polls, and control a corresponding force in the Reichstag.

In our country, which is both a republic and a democracy, the result of giving the people the power of self government is that we have but one Socialist member in our Congress.

Politics makes strange bed fellows and time brings many changes. Once England drove woolen manufacturers out of Ireland, by forfeiting the vessels and cargo in which these goods were exported, and fining the manufacturers 500 English pounds. A host of such wrongs culminated in the bitter hostility between the English governing class and the Irish Nationalists.

And yet today this same English governing class would find in the loyalty of the Irishman their securest defence against the revolutionary spirit of the times, could they but see it. Socialism is advancing with great rapidity in England, Scotland, and Wales, but it is almost unknown among the Roman Catholic Irishmen.

Men and women are no longer hanged for the wearing of the green. John Dillon has said that Ireland has gained more in the past ten years than in the previous two hundred, due largely to more liberal land legislation.

England has enormously strengthened its position in South Africa by granting a large measure of self-government to the Boers. Just as long as a similar measure of justice and common sense is denied to its next door neighbor, just so long the British empire is denied the advantage it might gain from the loyal friendship of the Irishman.

ATTENDING PRIMARIES.

The remark was once made to us by a citizen, that he had not attended a caucus of his party for ten years. The last time he went, he said, he was so disgusted with the cut and dried way the nominations were put through, that he quit and never went again.

This citizen, who is an honest and respected man, is typical of more than half the people in the United States. In spite of all the wrangling and hard feelings of the present campaign, it is at least sign for congratulation that the people are waking up to a sense of the tremendous importance of caucuses and primaries.

The attitude of the man we referred to and all his kind is curiously funny. In order to hit at the bosses and machines, he did precisely what the bosses and machines wanted him to do, that is, keep his hands off and let them run things to suit themselves.

Every man who dislikes all forms of ring rule should do precisely the opposite. If he will attend the primary meetings and caucuses, he will find that the spread of his influence is widening. He will have plenty of chances to get in his licks at ring rule.

If a citizen feels that he cannot spend time both to attend the caucuses and to vote at election it is much more important for him to do the former. The result at election is three times out of four a foregone conclusion.

THRIFT IN HIGH SCHOOL

Harry W. Kimball, field secretary of the Massachusetts Savings insurance League, says few High school boy and girls are saving money. He remarks that "moving picture shows, amusement parks, trolley lines and athletics demand money, and the average boy and girl fails to get the habit of thrift during the High school age." In the High school age it also costs a bit for decent clothes in these days, for decent lunches, for the necessary little expenses that crop up where boys and girls are living part of the time with an element that is prosperous and healthy and that likes to get the most out of life.

A good many High school pupils are doing a little work on the side to get money to carry them through High schools, and are paying a very large share of their daily expenses. These have little opportunity to put money in banks at this time, while the wealthy ones doubtless have their money placed by parents where it is expected to make more money than it can draw at interest in banks. A large proportion of the High school boys and girls will be found saving their due share of money very soon after they graduate and get where they can earn a fair amount weekly and be assured of steady income and not the comparatively small amounts young folks can make outside of school hours.—Brockton Enterprise.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOVELS.

This item of news is of more or less interest perhaps less: "Of 884 new novels examined by the Boston Public Library only 136 were found worth buying." If Boston was living up to its old reputation for culture the surprising thing would be that the 136 got by. It would be quite a percentage under the old rules. Boston and other cities nowadays read some frothy and frivolous stuff, however, so if paid readers in publishing houses thought the remaining 748 novels were worth going to the expense and trouble of buying and putting in type and putting on the market we wonder if the Boston examiners were not a little bit finicky?

There isn't a lot of really fine novel writing being done in these days, most of the books being frankly offered for the sake of enabling the readers to kill an hour somewhere and then forget them; and with those who read novels in Boston or elsewhere we imagine a large proportion of the rejected material would pass muster very readily.

A public library should be guarded with reasonable care and taken seriously, of course, but not too seriously outside of excluding dirt. If we only admit novels "of purpose," novels "with a mission" and novels of deep historical value, we are going to have many persistent novel readers some day when they won't find much on the bill to appeal to them.—Brockton Enterprise.

TEACHERS HEAR "THE RIVALS"

Quincy Teachers' Association Hear Prof. Crosby of Brown

CODDINGTON HALL

Despite the inclemency of the weather, there was a large attendance Wednesday evening in the assembly hall of the Coddington school, when Professor Thomas Crosby, Jr., of Brown University entertained with a rendition of "The Rivals," which was received in a most appreciative manner. The occasion was the first meeting of the newly formed Quincy Teachers' association and the affair was successful in every way.

Possessed of a voice, whose tones could readily be changed from one pitch to another, Mr. Crosby impersonated his characters in exquisite style and had the closest attention of his auditors throughout the evening. As a Shakspearian reader, Mr. Crosby has been classed as one of the best and he certainly lived up to his reputation on this occasion and merited the repeated applause accorded him during his two hours' entertainment. An actor in mien and delivery, the Brunonian professor afforded a treat thoroughly enjoyed by the audience.

The speaker was introduced by Austin W. Greene, president of the association. Among the guests of the evening were noticed John D. Mackay, Joseph F. McPherson, Arthur B. Foster, Dr. Nathaniel S. Hunting, members of the school committee, Albert L. Barbour, superintendent and Walter H. Bentley, former principal of the Coddington school.

The committee in charge comprised Austin W. Greene, of the Gridley Bryant school, president, Miss Jennie N Whitcher, Coddington school, vice-president; Miss Mary C. Parker; John Hancock school, secretary; Mrs. R. Grace Warshaw, Wollaston school, treasurer; Miss Grace A. Howe, High school; Miss Charlottee Burgess, Woodward institute; Miss Mary L. Egan, Adams; Miss Elizabeth A. Garrity, Atherton Hough, Miss Carrie A. Crane, Cranch; Miss Mary G. Anderson Lincoln; Miss Lillian M. Waterhouse, Mass., Fields; Miss Josephine Kelley, Quincy; Miss Alice S. Hatch, Washington; and Miss Elizabeth J. McNeil, Willard school.

SMITH—WILLIAMS.

At a pretty home wedding, Tuesday evening Miss Ida Isabelle Williams of Elm avenue, Wollaston became the bride of George Pierce Smith of Beale street. The ceremony was performed beneath an illuminated bell of Easter lilies by Rev. Wesley Wiggin pastor of the Wollaston Methodist church.

The bride was given away by her father, Washington Williams, the double ring service being used. She was attended by Miss Cherry L. Newell of Wollaston. The best man was George W. Brown also of Wollaston.

Preceding the bridal party were the young niece and nephew of the bride, Marjorie Alice Williams and Girard Ellerton Williams, bearing flowers. Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Miss Marcia Litchfield of East Weymouth.

The bride was charmingly gowned in white crepe meteor with veil and carried a bouquet of white roses and sweet peas. Her veil was caught up with orange blossoms sent by a relative in California.

The maid of honor was attired in a costume of pink crepe meteor and carried pink carnations. She wore a brooch pin the present of the bride. The best man was presented a pearl stick pin by the groom.

A reception followed at eight o'clock, the happy couple being assisted in receiving by their attendants. The ushers were Edward P. Williams, brother of the bride, Byran M. Bean of Wollaston, Andrew S. Johnson of Wollaston and Lewis E. Trussell of Neponset.

Under cover of darkness the pair left for a few days' wedding trip out of town. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will be at home to their friends after June 1st at 61 Brook street, Wollaston.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Washington Williams of Elm avenue while the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Smith of Melrose. Both attend the Wollaston Methodist church.

A large number of handsome and useful presents testified to the popularity of the couple.

ARRANGE FOR LADIES' NIGHT

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Order of Moose Wednesday evening, in Faxon hall. Much routine business was transacted and final arangements made for Ladies' night, which takes place in the hall Tuesday evening, April 23. A fine program has been arranged and well known talent will perform. Refreshments will be served and it is expected that the hall will be fully taxed.

The meeting was addressed by W. W. Pratt, of East Weymouth, first dictator of Boston lodge, which is to initiate 2000 candidates at its class initiation, to be held April 28. Past Dictator Pratt extended an invitation to members of the local lodge to be present on the occasion. It was also announced that the Brockton lodge will hold a class initiation April 28, and the degree team of Quincy lodge will work the second degree on the candidates. A special car will convey the members of the local lodge who are to make the trip.

Much talk prevailed on the convention to be held in Springfield but no action as to selecting delegates was taken.

YOUNG—BURNSIDE.

"Allen Y" bungalow was the scene Wednesday night of a happy affair, the occasion being the marriage of John Reuben Young and Mrs. Henrietta G. Burnside.

The bride was attired in a costume of black velvet with touches of green satin and silver and hat to match. Mrs. William R. Webber the matron of honor wore a violet creation and hat to match and both carried large bouquets of Mayflowers. The ceremony was solemnized by Rev. W. J. Sayre of Union chapel.

The wedding supper and reception followed the ceremony, guests being present from Quincy, Dorchester, Everett, Somervill and Cambridge. Mr. and Mrs. Young were the recipients of many beautiful gifts and good wishes.

FIREMEN'S BILL IS FAVORED

The legislative committee on Insurance held a hearing Wednesday on the bill of Rep. Leslie, which seeks to allow a change in the by-laws of the Quincy Fireman's Relief Association.

Owing to an oversight of the clerk of the committee, none of the proponents of the bill were notified of the hearing and Rep. Leslie only heard of it in time to attend the hearing.

No opposition was in attendance and the committee immediately took action on the bill. In executive session the committee voted to unanimously report the bill, and it will appear on the House calendar in a day or two.

After reading the public statement of this fellow-sufferer given below, you must come to this conclusion: A remedy which cured years ago, which has kept the kidneys in good health since can be relied upon to perform the same work in other cases. Read this:

J. Fortin, Montello St., Brockton, Mass., says: "I was troubled for over two years by attacks of backache. If I arose from a sitting position or stood any length of time, I was caused great pain. There was a feeling of weariness present and if I did a hard day's work I was bothered by Lameness and soreness across my back. I finally saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, for such complaints and I got a box and began their use according to directions. They went directly to the seat of my complaint, relieving me of severe backaches and restoring me to good health. It has given me pleasure to recommend this remedy on several occasions." (Statement given June 13, 1905.)

A SECOND STATEMENT.

On July 26, 1911, Mr. Fortin was interviewed and he said: "I willingly verily my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. You may continue to use my reference, as the relief this remedy brought me has been permanent."

SCHOOL NOTES.

As has been noted, the grammar school base ball league opened its season this week with games at Merrymount park and on the Ward Three Playground. The latter field is to be used for some of the earlier games by the schools in its immediate vicinity in order that the schedule may get well started during the month of April. With so many games to play during the spring term, it is necessary to play three a day for some time in order that the series may be completed before the schools close. Judging by the attendance at the opening games, the attendance will be larger than on any previous year. Mr. Walter H. Bentley, for some years master of the Coddington school has offered a prize cup for the team winning the championship of the league.

The condition of the school buildings is such as to require the expenditure of a considerable amount in repairs. Many of the buildings are sadly in need of paint on the exterior; others require paint and white wash in the rooms. A great many of the play grounds connected with the schools require gravel to cover up the soft clay or ashes which are so apt to become a mud heap during rainy weather. It is hoped that much of this work can be attended to during the coming vacation and that the school property throughout the city may be put in firstclass condition. The Montclair school is slowly approaching completion and will probably be ready for occupancy at the beginnig of the fall term. The division lines for this new district have not yet been fixed by the school committee.

Applications are now being received by the superintendent of schools, from boys who wish to attend the new industrial school which the school committee is planning to open next year. It will be necessary for the applicant to be accepted and given a position by an industrial establishment before the school can take him in, as the school deals only with employed boys. Boys who are planning to leave the high school and go to work during the spring and summer have had the opportunities which this school offers explained to them, and enough applications have already been received to make a successful beginning. In fact, it is quite probable that owing to the small way in which the school will start late applications will have to be refused. No school plan in recent years has attracted so much general public interest in this city and its successful operation will prove highly satisfactory to school committee and citizens.

Exercises for Patriots' day will be held this afternoon. Four hundred copies "The History of our Flag" presented by Chase and Sanborn, will be given to the pupils.

WILLARD SCHOOL.

A piano was delivered to the school Thursday of last week. The pupils and teachers are much pleased with it.

The following invitation has been sent to the parents and friends of the school:

"You and your friends are cordially invited to be present at the Willard school on Monday evening, April 22nd, at eight o'clock, to attend a meeting of the Parents and Teachers. Mr. Charles H. Johnson will deliver an illustrated lecture on 'Historic Quincy.' Admission free, without ticket."

It has become a settled fact that the walls of school rooms throughout the United States are to be used for Art decorations. Very few schools have funds available for the purchase of decorations, and it is to meet this condition that the Wood Art Exhibit is loaned to schools.

The old masterpieces of painting, strengthened by the most fascinating work of modern artists, in original color and monotone, are the base of this collection. About these are grouped the masterpieces of sculpture and architecture to form a complete, comprehensive art gallery. The exhibit is composed of 200 perfect reproductions. The pictures are large, clean and well mounted on stiff light weight panels covered with art vellum. The color scheme is quiet and harmonious.

The great educational power of the pictures, both in the exhibit and permanent decoration of the school room walls, can hardly be estimated. A prominent educator says: "The best place to inculcate love of the beautiful is in the school room. To rising generations the most effective lessons can be given, and from the schools millions of children will carry the lesson to millions of homes."

The famous Wood Art Exhibit is to be held in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, Monday and Tuesday, April 29th and 30th, under the auspices of the Gridley Bryant and Willard Schools. Exhibit open: afternoons 3.30 to 6; evenings 7.30 to 10. Tickets—children afternoons 10 cents. Adults evenings 25 cents. Candy sale afternoons; entertainment evenings. Tickets may be purchased of the pupils of the schools.

The proceeds of the exhibit will be used to purchase pictures for the schools.

—Though 99 years of age and helpless as the result of a stroke of paralysis sustained a year ago, L. E. Boyd, who claims he drove the team which carried Marcus Whitman, an early missionary, across the continent in 1843, is cheerful at St. Mary's hospital, Walla Walla, Wash., where he is under the care of the Sisters of Providence. He is a native of Ohio, and fought in the Civil war and the numerous Indian campaigns in the Northwest. Soon after piloting the Whitman party to the Walla Walla valley, he continued his travels to California, working in the older settlements, returning in 1847, following the Indian massacre, in which Whitman and his followers lost their lives. At the opening of the Civil war he started eastward and enlisted in the Southern army in 1862. Returning to the western frontier at the close of the war he became a stage driver and freighter. He was active until a year ago.

Tables, prettily decorated were placed about the room and on each was a bouquet of flowers given by Wiliam Patterson. The program was also very prettily gotten up, for on the cover of each was a hand painted blue bird. The program opened with a selection by the orchestra, composed of Mr. Chaplin, Miss Emily Torrey and William Torrey, violins, Mr. Rogers clarinet, Allen Walker, cello, Alton Chase, drums and Isabelle Walker accompanist.

Then came a reading of an original story by Mrs. Chaplin, entitled "A Story." The story was read by Mrs. C. T. Hardwick and was acted out in pantomine by members of the junior auxiliary. Mrs. Carrie Follett Spear contributed a group of songs, and Miss Louise Moyle gave two monologues. The program closed with a little play entitled "Mother" the cast being Mrs. Chaplin, Elizabeth Torrey, Robert King and Abbie Curtis. The evening closed with dancing.

During the entertainment ice cream, cake, candy and tonics were on sale.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

When Francis Starr makes her initial appearance here in her new play, "The Case of Becky," at the Hollis Street Theatre April 22, she will be welcomed by probably the largest and most discriminating audience of the year. The magic of David Belasco's name, coupled with his record of past performances in this city, already assures this. Mr. Belasco is at least thorough in preparing a new drama for the stage; he declines to invite a verdict until he is ready to accept it. Of equal importance, his productions each season are so few and well chosen that the public rely on seeing a strong play, perfectly staged and uncommonly well acted. So, a Belasco "opening" is an 'event';all who keep close to the progressive ideas of the stage are there to view the latest product of the Belasco mind, and usually he gives them a night to remember.

Miss Starr's first appearance at the Hollis has aroused, therefore, unusual expectation. Her excellent work here in former plays deserves this compliment; but the strange nature of her new drama, "The Case of Becky," written by Edward Locke and founded on a famous medical case treated and recorded by Boston's own Dr. Morton Prince, has stimulated speculation as well as interest. The play is really a romance, telling a fascinating love story. The means of the telling are, however, strange and weird. The plot is revealed through the character of the heroine herself. This character has not one personality but two. These two personalities, both of the same girl and both of course played by Miss Starr, are constantly at variance one with the other and the dramatic action revolves about the conflict which they wage for the ultimate possession of the young girl's soul.

BOSTON THEATRE.

One of the pleasing announcements of the spring season is the re-entry to the legitimate stage of Andrew Mack, the sweet-voced tenor, who will again be seen in his famous romantic character of Tom Moore. Andrew Mack is too well known both for his portrayal of these dashing Irish romantic roles and his sweet, silvery singing voice to need further introduction to theatre-goers, but a few words regarding a play woven around the incidents in the life of the celebrated Tom Moore are always of interest to the admirers of his poems and works.

In stage form Tom Moore is shown as the dashing devil-me-care fellow he always was, no matter what his surroundings, or how well his purse was filled. In fact, with Tom Moore it was generally a meagre purse, and well worn at that, until unexpected opportunity gave him a chance to save the life of the Prince of Wales. From that day on Tom Moore was looked on as the intimate friend of the Prince and his friends were legion. Of course he was a particular favorite with the ladies fair and this added to his popularity also. Being a poet and musician of note consequently added a natural touch of romance to his career, and in Mr. Mack's portrayal of the master of melodies and songs without words we are treated to a stage character full of interest and far from ordinary.

B. F. KEITH'S.

Something decidedly new and novel in the way of vaudeville productions is announced for B. F. Keith's Theatre next week, in Joseph Hart's latest production, "The Opening Night," a forty-five minute playlet in three scenes, written by George V. Hobart, author of "Cherie," "Peaches," "Dinkelspiel's Christmas," and "Everywife." "The Opening Night" tells an intensely interesting story full of fun, pathos, and realism, and is in three scenes. The first picture shows a flat in the Bronx, New York City, the second the exterior of St. Gregory's Church, and the last the stage of the new "Uncle Sam" Theatre in the Bronx, on its opening night. The story has to do with the adventures of Paul and Virginia Gordon. Paul has married against his father's wishes, and when the play opens the young couple are making frantic efforts to frighten the wolf away from the door. Just how good fortune comes to them is related in a manner which suggests a tale from the Arabian Nights, modernized and Manhattanized, of course. A company of twenty-five comedians, including a church choir of exceptional ability, is required to present the striking novelty. "The Opening Night" will be but one feature of a splendid bill.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

Lew Fields, the greatest of all producting actor-managers, has once again demonstrated his right and title to the supremacy of that specific label—in his Jollie Follie "Hanky Panky" with its record-breaking run of over two hundred nights in Chicago which will open its engagement at the Shubert Theatre, April 22.

"Hanky Panky" has no plot—no story—no attempt to hang things together that need any serious explanation or lengthy recounting, and yet, despite its name, it is not put together in any hit-or-miss fashion. Colors, music, dances and a riot of fun are completely woven together in satisfying harmony.

The first act, a beautiful scene, shows the well-known "Get-rich quick" Wallingford, now added to the British peerage, with the title of Sir J. Rufus, in his villa at Bilgewater on the Thames, where the famous "con" man, having gold-bricked all England, including the King, is now entertaining in lavish style. Among his guests are well-known stage people and it is a round of fun from beginning to end.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Paul M. Potter's latest and merriest French vaudeville, "Half Way to Paris," will be presented for the first time in this city at the Majestic Theatre next week. The piece is a very laughable farce, the plot of which centers in the adventures of two young Quaker matrons who take advantage of the absence of their elderly spouses and cross the channel to France. The action of the second act takes place in Boulogne, "Half Way to Paris," at the Hotel de la Place. Here the two husbands have stopped to recover from the effects of a bad passage across the Channel. One of them is entrapped in the net of a very lively young French actress. Meanwhile the two young wives have been followed by some of their admirers, who also take rooms at the same hotel. The husbands and wives discover the presence of each other in the place and thereupon a number of very humorous complications ensue and the extrication of all parties from their funny difficulty is the source of uproarous mirth. Many catchy musical numbers have been writen for the piece by Mr. John T. Hall, and Joseph C. Smith, the well-known ballet master has arranged a number of novel dances. There is a company of eighty people in which is one of the most attractive choruses to be found in musical comedy.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

There is no English comedy to excel "The School for Scandal" either in humor or in fame. It has been acted almost a century and a half, and the praise bestowed upon it everywhere has been unanimous. This comedy has been selected by John Craig for his coming week at the Castle Square and it is safe to say that it will be given an unusually skilful and entertaining performance. It was last given there three seasons ago, and of course it will be welcomed back as an old friend.

The plot of "The School for Scandal" is highly diverting, and with its story of the irascible old Englishman married to a beautiful country girl, its pictures of life in England in the eighteenth century, it never fails to give the liveliest satisfaction to multitudes of playgoers. It is filled with romance and dramatic power. The cast of Mr. Craig's production of "The School for Scandal" will be one of exceptional ability and note. Mr. Craig himself will be seen as the rollicking harumscarum Charles Surface, and with Mary Young as Lady Teazle, will head the list of players. Walter Walker will also reappear as Sir Peter Teazle, the role he first played with Mr. Craig's company three seasons ago. Joseph Surface will be acted by Mrs. Candour by Mabel Colcord. The run of "The School for Scandal" at the Castle Square will be for only one week.

ODYSSEY PICTURES.

The second week of the extraordinary motion pictures of scenes from Homer's great epic poem of the Odyssey begins at Tremont Temple on Monday afternoon. They are given twice a day 2.30 and 8.15, and they have already been highly praised as marvels of art and of the science of motion photography. They represent the events in the life of Odysseus, the great mythical here, and they show him in the midst of many adventures on land and sea. Of especial interest are they to both the student of ancient history and literature, and they bring before the eye many noteworthy scenes and events. The pictures were made in Italy by the Milano Company, and over 1000 people were employed in their production. The prices range from 25 cents to 75 cents.

TEXTILE EXPOSITION.

The coming Textile Exposition to be held in Mechanics building, Boston, the week of April 22 to 27 inclusive, promises to eclipse any similar exhibition ever held in the east, or for that matter in the United States as New England has always been the leading textile centre of the country and it is here that the manufacturers make their greatest efforts.

The present exhibition will be the third held by this association, the Textile Exhibitors' Association, which is composed of the leading manufacturers of textile machinery and general mill accessory dealers of the country, and the list of exhibitors is far in excess of any previous year. It will also be held at the same time as the annual convention of the cotton industry, and members from all over the United States contemplate journeying to the Hub for the occasion.

Another new department has been added this year, The First Power Show under the direct auspices of the New England Association of Commercial Engineers should prove of wonderful interest. This is the first time such an affair has been attempted and as every manufacturer knows that in the power department lies one of the greatest factors of successful manufacturing, the project should receive the endorsement of every practical manufacturer. It will be particularly complete, every conceivable motive power will be shown. In connection with this department will also be held the annual convention of the Master Mechanics Association of America and upwards of 10,000 will be in attendance.

The comprehensive character of the exposition, showing as it will, goods in all processes of manufacture, spinning, weaving various fabrics through to completion and actually to the made-up garments both for men and women by several of Boston's leading firms, as well as some wonderful machines that are almost human, as the winders, the warp drawers and the others will make the exhibition one, not only of interest to those directly concerned but to the general public as well.

Realizing this great opportunity as an educational institution, a number of the leading department stores and drygoods houses contemplate sending their employees to study the various processes of textile manufacturing to be shown. The object lesson which can be gained will undoubtedly be a great aid to intelligent salesmanship. As a comparison there will be shown the old fashioned method of weaving and spinning which will bring out the marvelous strides made in this industry. The Exposition will open Monday afternoon, April 22, at 3 o'clock, continuing thereafter during the week from 10 A. M. to 10.30 P. M. daily. The entire exhibition is under the direction of Chester I. Campbell

BENEFIT DANCE.

The first annual benefit dance of the Braintree Improvement Association was held in Long's hall, Wednesday evening. There was a good attendance and all seemed to have a jolly time. The affair was notable for the elaborate gowns of the ladies, giving a brilliant tone to the affair.

From behind a bower of palms and potted plants floated strains of sweet music for the dancing, rendered by Cuff's orchestra of six pieces.

Among those present were noticed Leroy L. Day and Miss Clara Day, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Davy, Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Gage, Mr. and Mrs. Ezra S. Grover, Mr. and Mrs. Atherton N. Hunt Elmer E. Abercrombie, Miss Abercrombie, Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Patten, Mr. and Mrs. G. V Pennock, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Rhoades, Mr. Harry R. Readman, Joseph G. Spear, Miss pear, Mr. and rMs. R. L. SURVIVORS' ROLL SEEMS COMPLETE

All Saved From the Titanic Are Now on the Carpathia

NEARLY THREE HUNDRED CABIN PASSENGERS LOST

Others Who Were Rescued, Numbering 540, Were Either Steerage Passengers or Members of Crew—Hope That Many Reported Lost May Have Been Rescued Is Abandoned—But 705 on Rescue Ship, According to Steamer Franconia—Wireless Stations Handling Carpathia Matter to Exclusion of All Other Messages—Public Still Kept In Suspense

New York, April 18.—The roll of the saved from the disaster of the Titanic seems complete. Practically every attending circumstance in the transmission of news from the Cunarder Carpathia goes to show that only 328 of the 610 cabin pasengers who were on the Titanic are safe on the rescue ship.

The 282 cabin passengers whose names have not appeared in the list sent by wireless must probably be numbered among the 1312 lives which the collision of the mammoth new White Star steamer with an iceberg off the Newfoundland banks Sunday night is believed to have cost.

Thousands of hopeful hearts were turned to despairing ones when the scout cruiser Chester explained by wireless that she had been in communication with the Carpathia and had asked for a full list of the survivors in first and second saloons and that the Carpathia replied that all the names had already been sent ashore. The other 540 persons saved were steerage passengers or members of the crew.

Hope Is About Abandoned

After the strain of three days' waiting without news of their missing ones, there are few of the hopeful who still hold out in the face of the seemingly final word as to the fate of relatives and friends.

The hopes of the persistently sanguine few among relatives and friends of passengers rest on the bare possibility that the list of named survivors sent by wireless from the Carpathia may not after all be quite complete.

The fact that one new name came through late yesterday in a private message from the Carpathia was the basis of what was a desire more than a hope that there were slips enough in her wireless list of the survivors to account for a few, at least, of those for whom the worst was feared. At the best, however, it appeared that it could be only an occasional one whose safety was not reported owing to some error of compilation on the liner or of transmission by her wireless.

From the Carpathia, which is expected, if she keeps up her rate of thirteen knots, to reach the entrance of New York harbor by 8 o'clock tonight, came a new report as to the number of survivors on board.

But 705 Survivors?

The Cunarder Franconia, which established wireless communication with her, sent a message which included this statement: "She has a total of 705 survivors aboard."

The previous statement from the Carpathia had been that she carried 868 survivors. It may be that the report received through the Franconia included a count of rescued passengers only, disregarding the 100 or more members of the crew who must have been in the boats which the Carpathia picked up, their presence being necessary for the safety of passengers.

Through the Chester there began coming slowly last night the names of saved steerage passengers of the Titanic.

The very sending of these could not but help confirm the sorrowful belief that there were no more names of first and second cabin passengers to send. And thus there was left hardly a doubt that the names of well known men, such as John Jacob Astor, William T. Stead, Isador Straus and the others of the now familiar list of notables could have been omitted.

Could Not Survive Exposure

That these men went down with the ship is practically certain. Authorities on conditions off the banks agreed that rescues of passengers not taken from the liner by the boats would have to be made speedily, as exposure and exhaustion would quickly sap the life of human beings forced to take to any other means of keeping afloat.

During last evening the wireless communication of the Carpathia with Siasconset was devoted for the most part, it appeared, to sending private messages of reassurance from passengers to friends on shore and to transmission of anxious inquiries from land to sea. Momentarily the chance was awaited for communication of greater moment to the world at large—the opportunity to learn the long awaited recital of the Titanic's fateful last hours afloat.

That every chance might be afforded for free communication with the slowly approaching liner, practically all other wireless business along the coast last night was suspended. The Marconi company announced that it had notified its stations at South Wellfleet, Siasconset, Sagaponak and Sea Gate to handle to and from the Carpathia exclusively.

Carpathia's Business Only

"All other commercial and government stations," the message reads, "will cease transmitting while the Carpathia's business is being exchanged with the above mentioned stations. No other work than the Carpathia's and the business from the government ships going to meet the Carpathia will be permitted."

These instructions, it was explained, were sent out in conformity with the suggestion made to the United States government by the Marconi company, and was agreed to.

While careful preparations were being made in New York to receive and safeguard the living on their arrival here, word came that a cable steamer had set ouft from had set out for the scene of the disaster from Halifax to seek the dead.

A report in New York which carried with it some hope for those who have not seen the name of relvatives or friends on the list given out by the White Star line was that the Leyland liner Californian was bringing a few survivors to Boston, where she is due Friday morning. But the report was not credited because it is supposed to be from relayed and indirect reports previously received from the Californian that she carried only bodies of Titanic victims.

There was no definite information of any sort, however, to change the belief that none escaped from the horror save those who are being brought to New York by the Carpathia.

THE STEERAGE SURVIVORS

Prominent Women Take Steps For Relief of the Needy

A committee of thirteen of the most prominent women in New York, headed by Mrs. Nelson, wife of the surveyor of the port of New York, has been formed for the purpose of taking care of the surviving steerage passengers of the Titanic on the arrival of the Carpathia.

"We do not know how many steerage passengers may have been saved," said Mrs. Henry, "but we feel that something should be done for their comfort on their arrival, as there will probably be few of their friends on this side of the ocean to give them adequate care. We wish to give them what financial aid may be necessary to alleviate their sufferings as far as possible and assist the immigration authorities.

"And we invite the co-operation of the women of New York," said Mrs. Henry, "either as contributors of clothing and money ar as voluntary workers in this, a work which we can do. Whether these unhappy people will stay in this country or whether they will go back to the countres from which they came, no one knows now, but we do know that they will be in immediate need. When they are brought in we want to supply the necessities, to see to their creature comforts at a time when they will have no one to whom they may turn."

DISTRICT MEETING

hearts be troubled, but because they bring upon their backs shapeless bundles, indifference has taken the place of fear, never considering that those peaceful soldiers may innocently be bringing weapons more powerful than the sword for the destruction of a nation which has every reason to fulfil its destiny as the beacon light of history. The mere numbers of immigrants now entering, however, is of comparatively small importance, because there still remains room and sustenance for millions more people in the undeveloped lands between the Atlantic and the Pacific, where they could provide homes and live in luxury. It is not numbers but character.

"Before 1882, immigration came largely from Northern Europe, from the English(Welsh, Irish, Scotch, Scandinavian and German, who are not very much unlike us and in many cases of our own faith, language and blood. Their assimilation was a matter of small concern. In a few years they were really American in every essential feature and gloried in the splendor of their adopted land. But the immigrants of today are of a type which makes the problem of their coming a serious one. Chiefly from the south of Europe and Asia, they come from countries and races little known, from stock in no way akin to our own: with different languages, different customs, different laws, different religions and most essentially with different ideals from those existing in the United States.

"They think they have come to the promised land favored of God, flowing with milk and honey. They anticipate it as a place of every earthly good; they expect the best, and they receive too often the worst. Is it all their fault?

"We really owe a great deal to these foreigners. Without those hundreds of thousands of willing immigrants, the development of this country would have been impossible by the strength of their arms our coal has been mined, our lands have been tilled, our railroads have been built, our rivers confined, and our great wheels of manufacturing industry been turned. Not progressive and really great enterprise in the United States have been carried out without the muscle and brawn of Europe and Asia. The immigrant is a great economic factor. That these hulking uncouth bodies contain brains of small capacity, is a great misfortune, but that they do possess minds and hearts is inevitable, since they are human. How many high ideals they also contain is for us to find out, since in their horde is the future American citizen.

"It is our duty and our necessity to place before the immigrant such ideals of American life that he may be inspired by them. We must treat them fairly and squarely if we wish to make their attitude toward us one of confidence.

"An Italian discovered America, and a Spaniard financed the expedition with money obtained from a Jew. The Dutch founded New York, the Germans early cultivated the farm lands of Pennsylvania, Frenchmen and Russians helped us to win our independence. In 1872 at the close of the civil war, Carl Schurz in the United States senate pleaded for general amnesty for the crippled South. In New York city, a Scandinavian, Jacob Riis waged a ten years' battle with the slums and awoke the city to a sense of some of its greatest evils. It is a Scotchman, who is spreading libraries broadcast, doing more than any other man in promoting the education of the general people.

"To be sure, these examples are striking ones, and of men, who for the most part had more advantages of birth and training than the vast horde of immigrants of today. But nevertheless these instances compel us to retract our question, 'can any good thing come out of Nazareth?' It is possible there are others just as great. These people need to be assisted, not oppressed and crushed.

"Another great barrier is a lack of education, they do not know how to read or write. They come here to earn and they must work, and after doing a hard day's work they are too tired to attend evening school. In old times, it was thought best to teach religion, but we have learned to set the example of right living, teach them to keep their homes neat and sanitary, their bodies clean, and properly clothed, teach them to be decent, then when that lesson is well learned, religion and christianity will follow.

"In the public schools, primarily teach the children to do something with their hands. Industrial training for the child is an economic factor. The story they love best is the life of Abraham Lincoln, they never tire of it. They grasp the bare outlines. Our country is the land of the free and the home of the brave,' why should not the same glory await them?

"Moving picture shows are a great educator. For instance one picture is shown, not pleasant to begin with representing filth breeding flies: next picture shows the fly entering a room in a tenement house, where the inevitable baby is. Fly lights on baby's face, soon the baby is taken sick, the mother crazed with grief. Next picture shows district nurse, after days and nights of careful watching the baby is restored, the mother is shown if she wishes her child to be well she must keep away the flies, so the little bed is draped with netting. Another picture is shown of the nurse teaching the mother to bathe the children with soap and water, which reminds me of the story of an old lady who said, 'I am not in the habit of giving tracts, but if I were I would put a cake of soap into each one.'

"They must be instructed in the manners of the American people, that they may become one of us. They must be encouraged to work for us and not against us, they must see reaching towards them the right hand of civil fellowship . They must be taught to be Americans, for therein only lies safety, moral and physical welfare. This work is being done in the United States by social service workers, towards the thousands of strangers, who are now within our unclosed gates, and I hope each one of you will do all in your power to help. It may not be but a little, but little things count and when you are doing this work, you are promoting the salvation of your country."

Mrs. Page sang "These are They," from the Holy City by Gaul, after which Rev. Charles Conklin of Brookline spoke on "Missionary Work." Mr. Conklin said in part:

"Christ spoke these memorable words, 'Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel.' There is a time for everything, a time for the blossom a time for the fruit, a time to sow, a time to gather in the harvest. Time for the rivulet to leave its mountain home and rush down to the sea. Time for ideas to develop and work its way into the thought of the world. In the fulness of time Jesus came to begin the work of establishing the church in the world and through the ages. Christ's disciples were instructed to reveal this truth to mankind and to interpret their faith in all the quarters of the globe.

"Think of China: twelve years ago with 50,000 converts to christianity, today 1,000,000 and it has been declared in China that from every religion that has a message for the people the ban has been removed. We are working in India, Japan, with great hope and courage. Africa is in a more primitive state but even there the gospel of Christ has penetrated. As you travel, you will notice the homes of the Christians and the heathen. The home of the christian has several rooms clean and orderly. At a service in our chapel recently the leader came in dressed in a Prince Albert coat, immaculate collar and tie, the women neatly dressed 'now, he said, 'to show you what I was before I became a christian.' In rushed a tribe of savages partly naked, unkempt and low-browed. The bible, the church, the influence of Christian people builds them up into sonship with God.

"It is true we have a work to do at home, but do not disparage the work of planting the gospel the wide world over."

All joined in singing "Nearer by God to Thee," Mrs. Cutter at the organ.

—A kindergarten school had been the scene of a burglary. When the pupils assembled in the morning the teacher asked them to pray that the burglar might be caught, whereupon one of the children rose and said: "I know who did it. It was my father. I saw him blacken his face, and I had to show him the way." An investigation proved that the child's words were true and the man was arrested.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barony. The place is to be sold, and its history and that of the owners, the Quintards, is the subject of discussion by Jonathan Crenshaw, a business man, a stranger known as Bladen, and Bob Yancy, a farmer, when Hannibal Wayne Hazard, a mysterious child of the old southern family, makes his appearance. Yancy tells how he adopted the boy.

That small foot had left but the one impress. There were other signs, however, that claimed his attention; namely, the boot-prints of Slosson and his men; and he made the inevitable discovery that these tracks were all confined to the one spot. They began suddenly and as suddenly ceased, yet there was no mystery about these; he had the marks of the wheels to help him to a sure conclusion. A carriage had turned just here, several men had alighted; they had with them a child, or a woman. Either they had re-entered the carriage and driven back as they had come, or they had gone toward the river. He felt the soul within him turn sick.

He stole along the path; the terror of the river was ever in his thoughts, and the specter of his fear seemed to flit before him and lure him on. Presently he caught his first glimpse of the bayou and his legs shook under him; but the path wound deeper still into what appeared to be an untouched solitude, wound on between the crowding tree forms, a little back from the shore, with an intervening tangle of vines and bushes. He scanned this closely as he hurried forward, scarcely conscious that he was searching for some trampled space at the water's edge; but the verdant wall preserved its unbroken continuity, and twenty minutes later he came within sight of Hicks' clearing and the keel boat, where it rested against the bank.

A little farther on he found the spot where Slosson had launched the skiff the night before. The keel of his boat had cut deep into the slippery clay; more than this, the impress of the small shoe was repeated here, and just beside it was the print of a child's bare foot.

He no longer doubted that Betty and Hannibal had been taken across the bayou to the cabin, and he ran back up the path the distance of a mile and plunged into the woods on his right, his purpose being to pass around the head of the expanse of sluggish water to a point from which he could later approach the cabin.

But the cabin proved to be better defended than he had foreseen; and as he advanced, the difficulties of the task he had set himself became almost insurmountable; yet sustained as he was by his imperative need, he tore his way through the labyrinth of trailing vines, or floundered across acre-wide patches of green slime and black mud, which at each step threatened to engulf him in their treacherous depths, until at the end of an hour he gained the southern side of the clearing and a firmer footing within the shelter of the woods.

Here he paused and took stock of his surroundings. The two or three buildings Mr. Hicks had erected stood midway of the clearing and were very modest improvements adapted to their owner's somewhat flippant pursuit of agriculture. While Carrington was still staring about him, the cabin door swung open and a woman stepped forth. It was the girl Bess. She went to a corner of the building and called loudly:

"Joe! Oh, Joe!"

Carrington glanced in the direction of the keel boat and an instant later saw Slosson clamber over its side. The tavern-keeper crossed to the cabin, where he was met by Bess, who placed in his hands what seemed to be a wooden bowl. With this he slouched off to one of the outbuildings, which he entered. Ten or fifteen minutes slipped by, then he came from the shed and after securing the door, returned to the cabin. He was again met by Bess, who relieved him of the bowl; they exchanged a few words and Slosson walked away and afterward disappeared over the side of the keel boat.

This much was clear to the Kentuckian: food had been taken to some one in the shed—to Betty and the boy!—more likely to George.

He waited now for the night to come, and to him the sun seemed fixed in the heavens. At Belle Plain Tom Ware was watching it with a shuddering sense of the swiftness of its flight. But at last the tops of the tall trees obscured it; it sank quickly then and blazed a ball of fire beyond the Arkansas coast, while its dying glory spread aslant the heavens, turning the flanks of the gray clouds to violet and purple and gold.

With the first approach of darkness Carrington made his way to the shed. Hidden in the shadow he paused to listen, and fancied he heard difficult breathing from within. The door creaked hideously on its wooden hinges when he pushed it open, but as it swung back the last remnant of the day's light showed him some dark object lying prone on the dirt floor. He reached down and his hand rested on a man's booted foot.

"George—" Carrington spoke softly, but the man on the floor gave no sign that he heard, and Carrington's questioning touch stealing higher he found that George—if it were George—was lying on his side with his arms and legs securely bound. Thinking he slept, the Kentuckian shook him gently to arouse him.

"George?" he repeated, still bending above him. This time an inarticulate murmur answered him. At the same instant the woolly head of the negro came under his fingers and he discovered the reason of his silence He was as securely gagged as he was bound.

"Listen, George—it's Carrington—I am going to take off this gag, but don't speak above a whisper—they may hear us!" And he cut the cords that held the gag in place.

"How yo' get here, Mas'r Ca'ington?" asked the negro guardedly, as the gag fell away.

He Was as Securely Gagged as He Was Bound.

"Around the head of the bayou."

"Lawd!" exclaimed George, in a tone of wonder.

"Where's Miss Betty?"

"She's in the cabin yonder—fo' the love of God, cut these here other ropes with yo' knife, Mas'r Ca'ington—I'm perishin' with 'em!" Carrington did as he asked, and groaning, George sat erect. "I'm like I was gone to sleep all over," he said.

"You'll feel better in a moment. Tell me about Miss Malroy?"

"They done fetched us here last night. I was drivin' Missy into Raleigh—her and young Mas'r Hazard—when fo' men stop us in the road."

"Who were they, do you know?" asked Carrington.

"Lawd—what's that?"

Carrington, knife in hand, swung about on his heel. A lantern's light flashed suddenly in his face and Bess Hicks, with a low startled cry breaking from her lips, paused in the doorway. Springing forward, Carrington seized her by the wrist.

"Hush!" he grimly warned.

(To be Continued.)

A CENTURY OF GAS.

Officials of corporations and members of scientific societies in Philadelphia are preparing to celebrate on the 18th and 19th of this month the centenary of gas as an illuminant and its use in that city, though it was not employed to any great extent until some years after. The introduction of gas for this purpose, however, practically dates back a hundred years ago this month, when Winsor, a German, and known as "the father of modern gas lighting," secured a royal charter for the Gas Light and Coke Company of London. In 1813 Westminster bridge was lighted by this means and two years later it was introduced at Guild hall. Paris was gas lighted in 1820 and from there it rapidly spread over the continent of Europe.

As in the case of almost all important discoveries there were many who had tentatively experimented with the new illuminant before it began to have a growing recognition and a commercial value, but it was the man who made it practical who has been accorded the credit. As far back as 1796 Michael Ambroise, an Italian fireworks manufacturere, used gas for lighting his place of business. In the early part of the nineteenth century the streets of Philadelphia were not lighted at all, and frequent murders aroused the citizens to a sense of their danger. A petition was sent to the city government representing that so many desperate characters were abroad that "travellers, market people or others of character" were afraid to pass the Schuylkill bridge after dark and a demand for light at that point was made.

But it was not until 1832 that Councils consented to light the streets with gas. What science is now about to approve and commemorate the scientists of a hundred years ago condemned. They maintain that it would destroy farming and kill the fish in the river, but as theatres, hotels and public institutions ventured to use it without the disastrous consequences predicted, it was finally accepted as an adjunct of the municipal service. It was successfully introduced in Baltimore in 1821, in Boston in 1822 and gradually in New York between 1823 and 1827. Among the features of the approaching celebration will be the first gas stove ever placed on the market, old time gas jets, crude specimens of pipe, the first gas lamps and many other appliances connected with the early history of the then new medium of illumination.

From the use of link boys to light the pedestrian and the sedan chair passengers to the lighting of the throughfares with gas was an advance of centuries in effect, though separated by only a short period of time. Nothing has done more than improvement in lighting to make safe the highways of thickly populated communities. It is better than a police force with clubs if not an army with banners. It has made passable at all hours streets that were prudently shunned after dark in the old days. But today gas is finding some of its principal uses in other lines than that on which it was first developed. For the main thoroughfares and wide spaces it is too dim to satisfy modern requirements, but its uses for heat and power have given it a new value, and it is still, at the end of a hundred years, among the modern forces that are giving to progress a mightier impetus than it has ever received before. It is well to look back over the span of a century and see of what large developments it was the humble beginning.

The successful Republican senatorial candidate in the Illinois primaries is called a "conservative progressive." Does this mean that he counts the occupants of a band wagon before he ascends thereto?

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

BOTH FINED FOR ASSAULT

Luigi M. Antonelli 138 Canal street who was arrested shortly before 11 o'clock, Tuesday morning, just as he was about to board an electric car at Newcomb square, by officer Charles Johnson, charged with having stabbed a fellow workman, Thomas Leonard, of 500 South street, was arraigned in the District Court this morning before this morning, before Judge Albert E. Avery, and fined $50. He had pleaded not guilty. At the conclusion of the testimony, the Judge ordered a complaint to be issued against Leonard for assault and battery. He pleaded guilty and was fined $25. On the waiving of the right to appeal, the execution of the sentence imposed upon Antonelli was suspended till December 3, and he was placed in the hands of the probation officer, until that date. Owing to the wounds that Leonard had sustained, the Judge suspended the execution of his sentence until September 12.

Antonelli was represented by ex-senator Thomas J. Grady of Boston. The witnesses, in addition to Antonelli and Leonard, included officer Johnson, Dr. Blanchard, of the Fore River hospital, who treated Leonard and Asel cholander, who saw part of the altercation. Leonard admitted that he started the fight with Antonelli, but said that the latter had inflicted the wounds upon him. Antonelli denied having used a knife on Leonard and claimed that Leonard, in an endeavor to strike him had hit his arm on a sharp iron plate a couple of times, thereby cutting his forearm in a serious manner.

When questioned b ythe Judge, Antonelli admitted that he had a piece of galvanized iron in his hand at the time of the assault Dr. Blanchard testified as to the character of the wounds and said that they were the results of inflictions, either by a sharp knife or other sharp instrument. According to Scholander, Leonard started the fight by indulging in profane expressions, which were quickly taken up by Antonelli. The place in which the two men were fighting was only large enough to hold both of them, and the witness said he was at a loss to know whether or not any knife was used.

Judge Avery took the matter under consideration and said it was a question as to what means Antonelli was justified in using in order to protect himself against Leonard, who was evidently the unjust aggressor.

MYSTERIOUS SHOOTING

It came to light this morning that Hartley Hoffses, 14, James Grenier, 14, and Robert Gustafson, all pupils at the Coddington school, were shot at this week by two men, while en route to their homes in Germantown. It seems that the boys were walking along the sewer embankment near Palmer street when they saw two men, apparently hunters, accompanied by a dog, approaching at a distance. One of the boys made a remark to the effect that he did not believe there was any game in the vicinity and no sooner had he done so than their rifles were fired, and buck shots went whizzing through the air.

All of the boys were struck, the Hoffses lad being injured so badly as to necessitate the attendance of Dr. F. Ramon Burke. Had not the youngsters turned their backs and fled, their injuries might have been far more serious, and they might have been maimed for life. The attention of the police has been called to the matter and every effort is being usd to locate the two men who did the shooting.

☞All the men in Quincy are going "just around the corner" to get one of the new spring style hats at the old reliable store of George W. Jones at 1 Granite street. The man particular about his clothes is enthusiastic over the line of suits carried by this firm and the prices are extremely low for good quality.

CLAIM WOUNDS SELF INFLICTED

Peter Dueny, a Spaniard, giving his residence at 32 Broadway, South Boston, and claiming to be employed at the Hallett & Davis piano factory, Neponset, was taken into custody shortly after six o'clock this morning by officer David Farell. The man was apparently suffering most excruciating pain at the time, for his left arm was badly lacerated and knife wounds had been inflicted on his right arm and other parts of his body.

The man was first seen coming from the Weymouth district early this morning by Charles Austin, starter for the Bay State St. Railway Co., who was en route to Quincy square at the time to begin his duties of the day. Austin noticed that the man was bleeding profusely and quickly informed officer Farrell, who lost no time in calling for the police auto. In all, a dozen knife wounds were counted. The man was treated by Dr. Garey, who said that the cuts were serious.

At the police station Dueny said that he inflicted the wounds on himself, but the police are disinclined to believe his story and will hold the man to await developments and at thes ame time place him under observation.

SOUTH CHURCH MEN'S CLUB

The regular monthly meeting of the men's club of the Congregational church, South Braintree was held in the chapel Wednesday evening and was well attended considering the weather and the various other attractions occurring the same night. Those members who failed to attend missed perhaps the finest meeting of the present series. A fine supper was provided consisting of cold tongue, mashed potato, potato chips, rolls coffee fruit, radishes and all kinds of pie from Washington to apple.

After supper, President Foster F. Tupper introduced as the guest of honor Rev. Archibald Lowell Ryan, the newly appointed pastor of the South M. E. church. Mr. Ryan was very happy in his remarks, speaking on fraternalism, the prevention of evil and the conservation of this country's greatest natural resources, our boys and girls. Mr. Ryan's words were bright and witty and at the same time impressive as he voiced his pleasure at being brought face to face with the men of Braintree and of being able to work with them along lines of social uplift.

The speaker of the evening was the pastor, Rev. Tyler E. Gale who spoke on the seven deadly sins as applied to modern everyday American life. Mr. Gale's remarks were forceful and to the point and held the close attention of all by his masterly eloquence and splendid delivery. His address was a gem and a rare treat to all who were privileged to be present. Mr. Gale named the seven deadly sins according to Dante as pride, envy, anger, sloth, averice, intemperance and lust. He described our craze for military and naval supremeacy as false pride, the racial troubles in the South and West as being the product of envy and anger. Sloth he said was responsible for our indifference to recent appalling disasters.

He mentioned the avarice of the average American, spoke of the crusade against intemperance and ended with a moving plea for social purity, citing some results of the unbridled passions of men and urging the need of sex instruction and hygiene. Mr. Gale's remarks were loudly applauded and both he and Mr. Ryan were accorded a rising vote of thanks by the members. The meeting was adjourned after a social hour.

The committee of arrangements consisted of Frank C. Allen, Harry C. Thayer, Ralph L. Wiggin, F. A. MacDonald and E. S. Loring, and they were assisted by several ladies of the Guild.

EIGHTH ANNUAL CONVENTION

Norfolk County District Y. P. S. C. E. Hold All Day Session

BETHANY CHURCH

The eighth annual convention of the Norfolk County Christian Endeavor Union was held at Bethany church Friday. The morning sesion was devoted to business and a conference for pastors only. At two o'clock the meeting opened with Devotional exercises conducted by Rev. James A Matheson. Dr. Asher Anderson gave an adress, subject, "Mushrooms and Toadstoods."

Dr. Anderson said in part: "Perhaps many of you will be surprised at my peculiar subject and I will explain how the subject came to my mind. A man, whom I knew had charge of a shop, and he called his men Mushrooms and Toadstools. The men who did superior work, he designated as mushrooms those who were careless, and used their influence for evil, he called toadstools.

"Now I want you Christian Endeavorers to use your best efforts and all your strength of service for the glory of God and the advancement of God's kingdom. The church must emphasize this. We want the spiritual life. If we do not have this spiritual life to inspire us then our influence is not to promote the work of God.

"Study Jesus Christ, read Jesus Christ. The tragedy of Calvary! I met a young lady, coming from the Passion play, the tears were streaming down her cheeks. 'Oh! said she, "I never realized before what my Saviour had suffered for me.'

"The world is full of opportunities. The poor, the needy, the afflicted, the sorrowing are all around you. Do not despise to do what your Lord did. You will never know the meaning of love until you have loved. You will never know the meaning of forgiveness until you have forgiven. You Christian Endeavorers! Go ye out into the world and bring some unfortunate into the redemption of God."

The question box was conducted by Walter D. Howells of Tremont Temple Boston, who answered questions very ably and gave suggestions in regard to making C. E. work varied and interesting and how to consecrate to greater efforts and better work.

Albert Hayden rendered a solo, after which, Rev. D. Brewer Eddy of Boston, gave an address on, "America's Responsibility in the New Orient."

Mr. Eddy said in part: "What does this mean to you and to me It means more devotion, greater concentration and redoubled efforts in behalf of China. We as Americans should feel our responsibility.

"One of the most pathetic incidents in the recent tragedy was that of Captain Smith calling through the megaphone. 'Be British, my men.' No need for comment, that call represented the best spirit the world has ever known. It meant something to hear that cry, 'Be British, my men.'

HOLD SALE AND ENTERTAINMENT

By Earnest Workers and Junior Lend-a-Hand Classes

WOLLASTON CHURCH

An attractive sale and entertainment was held in the Wollaston Unitarian vestry on the afternoon and evening of the holiday by the Earnest Workers and Junior Lend-a-Hand clubs Fancy and useful articles, home-made candy, ice cream, cake, and other edibles were on sale. The proceeds will be used for the beautifying of the vestry.

A pleasing musical program opening with piano solos by Miss Priscilla White and Miss Dorothy Stevens was given in the afternoon.

The "American Beauty Waltz" a fancy dance was daintily performed by Miss Ruth Jones. Selections on the violin by Miss Helen Moulton were enjoyed and the entertainment closed with a piano solo by Miss Elizabeth Couch.

"Our Aunt from California," a one act sketch, was presented by the members of the club in the evening. This told the story of three nieces who are expecting a visit from their rich Californian aunt.

The aunt has promised to take the one she likes best on a European trip and all are making preparations to please her. One niece conceives the idea of passing herself off on her sisters for the aunt.

While she is practising this deception the real aunt arrives and is mistaken for a seamstress. The niece, noting the queer actions of the aunt, thinks she must be a burglar.

The aunt thinking the disguised niece an imposter and a swindler does not disclose her identity but awaits developments. These quickly follow and the aunt, who dearly loves a joke, decides to take this niece on the trip.

All the parts were remarkably well taken and some of the young ladies show promise of becoming successful amateur actresses. At the evening entertainment a piano and 'cello duet by Miss Violet and Theodore Smith.

The cast of characters was:

Felicia Needy	Helen DeNormandie
Rosalie Needy	Priscilla White
Sally Needy	Dorothy Atwood
Mrs. Needy	Helen Thompson
Mrs. Wilcoxnigbe	Gretchen Horst
Mrs. Merry Muntoburn, the aunt,	Dorothy Sprague

ANNUAL BALL LOYAL LADIES

One Hundred Couples Participate in the Grand March

SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR

Although it was their twenty-first annual and the majority of affairs in previous years have been greeted by more auspicious conditions, never during this long period of years did the Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor, No. 1, held a more successful grand ball than the one which took place on Thursday evening, in Music hall. It proved an attraction for hundreds of dancers, all of whom acclaimed it the best ever held.

Music was by Provost's orchestra. The program opened with a promenade concert by the musicians which lasted from eight until nine o'clock. It was composed of the following numbers:

Good Fellowship March	Daly
Scotia Overture	Beyer
Selection from the Red Widow	Gebest
Sunshine and Showers Overture	Flath

The dance order consisted of twenty-five numbers several of which received great applause. The floor directress was Miss Jennie G. Grassick, whose assistant was Florence W. Williams, daughter of ex-fire chief Peter Williams. The aids included: Misses M. Belle Stronach, Katherine E. Williams, Rettie N. Flaherty, Annie B. Norrie, Elizabeth S. Grassick, Margaret J. Michael.

Much of the success attained was due to the untiring efforts of the committee of arrangements, composed of: Mrs. Margaret Stronach, Mrs. Effie Scarborough, Mrs. Belle Grassick, Mrs. Margaret Ross, Mrs. Margaret Tinney, Mrs. Jennie MacKay, Mrs. Mary Muckle, Mrs. Julia Dawson, Mrs. Johannn Norrie, Miss Alice Joss, treasurer, Mrs. Annie Mutch, secretary.

RECEPTION TO SENIORS

The anual reception by the Juniors was tendered the Seniors Thursday evening in the High school gymnasium. The hall was very pretily decorated with red and blue streamers and pennants representing colleges all over the United States. Palms and potted plants added to the effect.

C. T. A. HOLDS DANCING PARTY

Affair One of Best Ever Held by Well-Known Society

COMMITTEES

Even the unfavorable weather that prevailed Thursday evening failed to deter a large number from attending the dancing party given in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, by the members of St. Mary Catholic Total Abstinence and Mutual Relief Society. Visitors were present from Boston, Braintree, Weymouth and Milton and the affair was one of the best ever held by this well known temperance organization.

The guests of the evening included Rev. Henry T. Grady and Rev. William J. Duffy, pastor and assistant pastor respectively of St. Mary's church, Hon. William T. Shea, Councilman John J. Mahoney, Harry T. Boyd and Daniel F. Forde, and School committeeman Joseph F. McPherson.

The dance began at eight o'clock, and concluded early in the morning; a short intermission taking place at eleven o'clock, during which time refreshments were served in the lower hall. The dance order included twenty regular numbers and four extras. Music was by Joyce's orchestra.

Daniel E. Duggan, president of the society, was floor director, with Joseph R. McGilvray and George E. Reinhalter as assistants. The aids included William Duggan, Thomas F. O'Brien, Joseph Rooney, Ralph Elcock, George H. Sullivan, Thomas J. O'Brien, Edward King, James Fay, James F. McLaughlin and Joseph T. Lamb.

SQUASHTOWN CHOIR CONCERT

A meeting of the George L. Gill Rebekah lodge, I. O. O. F. was held Thursday evening and after the business had been concluded an entertainment was furnished by the "Squashtown choir" under the direction of the Ward 3 committee Mrs. R. C. Welch, chairman. There were milk maids, dairymaids, and housemaids, silly kids, the town sheriff, the bold, bad man with his fierce mustache, "rubes" and the like and all entered into the singing of the various "pieces" with a vim that created no end of amusement.

Readings were given by Miss Phyllis Smith, who showed exceptional talent and had to respond to encores "Silas Bisby of Oneonta" was there also with his "funny little knitty tie" and as impersonated by Robert C. Welch, was a decided hit.

Matthew Fay rendered two whisting solos in a very acceptable manner and the singing of ballads by John McClain was much enjoyed, Gilbert Booth and Mrs. R. C. Welch acted as accompanists for the singers.

Refreshments were served after the entertainment and dancing and sociability rounded out a very pleasant evening the weather not preventing a large attendance of brothers and sisters.

WHOM FOR SERGEANT.

There is considerable speculation as to whom Mayor Stone will name for Sergeant to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Sergeant Barry. Under the Civil Service rules the Mayor can ask for a competitive examination for the position or he can name the man he desires to promote who will take a non competitive examination. It is understood that several of the officers are seeking the appointment. Among these is Officer John Holloran, one of the oldest officers in point of service in the department. Officer Holloran was appointed a regular officer when the police department was established. He did night street duty for a time and when the new police station on School street was opened was assigned as night wagon man. During the illness of Sergt. Barry Officer Holloran was acting night Sergt. in charge of the station. He is a man who by reason of long service and executive ability is well qualified for the position.

BANQUET TO DELEGATES

The delegates to the convention of the Granite Cutters' International association of America were entertained at a banquet by the three local branches of the organization, in Hibernian hall, Franklin street, Thursday evening. A fine menu was partaken of and it was early Friday morning when the gathering dispersed.

An entertainment was furnished by members in the convention and the affair was pronounced most successful and enjoyable. Nicholas Williams, president of the local branch, introduced James Duncan, general secretary and treasurer, and first vice-president of the A. F. of L., as toastmaster. Mr. Duncan proved himself an able master of ceremonies and every one in attendance acknowledged having been treated to the time of his life.

Some eloquent speakers participated in the post-prandial exercises and the addresses were delivered in forceful style. The speakers were Mayor Eugene R. Stone, James Short, president of the Boston branch, Richard Grigg, of Barre, Vermont, William Morgan of Denver, Colorado, John Golden, president of the Textile Workers, J. B Chapman, of Littleonia, Georgia, W. W. Matson of Melrose, sheriff William J. O'Brien of New York, D. De Allessandro, president of the Building Workers, James A. McDonald of San Francisco, California, W. G. Pirie of the Polishers, H. Connolli of Cleveland, Ohio, William Nettieslips of Canada and J. J. Crowley of the Tool Sharpeners' Union.

WELTON—HINKLEY.

A large number of relatives and friends were present at the wedding of Miss Louise Williams Hinkley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Hinkley, of 109 Billings street, Atlantic, and Alton Roy Welton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Avard L. Welton, of Lawrence, which took place at the home of the bride Thursday evening. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. George W. Cutter of Watertown, who is pastor of the Church of the Unity in Dorchester. The parlor of the house, where the wedding took place, had been very prettily decorated for the event and the artistic arrangement of the floral decorations were most attractive. The double ring service was used. The bride was unattended, while the best man was Winfield P. Warren, an intimate friend of the bridegroom.

Following the wedding, a reception was held from eight until ten o'clock, Mrs. Hinkley and Mrs. Welton, mothers of the bride and groom respectively, assisted in receiving. The ushers were the brothers of the bride, Harry W. Hinkley, Howard G. Hinkley and T. Malcolm Hinkley. After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Welton left for Washington, whence they will go to New York on their honeymoon. On their return they will reside in Medford.

George W. Hinkley, father of the bride, is a well known insurance man and one of the most popular residents of the Atlantic district.

The groom is a travelling salesman for a well established carpet company. While at school he proved himself proficient in various branches of athletics and was a runner of note, being an Olympic competitor in 1909, when he captured a place in the long distance races.

HYLAND—HAMILTON.

Miss Clara Hamilton one of the popular young ladies of East Milton was united in marriage Friday evening to Mr. J. Irving Hyland of this city. The wedding was a quiet home affair and took place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Robinson, on State street, the ceremony being witnessed by the immediate family only. Rev. Hamilton Woodsum, of the East Milton Baptist church was the officiating clergyman and the double ring service was used.

The bride was attended by her sister Miss Alva Hamilton, and the best man was Mr. George Choate. The bride wore a travelling gown of blue and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The bridesmaid wore a dark costume and carried red roses.

An informal reception followed the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Hyland left for a wedding trip returning from which they will reside on Glendale road, Quincy, where they will be at home after May 1.

LAKIN ASKS FOR MILLIONS

Judge George F. Gould, as attorney for Wilbur F. Lakin, of Robertson street, Quincy, has filed a bill in equity at Portland, Me., against Magdalena Bay Company of lower California, claiming that it owes him $5,000,000.

The company owns 4,000,000 acres of land bordering on Magdalena Bay in lower California and under the jurisdiction of Mexico. Two years ago a majority of the stockholders of the company formed a corporation in New Jersey, known as the Magdalena Bay Company and have been negotiating with parties for the sale of the property. The federal authorities are said to be investigating a report that these parties are representatives of the Japanese government who wished to secure it for a coaling station. An order restraining the company from disposing of the property, pending a hearing, was issued.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Still it is safer to cross the ocean than to drive behind old Dobbin.

The Titanic pasengers would rather have had fewer velvet upholstered chairs and more life boat seats.

About the only way to run a convention nowadays is to hand-cuff and gag the delegates and chain them to the floor.

As the Congressional investigations only cost $100,000 and no harm was done to anything they must be voted a great success.

It is not customary for most people to attend the caucuses, because if good nominations are made there is nothing to kick about afterwards.

Why is it that when the bank President offers you a ride in his automobile, there are never any of your creditors on the street to see?

The end of Clara Barton's glorious career got almost as much newspaper space as the Washington society woman who did the turkey trot

The Springfield Republican remarks that this campaign is not an afternoon tea, and Uncle Sam is getting so grouchy nowadays that he complains of hunger after being fed a square meal of nabisco wafers.

The Carpathia held back the details of the tragedy, but enterprising reporters with a pad of paper and newspaper accounts of previous disasters were able to give all the details.

The maintenance of the Panama canal is going to cost $30,000,000 a year, but as our local tax collector never asks us for anything for Uncle Sam we feel confident that this bill will be paid by some other fellows somewhere.

Old Ocean's caprices are grim and arbitrary. The leaky old Mayflower of 1620, in which today you would scarcely dare to sail the Mississippi river, crossed all right, while the $10,000,000 modern palace with complete scientific equipment goes to the bottom.

BUT FOR WIRELESS.

It is quite possible, had it not been for Marconi's wireless, that no survivor of the Titanic would ever have reached shore. The time for loading the life boats was pitifully short. It would scarcely been possible, in the turmoil of the moment to have provided the boats with adequate water and provisions. In that jungle of fogs, the boats might have wandered about helpless until all life was gone.

Such an outcome would have been even more distressing and portentous than the present dreadful calamity, for no one could have gained any information as to how it happened.

This dire disaster will have its effect on the science of ocean navigation for all time.. The question whether or not these great leviathans are getting too big to be handled will be thoroughly worked out in the light of the Titanic's enormous size and sad fate. The problems of better provision against ice, and a life boat seat for every one, will be the foremost thought among navigators.

Every scrap of information bearing on the causes of this wreck will be of value. Whatever is saved may be all due to the wonders of wireless.

FLOWERS VS. SHRUBBERY.

During recent years there has been a fad for seeding down the old fashioned flower garden into green lawns, and substituting shrubbery on the boundaries of a home lot or nestling under the house.

Lovely banks of flowering shrubs are aranged in this manner, and to one looking at a homestead as a whole, this foliage gives the garden a massive and heavy beauty that may be very impressive.

Rightly arranged groups of shrubbery should give one continuous bloom all the year, by rotation, and barberries or other colored berries will continue the touch of color all through the winter.

Nevertheless shrubbery is at its best only at a distance. The vitality that is concerned chiefly in making the woody fibers of tree-like shrubs like syringa and forsithia, can never produce the exquisitely delicate colorings of a tulip or a larkspur. A garden flower like a rose or a daffodil represents nature in her most exuberant mood, and is as much superior to anything shrubbery can produce as the precious stone is better than the handsomest wood work.

THE MARKET BASKET,

A Housewives' League has been formed in New York, the members of which propose to sally forth for a fray with the marketman every Wednesday.

A similar habit here and elsewhere would do more to reduce the cost of living than can be accomplished by telegraphing your congressman to twist the tail of the Money Octopus.

In other forms of marketing women are surprisingly efficient. The average man is paralyzed to see how his wife is able to discover defects and cheats and analyze wearing qualities in textile fabrics that are hidden to his crude eyes.

The reason for this is that most women have had to fight for their pecuniary lives on the clothes question.. In spite of all our boasted American chivalry, the majority of men are mean to women on the money question. While the raw Pole from Warsaw turns over his cash to his wife receiving from her such spending money as her judgment allots him, the majority of our men never give their wives any definite sum on which they can depend as a personal budget.

Living in this hand to mouth manner, as far as their personal needs go, driven to strategies and cajoleries to replenish their flattened pocket books, women have become exceedingly acute on values of all fabrics used in their own clothing. It was a case of struggle for life and survival of the fittest.

As respects household expenses, the average woman is not much more acute than men, because in that field the necessity has never been forced on them for being so. We imagine that not one woman in ten realizes that fish is not fresh unless it is firm in texture, with gills red, eyes full, fins firm and erect, and scales bright. Under the pressure of present high prices, however, it is probable that the next generation of women will become just as keen on food values as they are today on fabric values.

There is really a whole lot of pleasure in marketing, for the normally healthy and hungry person. Many travellers find the famous markets of Paris, with their carefully arranged pyramids of fruits and vegetables, much more fascinating than picture galleries and monuments. Every well kept market has the same appetizing tang in its sights and odors.

WOLLASTON M. E. CHURCH.

Sunday at 4.45 teh last choral vespers of the season will be sung at Wollaston M. E. church. The chorus will sing, with Miss Ethel Hague Rea of Dorchester as soprano soloist, Samuel Scholes, bass soloist, and F. G. Bennett organist. The chorus will sing, "I'm a Pilgrim," by Marston and "Like as a Hart" by West, Miss Rea will sing "Our King" by Rotoli, and "Oh For the Wings of a Dove" by Mendlessohn. The hymns will be "The Day is Dying in the West," by Sherwin and "Lead Kindly Light" by Dykes.

The pastor, Rev. Wesley Wiggin, will give a short sermonette; subject, "Freedom Through Truth."

ODD FELLOW'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Patrick Allen was held at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Allan McGeachie, 67 Cleverly court, Quincy Point, Wednesday afternoon. Burial was at Mount Wollaston cemetery, the Odd Fellows' service being used. A delegation of Odd Fellows was present.

Mr. Allen was a member of Newport News, Va., lodge, No. 92, I. O. O. F. He was very popular at the Fore River where he was employed, and a large number of his fellow workmen attended the funeral. The flowers were many and beautiful.

—An inland route would have saved from destruction the Staples Coal Company's barge "Thaxter," an old Philadelphia trader which foundered in a gale on the night of March 15th, off Shinnecock, while en route to Pawtucket, in tow of the tug "Cuba," with 1,500 tons of coal. The captain and crew, four in all, perished.—Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association.

REPUBLICANS STIRRED UP

Too Many Districts Where Republicans Get No Chance

QUINCY ON TAG END

There is considerable sentiment being stirred up among the Republicans in the House of Representatives over the new Congressional redistricting committee's report. The bill is not to the liking of some forty or fifty Republicans in the House, who charge that it provides too many districts where Republican nominees for Congress would get no chance of election. These malcontents have banded themselves together with the avowed purpose of either overturning the committee's plan or forcing some radical changes to be made which would be more in accord with their wishes. They have even gone so far as to draft a new plan for congressional districts and are asking that it be substituted in place of the committee's report.

Their scheme, which they claim would give the Democrats only two sure districts, makes quite a radical change in the committee's plan insofar as Quincy is concerned. The plan provided by the committee puts Quincy and Brockton, together with the towns of Weymouth, Braintree, Milton,, Ward 26, Boston, (Hyde Park) Dedham, Westwood, Norwood, Canton, Stoughton, Avon, Holbrook, Randolph, Abington Whitman, Sharon, Foxborough, Mansfield, Easton, East and West Bridgewater. This district has a population of 207,555, with an estimated Republican plurality of 6500 votes. On the other hand, the discontented members have a plan where Quincy is left hitched on to some of the Boston wards and while it is claimed that the proposed district would be largely Republican, still it is obvious to those familiar with the ways of congressional politics that Quincy would be on the tag end of such a district so far as being considered in the election of congressmen is concerned.

In the present tenth congressional district of which Quincy is a part, the dominance of the Boston wards has always made Quincy of little importance so far as the election of a congressman figures. In the proposed plans of the malcontents, conditions would remain practically the same.

In the redistricting committee's plan, however, Quincy would be one of the two largest places in the district, and would be a powerful factor in congressional elections. If the two factions in the Republican wing of the House of Representatives continue to war against one another, it is not improbable that the bill at issue will become hung up between the two branches of the legislature the result of which will be no redistricting at all and make it necessary to elect two congressmen-at-large from the State, and leave the tenth district as it is at present for another ten years.

Senator Barnes of Weymouth and Representative Roger Wolcott of Milton are both members of the redistricting committee and they will fight for the committee's report as against the suggested changes of the dissatisfied ones, all of whom as far as can be ascertained are representatives from northern and western Massachusetts. Representatives Leslie and Piper of Quincy, have attended the conferences but both of them are strongly of the opinion that the best interests of Quincy lie in the committee's plan, and unless something better, or at least equally as good is suggested, they will not be numbered with the disgruntled contingent.

A HARBOR OF REFUGE.

"All our eastern exchanges" says the March Marine Journal "brought graphic reports of the gale that visited the New England coast March 15th, and was particularly severe at Point Judith, and where the wind and rain were accompanied by a fog. Safe within the harbor of refuge, however, were the tugs "R. S. Arnott," "William E. Gladwish," and "Salutation," also eight barges, all of which fortunately got inside the shelter before the gale reached its height, and waited until it abated. Besides the tugs and barges, a small two-mast schooner sheltered behind the breakwater; also a 28-foot power fishing boat, which was blown from Southwest ledge fishing grounds off Block Island, and made the harbor some time during the 15th. At least a total value of $160,000 in cargo and vessel property was thus saved from disaster or total loss on this occasion.

"From the fact that the seas broke completely over the breakwater during the storm, the urgent need for raising the eastern shore arm the proposed five feet is shown, and the U. S. Senate should at once appropriate the $75,000 that has been recommended by the U. S. Army Engineers for this purpose.

All this points out that life and property could be saved by inland waterways as safe harbors are not often found along the coast.

BRIDGE BILLS BEING HELD UP

It looks as though the new Neponset bridge which was petitioned for at the opening of the legislature will not materialize. After getting a unanimous report from the committee on Roads and Bridges, the bill was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means and that committee still has it. On good authority the statement was made to the Ledger correspondent that the Ways and Means committee will give it an adverse report owing to the dissatisfaction expressed by the street car company in the apportionment of the costs. There is also some discussion as to whether the costs of the bridge should be borne in any proportion by the state. It is thought that it is only a question of time when the state will take over all the bridges in greater Boston, and if that is so it will be greatly to Quincy's advantage if nothing is done on the bridge proposition until that occurs.

The Town River dredging bill is held up by the Ways and Means committee also. Whether that committee will see fit to recommend the appropriation called for in this important bill is problematical at this time.

The boulevard bill is still to be acted upon by the committee on Metropolitan affairs, but it stands a very good chance of being reported favorably. A member of that committee told the Ledger correspondent that the Quincy boulevard would be included in a blanket recommendation covering several similar bills and would be reported upon in the near future.

COMING EVENTS CALENDAR.

Under this heading will be published forthcoming entertainments in the city. A one-line announcement will be inserted free of charge, but if any committee desires more publicity as to place, hour, date, admission, etc., it will be inserted at 25 cents per line each insertion. Look the list over, and if your entertainment is not included, send it in.

MARGARET MUNDY GAVIN.

Miss Mary L. Gavin, president of the Quincy Catholic club has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in the death of her mother Mrs. Margaret Mundy Gavin, widow of Patrick H. Gavin, who passed away at her home on Irving place after an illness of several years' duration, in her 62d year.

Mrs. Gavin has long been confined to her room, but to the end she maintained an unfaltering courage, a resignation, born of spirituality and a faith so steadfast that callers went from her bedside with a higher and a better view of life. Her passing, after so many years of suffering, was so peaceful that it was sometime after her spirit had returned to God who gave it that her children grouped about the bedside, realized that the earthly end had come.

Mrs. Gavin was born in Quincy and was the daughter of the late Hugh Mundy and a sister of the late Rev. John F. Mundy of Cambridge. As a young girl she was remarkably brilliant in her school studies and at the time of her graduation from the Quincy High school, class of 1886, she was valedictorian of her class. It is said that Mrs. Gavin and the late Dr. Joseph M. Sheahan, who was often tied with her for first honors, were the youngest students graduated from the High school, being 15 years old at the time.

In 1871, Mrs. Gavin was married to Patrick H. Gavin, one of the youngest civil war veterans who went out from Quincy and a prominent plumber, who did business here for many years. He died in 1893. Mrs Gavin is survived by seven children—George B., assistant day editor of the Globe; Mrs. Charles A. Hayes of Chicago; Miss Mary L., of the water department at City hall; Miss Sarah M., Miss Helen H., of the Poor department office at City hall; Blanche and Marguerite. Two sisters and a brother also survive her. They are Mrs. James Clarke of New York, and Miss Sarah A. Mundy of this city, and James Mundy of San Francisco. The funeral will be held Monday morning at St. John's church.

—A prominent citizen of Waltham advises that the people take pains not to scatter paper and rubbish in the streets and public places and that they also take an interest in keeping the city clean by picking up waste material when they find it convenient to do so. The main thing is to exercise care and cleanliness that will help to make the city attractive and healthy says the Waltham Free Press.

FORCEFUL TALK ON "SUCCESS"

Hon. George Carter at Wollaston Methodist Church

SOCIAL HOUR

At the monthly meeting of the Wollaston Methodist Men's club Thursday evening Hon. George Carter of Chelsea delivered a most forceful and interesting address on "Success."

Previous to his main topic, Mr. Carter, who is the leader of the large Carter class of several hundred men at the Meridian M. E. church and Bethel at East Boston, had a word to say concerning the vast amount of good done by men's clubs and men's classes.

His story of the redemption of Charlie Curtis, a tale of great human interest, was given as but one instance of the great saving power incorporated in a men's class.

"Every one desires success" said Mr. Carter, "and everyone can have success if he is ready to make the necessary sacrifices and work to accomplish it.

"A good many men drift instead of drive ahead and when the tide turns or the breeze blows they are driven off their course."

The speaker quoted Proverbs in the Bible which starts "Seest thou a man diligent in business," showing that this given and all things will be added unto him.

Learn to look ahead. Short sightedness prevents many a man from making a success in life. It all depends whether you aim for the paltry successes and pleasures of each day that goes by or the greater result of a successful life.

Concentration counts. Success to reach its mark must be the straight flying rifle bullet instead of the scattered fine shot.

A straight line is the shortest distance between two points and the straighter the course and the straighter your character the more quickly you will reach your destination.

The speaker told the story of Grover Cleveland's daughter, who in childish ignorance wished, her father could be a policeman with brass butons. There is room for the success of all, although we cannot all be president, and all of us may not desire to be policemen.

The straight, clean, upright, honest man always finds a place of honor for himself and brings good to the country in which he lives.

The speaker emphasized the practical application of the Bible. Contrary to common belief you will find 1000 precepts for success in this world to 100 for success in the next.

In closing the speaker quoted many prominent men on "Success." Thomas Edison said successes lay in one third inspiration and two thirds perspiration.

The business meeting opened with the secretary's report and other club business.

Owing to a shakeup in the editorial staff of the Wollaston Herald only the religious department was prepared in time for the meeting. This contained many votes and comments of interest.

Refreshments and a social hour followed the speaking. A nominating committee consisting of A. B. Cassidy, George Taylor and Rev. Wesley Wiggin was appointed.

RYAN BREAKS RECORD

Wins Marathon Race Under Decidedly Bad Road Conditions

Boston, April 20.—Michael J. Ryan, wearing the colors of the Irish-American Athletic club of New York, won the sixteenth annual Marathon race from Ashland to Boston, establishing a new record for the course of 2 hours, 21 minutes and 18 1-5 seconds. The old record was 2 hours, 21 minutes and 39 3-5 seconds.

The race was run in a rainstorm from the start and which continued until the reservoir was reached. The roads were inches deep in mud and conditions were about the worst in the history of the famous race, although the atmospheric conditions could hardly have been better.

Ryan's record was a great surprise, as it was not believed that there would be a chance at the figures on account of the condition of the roads.

Russia and Italy Agree

Paris, April 20.—Italy and Russia have reached an agremeent under the terms of which Italy will support Russian policies in the Balkans, while Russia will recognize Italian sovereignty in Tripoli, according to a special dispatch to The Decats from Vienna. If necessary Russia will back up Italy by a naval demonstration at the entrance to the Bosphorus.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

"I have known men, who have left their home land, and come to our country, the name America means more to them than it does to us who have always lived here. When we think of the name America we should think of all it represents. It means freedom, bravery, independence, speaking with clean lips and working with clean hands. It means a larger usefulness a more perfect realization of the Christian ideal

"After the recent massacre and burning of our schools and churches China, was forced to pay indemnity. John Hay, secretary of state used his influence to have the money returned. A college was built and it was named Indemnity college and China sent to our country for teachers and instructors. This college is finely equipped and is doing a marvelous work. Nations can seldom all be christians but individuals may, and the service this college is rendering to China and inciting by the example of deeper spirituality, fills us with admiration.

America's best gift to China is the fight against opium. The strong must pay the debts of the weak, the educated must pay teh debts of the ignorant. We stand as a servant to those who never had a chance. Shall we as Christians of America hesitate to do our duty?

"You women owe a debt to China You are guarded and tenderly cared for, in happy and comfortable homes Pour out before the Lord of your many blessings for the good of your sisters in the Orient. You Christian Endeavorers be deeply in earnest, in leadership, in loyal service. We must guard and develop our opportunities and pray that the spirit of trust may prevail in us and send us on our way with power to conquer, and remember to whom much is given much is required.

The evening service opened at 7.30 Rev. D. H. Woodward of Abington conducting the devotional services After the business of the evening had been disposed of a solo was rendered by Mrs. Emma S. Moore.

The speaker was Rev. A. P. Gifford D. D., of Brookline, and his subject "Consecration."

Dr. Gifford said in part: "Every nation has a golden language, and one wonders how so many fools get along when travelling. Every nation has its tasks, every nation has its specific work and duties, its aims and problems. We as a nation are great on politics, busy in social affairs, our clubs, social service work, and we like religion in the winter, just as the frost comes to ripen off the pumpkins.

"What do you mean by consecration? Consecrate is derived from the Latin word which means to set apart or fill your hand. If you devote a day to religious purposes, you set apart a day Just as when I was a boy Monday was washing day, Tuesday ironing day, Wednesday cooking day etc. But now the laundry lad comes to our house Wednesday, so you see it is not the day, so much as iti s we see fit the day to certain work

"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, Six days shalt thou labor, etc., so it was ground into us. When I hear a man say, I do not believe i nsetting apart a day for religion, I want religion every day, I think that man needs watching. We do need a day set apart for the worship of God.

"Keep your Sabbaths unto the Lord. Those who are bound to the shop, store, factory and books all the week need the Sabbath. Keep it sacred. Consecrate it. Be very honest with your money to the church Consecrate a certain part of your income to the church. Keep your account with God. Do you remember the hymn, nothing in my hand I bring, simply to thy cross I cling. I don't like it. Go to God's house with something in your hand and consecrate it to God.

"What is in thy hand, Moses? A rod, Stretch it forth, and the sea parted and Israel went across in safety. What is in thy hand Dorcas? A needle? Consecrate it to God What is in thy hand, little lad? My lunch, my mother prepared, a loaf and two fishes. And the Master took it, and lo a multitude was fed. What is in thy hand? A typewriter, a fountain pen, a sewing machine, a little money? Consecrate them to Christ. Christ's love can make Divine the drudgery of daily life. Consecration we need in all life's stern duties getting grace and beauty from the spirit of God in our hearts."

Carl Hayward, secretary, ably presided at the afternoon and evening sessions. The young ladies served lunch at noon and supper at 6.30 and much credit is due to them. The young men decorated the church very beautifully in the national colors, Wesley Beckford arranging the letters C. E. back of the pulpit with electric lights.

The different towns in Norfolk county were well represented, and Christian Endeavor Day will be remembered for the enthusiasm displayed and for the cheerful, happy faces of the many guests.

The courtesy of the city was extended to them, members of First church inviting them to visit their church, and other places of interest were at their disposal.

EXPRESSMEN GET A SCARE

Under New Law Liquor Permits Must Be Granted in April

SEVERAL HUNG UP

There are seeral expressmen in the city who came very near being shut off from any attempt to be granted a permit by the City Council to transport liquor into or in the City of Quincy. At the last meeting of the council fourteen permits were granted of those reported by the Committee on Licenses, three were laid on the table for further action and two of three were refused. In addition to these there are several on which the committee have not reported.

Up to this year it has not been considered necessary that such permits should be granted in April, as it was legal to grant them at any time during the year. Under an amendment to the so called Pony Express law passed last year which went into effect July 1, 1911, such licenses can only be granted during the month of April, to take effect from the first day of May. The law as it now reads is as follows:

Section 2. The Mayor and Aldermen of Cities and the Selectmen in Towns in which said licenses of the first five classes are not granted shall annually in the month of April, grant and issue one or more permits under the provisions of this act, to become effective on the first day of May following, and to be granted only to a person, firm or corporation regularly and lawfully conducting a general exxpress business and to no other person, firm or corporation; and every such permit shall specify the residence, street and number (if any) of the holder, and shall be subject to all laws now or hereafter in force relative to the transportation of such liquors.

This means that unless the applications pending are acted upon before the first of May they expire by limitation. This fact was evidently lost sight of when the Council adjourned to the regular meeting May 6, and in the call for the special meeting next Monday evening sent out Thursday by Mayor Stone no mention was made in regard to the subject so that it could not come up before the special meeting.

This morning however the attention of Mayor Stone was called to the matter and in order that the applicants might be given a show he decided to issue a supplementary call which was sent out this morning. This call reads that in addition to the matters named in the call of April 18, to act upon applications for liquor permits and applications for licenses to drive wagons for the collection of junk.

Although it is not absolutely necessary to act on junk collectors licenses this month the Mayor thought it best to insert this in the call as all such licenses expire on May 1.

ART LOAN EXHIBIT.

A loan exhibit is to be held next week at the club house of the Quincy Women's club, under the auspices of the Ara Committee of the club. This exhibit is to be one such as Quincy has not seen in a long time. An exhibit of this character is made possible through the efforts of Mrs. H. H. Kitson, who by virtue of her position in artistic circles an dthe world of art is enabled to procure this loan from Boston's famous artists. There will be oil paintings, water colors and miniatures. Besides these there will be a display of old laces and handicraft.

Among the exhibitors will be the work of Kronberg, Charles Woodbury, Kaula, Ernest Mayor, Leslie Thompson, M. L. Macomber, Charles Copeland, Abbott Graves, Melbourne Hardwick, miniatures by Sally Cross and others. There will be imported bronzes; several sketches from old masters, also some of the painting of the late Winslow Homer.

Tuesday, April 23d, is a regular club day and club members have the privilege of inviting a guest to attend.

It is however, recognized by club members and the committee that the public should have an opportunity to inspect these works of art before they are returned to Boston; so the pictures will be kept in Quincy over Wednesday and Thursday. On these afternoons any persons desiring to see the pictures may do so by paying a small admission fee. The Art Committee hopes that there will be a large attendance. The children from the Woodward and High schools should be advised to atend the exhibit and all of the Quincy teachers would enjoy it.

WHITE STAR LINE HEAD TALKS IN WHISPERS

Pushed Away In Boat With Women and Found Himself, Clad In Pajamas, Aboard the Carpathia—Denies Censoring of Messages From Rescue Ship—Says Titanic Would Have Been Saved If She Had Struck Head-On—Captain Rostron of Carpathia Also Contributes Interesting Testimony—White Star Line Places Number of Dead at 1635

New York, April 20.—The living cared for, the dead beyond recall, survivors of the Titanic disaster are able for the first time to see in calmer retrospect Monday's tragedy on the North Atlantic, and from their normal utterances there is slowly unfolded the full story of how the great White Star liner, her band playing to the last, sank off the Grand Banks with more than 1500 souls aboard.

From the Countess of Rothes, now quartered luxuriously in a New York hotel, to the six Chinese coolies who escaped by hiding under the lifeboat seats, all of the 705 have been provided with food and clothing, and some, immigrant and millionaire, are on their way home—to England, the continent, or distant parts of the United States. Many, however, and of these the hospitals shelter scores, still remain in New York, where the Cunarder Carpathia brought them.

Even after all that has now been told of the disaster, the death list remains aprpoximate. Thursday night's total estimate was 1535; yesterday the White Star line issued a statement, placing the toll at 1635. Exactly how many died never will be known.

Making Twenty-One Knots

It has been established officially, however, that the Titanic was traveling twenty-one knots an hour when she struck the iceberg. Notwithstanding this, however, none of the surviors, from steerage to saloon, have condemned Captain Smith, who went down with his ship.

The Titanic's rate of speed, which was approximately 26½ land miles, was attested by J. Bruce Ismay, president of the International Mercantile Marine and managing director of the White Star line, who appeared as a witness at the Waldorf-Astoria before the United States senate committee, which is investigating the disaster.

J. BRUCE ISMAY

Nervous, but not in tears, as was Captain Rostron of the Carpathia, who followed him on the stand. Ismay told in whispers of his escape from the sinking liner, from the time he pushed away in a boat with the women, until he found himself, clad in his pajamas, aboard the Carpathia.

Messages Not Censored

He was not sure in just what boat he left the Titanic, nor was he sure how long he remained on the liner after she struck. He added, however, that before he entered a lifeboat he was told there were no more women on the deck; and he denied there was any censoring of messages from the Carpathia.

Other witnesses, including Roston, bore him out in this, with the explanation that the lone wireless operator on the rescue ship, swamped with personal messages, was unable to send matter for the press.

Ismay testified that the Titanic sailed April 10, leaving Southampton at 12 o'clock noon. That evening the Titanic reached Cherbourg, having run at about 68 revolutions. "We arrived at Queenstown Thursday noon," he continued. "The Titanic was then running at 70 revolutions. The first day, I think, we made about 467 miles. The next day we increased the speed to 72 revolutions, and I think we ran 519 miles. The next day we increased to 75 revolutions, and ran about 546 to 549 miles.

"The accident took place Sunday night. The exact time I do not know, because I was asleep. The ship sank, I am told, at 2:30.

Not Running at Full Speed

"I understand you have been told that the Titanic was running at full speed. It never had run at full speed.

"She had been built to go 80 revolutions and never had been speeded up to that. We never had all her boilers working. It was our intention to speed the boat up to her full quota Tuesday, but the catastrophe came to prevent it."

Although he came on a "voluntary trip," Ismay said his purpose was to see how the ship worked and in what manner she could be improved upon. A representative of the builder, Mr. Andrew, was on board, Ismay said.

"Did he survive?" asked Senator Smith.

"Unfortunately, no."

Ismsay said it was arranged between him and Captain Smith of the Titanic not to arrive at New York lightship before 5 a. m. Wednesday. "There would have been no advantage in arriving earlier," he added.

Turning to the construction of the ship, Ismay declared that the ship was specially constructed so that with any two of the larger compartments in the ship full of water, she would still float.

"If the ship had struck head-on, she would in all human probability be afloat today," he added.

Rostron's Testimony

Captain Rostron followed Ismay. He said that he had been captain of the Carpathia since last January, but he had been a seaman twenty-seven years. He said he sailed from New York with the Carpathia April 11, bound for Gibraltar.

The captain told in detail of the arrangements made to prepare the lifeboats and the ship for survivors.

Arriving on the scene of the accident, Rostron testified he saw an iceberg straight ahead of him, and stopped at 4 a. m., ten minutes later he picked up the first lifeboat.

"By the time I got the boat aboard day was breaking," said the captain. "in a radius of four miles I saw all the other lifeboats. On all sides of us were icebergs; some twenty were 150 to 200 feet high and numerous small bergs, or 'growlers.' Wreckage was strewn about us. At 8:30 all the Titanic's survivorss were aboard."

Then with tears filling his eyes and falling down his ruddy cheeks, Rostron said he called the purser.

"I told him," said Rostron, "I wanted to hold a prayer—thanksgiving for the living and a funeral service for the dead. I went to Mr. Ismay. He told me to take full charge. An Episcopal clergyman was found among the pasesngers and he conducted the services."

As the prayers were being said, Rostron testified that he was on the bridge searching for survivors. He told of talking with the Californian, which had arrived. As he searched the sea, one body with a life preserver on floated by. The man was dead, probably a member of the crew, the captain said. The body was not picked up, the officer explaining, "because the survivors of the Titanic were in no condition then to see a body brought aboard."

After giving his testimony before the senate committee Captain Rostron took charge of his ship, which departed late yesterday for the Mediterranean.

Titanic's Crew Segregated

It developed that Ismay had instructed Vice President Franklin of the International Mercantile Marine to segregate the Titanic's men as soon as they arrived on the Carpathia. Ismay urged Franklin to take every effort to smuggle the men into seclusion as soon as they landed on the pier, and to make speedy preparations to get them out of the country.

The survivors of the Titanic, taken to hospitals on their arrival here, are generally reported to be improving.

Boston's First Suffragette Entertains Twice Thirteen Proposals of Marriage—Some Boston Women Still Chew Gum—Bay State May Offer Farms on Favorable Terms to Needy Homesteaders in Competition With Canadian Plan for "Ready-made Farms"—Little Known Facts about Violin Making Develop from Prize Competition among Music Students.

Are men afraid to marry suffragists as popularly supposed? It would not seem so from the experience of Miss Margaret Foley, the energetic young women who is called Massachusetts' militant leader. Miss Foley has twenty-six proposals of marriage to her credit, and she says that "every one who proposed to her wore that serious and worried look born of a lonesome heart." The heckling suffragist has suffered considerable annoyance from being cornered after her speeches, or in a crowded room, by some applicant for her heart and hand, and many of them have followed from one town to another in her campaigning tours during the election preliminaries of last fall.

Beauty, wealth and refinement of a kind supposed to be characteristic of Boston were clearly stamped on a young woman passenger on a suburban trolley car. Her features and complexion were of the kind that artists rave about, clear, perfect, velvety skin, beautiful eyes, faultless features, the woman of refinement and wealth in every item of her wearing apparel and in every motion. Her charm was of such unusual perfection that her fellow passengers found it difficult to keep their eyes from her. She was unconscious, apparently, of their glances of admiration, and busily chewed an inexhaustible supply of gum throughout the trip, with a regularity and energy of mastication that was as marked as the deceptive indications of refinement had been.

Plans by which poor people may acquire farms in Massachusetts are being slowly and deliberately worked out at the Statehouse on Beacon Hill by a Homestead Commission, headed by that indefatigable man of figures Charles F. Gettemy. The Commonwealth will presently be asked to sanction a definite scheme, which may prove useful if all the needy folk who would like farms have not in the meantime gone to the Canadian Northwest. While the Bay Staters deliberate and ponder over a practical philanthropy a plan is announced from J. S. Dennis if Chicago, representing the Canadian Pacific railway, whereby farm tenants throughout the United States will receive a ready-made opportunity on a ready-made farm on which buildings, implements, stock and poultry will be provided for every married rentor who has demonstrated his industry and knowledge of farming. The ready-made farms under this plan, it is said, will include five in Manitoba, ten in Saskatchewan and ten in Alberta. The railway company will prepare them by fencing each farm, building a dwelling, stable, granary, and dairy and if thought desirable a silo. In addition farm implements for growing wheat, oats, roots, crops and forage will be provided and each farm will be stocked with some 16 head of high grade cattle, 20 pigs, and 100 chickens. "A selected man will be put in charge of each farm to operate it for the account of the company," the announcement states, "but this arrangement is with the condition that if after a reasonable period agreed upon the man in charge has demonstrated his ability to succeed he will be permitted to buy the farm with its buildings, equipment and stock at the cost price to the company with the privilege of paying for it in six or eight equal annual installments." No wonder that when such chances are developing in Canada thousands of New Englanders are leaving for the fertile prairies to the Northwestward.

A competition just announced for the first annual violin prize, to be held at the New England Conservatory of Music in the near future, has developed some interesting facts regarding the familiar instrument. That some of the best modern violins are made in America; that these may be little inferior in quality to the instruments of the famous old Italian makers; that much responsibility for debasing public taste lies at the doors of manufacturers of very cheap violins; that the violinist is helped by knowing how practically to construct a fiddle—these are general ideas which one gets from talking with a professional violin maker whose violins, new and restored, are known to leading musicians throughout the country. "Without special reference to any one person's instruments," he says, "I believe it to be true that several men in this country are today making violins superior to those of their European contemporaries. The reason for ths superiority is not that we are so much more skilful than the best German and French makers, for we are not, but that we use older and better wood. Just look at this piece of spruce, taken from a house about 250 years old, lately demolished at Quincy, Massachusetts. That is the kind of timber we are all looking for. The longer it has been seasoned the better it is, other things being equal. Such wood most American experts use." The violin to be offered as a prize among the students of New England Conservatory is intended to approximate the ideal violin, and is being offered by its maker, O. H. Bryant, as at least as good as any instrument produced on the other side of the Atlantic.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. (Continued from last issue)

"What are you doin' here?" demanded the girl, as she endeavored to shake off his hand, but Carrington drew her into the shed, and closing the door, set his back against it. There was a brief silence during which Bess regarded the Kentuckian with a kind of stolid fearlessness. She was the first to speak. "I reckon you-all have come after Miss Malroy," she observed quietly.

"Then you reckon right," answered Carrington. The girl studied him from her level brows.

"And you-all think you can take her away from here," she speculated. "I ain't afraid of yo' knife—you-all might use it fast enough on a man, but not on me. I'll help you," she added. Carrington gave her an incredulous glance. "You don't believe me? That would fetch our men up from the keel boat. No—yo-all's knife wouldn't stop me!"

"Don't be too sure of that," said Carrington sternly. The girl met the menace of his words with soft, full-throated laughter.

"Why, yo' hand's shakin' now, Mr. Carrington!"

"You know me?"

"Yes, I seen you once at Boggs'." She made an impatient movement. "You can't do nothing against them fo' men unless I help you. Miss Malroy's to go down river tonight; they're only waiting fo' a pilot—you-all's got to act quick!"

Carrington hesitated.

"Why do you want Miss Malroy to escape?" he said.

The girl's mood changed abruptly. She scowled at him.

"I reckon that's a private matter. Ain't it enough fo' you-all to know that I do? I'm showing how it can be done. Them four men on the keel boat are strangers in these parts, they're waiting fo' a pilot, but they don't know who he'll be. I've heard you-all was a river-man; what's to hinder yo' taking the pilot's place? Looks like yo' was willing to risk yo' life fo' Miss Malroy or you wouldn't be here."

"I'm ready," said Carrington, his hand on the door.

"No, you ain't—jest yet," interposed the girl hastily. "Listen to me first. They's a dugout tied up 'bout a hundred yards above the keel boat; you must get that to cross in to the other side of the bayou, then when yo're ready to come back yo're to whistle three times—it's the signal we're expecting—and I'll row across fo' you in one of the skiffs."

"Can you see Miss Malroy in the meantime?"

"If I want to, they's nothin' to hinder me," responded Bess sullenly.

"Tell her then—" began Carrington, but Bess interrupted him.

"I know what yo' want. She ain't to cry out or nothin' when she sees you-all. I got sense enough fo' that."

Carrington looked at her curiously.

"This may be a serious business for your people," he said significantly, and watched her narrowly.

"And you-all may get killed. I reckin if yo' want to do anything bad enough you don't mind much what comes after," she answered with a hard little laugh, as she went from the shed.

"Come!" said Carrington to the negro, when he had seen the cabin door close on Bess and her lantern; and they stole across the clearing. Reaching the bayou side they began a noiseless search for the dugout, which they quickly found, and Carrington turned to George. "Can you swim?" he asked.

"Yes, Mas'r."

"Then go down into the water and drag the canoe farther along the shore—and for God's sake, no sound!" he cautioned.

They placed a second hundred yards between themselves and the keel boat in this manner, then he had George bring the dug-out to the bank, and they embarked. Keeping within the shadow of the trees that fringed the shore, Carrington paddled silently about the head of the bayou.

"George," he at length said, bending toward the negro; "my horse is tied in the woods on the right-hand side of the road just where you were taken from the carriage last night—you can be at Belle Plain inside of an hour."

"Look here, Mas'r Ca'ington, those folks yonder is kin to Boss Hicks. If he gets his hand on me first don't you reckon he'll stop my mouth? I been here heaps of times fotchin' letters fo' Mas'r Tom," added George.

"Who were the letters for?" asked the Kentuckian, greatly surprised.

"They was fo' that Captain Murrell; seems like him and Mas'r Tom was mixed up in a sight of business."

"When was this—recently?" inquired Carrington. He was turning over this astonishing statement of the slave over in his mind.

"Well, no, Mas'r; seems like they ain't so thick here recently."

"I reckon you'd better keep away from the big house yet a while," said Carrington. "Instead of going there, stop at the Belle Plain landing. You'll find a raft tied up to the shore; it belongs to a man named Cavendish. Tell him what you know—that I've found Miss Malroy and the boy; tell him to cast off and drift down here. I'll run the keel boat aground the first chance I get, so tell him to keep a sharp lookout."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The Keel Boat.

A few minutes later they had separated, George to hurry away in search of the horse, and Carrington to pass back along the shore until he gained a point opposite the clearing. He whistled shrilly three times, and after an interval of waiting heard the splash of oars and presently saw a skiff steal out of the gloom.

"Who's there?" It was Bess who asked the question.

"Carrington," he answered.

"Lucky you ain't met the other man!" she said as she swept her skiff alongside the bank.

"Lucky for him, you mean. I'll take the oars," added Carrington, as he entered the skiff.

Slowly the clearing lifted out of the darkness, then the keel boat became distinguishable; and Carrington checked the skiff by a backward stroke of the oars.

"Hello!" he called.

There was no immediate answer to his hail, and he called again as he sent the skiff forward. He felt that he was risking all now.

"What do you want?" asked a surly voice.

"You want Slosson!" quickly prompted the girl in a whisper.

"I want to see Slosson!" said Carrington glibly and with confidence, and once more he checked the skiff.

"Who be you?"

"Murrell sent you," prompted the girl again, in a hurried whisper.

"Murrell—" And in his astonishment Carrington spoke aloud.

"Murrell?" cried the voice sharply.

"—sent me!" said Carrington quickly, as though completing an unfinished sentence. The girl laughed nervously under her breath.

"Row closter!" came the sullen command, and the Kentuckian did as he was bidden. Four men stood in the bow of the keel boat, a lantern was raised aloft and by its light they looked him over. There was a moment's silence broken by Carrington who asked:

"Which one of you is Slosson?" And he sprang lightly aboard the keel boat.

"I'm Slosson," answered the man with the lantern. The previous night Mr. Slosson had been somewhat under the enlivening and elevating influence of corn whisky, but now he was his own cheerless self, and rather jaded by the passing of the hours which he had sacrificed to an irksome responsibility. "What word do you fetch from the captain, brother?" he demanded.

"Miss Malroy is to be taken down river," responded Carrington.

Slosson swore with surpassing fluency.

"Say, we're five able-bodied men risking our necks to oblige him! You can get married a damn sight easier than this if you go about it right—I've done it lots of times." Not understanding the significance of Slosson's allusion to his own matrimonial career, Carrington held his peace. The tavern-keeper swore again with unimpaired vigor. "You'll find mighty few men with more experience than me," he asserted, shaking his head. "But if you say the word—"

"I'm all for getting shut of this!" answered Carrington promptly, with a sweep of his arm. "I call these pretty close quarters!"

Still shaking his head and muttering, the tavern-keeper sprang ashore and mounted the bank, where his slouching figure quickly lost itself in the night.

HEROES TO THE LAST

Major Butt and Colonel Astor Worked Together Throughout Panic

New York, April 20.—Major "Archie" Butt died a hero's death. Knee-deep in the icy wash that swept over the bridge of the Titanic, the last view survivors caught of President Taft's military aide was his soldiery figure erect beside a fellow soldier—Colonel John Jacob Astor.

The rescued on the Carpathia said that Butt, Astor and Howard Case were the conspicuous heroes of the world's greatest sea disaster. It was Butt who lined up the panic-stricken women, met the frenzy of despair with the cool, calm judgment of the soldier, and was swept into the valley of the shadow of death unafraid.

His last good-by was smilingly said to Miss Marie Young, formerly a music teacher to some of the Roosevelt children. Miss Young had frequently met Butt at the White House. She was on the last boat to leave the stricken leviathan.

"Major Butt escorted me to a seat in the boat," she said. "He helped me find a space, arranged my clothing about me, stood erect, doffed his hat, smiled and said 'Good-by.' And then he stepped back to the deck, already awash. As we rowed away I looked back, and the last I saw of him he was smiling and waving his hat to me."

Dr. Washington Dodge of San Francisco thinks he saw the last of Butt. Silhoutted against the sky he saw Butt and Astor, heads erect, their arms apparently around each other's shoulders, standing on the bridge of the Titanic as the stricken vessel lurched into the cold, black water. Butt and Astor were together throughout the panic, Dodge said.

MINSTREL SHOW OF ASSOCIATES

Councilman J. R. S. Ross Officiates as Interlocutor

LOCAL HITS

The first of the two nights of the fourth annual minstrel show of the Houghs Neck Associates was held on Friday evening at the Palms theatre, under the personal direction of Henry W. French.

Councilman John R. S. Ross was the interlocutor. The ends were Clara R. Catarius, Mary Leary, Grace E. McGivney, Edna R. Catarius and George F. O'Brien, Clement R. Rose, Charles T. O'Brien, Harry Keasley and they caused many a laugh by the jokes.

The opening chorus by the entire company started the ball rolling and every number thereafter added to the success. The end song "I want to be in Dixie" made a decided hit and the singer received a beautiful bouquet. Edna Catarius sang "By the light of the Jungle moon."

Charles O'Brien's song, "Pullman Porter Man" was good as was the "Moving Man." "Don't take my baby grand" sung by Grace McGivney, Clem Rose sang 'Take a little tip from father," and had to respond to a round of applause.

"Ephraim Jones, Brass Band" sung by Mary Leary was also good and George O'Brien's song "Baboon Baby Dance," was the hit of the evening. As he sang the chorus a real live baboon came prancing on the stage and the grizzly bear dance was done to perfection. The song "I like music with my meals," concluded the end songs.

The soloists were Miss Bessie Hagan, Wallace Higgins, William Healy, Charles Hottleman, Henry R. O'Brien and George Boutilier.

FINE PROGRAM GIVEN.

The Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Cranch school held a largely attended meeting in the school hall Thursday evening. President George E. Pfaffmann in the chair reported for the committee in charge of school grading

MANIFESTO IS GIVEN PRESS

Lack of Adequate Life-Saving Appliances Is Criticised

THE OPINION OF SURVIVORS

Too Few Lifeboats and Rafts and Not Enough Trained Seamen to Man Them—Officers and Crew of Carpathia Praised—Some Important Recommendations—Suggestion That International Congress Be Called

New York, April 20.—The following statement issued by a committee of the surviving passengers of the Titanic was given the press:

"We, the undersigned surviving passengers from the S. S. Titanic, in order to forestall any sensational or exaggerated statements, deem it our duty to give to the press a statement of facts which have come to our knowledge and which we believe to be true.

"On Sunday, April 14, 1912, at about 11:40 p. m., on a cold starlight night, in a smooth sea and with no moon, the ship struck an iceberg which had been reported to the bridge by lookouts, but not early enough to avoid collision. Steps were taken to ascertain the damage and save passengers sand ship. Orders were given to put on lifebelts and the boats were lowered.

The ship sank at about 2:20 a. m., Monday, and the usual distress signals were sent out by wireless and rockets fired at intervals from the ship. Fortunately the wireless message was received by the Cunard steamship Carpathia at about 12 o'clock, midnight, and she arrived on the scene of the disaster at about 4 a. m., Monday.

"The officers and crew of the steamship Carpathia had been preparing all night for the rescue and comfort of the survivors, and the last mentioned were received on board with the most touching care and kindness, every attention being given to all, irrespective of class. The passengers, officers and crew gave up gladly their staterooms, clothing and comforts for our benefit, all honor to them.

"The English board of trade passenger certificate on Titanic allowed for a total of approximately 3500. The same certificate called for lifeboat accomodation for approximately 950 in the following boats: fourteen large lifeboats, two smaller boats and four collapsible boats. Life preservers were accessible and apparently in sufficient number for all on board.

"The approximate number of passengers carried at the time of the collision was: First class, 330; second class, 320; third class, 750; total, 1400. Officers and crew, 940. Total, 2340.

"Of the foregoing about the following were rescued by S. S. Carpathia: First class, 210; second class, 125; third class, 200; officers, 4; seamen, 39; stewards, 36 ;firemen, 71. Total, 210 of the crew. The total, about 745 saved, was about 80 percent of the maximum capacity of the lifeboats.

"We feel it our duty to call the attention of the public to what we consider the inadequate supply of life-saving appliances provided for on modern passenger steamships, and recommend that immediate steps be taken to compel passenger steamers to carry sufficient boats to accommodate the maximum number of people carried on board. The following facts were observed and should be considered in this connection:

"The insufficiency of lifeboats, rafts, etc.

"Lack of trained seamen to man the same (stokers, stewards, etc., are not efficient boat handlers).

"Not enough officers to carry out emergency orders on the bridge and superintend the launching and control of lifeboats.

"Absence of searchlights.

"The board of trade rules allow for entirely too many people in each boat to permit the same to be properly handled. On the Titanic the boat deck was about seventy-five feet above water and consequently the passengers were required to embark before lowering boats, thus endangering the operation and preventing the taking of the maximum number the boats would hold.

"Boats at all times should be properly equipped with provisions, water, lamps, compasses, lights, etc.

"Lifesaving boat drills should be more frequently and thoroughly carried out.

"Officers should be armed at boat drills.

"Greater reduction of speed in fog and ice, as damage, if collision actually occurs, is liable to be less.

"In conclusion, we suggest that an international conference be called to recommend the passage of identical laws providing for the safety of all at sea, and we urge the United States government to take the initiative as soon as possible."

The statement was signed by Samuel Goldenberg, chairman, and a committee of some twenty-five passengers.

TRIBUTE TO LOST HEROES

Rev. Fr. Scannell Pays Tribute to Titanic Heroes

PRAYERS FOR LOST

Prayers were offered in all the Catholic churches of the city Sunday, for the benefit of those who had lost their lives on the steamship Titanic. All of the speakers touched upon the incident, in the course of their sermons, and drew timely lessons from it.

At the high mass in St. John's church, Rev. Patrick J. Scannell, the assistant pastor, delivered a very touching and powerful sermon on "The Contempt of Death." He paid a glowing tribute to the heroes of the Titanic, saying in part:—

"Today men are coming to despise death more and more. Contempt of death is the basic principle of moral courage. The difference between a coward and a brave man is that the coward fears death, while the brave man despises it.

"The pages of history are replete with examples of heroes who showed almost superhuman contempt of death. When Columbus set out in quest of a new land, even the greatest scientists of the time thought he would meet with certain death, either as a result of being swallowed by the monsters of the sea or being drawn to fate by the suction of the waves. But Columbus himself entertained no such fear, for he was convinced that the earth was round and was determined to prove such to the world, without even giving death a thought.

"The work of the Sister of Charity on the battlefield, who ministered to the wounded and dying while bullets thundered about her, was an instance where there was not the slightest trepidation for death. The same may be said of Father Damien, who labored among two thousand lepers at Molokai, cognizant all the while that he himself was finally to fall a victim to the loathsome disease. The Spartan fighters entered battle with but one thought uppermost in their minds, to fight for the honor and welfare of their countrymen. In so doing the thought of death was always absent.

"One could go on enumerating others, but history has recorded no better examples of heroism, undaunted courage and contempt of death than were furnished last week by the sinking of the Titanic. Hundreds sacrificed their lives that the women and children on board might be saved. Such actions will be treasured up forever in the minds of those who read of the deeds and the names of the heroes will be linked with those who espoused the cause of exalting women in the days of chivalry.

"Words fail to give fitting tribute to John Jacob Astor, a man who had been flayed time and time again by misguided individuals, for the remarkable bravery and contempt of death he displayed at a most opportune moment. He exerted every energy of his manly frame to give his assistance to the women and children on board and even after kissing his wife, he took his place with the rest of the gallant ones who sank with the ship

"And who will fail to commend the spirit of Archie Butt? Archie Butt—the man who was termed the "carpet knight," and "butterfly" soldier." Yes, he must have been to exhibit such strength of character, such solicitude, for all others on board, as to allow himself to die, when he could have readily been saved. The words of President Taft are sufficient to attest to the courage and contempt for death shown by Butt, for the Chief Executive of the nation realized full well the worth of his aide-de-camp, when he said "When I learned that such a large number had gone down with the Titanic, I knew that Archie was numbered among them, for his manhood could not have allowed him to do otherwise."

POLICE MAKE LARGE SEIZURE

Bottles Containing Nothing but Alcohol and Ether

TERRIBLE LIQUOR

Liquor Inspector Goodhue, accompanied by Officer Hinchon raided the store of Charles H. Kristen at 13 Station street, Sunday afternoon and seized a large quantity of liquid composed of a mixture of alcohol, ether and opium, a combination which makes the drinker wild eyed and crazy . The police have been on the watch for some time trying to locate the source of supply for this kind of liquor, which some of the men arrested for drunkenness had in their possession, and from the amount of stuff seized Sunday it is evident that one of the places at least has been located.

This kind of drink is purchased largely by people from the northern parts of Europe. The effect on the drinkers, according to the police is to make them almost insane.

In the large number of bottles seized Sunday, each having an almost unpronouncable name were 75 bottles, containing 67 percent alcohol and 33 percent ether; 50 bottles containing 69 percent alcohol and 15 percent ether; and a few bottles containing 70 percent alcohol; 80 percent alcohol, 70 percent alcohol; 43 percent alcohol and 7 percent ether, 56 percent alcohol 63 percent alcohol; and 49 percent alcohol and one ounce of opium. Besides these liquors the officers found 20 bottles of plain Jamaica ginger.

NEW LIFE RAFT GIVEN TRY-OUT

Easily Launched and Will Sustain Nine People

UNSINKABLE

In the presence of a number of naval men, representing the United States and Argentine navy departments a life raft designed by H. J. Matson was successfully tried out at the yards of the Fore River Ship Building Co., Saturday afternoon, the United States navy department being represented by Naval Constructor Lloyd Bankson, who is on inspection duty at the yard. The raft is part of the equipment of the French line and considering the possibility of its being adopted by the United States government, the tests Saturday were made for its benefit. During the morning at the request of the Argentine naval officers a private test was made from the deck of the Rivadavia.

The trial Saturday afternoon was made from the edge of the wharf, near the old submarine boat house. When Mr. Matson pulled a small lever the raft shot forward like a square head torpedo. It turned completely over in the air and in a minute later a load of nine men was put on the raft. and it easily sustained them. The raft when it left the wharf was secured by long cords, which were easily released and removed after it struck the water.

Mr. Matson said that on the large steamships in use today it was possible to carry a number of these rafts along the sides of the deck. With a turn of a wheel it was possible to release all of the rafts on either side of the ship at the same instant thus forming a line of rafts on each side of the vessel.

The model was 10 feet by 6 feet and 26 inches deep and was said to be capable of sustaining 3000 pounds. It is of steel, with airtight compartments, and both sides are exactly alike. It is said to be unsinkable and uncapsizable.

Each raft is supplied with water and provisions capable of sustaining life in the occupants for at least eight days, and in the centre is a compartment where oars are kept and also lights to be used at night. The water compartment will hold 30 gallons and both receptacles have an opening from either side that may float upward on the water.

The most important thing about the raft is the easy way in which it can be sent into the water. When not in use it stands on the deck much the same as a lifeboat on the stocks. It is tilted at an angle of 40 degrees and can be realeased instantly by the pulling of a lever.

GRANITE SHIPMENTS.

Returns from the two granite shipping terminals for the month of March show the total amount of rough and finished granite shipped that month to have been 10,519,357 pounds which was quite an increase over the shipments of the previous month. Of this amount 7,227,025 pounds was forwarded from South Quincy and 3,292,332 pounds from West Quincy.

SPECIAL OF CITY COUNCIL

Important Matters Coming up for Consideration Tonight

DEBATE PROMISED

Tonight's meeting of the City Council, although a special one, will be most important. The annual appropriation order, which has been the subject of much oratory for the past two months will again come up for its final passage. Before being passed however there is sure to be some attempt to increase some of the amounts as now named. Whether these attempts will be successful or not remains to be seen. Attempts were made at the last meeting to increase the amounts without success but that will not prevent further attempts being made tonight. It should be born in mind however, that it will not be in order to increase any item to a sum that has already been voted down. That is if a motion at a previous meeting had been made to increase the amount of any particular item $5,000 and it was voted down, a similar motion for the same amount can not again be made. It must be more or less than that sum.

Then the granting of further permits for the transportation of liquor is sure to meet with considerable opposition. The City Council has already granted fourteen such permits which most people seem to think sufficient In addition to these granted, six are still pending before the council. Of this six, the applications of John Maloney, N. E. Alley and John Callahan are on the table, while the applications of Frank Rogers of the Houghs Neck Steamboat Co. The Adams Express Co., and Joseph Fostello are still pending before the committee.

There are some other matters in the call for the meeting but those mentioned above are the only ones likely to cause any debate.

ALEXANDER D. McGREGOR.

Word has been received of the death, Sunday at Hallowell, Me., of Alexander D. McGregor formerly of Quincy. Mr. McGregor was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, in 1857 coming to this country in 1882. He was for some years superintendent of a granite quarry in Quincy going later to Hallowell, Me. He was an active member of Clan McGregor, and the Foresters of America in Quincy. The body will be brought to Quincy for burial.

Young Men's Clothing

$10.00 to $16.50

THERE'S an air about the clothes we sell for Young Men that makes you feel at once that money spent in buying them will be the very best possible investment. To begin with they represent the highest achievement in ready-made clothes making—and Ready-To-Wear Clothing is the choice of most young men today. There are many reasons why. With a large number of ready-to-wear suits before him to try on, a young man can make a much more satisfactory choice than he can to go to a tailor's and select the cloth "in the piece" and the style, from a fashion plate. With the ready-to-wear clothing he can see just how the garment is going to look on him—how it fits his own individuality.

We know that we can please the young man who is looking for clothes that are different and classy; we have so many refined, tasteful and becoming styles, yet with plenty of snap and dash in them. Whether you want conservative clothes or those with the athletic lines and novelty touches, we can meet your requirements.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Law off on umpires. A hunter's license goes with each bleacher ticket!

The politicians are not so likely to nail cranberry jelly to the wall as to hand it rapidly over the pie counter.

There is a move to have the presidential term made six years. The politicians will feel that this makes a long time between contribution boxes.

There is a widespread feeling that Congress should make the Sherman law more explicit, but of course they can't do that, as it might hit some of their constituents.

When we were quite young we used to think all our political opponents should be hung, but now we are willing to compromise on sending them to jail.

As the coal strike will soon be settled, the public is anxious to know if it will not have a chance to contribute to poor but worthy operators through higher prices for coal.

C. W. Morse must enjoy reading that he has only six months to live. This being able to get your name in the paper without paying space rates has its drawbacks.

An Oklahoma editor is going to walk to the Baltimore convention. Considering the way the trains have been running, that is good judgment if he wants to get there in time.

Miss Anna Howard Shaw, who is to speak next Monday evening in Colonial Hall tells this story. A small, rather effeminiate man once asked her why she wore her hair short. She quickly replied, "Why, I was born so!"

Some of the powers think the Monroe Doctrine is dead. But as Uncle Sam has recently put $400,000,000 into a hole in his back yard, he is more likely than ever to see that that particular watch dog has his teeth cared for.

WOMEN FIRST.

Little chivalry is lying around loose now. Men will tip their hats to women with as deep bows as ever. But that calls for no effort, and it rather flatters a fellow's sense of self-esteem.

The heroic self-sacrifice of the men on the Titanic, who mostly remained behind to let the women and children be saved first, is a touch of old fashioned idealism that thrills the heart.

It sounds remote from these selfish days. It seems almost to go back to the time when armored knights rode over the country to rescue distressed damsels from dungeons. How many of us would have had the manliness to do it, assuming always that no compulsion was enforced on us by ship's officers?

Few men today are willing to undergo suffering to the extent of standing in a street car or railroad train, to provide women with a seat. Such social symptons make one question how far the rule of women first in time of disaster to shipping is due to innate chivalry, and how far to the autocratic rule of marine custom.

Evidently as far as the small army of male passengers on the Titanic are concerned, they could have swept their way into the boats against every command of the ship's crew, had they chosen, so that they should receive for all time the glory of their forbearance.

Women will stand the strain of actual pain quite as long as men. But when it comes to a fight for life with some elemental force like water or cold, they have not the physical endurance for it, and they would give way first from pure muscular weakness.

Human equity then sanctions this grim rule for the great crises of life. But the history of calamity has recorded many an occasion where it was broken, and men like wolves frantically pushed and jostled for safety. To take life on those terms would be to accept a stain that to a sensitive man would be a living death.

SPEED AT SEA.

The peril from icebergs in the North Atlantic, which has just resulted in the horrible Titanic disaster, might be averted if travellers were willing to spend a day or so more for a route farther south.

The risk could also be much reduced if it was permissible to run at a very slow speed through fogs But as any steamship company adopting that practice would find its passengers would rather gain a half day than be safe, such precautions are not likely to be adopted.

To the landlubber journeying over the lonesome wastes of old Atlantic there is a weird undertone of fear as he listens to the grim boom of the fog whistle. The luxury and power of the ship gives such an impression of all-conquering force that the grizzly face of death that lurks out on the waters may seem remote. The wireless dispatches posted on the bulletin board remove the old feeling of isolation.

But still you can never obliterate the common sense fact that no human power can wholly assure safety when a ship is driving ahead 15 or 20 miles into thick darkness, where no human eye can tell what lies just behind the grey wall of dripping mist.

The newspapers have been full of articles for some years telling how danger had been eliminated at sea. The old joke about the sailor in a storm who pitied the poor landsmen with the chimneys falling about them. has seemed to have a good deal of point.

The great ships have been coming and going with such monotonous regularity, that crossing the Atlantic seems safer, and probably is safer, than crossing the automobile infested streets of New York to reach the docks.

But as long as our restless human nature will persist in driving as fast when you can't see as when you can, the triumphs of modern science will not make the prayer for those that go down to the sea in ships wholly obsolete.

THE TELEPHONE EVERYWHERE.

The telephone business is some business. A little more than thirty years ago a 'phone was about as easy to find in a hurry as the needle in the haystack. Now they are, "in a manner of speaking," everywhere. The sign of blue bell strikes the eye even when you ride through a tiny village in the back country. The farmer who somehow managed to get along with little communication with his more distant neighbors in 1880 now is likely to have a 'phone and to be using it—he or his family—a good share of each day in keeping in touch with friends and neighbors who may be a half-mile or fifty miles away. The Bell system, it is reported, now reaches 70,000 distinct places in this country, although there are not 65,000 towns listed in the post-office list, and there are but 60,000 railway stations and 25,000 telegraph offices. In wire the exchange and toll service mileage is nearly 13,000,000 and last year there was an addition made of 1,290,000 miles, showing how the business is growing at this time. Now and then we have our troubles on the wire, but the telephone system is a wonderful help after all, and a mighty big institution. If it were tied up all over the country for an hour, howls of wrath and despair would go up all over the land, and here and there some forms of business would be almost at a standstill.—Brockton Enterprise.

COMMUNICATION.

Editor Daily Ledger:

I know your paper stands for the "Public Good" and I want to ask if something can not be done to prevent passengers on the electric cars being carried beyond their destination?

Conductors will not call out the name of streets even when asked by a passenger to do so. Last week the 19 inst. a working woman who boarded a Norfolk Downs car at Neponset asked the conductor twice to let her off at the Quincy Mansion school. He not only carried her to Quincy square but she was obliged to pay her fare back to her destination, Wollaston Park.

In rules and regulations for conductors and motormen of the Bay State Street Railway Company on page 44 Rule 111 we find.

"Announcing streets, etc., conductors must in cities, announce streets, public places, or other stops, and in other places, roads, etc., sufficiently in advance to prevent carrying passengers beyond their destination. This is especially important when running closed cars and always at night."

STEAMER SAVED BY BULKHEAD

El Sud, a Freighter, Narrowly Escapes Going to Bottom

BOW PLATES ARE RIPPED OFF

Galveston, Tex., April 22.—Hidden from each other in a dense fog, the steamship Denver of the Mallory line and the El Sud of the Southern Pacific Steamship company were in collision Sunday.

The two steamships came together with a crash that hurled those on the Denver's deck from their feet, while those in the staterooms were thrown out of their bunks. After the crash the vessels sheered off. All the passengers on board the Denver came on deck, most of them in night attire, and before the steamship had stopped were adjusting their belts.

Six of the crew of the El Sud were standing at the port side of the vessel well toward the bow when the two steamships struck. They were all hurled across the deck.

The crash occurred about fifteen miles from the Bolivar light at the entrance to Galveston harbor. For a time it was feared that the El Sud, which is a freight steamer, would sink. The El Sud raced for shore and was beached on Galveston bar. She was saved from sinking by her forward bulkhead having withstood the furush of the sea as the bow plates were ripped off.

There are about 100 passengers on board the Denver and a crew of seventy. There was a wild rush for life preservers and the lifeboats of the Denver after the crash, but Captain Staples and First Officer Lamb succeeded in quieting tne excited men.

The dense fog alone is responsible for the crash. The Denver was bound for Galveston from New York and had run into the mist bank just after midnight. Speed was reduced and the vessel was making little more than eight knots an hour when the El Sud was struck.

The El Sud, carrying a crew of seventy, was bound for New York with a maximum cargo and was also under reduced speed. Her commander, Captain Forbes, had doubled the lookouts, having men in the bow as well as in the crow's nest.

The El Sud came back to port yesterday afternoon under her own steam.

HOT AIR FOR DIPHTHERIA

Inhalation Destroys the Bacilli, According to French Doctor

Paris, April 22.—A remarkable new treatment of diphtheria has just been communicated by Dr. Robert Rendu to the Lyons Medical association.

Dr. Rendu found the bacilli extremely sensitive to heat and was able to kill them in fifteen minutes at a temperature of 50 centigrade, or one minute at 80. To apply such heat to the mucous membranes of the throat in which the diphtheria microbes congregate the inhalation of hot air seemed the only possible method, and on experiments on himself the investigator found he was able, without any difficulty, to inhale air at 100, or boiling point, for two minutes at a time.

Cases in which this treatment has already been tried on diphtheric patients are said to have been completely successful; but some doubt exists as to whether the cures are entirely due to the hot air or to serums applied at the same time.

LAST DAY OF CAMPAIGN

Forces Lining Up For Battle at New Hampshire Primaries

Concord, N. H., April 22.—Statements claiming the state for both Taft and Roosevelt were issued last night by the respective managers of the two candidates for presidential primary honors.

The campaign will close tonight and the primaries will be held tomorrow. A score of towns and cities will hold rallies for one or the other of the two candidates tonight.

Both sides have conducted a short but lively campaign, President Taft visiting the state early in the contest, while Colonel Roosevelt made a more recent appearance in the cities of the Merrimack valley.

GRIEVANCES ADJUSTED

Lowell Strikers Return to Work Under Ten Percent Advance

Lowell, Mass., April 22.—The cotton mill strike, which was started on March 25, was formally declared off by the I. W. W. at a monster mass meeting held on the South common Saturday afternoon.

By a vote of the 10,000 or more operatives who participated in the meeting, the unorganized Greeks joining, the workers of the six cotton mills of the city, employing more than 14,000 men and women, returned to their labors this morning.

The conditions under which they return are an advance of 10 percent in wages, time and one-quarter for all overtime and no discrimination shown towards the strikers on their return to their looms.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT. POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT.

Republicans of Massachusetts

Never since the Civil War have the people of this country faced a crisis of such vital importance as that now confronting them in their fight for popular government.

For years the corrupt politicians and the greedy representatives of special privilege have combined to rule the common people in their own selfish interest.

Under the sway of this unholy alliance popular sovereignty, as instituted by the fathers and perpetuated in the blood of countless thousands, has ceased to exist.

The rule of the people has given way to the rule of the interests.

That condition must cease if the United States of America is to retain its proud position of leadership among the nations of the world.

The crisis is at hand.

What shall be the outcome?

Shall it be the restoration of the rights guaranteed us under the constitution, or shall it be a riveting of the shackles of social and economic injustice upon the limbs of the people?

Shall it be the rule of the many by the few for the benefit of the few, or shall it be the rule of the people by the people for the benefit of the people?

You, Republicans of Massachusetts, will be called upon to answer that question at the presidential primary on Tuesday, April 30.

Upon the way in which you mark your ballot will your answer depend.

Never again, in all human likelihood, will you have an opportunity to cast a ballot which will mean so much to you and to those who come after you.

The issue is clear-cut, simple, unmistakable.

It is the right of the people to rule.

There is no other issue in this campaign.

If you believe the American people are fit for self-government, you will express that belief by marking your ballot at the primaries for Theodore Roosevelt and Roosevelt delegates.

If you think you are not entitled to a voice in your own government, if you prefer that this should remain a boss-ridden nation, you will vote for Mr. Taft.

Roosevelt has the confidence of the plain people of this nation as no other man has had it since Lincoln.

He has been tried and not found wanting.

For seven years he was tested in the crucible of popular judgment and emerged pure gold.

Taft has been tried and found lamentably wanting. He has proven himself an amiable, well-meaning but weak and vacillating President.

Roosevelt has proved himself with deeds—deeds done in the name of and for the benefit of the people.

Taft's deeds have been done in the name of the people, but largely for the benefit of the special interests.

Roosevelt is fighting today the battle of Abraham Lincoln for "government of the people, by the people and for the people."

Taft would improve upon Lincoln's immortal doctrine. He believes in government by "a representative part of the people."

In other words, the President believes in government of the people by the bosses—by Lorimer and Crane and Penrose and Cox and Gallinger and Barnes.

Remember that you are to decide on April 30 which of these two kinds of government you prefer—government of the people by the people, or government of the people by the bosses.

Nothing now can keep victory from the people but the people themselves.

Massachusetts was the first to respond when Lincoln issued his call to arms at the outbreak of the Civil War.

Roosevelt has issued a call to the people to save the nation from tyranny.

Let Massachusetts be one of the first to respond as she was in that other great crisis.

Our votes in Massachusetts may hasten the hour of deliverance.

The eyes of the struggling masses the country over are upon us here.

In Illinois, Pennsylvania, Maine, Nebraska and other States the people have risen up in solid phalanx against the Moloch of Big Business and broken the strangle hold of the political boss.

Let us stand behind them in Massachusetts. Let us not undo the work they have so well begun.

Let us go to the polls on April 30 and vote for THEODORE ROOSEVELT AND ROOSEVELT DELEGATES and help to bring about once again in this nation a new birth of freedom.

REMEMBER YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE ENROLLED IN ANY PARTY TO VOTE AT THIS PRIMARY.

MASSACHUSETTS ROOSEVELT COMMITTEE

OUT FOR A RECORD.

Mrs. Cornelia Andrews, aunt and guardian of Miss Gretchen N. Longley of Hudson, N. Y., who was graduated a few years ago from the Quincy Mansion school and who was rescued with her from the Titanic and arrived in New York Friday morning on the Carpathia, said in an interview:

"We were in bed, and when the crash came we partially dressed and hurried to the deck There was an officer with a revolver, who threatened to shoot if any one started a panic. The women and men were brave. A few stokers showed cowardice and they were quickly quieted.

"We felt angry at this accident. When the vessel struck she was out for a record which they promised to make and did not realize the seriousness of the accident at first only thinking of the delay and for a record hundreds of people as well as the ship are at the bottom of the sea.

Mrs. Andrews and Miss Longley were returning from a five months' trip abroad. Miss Longley has many friends in Quincy and Boston and was exceedingly popular while a pupil at the Quincy Mansion school.

FREE SHADE TREES.

Free trees will be distributed to the householders of Denver by the city on municipal Arbor Day in April. The expense of purchasing the saplings will come from the streets, and boulevards, fund, as provided in the mayor's budget. It is believed that about 15,000 trees, mostly maples and elms, will be given away.

Last year's distribution was a great success. The trees were in excellent condition, and practically all were planted according to the rules laid down by the city forester. It is estimated that eighty-eight per cent of last year's crop is thriving.—Denver Municipal Facts.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

BETHANY CHURCH.

There was a good attendance at Bethany church Sunday morning. The pastor, Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott occupied the pupit, taking for his text, Matt. 26, 45, 46. "Then cometh he to his disciples and saith unto them, sleep on now and take your rest; behold the hour is at hand and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners." "Rise, let us be going: behold he is at hand that doth betray me," subject, "The Irrevocable past and future opportunities."

Appropriate music was rendered by the choir under the direction of Miss Shepard the new organist.

Before the sermon, Mr. Willmott gave a talk to the children on, "Reverence" He said in part: "You are taught to be reverent to your parents, your instructors, and to honor the great and good men of your country, but above all be reverent in the church, the house of God. Have reverence for the Bible, serve God with reverence and be reverent in prayer.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

A large congregation attended the Wollaston Baptist church Sunday morning at 10.45. The pastor, Rev. Joseph Walther preached to the children on "The Great refuge from the Storms of Life," and to the adults on "Three Great Certainties of the Apostle Paul."

Three hundred and twelve were present at the Sunday school of which Elford L. Durgan is superintendent. 82 were in the primary department. The Albee class of women had 42 members present. In the Rand and Walther classes for men there were earnest discussions of the Titanic tragedy as well as the current lesson on "The Calling of the Twelve."

The Junior Endeavor society met at 3.30 in the chapel. Miss Annie L. Flieger had charge of the meeting in the absence of Miss Ethel M. Campbell, superintendent.

The Y. P. S. C. E met at 6 o'clock preparatory service at 5.45 in the Albee class room. Subject of the Endeavor meeting "The Christian Virtues —Perserverance," leader Mrs. George Christopher.

The evening service was held at 7 o'clock in the auditorium. The pastor preached on "Ruth's Choice."

This evening a number of our young people will attend in the Park Street Congregational church, Boston, an anniversary meeting of the "World in Boston. There will be pageant music under the direction of Mr. Cutter who had charge of the music when the "World in Boston" was held a year ago. There will also be stereopticon views of various expositions and addresses by Rev. F. P. Haggard D. D., of Boston and Harry Wade Hicks of New York.

Tuesday afternoon at 4 the pastor's class in the Fundamental Principles of the Christian Faith, will meet at the parsonage. In the evening at 7.45 a cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Porter, 109 Taylor street, Phillip S. Dresser, leader.

Wednesday afternoon at 4 the pastor's second class in the Fundamental Principles of the Christian Faith will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Grass, 52 Ardell street, Montclair.

Friday evening at 7.45 a public meeting of the Woman's Missionary society will be held in the chapel. This meeting will be held in connection with the regular meeting for praise, prayer and testimony. A speaker from Boston is expected to be present and everyone is cordially invited.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

The beautiful Sunday morning and the excellent musical program were not altogether responsible for the unusually large attendance at the Wollaston Congregational church. All wished to hear Rev. I. W. Sneath, Ph. D., of New Haven, Conn., an able preacher of wide experience and a man of scholarly attainments and genial personality.

His subject was, "Another's Soul." The text chosen, Ps. 142:4. Dr. Sneath pictured the bitter loneliness of David when the psalm was written; unconscious of a single friend, or any man who cared for him or his soul. He cited instances of many people today who are in a similar condition. He had a profound conviction that many were yearning for that which is better, if any one was interested in their moral welfare. "The soul," he said, "is the supreme object of consideration. The satisfaction of the soul is abiding, while all other things are transient and fleeting." Many people, afflicted in various ways, are happy and content because their lives are centred upon things lofty, abiding, eternal. "For the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal."

He emphasized the fact of parents anxious for the intellectual and physical development of their children but forgetful of the soul. The duty of any teacher is not primarily to cram with book knowledge but to give inspiration and guide children to the truest noblest vision of life.

"Interest is the key to capture the soul.. Today we are given too much to censure and criticism rather than to praise. The secret of salvation is not in censure. Linked together with interest must also be a spirit of sacrifice. They are inseparable, both charterize the spirit of the Master. Where interest is there will be sacrifice.

"But one thing more is most essential—a profound spiritual life within ourselves. We must seek our own soul culture to influence others. Great musicians never play until the soul is full, then music is the overflow. When the soul gives out to others it is the over flow." In closing he touched briefly upon the terrible disaster which had occurred at sea and showed how the spirit of love and sacrifice for others had been manifested."

Dr. Sneath conducted the evening service at 7 o'clock. The subject of his discourse, "Eating the Shew bread." A large audience was present.

The Christian Endeavor met at 6 o'clock, leader: Charles M. Johnson.

Wednesday at 2.30 P. M. the Ladies Benevolent society will hold their last meeting before the election of officers. Miss Jenny N. Purchase, general secretary of the associated charities will speak. The second-hand clothing for Cotton Valley, Ala., will be received at this time.

Thursday at 7.45 P. M. the Christian Endeavor business meeting and social will be held in the vestry. Election of officers and committees.

Friday at 7.45 P. M., the usual evening meeting for prayer and praise will be held, Rev. Edward Norton presiding.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

At the morning service of worship Rev. Carl G. Horst referred most feelingly to the life and character of the Rev. Charles G. Ames of Boston, who last week passed to the higher life, and read his poem "The Soul lives Ever" as part of the devotional service. Just before the sermon the congregation sang "Nearer my God to thee," a hymn writen by a Unitarian which has comforted so many on their journey through the gate of death and which the band was playing as the Titanic went to its watery grave. The theme of the sermon was "The Great Catastrophe."

Mr. Horst said: "It is not for me to place the blame, but for a minister of the gospel, if the Episcopal clergyman from Philadelphia is reported correctly in the newspapers, to say 'It was the hand of God that sank the Titanic and sent it to the bottom of the sea'—is to me rank blasphemy. Who can believe such stuff! In the days of ignorance and superstition men looked upon such disasters as the punisment of God for the wickedness of the people. If a horse ran away on Sunday and killed the driver, if a boat capsized and the oarsman was drowned, if a barn was struck by lightning or a house demolished in a storm or a theatre burned, it was declared to be the judgment of God.

"This kind of explanation, however, satisfies no intelligent person in our age. We know that churches burn as often as theatres and that the bodies of godly men are mangled as horribly as those of sinners. No, God did not loosen an iceberg from the arctic region and send it on its way to destroy the finest, most up-to-date ship. It is natural for large masses of ice to come from the north this time of the year. In the natural course of things this iceberg came where it was that it might leave its frozen state and mingle once more with the waters of the Atlantic. It had a perfect right to be where it was and it was the business of that steamer to keep out of its way.

"The history of civilization is the story of how man had domesticated the powers of nature and made them his servants. In the endeavor to learn nature's secrets we have learned that God governs this universe by eternal, immutable laws. There is no irregularity, no freakishness in the operation of God's laws. In what we sometimes call the heartlessness of nature, lies our safety. A universe of caprice could offer no safe abode to dwell therein. In subduing the air and sea and the land we must run risks and take chances and make ventures. We know in part and using what we know, we press onward into the unknown, and because we know what we know in part is good, we trust in good beyond our ken. Our trust is based on knowledge, not on ignorance.

"We know not what a day may bring forth. In the midst of life we are in death. We never know when we must discontinue our journey. And because we know not what a day may bring forth we must not trust to the things of this earth that we so soon must leave. There were millionaires with an abundance of jewels and money, enjoying every conceivable comfort and luxury but what help were they in the hour of need! In the hour of death nothing avails but faith in God. Even if we should meet death in some frightful disaster, let us not forget that the shattering of the body does not mean the extinguishing of the soul. As Emerson sings 'If my ship sink, 'tis to another shore.' "

In the evening the Young People's Religious Union held an inspiring musical service with soprano solos by Miss Penley and baritone solos by Waldo Bates and two solos on the flute by Fred Park of Harvard. The devotional service was led by the president Lucien Thayer.

The Unitarian Church-Helpers will give a spring luncheon in the vestry Wednesday at one o'clock. The committee in charge are: Mrs. E. S. Taylor, Mrs. William H. Boynton, Mrs. Paul Brodbeck, Mrs. L. C. Holbrook, Mrs. Charles E. Barker, Mrs. Roy C. Baker.

The annual meeting of the New England associate Alliance will be held at the Stone Temple, Quincy, Thursday. Mrs. Chandler Smith of Wollaston will preside. At 10.30 there will be reports and election of officers. In the afternoon E. Ethelred Brown will speak on mission work among the people of Jamaica and Rev. Charles E. Park of Boston on "The Art of Going to Church."

The social committee of the Y. P. R. U. Federation of which J. Harry Hooper is chairman, has arranged a night of "Federation Follies" to be held at the Hyde Park Unitarian Church vestry, Thursday, April 25 at 8 o'clock. All are invited.

The annual meeting of the Boston Federation of Young People's Religious Unions will be held Sunday afternoon and evening, April 28, in the Stone Temple, Quincy. In the evening at 7 o'clock the Rev. D. Roy Freeman of Braintree will speak on "Seven Steps to Success."

We are glad that the number of Young Men's Christian Associations, who have done away with the so-called evangelical test and welcome to full membership members of the liberal churches, is increasing. Would it not be a splendid thing for our own Quincy Y. M. C. A. to take this stand and welcome to full membership the members of the Unitarian and Universalist churches? What is being done in Gloucester, Mass., in David City, Nebraska, and elsewhere ought to be done in Quincy.

TAKE LIVES IN HANDS

Dewey Thinks Passengers on the Big Liners Are Not Safe

Washington, April 22.—"I think that every passenger who crosses the North Atlantic takes his life in his hands," said Admiral Dewey.

"For myself I would rather go around the world in a well equipped man of war than make a trip across the North Atlantic in a transatlantic vessel.

"The greed for money making is so great that it is with the sincerest regret that I observe that human lives are never taken into consideration.

"Let all good Americans exert every energy to have the present laws amended as regards life saving appliances on board every passenger carrying vessel. I don't believe that a passenger vessel should be cleared unless she has boats sufficient to float the great majority of her precious cargo in the event of an accident. It is appalling to think that the Olympic is appalling to think that the Olympic, when she struck the Hawke, according to reports, had boats sufficient to carry only one out of every six passengers.

"The most unfortunate part of the fatality is that most of the drowned are Americans, and we Americans surely have some rights in the matter. It is very easy to picture an American of the type of Major Archibald Butt doing all he can to insure the safety of the women and children on board the Titanic, knowing that within a very short time he will face his Creator. I sincerely hope congress will attend to the matter of caring for the lives of passengers aboard our transatlantic vessels. Is there any need for a more striking example?"

AN ENGINELESS 'PLANE

Hands and Feet Are Motive Power In Machine Invented In France

Paris, April 22.—The aviation sensation is the feat of a workman named Flament, who flew over two miles in a motorless aeroplane. Flament has been working over a year at the problem of an aeroplane, actuated by the exertions of the pilot, for the solution of which a prize of $2000 has been offered by a leading firm.

After constructing a number of unsuccessful models, Flament built a monoplane about sixteen feet long and twenty-four feet across the wings, with a propeller six feet wide, which ne works with his hands at a speed of 200 revolutions per minute. All the levers of control are worked by the feet and the whole apparatus weighs no more than seventy pounds.

With this machine, which he calls an aviette, Flament made a flight in which he made a speed of twenty-five miles an hour at a low level, the trip coming to an end with a fall, which the aviator declares was not due to a fault in the principle of the invention, but to hitching the steering wire in a pulley.

WORKS OF ART TO BE SHOWN

The Loan Art exhibit which is to be held in Quincy at the Women's clubhouse, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, this week, will give real pleasure to those who visit it. New York and Boston often have such exhibits, but Quincy has never undertaken to display work of so high a grade. There is inspiration to be obtained from studying works of art which the art critics have pronounced complete.

The Art Committee has been to great expense to transport these pictures to Quincy. They must employ a watchman, insure the pictures, hire experts to handle them and take extreme measures because of their value. Now, in return, the committee hope our people will walk up to the clubhouse, on Goffe street and spend a quiet hour or half-hour looking at what authorities deem some of the best products of Boston artists' brushes.

Tuesday is a club day for members and guests. Wednesday and Thursday afternoons are open to the public. There will be a small admission fee charged to help cover the expenses. Teachers of our schools and school children will be admitted for ten cents each. The students from the High school and Woodward institute will enjoy inspecting the collection of oil paintings, water colors and miniatures.

TO FIGHT THE MACHINE.

Matthew Hale, manager of the Roosevelt campaign in Massachusetts, issued a statement today, in which he sharply criticized the methods which the Taft leaders are employing in this State.

Manager Hale said: "The machine now has it back to the wall. Its leaders realize that it looks virtually certain that Col. Roosevelt will carry Massachusetts and that the cause of the people will triumph over the cause of the machine

"The Taft men are desperate. They are resorting to the anonymous circular and the 'gag.' The state is being flooded with unsigned political literature teeming with the false statements. To these no responsible man apparently dares to put his name. They are doing this in open defiance of the laws of this State, which not only prohibit this kind of cowardly campaigning, but make the offenders liable to a jail sentence.

"In certain sections of the State, particularly the towns no provision has been made for registration for the primaries.

"The Taft men would narrow the contest down to as few voters as possible, with the hope that the machine-controlled men may be able to dominate the coming primaries.

"In some cities they have provided that the voting shall be done in a single polling place, instead of by precincts. This is another method by which they would make it as hard as possible for the voters to avail themselves of their right of franchise.

"The machine has from the outset been fighting a free expression of the preference of the rank and file of the voters of the Republican party at the coming presidential primaries. Its leaders fought the primary bill from the start. They surely can't be charged with being inconsistent in this respect.

"But their fight is a hopeless one. The great majority of the rank and file of the party in this State, I feel confident, will stand with the Republicans of Maine, Illinois, Pennsylvania and other States, and vote for the nomination of Col. Roosevelt and the defeat of the machine.

"The voters of this State realize that they do not have to be enrolled in either party to go into the coming primaries and cast their ballots for Theodore Roosevelt.

"The machine may do its worst. The people are aroused to the situation. They have confidence in Col. Roosevelt as a man who really knows their needs and who accomplishes things. From the outset the members of the Roosevelt committee felt that President Taft could not be elected if nominated. It is safe to say that a large majority of the voters of this State now feel this way. They realize also that Taft cannot now even be nominated and that Col. Roosevelt not only can be renominated but elected."

ABORN OPERA COMPANY.

For the third week of their annual spring season at the Boston Opera House, starting Monday night, the Aborn English Grand Opera company will give eight performances of the Puccini's masterpiece, "Madam Butterfly" and two special afternoon presentations of Humperdinck's charming fairy opera, "Hansel and Gretel." "Madam Butterfly" will occupy all of the regular weekly performances,—six nights and the established Wednesday and Saturday matinees. It's cast will include Dora De Phillippe and Ivy Scott, sopranos, alternating in the title role, Louise LeBaron in the contralto role of Suzki, Henry Taylor tenor, as Lieut. Pinkerton, Morton Adkins, baritone, as Sharpless, Florence Coughlan, soprano, as Kater Pinkerton, Philip Branson, buffo, as Goro, and Edmund Ormey, basso as the Bronze and Yamadori.

"Hansel and Gretel" will occupy two extra matinees introduced on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons of the coming week only. This will be the first presentation of this work in Boston in English, although it has been heard in German, attracting large audiences. On account of the particular appeal of "Hansel and Gretel" to children, the two matinee performances of this opera will not start until 3.15 P. M., so that school pupils may attend conveniently.

The fourth week of the Aborn season at the Boston Opera House, beginning Monday, April 29th, will be given to eight performances of Massenet's "Thais," and other operas to follow are "Il Trovatore," 'Carmen," "Rigoletto," "Lucia," "La Boheme," "La Tosca" and "La Gioconda."

TURNED NORTH AT ONCE

Frankfurt Arrived at Scene of Disaster After the Carpathia

Bremen, April 22.—The North German Lloyd Steamship company has issued the following statement, after having taken under advisement the statement made by Harold S. Bride, the assistant wireless operator of the Titanic, regarding the steamer Frankfurt:

"We sent a wireless message to the Frankfurt and have just received the following reply: "The steamer Frankfurt returned north immediately after getting the signal of distress and arrived at 10:50 at the scene of the disaster. The distance was 140 miles. We found the steamers Birma, Virginian and Carpathia there. Hattorf."

Captain Hattorf is commander of the Frankfurt. According to the testimony given by Bride before the senate investigating committee, the first reply to the Titanic's call for help was received from the Frankfurt.

"We sent the C. Q. D.," said Bride, "and the Frankfurt answered. We sent our position and the Frankfurt replied 'Stand by.' About twenty minutes later the Frankfurt asked: 'What's the matter?' We answered: 'You're a fool; keep off and don't interfere.'"

Bride went on to testify that they had asked for the position of the Frankfurt and the only answer was "stand by."

Bride also testified that responses came from other steamers, including the Carpathia. Because of the relative strength of the messages, Bride said Phillips, the chief wireless operator on the Titanic, who was at the key, decided that the Frankfurt was nearer to the Titanic than the Carpathia.

The statement by Hattorf, which gives the disance of his vessel from Titanic as 140 miles, shows that the Carpathia was much closer to the scene of the disaster than the German steamer. The Carpathia was only fifty-eight miles away when she received the call.

Painter Had No Choice.

"May I ask," inquires the interviewer, "why you paint none but nudes?" "Certainly," replies the painter. "The styles change so rapidly in clothing that a picture would be out of date almost before the paint is dry."—Chicago Post.

BRIEFS

The weekly whist tournaments at the Granite City club will close with Wednesday night's tournament.

Work grading the lawn about the new court house is nearly finished and adds greatly to the appearance of the building.

Carle, the City Square barber is confined to his home, having fractured two ribs by a fall in his shop a few days ago.

The flag at City Hall is at half mast today in memory of the Titanic which sank a week ago today.

The many friends of James F. Burke the well-known real estate man will be sorry to learn of his illness, but trust to see him out again soon.

Mayor Stone was the guest of the Houghs Neck Associates Saturday evening at the second night's performance of their annual minstrel show.

Open street cars were in general use Sunday. The day was exceptionally mild and there was but little wind. Along toward night however the air became a little cool.

The family of Mr. Murphy who for a short time lived on Goddard street have returned to their former home in Lynn. Mr. Murphy is well known to the public as he is one of the managers of the Orpheum Theatre on Franklin street.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Memorial Church, are making preparations for their spring sale, which is to be held in the vestry Wednesday afternoon and evening. Mrs. Harry Read is chairman of the fair; Miss Maud Read is in charge of the evening's entertainment.

There was a constant stream of automobiles going in both directions on Adams street Sunday afternoon and it was difficult to cross the street with safety near the Adams Academy. One had to use unusual care to prevent being run down. Many drivers of automobiles seem to think people on foot have no business to cross streets, and that they own undisputed right to the streets.

Quite frequently we hear the remarks "pigs might fly, but they don't." A certain merchant prominent in social and political circles had reason to think a few days ago that perhaps pigs do fly. He started with two and when he got home he found only one. In Monday's Globe he found that Mr. Hank Dank had also lost a pig and he is still wondering how the Globe man found it out.

Federal Probe of the Titanic Wreck Will Be Exhaustive

HICHENS IS BROUGHT BACK

Quartermaster of Ill-Fated Steamer, Taken From Liner at Sandy Hook, Must Testify—Wireless Operators Tell What They Know of Events Immediately Preceding Disaster—Titanic Warned of Icebergs Only a Few Hours Before She Struck—Fifty Men Fought For Place on Overturned Lifeboat—Telegram Reporting "All Saved" Not Sent From the Carpathia

New York, April 22.—With dramatic suddenness the senate investigation of the Titanic disaster ended, as far as the New York hearing was concerned. It will be resumed in Washington, when J. B. Ismay and P. A. S. Franklin, the chief officers of the White Star Line, and more than twenty of the officers and crew of the sunken vessel will appear before the committee.

Quartermaster Hichens of the Titanic, who with members of the crew, was on board the Lapland bound for Liverpool, was taken off the Lapland at Sandy Hook on a subpoena from the senate investigating committee. Hichens was brought back on a tug. It is said Hichens was at the wheel when the Titanic struck.

In addition to these witnesses, all American survivors of the wreck will be subpoenaed as witnesses before the committee in Washington.

Incident to the sudden close of the hearing here was the story of Harold S. Bride, the second and only surviving wireless operator of the Titanic. His recital was one of suffering and of death. He described the final plunge of the vessel to her ocean burial.

Her captain's end also was revealed. He leaped from the bridge when the waters were closing over his ship.

Throughout the hearing Wireless Operator Bride, crippled as a result of his experiences and seated in an invalid's chair, told his story of the last moments of the Titanic. His narrative, drawn from him piecemeal by the questioning of Senator Smith of Michigan, chairman of the committee, held the committee and the audience enthralled. When his ordeal ended he was almost on the verge of collapse.

That the Titanic's officers knew three great icebergs menaced their path and that they had more than six hours' warning on Sunday afternoon by the California, was one of the important bits of evidence which came out.

Received Ice Report Early

Bride declared that as early as 4:30 p. m. the California called him with an "ice report." He said that at the time he was busy writing a report, and that he ignored the call. Half an hour later he heard the California call the Baltic, begging to give her the report. He then took it, transcribed it, and gave it to the officer on the Titanic's bridge.

The mystery which has surrounded the message which at 10 o'clock Monday morning was caught by the Baltic, giving the first news of the Titanic's fate, was dispelled when Harold S. Cottam, wireless operator of the Carpathia was put on the stand and gave his testimony of the happenings Sunday night.

Cottam had told the committee he had sent a message to the Baltic telling of the sinking of the White Star liner.

It became known also that even if criminal negligence be shown by the investigation, there will be no criminal prosecution. Senator Newlands said:

"The Titanic was a British ship, and therefore subject to the laws of England. If it is shown that the tragedy is attended by criminal negligence I believe the British authorities will prosecute the guilty party. We caused this inquiry to be made to pave the way for legislation, and prevent a recurrence of such a disaster."

Cottam was emphatic in his denial that any message had been sent from the Carpathia or received which indicated the company desired the fact of the sinking of the Titanic to be concealed.

Cottam said he received the first distress call from the Titanic about 11 o'clock, New York time. He described the rescue of the Titanic's passengers.

Bride's Story

Bride followed Cottam and admitted after severe cross questioning that he had received a warning from the California concerning the presence of ice in the path of the Titanic. The message simply said that M. W. L. (the code call of the California) had passed three large bergs and gave their latitude and longitude. He said that he had been relieved by Phillips, chief operator, and was asleep when the collision occurred. He described the scenes that followed and of how he saved himself. He said:

"The lights in the wireless cabin were growing dim when Captain Smith entered. 'It's time for you to look out for yourselves, men,' he said, and that was just about ten minutes before the end of the Titanic. I went outside to the deck.

"There was only one lifeboat left then, as far as I could see. It was a collapsible boat and it lay on the port side of the top deck, near the forward funnel. This was the boat that was washed overboard by a wave that swept over the deck after we had left the wireless house. I went with it and came up underneath.

Weaker Ones Succumb

"I extricated myself as soon as I could and held on to the upset craft. There were other men there. One of them was Phillips. He died on top of that boat. And another man died there.

"There were perhaps fifty men who had been swept into the sea, and who swam madly for that small boat, and a horrible struggle for places along the overturned boat ensued. I managed to keep my place until hours afterward, when the weaker ones had slipped away into the sea and the rescue boat had arrived."

A striking development of the investigation came when Senator Smith revealed that the committee had a telegram sent by the White Star line on Monday, announcing that all the passengers of the Titanic had been saved. The telegram was read to Cottam on the witness stand. It was as follows:

"New York, April 15.—J. A. Hughes, Huntington, W. Va.:

"Titanic proceeding to Halifax. Passengers will be landed there Wednesday morning. All saved. White Star Line."

Cottam swore that he had never sent or received any message announcing the safety of the Titanic.

SUBMITS TO INTERVIEW

Ismay Says He Thinks Senatorial Inquiry Is "Brutally Unfair"

J. B. Ismay discussed with interviewers the work of the senate investigating committee, which he characterized as "brutally unfair. He said:

"I cannot understand this senatorial inquiry. They are going at it in a manner that seems unjust, and the injustice lies heaviest upon me. Why, I cannot even protect myself by having my counsel ask questions. Don't misunderstand me by thinking I mean questions calculated to twist the witnesses on the stand. On the contrary, questions intended to simplify involved meanings."

Discussing his departure from the Titanic, Ismay said:

"I have searched my mind with deepest care. I have thought over each single incident that I could recall. I am sure that I did nothing that I should not have done. My conscience is clear, and I have not been a lenient judge of my acts.

"I tell you that if I thought in the slightest way I had done anything wrong I would never have another happy moment. I took the chance of escape when it came to me—I did not seek it. Every woman and child had been cared for before I left the boat.

"And, more, all the men within reach had been taken care of before I took my turn. And why shouldn't I take my turn? There are only two classes on a ship—the crew and the passengers. I was a passenger.

"It is true I am president of the company, but I did not consider myself any different from the rest of the pasengers. I took no other man's place."

In a statement given out last night, Ismay denies that he had anything to do with the navigation of the vessel; consulted with her captain regarding her conduct at sea or made suggestion as to the course or other navigation of the ship.

He exercised no privileges which did not belong to any other first cabin passenger, he declares; he did not sit at the captain's table and he was not with him at the time of the accident, and indeed, was in bed when the collision occurred.

He had no idea of returning to Europe quickly to avoid appearing at the senatorial investigation, he adds, and only knew that the investigation was pending when informed of it at the pier upon the Carpathia's arrival.

PICKING UP BODIES

Cable Steamer Mackay-Bennett Has Recovered Sixty-Four

St. John's, April 22.—Sixty-four identifiable bodies have been recovered by the cable steamer Mackay-Bennett, which has been searching the vicinity of the Titanic disaster, according to a report that reached this city.

It is said a number of bodies which were recovered were sunk again, as they were without identification marks, and it is presumed that they were in such a state that preservation was impossible. The names of those identified could not be obtained through the Cape Race wireless station.

The report was received by wireless from Cape Race and is undoubtedly authentic, for the Mackay-Bennett is within easy communication distance of the cape and is equipped with high tension wireless apparatus.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

GELATIN DESSERTS.

GELATIN is one of the most useful ingredients for desserts. It may be combined with fruits and nuts, and if it is run into a pretty mold it will come out in an attractive shape, which may be garnished with whipped cream.

Granulated gelatin is more convenient for general use than the sheet because it can be more easily measured. An ounce of gelatin will stiffen three and a half or four cupfuls of water. In cold weather it takes less gelatin than in warm weather and on wet days more is required than on dry ones.

Gelatin should first be softened in cold water. It is afterward dissolved in water that is kept hot but not boiling, by standing the vessel containing it in a pan of hot water.

Gelatin must not be stirred while it is dissolving. This is apt to make it stringy.

Some Fruit Jellies.

Lemon Jelly.—Soak an ounce of sheet or two and a half tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatin in half a cupful of cold water. When it is soft add to it two and a half cupfuls of boiling water and a cupful of sugar. Stir only till the sugar is dissolved. Add a half cupful of lemon juice. Strain through a cloth wrung out of hot water and laid over a strainer. Run into a mold wet with cold water. When cold turn out on a fancy dish and garnish with pieces of orange.

Fruit Gelatin.—Soak and dissolve the gelatin in the usual way. Arrange malaga grapes, halves of English walnuts and stoned dates in the bottom of a mold. Flavor the gelatin with orange or lemon juice. Then pour it into the mold, stirring the fruit around a little to distribute it. Stand in a cold place to cool and serve with sweetened whipped cream.

Like a Pudding.

Gelatin Custard.—Scald a half cupful of milk and stir into it a tablespoonful of sugar and a beaten egg. Put on the fire until it thickens into a custard. Take off and add to it a tablespoonful of gelatin which has been dissolved in water enough to cover. Flavor with a little vanilla.

When this custard is cold fold in half a pint of whipped cream. Set the mixture on ice. Serve in a glass dish to which the custard has been transferred and sprinkle with ground stale macaroon crumbs.

DELICIOUS DUMPLINGS.

DUMPLINGS are delicious in stews They must be mixed with discretion, however. Shortening should not be put into them. It is apt to make them soft and soggy.

Do not remove the lid from the vessel in which they are cooked. They are then likely to be heavy.

Plain dumplings require only flour salt, sweet milk and baking powder. The flour and baking powder should be sifted together. Then the milk may be mixed with them and the salt added.

Soup Dumplings.

When dumplings are cooking see that they are kept boiling. Only enough dumplings should be dropped in to cover the top of the stew or soup.

Egg Dumplings.—These make nice rich dumplings for soup. Take two eggs, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of milk, a cup of sifted flour and a teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat the eggs. Sift the dry ingredients together. Add the milk and salt to the beaten eggs and stir these into the flour to make a thick batter. Drop into the soup by spoonfuls.

Parsley Dumplings.—For these take a piece of butter the size of an egg, two eggs, a teaspoonful of finely chopped parsley, a dash of nutmeg, some salt and sifted flour enough to make a batter. Cream the butter and combine it with the eggs, stir in the parsley, then mix with the flour. Drop by spoonfuls into soup.

Novel Recipes.

Suet Dumplings.—Take a cupful of grated bread, a cupful of sifted flour, a cupful of cleaned and shredded beef suet, three eggs, a cup of milk, a teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of baking powder. Sift the flour and baking powder together, beat the eggs and then add them to the breadcrumbs, suet and milk.

Have boiling milk ready and drop the dumplings into this. When they are cooked pour over them the cupful of milk called for in the recipe. If sweet dumplings are liked a cupful of sugar may be added to the ingredients of the dumplings.

Stew Dumplings.—This recipe is said to provide an excellent dumpling for use in stews. Take one egg, two cupfuls of sifted flour, a teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Add to these enough milk to make a batter. Drop into the stew by tablespoonfuls. Set the stew where it will boil. Cover the vessel and let it boil for ten or twelve minutes.

Carrington took up his station on the flat roof of the cabin which filled the stern of the boat. H was remembering that day in the sandy Barony road—and during all the weeks and months that had intervened, Murrell, working in secret, had moved steadily toward the fulfilment of his desires! Unquestionably he had been back of the attack on Norton, had inspired his subsequent murder, and the man's sinister and mysterious power had never been suspected. Carrington knew that the horse-thieves and slave stealers were supposed to maintain a loosely knit association; he wondered if Murrell were not the moving spirit in some such organization.

"If I'd only pushed my quarrel with him!" he thought bitterly.

He heard Slosson's shuffling step in the distance, a word or two when he spoke gruffly to some one, and a moment later he saw Betty and the boy, their forms darkly silhouetted against the lighter sky as they moved along the top of the bank. Slosson, without any superfluous gallantry, helped his captives down the slope and aboard the keel boat, where he locked them in the cabin, the door of which fastened with a hasp and wooden peg.

"You're boss now, pardner!" he said, joining Carrington at the steering oar.

"We'll cast off then," answered Carrington.

Thus far nothing had occurred to mar his plans. If they could but quit the bayou before the arrival of the man whose place he had taken the rest would be, if not easy of accomplishment, at least within the realm of the possible.

"I reckon you're a river-man?" observed Slosson.

"All my life."

The line had been cast off, and the crew with their setting poles were forcing the boat away from the bank. All was quietly done; except for an occasional order from Carrington no word was spoken, and soon the unwieldy craft glided into the sluggish current and gathered way. Mr. Slosson, who clearly regarded his relation to the adventure as being of an official character, continued to stand at Carrington's elbow.

"What have we between here and the river?" inquired the latter. It was best, he felt, not to give Slosson an opportunity to ask questions.

"It narrows considerably, pardner, but it's a straight course," said Slosson. "Black in yonder, ain't it?" he added, nodding ahead.

The shores drew rapidly together; They were leaving the lake-like expanse behind. In the silence, above the rustling of the trees, Carrington heard the first fret of the river against its bank. Slosson yawned prodigiously.

"I reckon you ain't needing me?" he said.

"Better go up in the bow and get some sleep," advised Carrington, and Slosson, nothing loath, clambered down from the roof of the cabin and stumbled forward.

The ceaseless murmur of the rushing waters grew in the stillness as the keel boat drew nearer the hurrying yellow flood, and the beat of the Kentucklan's pulse quickened. Would he find the raft there? He glanced back over the way they had come The dark ranks of the forest walled off the clearing, but across the water a dim point of light was visible. He fixed its position as somewhere near the head of the bayou. Apparently it was a lantern, but as he looked a ruddy glow crept up against the skyline.

From the bow Bunker had been observing this singular phenomenon. Suddenly he bent and roused Slosson, who had fallen asleep. The tavern-keeper sprang to his feet and Bunker pointed without speaking.

"Mebby you can tell me what that light back yonder means?" cried Slosson, addressing himself to Carrington; as he spoke he snatched up his rifle.

"That's what I'm trying to make out," answered Carrington.

"Hell!" cried Slosson, and tossed his gun to his shoulder.

What seemed to be a breath of wind lifted a stray lock of Carrington's hair, but his pistol answered Slosson in the same second. He fired at the huddle of men in the bow of the boat and one of them pitched forward with his arms outspread.

"Keep back, you!" he said, and stepped off the cabin roof.

His promptness had bred a momentary panic, then Slosson's bull-like voice began to roar commands; but in that brief instant of surprise and shock Carrington had found and with drawn the wooden peg that fastened the cabin door. He had scarcely done this when Slosson came tramping aft supported by the three men.

Calling to Betty and Hannibal to escape in the skiff which was towing astern the Kentuckian rushed toward the bow. At his back he heard the door creak on its hinges as it was pushed open by Betty and the boy and again he called to them to escape by the skiff. The fret of the current had grown steadily and from beneath the wide-flung branches of the trees which here met above his head, Carrington caught sight of the star-specked arch of the heavens beyond. They were issuing from the bayou. He felt the river snatch at the keel boat, the buffeting of some swift eddy, and saw the blunt bow swing off to the south as they were plunged into the black shore shadows.

He Launched Himself Nimbly and With Enthusiasm Into the Fight.

But what he did not see was a big muscular hand which had thrust itself out of the impenetrable gloom and clutched the side of the keel b at. Coincident with this there arose perfect babel of voices, high-pitched and shrill.

"Sho'—I bet it's him! Sho'—it's Uncle Bob's nevvy! Sho', you can hear 'em! Sho', they're shootin' guns! Sho'!"

Carrington cast a hurried glance in the direction of these sounds. There between the boat and the shore the dim outline of a raft was taking shape. It was now canopied by a wealth of pale gray smoke that faded from before his eyes as the darkness lifted. Turning, he saw Slosson and his men clearly. Surprise and consternation was depicted on each face.

The light increased. From the flat stone hearth of the raft ascended a tall column of flame which rendered visible six pigmy figures, tow-headed and wonderfully vocal, who were toiling like mad at the huge sweeps. The light showed more than this. It showed a lady of plump and pleasing presence smoking a cob-pipe while she fed the fire from a tick stuffed with straw. It showed two bark shanties, a line between them decorated with the never-ending Cavendish wash. It showed a rooster perched on the ridge-pole of one of these shanties in the very act of crowing lustily.

Hannibal, who had climbed to the roof of the cabin, shrieked for help, and Betty added her voice to his.

"All right, Nevvy!" came the cheerful reply, as Yancy threw himself over the side of the boat and grappled with Slosson.

"Uncle Bob! Uncle Bob!" cried Hannibal.

Slosson uttered a cry of terror. He had a simple but sincere faith in the supernatural, and even with the Scratch Hiller's big hands gripping his throat, he could not rid himself of the belief that this was the ghost of a murdered man.

"You'll take a dog's licking from me, neighbor," said Yancy grimly. "I been saving it fo' you!"

Meanwhile Mr. Cavendish, whose proud spirit never greatly inclined him to the practice of peace, had prepared for battle. Springing aloft he knocked his heels together.

"Whoop! I'm a man as can slide down a thorny locust and never get scratched!" he shouted. This was equivalent to setting his triggers; then he launched himself nimbly and with enthusiasm into the thick of the fight. It was Mr. Bunker's unfortunate privilege to sustain the onslaught of the Earl of Lambeth.

The light from the Cavendish hearth continued to brighten the scene, for Polly was recklessly sacrificing her best straw tick. Indeed her behavior was in every way worthy of the noble alliance she had formed. Her cob-pipe was not suffered to go out and with Connie's help she kept the six small Cavendishes from risking life and limb in the keel boat, toward which they were powerfully drawn. Despite these activities she found time to call to Betty and Hannibal on the cabin roof.

"Jump down here; that ain't no fittin' place for you-all to stop in with them gentlemen fightin'!"

An instant later Betty and Hannibal stood on the raft with the little Cavendishes flocking about them. Mr. Yancy's quest of his nevvy had taken an enduring hold on their imagination. For weeks it had constituted their one vital topic, and the fight became merely a satisfying background for this interesting restoration.

"Sho', they'd got him! Sho'—he wa'n't no bigger than Richard! Sho'!"

"Oh!" cried Betty, with a fearful glance toward the keel boat. "Can't you stop them?"

"What fo'?" asked Polly, opening her black eyes very wide. "Bless yo' tender heart!—you don't need to worry none, we got them strange gentlemen licked like they was a passel of children! Connie, you-all mind that fire!"

She accurately judged the outcome of the fight. The boat was little better than a shambles with the havoc that had been wrought there when Yancy and Carrington dropped over its side to the raft. Cavendish followed them, whooping his triumph as he came.

MORSE ASSURED OF NEW LEASE OF LIFE

Progress of His Disease May Be Checked For Years

Florence, April 22.—Charles W. Morse, the American former promoter, freed from prison by President Taft on the strength of certificates of doctors that he was suffering from ailments which would prove fatal within a few months, is enjoying almost robust health.

Since leaving America he has been examined by only one physician, an eminent doctor of Rome, who, Morse says, agreed with the American doctors' diagnosis but differed essentially from their conclusions.

"The diseases from which your are suffering may be arrested in their development," he told Morse. "Their progress may be checked for years."

"That's good enough for me," Morse said. "A man who has heard and read all the ghastly, gruesome predictions made about his death that I have can't ask for anything better than that."

BROUGHT BACK TO BOSTON

"Big Lem" Strosneider Charged With Larceny of $7500

Boston, April 22.—John A. Strosneider, known in police circles as "Big em" and wanted in this city for nearly a year to answer to a secret indictment warrant charging him with conspiracy to commit larceny, was brought from the south late yesterday afternoon by Captain Armstrong and Inspector Pierce of police headquarters.

The allegation in the warrant is that on July 19, 1911, Strosneider, with others, conspired to separate Samuel Butter, a metal dealer, from a roll of $7500.

By shadowing the movements of Mrs. Strosneider, the police located her husband in the south, and he was placed under arrest at Petersburg, Va.

$100 REWARD, $100.
The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

WOLLASTON BEACH.

The high temperature and perfect day on Sunday, opened up Wollaston beach in the afternoon and attracted the record crowds of the season.

A crowd of about a dozen hardy youths who braved the water, several for the second time this year were the cynosure of the promenaders.

The water of the drinking fountains had been turned on and the entire beach presented an aspect of summer.

The entire stretch of boulevard from the Bluff at one end to the Squantum roadway at the other was a steady stream of automobiles and crowds on foot.

At the boat colony on the Atlantic beach were many signs of activity and a number of yachts were resplendent with new paint ready for their first dip of the season.

The pile driver has been at work on the damaged runway of the Wollaston Yacht club and indications are that it will be ready for use before the end of the week.

Not more than a half a dozen boats are in the water as yet but another week or so will probably see nearly the entire fleet of both clubs in action.

The Squantum yacht club opened its season with a dance on last Thursday evening.

ENTERTAINS THE RED SOX

Ten members of the Boston American base ball squad were entertained by Ben Johnson, at his summer home, Adams Shore, Sunday. The party arrived shortly before noon and were treated to a dinner of the first class order.

A survey of the different parts of the beach was made and the great national pastime was talked about considerably.

Several of the talented players furnished an entertainment and the affair was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Those in the party included Wagner, Speaker, Stahl, O'Brien, Gardner, Yerkes, Wood, Pape, Collins and Carrigan.

LOSES ITS FIRST GAME

The West Quincy baseball team opened its season Saturday afternoon by losing to the University A. A. of Cambridge, 4 to 3. The West Quincy nine led by a score of 3 to 2 up to the first half of the ninth, when a rally, aided by a few errors, by the University team enabled it to become master of the situation.

Flanagan was very effective for the winners and allowed his opponents but two hits. McDonald also twirled well, but was not given proper support. The score:—

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

WOLLASTON M. E. CHURCH.

The services at the Wollaston Methodist church Sunday were all attended. Rev. Wesley Wiggin, the pastor spoke on "Blinded by Excess of Yight." J. A. Sedgwick, the superintendent, took charge of the Sunday school and summed up the lessons by way of illustration from which he drew manw forceful and practical lessons.

Miss Marion Never had charge of the Junior League which was largely attended. At 4.45 o'clock the vesper services was held. Miss Ethel Hague Rea of Dorchester and Samuel Scholes were the solists. Miss Rea sang "Oh for the Wings of a Dove," and "Our King." Miss Rea always has a warm welcome and as usual she sang with great acceptance, and Mr. Scholes was greatly enjoyed by all present. The choir was at its best. Mrs. F. G. Bennett was organist.

Miss Rena Chamberlin led the devotional service of the Epworth League using the regular subject "The Desolation of Emptiness A Dearth of Men." At the close of the service Miss Chamberlin outlined for the aniversary of the League which occurs on the secong Sunday in May. Plans are being made for a srong program. The past year has been a very successful one in the Epworth League work and with a membership of nearly one hundred it is aticipating a good year.

At the vesper service the pastor on "Freedom Through Truth." He said in part: "In previous verses Christ has declared Himself to be the light of the world. But the Pharisees took objection to such a statement, because He made it concerning Himself. Christ urges three things to prove that His testimony though of Himself was true. He was conscious to Himself of His own authority. He show that they are incompetent judges of Him and of His doctrine. Christ asserts that His testimony was corroborated by the Father.

The aim of Christ was to set men free. He did not come to lay burdens upon the people. Love purchased this freedom. Love was the conquering force of Christ. True freedom comes through truth. Christ is the truth. Christ makes free all who seek and find Him.

ATLANTIC MEMORIAL.

At Memorial church yesterday morning, Rev. T. W. Davidson spoke from Acts 11:26. "The disciples were called Christians first in Antioch" Mr. Davison said in part; "Antioch is a town in the western part of Syria, famous in Apostolic times for its business and commercial interests. The little church there had been organized by those who had been scattered by the Jewish persecution. If the enemies of the Gospel had been its friends they could not have taken a more favorable course for its advancement. In the persecution God ever-ruled the designs of wicked men and turned their attack into the actual support of His kingdom. The enimty, cruelty, violence and even the meaness of men have been compelled to subserve the interests of righteousness. The Church at Antioch had the spirit of enterprise and brotherly love. It It showed practical charity, generosity and manifested service for those in poverty and distress.

"The name of Christian signifies character, and character alone is real and eternal, that good part which cannot be taken away. Our influence for good is according to the name men give us. Letthem see the character of Christ, and they will say we are "Christians."

"Sometimes the church is judged by thefaults or sins of a few persons, but it is hardly fair t bolame the church for the faults of a small minority. Neither is it fair to judge a person by a weak characteristic when the daily life in general is good.

"Our modern Church has a great name to sustain. We only sustain our name as our religion is vital our convictions intelligent, our lives wholesome in their influence. If our religious life is related to eternity, it must be like our flesh something we cannot lay aside because it is a real part of ourselves. The name was given because men recognized superior characters. It will continue to be given as man see sublime living.

In the evening service, Mr. Davidson preached on the Titanic disaster, and illustrated the dangers in the voyage of life. He depicted the proud captain, the jolly crew, the happy passengers, some returning home, others coming to these shores to better their conditions in life, all unsuspecting of danger with a perfect feeling of safety. Then the crash—separation of husbands from wives, fathers from children. Mr. Davidson closed the address by warning the young of the possibility of wrecking their future.

SUNDAY ALARM.

The alarm from Box 18 at 2.15 Sunday afternoon was for a grass fire near the Hanley boat house on Town river. The fire was getting quite near some of the cottages and it was thought best to summons aid. The recall sounded in a few minutes.

Mr. Roosevelt compares dealing with Columbia on the Panama question to "nailing cranberry jelly to the wall." What a sauce-y remark.

LUNGS KEPT INFLATED

SIMPLE APPARATUS THAT MAKES HEART SURGERY POSSIBLE.

Operation Thoroughly Demonstrated Before Kansas City Clinic—Shown to Have Passed the Experimental Stage.

A dog's life was sacrificed at the Coates House in Kansas City to show Kansas City surgeons and nearly a hundred others that heart surgery—the sewing up of stab wounds and the removal of bullets—is possible. Those present predicted after the demonstration that such practice would be common among surgeons within five years.

After more than thirty years of work, during the entire period withstanding the bitter attacks of the anti-vivisectionists, Dr. F. Merill Ricketts, of Cincinnati, and the other pioneers in the field, have perfected a system of administering anesthetics that makes heart surgery possible.

Dr. Ricketts, who gave the demonstration before the Western Surgical association, made his first experiment in 1874. Since then doctors connected with the Rockefeller Institute in New York have pushed the investigation also. Hundreds of animals have been sacrificed in the work, but since the experimental stage was passed the lives of 74 persons already have been saved, and yet only two or three surgeons in the United States have learned the operation.

Formerly the lungs of persons under an anesthetic collapsed, causing death, when the chest was opened by a surgeon. The apparatus used by Dr. Ricketts, consisting of little besides a bellows and a rubber tube, keeps the lungs inflated during the operation.

The anesthetic is administered in air forced into the lungs by the bellows used to keep up artificial respiration. The wonder of the method is to a great extent in its simplicity. Dr. Ricketts in 20 minutes was able to demonstrate to the eager surgeons the entire process of operation on the heart, the lungs and the other bronchial components.

"This development in surgery has passed the experimental stage," Dr. Ricketts said. "Already 178 operations on the heart have been performed, and of these 74 were successful, the patients recovering. This is a wonderful percentage, considering that death was certain otherwise in every case.

"Bullets were removed and knife wounds sewed up. Most of the operations were performed at the Rockefeller institute. By this method of administering anesthetics the patient may be kept alive for hours, permitting the surgeon to perform any operation on the heart, the lungs or any other thoracic organ.

"The apparatus, very simple in itself and in its operation, is easily portable and may be taken by the surgeon anywhere. To a Dr. Williams, a negro, of Chicago, belongs the credit of performing the first successful operation on the heart as long ago as 1893. In a few years the practice will be common."

Sea Postoffices.

Every one is aware that a large quantity of mail comes from Europe; probably most persons assume that it is dumped off the steamers in bulk and sorted and routed in the postoffice of the receiving port. Such a system would result in hopeless congestion and practically all of the fifteen million pounds of foreign mail matter received at New York, on an average of recent years, is ready, sorted and sacked when the steamers make port. This work is done in the sea postoffices aboard the ships, and means days saved in the time of delivery of mail matter intended for inland points.

In the huge mass of mail brought into New York each year there are, on an average, 80,000,000 separate pieces, many thousands with inadequate addresses; yet to such a degree of efficiency has the operation of the sea postoffices been brought, and so carefully is the work done, that less than 500 errors are made annually. As the entire quantity of the ocean mail received in a year would fill 2,200 standard mail cars, an almost incredible accuracy is indicated—less than one error of any kind whatever for every four carloads of mail.—Harper's Weekly.

Expensive Luxury.

Richard Harding Davis, who knows South America intimately, told, at a luncheon at the Philadelphia club, a South American story.

"The Florida in Buenos Ayres," he said, "is very elegant and charming, but in the past the young men were too prone to accost the beautiful women shopping and promenading there.

"Accordingly, a law was passed which imposed a fine of $50 on any one who should dare to accost or annoy in the slightest degree any lady in Buenos Ayres."

Mr. Davis paused.

"Since the passage of that law," he said solemnly, "the Florida has become quite safe; but when a beautiful woman walks in it the young men hover near her, murmuring in low and ardent tones:

"'I wish I had $50.'"

His Business.

"I was in a place yesterday that employed a bouncer with the most appropriate name in the business. It was Vine."

"How is that so appropriate?"

"Because his principal occupation is to throw out a lot of suckers."

COUNCIL PASSES APPROPRIATION ORDER AT SPECIAL MEETING

Unsuccessful Attempt to Cut Amount for Pay of Firemen. Other Amendments Proposed During Debate

Council Grants One Liquor Permit and Turns Down Five. Other Business Transacted

After a two hours' debate, during which several attempts were made to amend the items in the annual appropriation order, only one of which prevailed, the budget, over which there has been loads of oratory was finally passed, at the special meeting of the City Council, Monday evening.

There were several matters in the call but the budget and the granting of liquor permits were the only matters that called for debate. There were three orders granting liquor permits on the table and three before the committee. With one exception all of the applications for permits were turned down. As a result fifteen permits have been granted this year as against eighteen last year. One of the parties turned down Monday evening was the Adams express company, the reason being that they had totally ignored the rule of the council, that they should send to the police each day a transcript of the liquor transported. Although frequently written to and interviewed by the liquor inspector the company still persisted in ignoring the rule.

Another of the parties turned down was John Callahan of South Quincy, Mr. Callahan in his sworn statement said that 33 per cent of his business as an expressman was transporting liquor. The liquor inspector testified before the council however that he had watched the teams of Callahan both in Quincy and Boston and that over 95 per cent of his business was transporting liquor. In other respects he had lived up to his license or permit. Of the others turned down, two were not now doing an express business and the other was one who had also failed to make his daily reports.

Councilmen Bailey and Carruthers were absent.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The first matter that came up was the budget. Councilman Abele started the ball rolling by a motion to make the amount for pay of men in the fire department from $32,283.26 to $30,711.

This brought Councilman Studley to his feet and he propounded numerous questions to the Chairman of the Finance Committee, as to how the committee had arrived at the amount necessary to pay the men of the department. Councilman Murray was also questioned at length.

The whole question devolved on just how many permanent men there were in the department. It was stated during the debate that the Chief Engineer had stated to the committee that the department had 23 men but that when he took charge he found two other men who had no legal standing, although they had been carried on the rolls for some time.

This brought up the question of the ordinance. Councilman Murray read

DRAMATICS BY ST. JOHN'S CLUB

"The College Chap" Presented Before a Large Audience

THE CAST

All that had been predicted about the production was fully realized Monday evening at Parochial hall, when the St. John's Dramatic club presented "The College Chap" to a large and most appreciative audience. The affair was given for the benefit of the parish and excelled any of the performances that have thus far been held by the amateurs who compose the club.

Andrew J. Dinegan was in charge and the careful and well trained practice of the past few weeks was productive of good results for every one in the cast acquitted himself in a most creditable manner. The staging and decorations added greatly to the play.

The play was in three acts. In the first the scene is laid in the Occidental hotel, Chester, Minn., and shows the principal hostelry of the city in anything but a creditable condition. The College Chap has returned home, after having been expelled from college. This reprehensible conduct is not enough, for in addition, he engages in quarrels with his father and sweetheart. He soon awakens to a realization of the fact that he should reform and he straightway sets out to accomplish this end.

In the second act is shown the printing office of the Chester Clarion. There the College Chap is shown as the editor. It is a most enterprising sheet. Still possessed with a spirit of reform, the College Chap exposes through the columns of his paper the guilt and chicanery of one Starr Clay, a wealthy business man of the town. But the influence of Clay is far greater than that of the College Chap and the latter, by the pressure brought to bear, loses his position with the Clarion.

In the last act the Occidental hotel is again shown, this time in a most flourishing condition, the College Chap being its manager and the wealthy Starr, having lost all his fortune, engaged as baggageman for the hotel.

The College Chap resumes pleasant associations with his friends and he and Madge Clay, who has just returned from Europe, straighten things out to their mutual satisfaction.

Between the acts Andrew J. Dinegan sang "Nothing to do till tomorrow," and Fred McDonald rendered "Look at that Hat." Both were loudly applauded.

The scenes which were arranged in a most effective manner, were designed by Miss Helen Desmond and built by John Igo and Louis Bouchard. The properties were loaned by Henry L. Kincaide & Co. John Mahan, organist at St. John's church was the pianist.

The cast of characters was as follows:

Elijah Gooding, a village product — David Curtin

NEW PLANNING BOARD RESOLVE

In executive session at the State House, after a long discussion, the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs voted to report a resolve to create a new Metropolitan Planning Board to consist of three members of the old board and two to be appointed with them, the new Board of Commission to report a metropolitan plan for a Greater Boston to the next General Court.

This resolve is based upon the bill submitted by the Metropolitan plan board of last year; the Kiley bill for direct annexation to Boston and the Governor's recommendations with the bill of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange to annex the 41 cities and towns in the Metropolitan District in the "city of Boston" under the borough system. The resolve is to take the place of all three propositions.

The committee also conferred with Gen. Hugh Bancroft, Hon. Joseph J. Corbett, corporation counsel, and attorney Devlin of the city law department on the Port of Boston corporation bill, but no final action was taken.

MAYOR SIGNS BUDGET ORDER

Mayor Stone left this morning for Stamford, Conn., to meet Albert Crane for a conference on matters pertaining to the Thomas Crane Public Library. Before he left however he affixed his signature to the annual appropriation order, which was passed by the City Council at the special meeting, Monday evening, thus ending any further controversy on this subject. It was just 10 o'clock when the Mayor approved the order and three minutes later he was aboard a train bound for Boston.

☞Lawyers who enjoy a good presentation of an argument should go to Colonial hall, next Monday evening, to hear Anna H. Shaw plead for Votes for Women.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The spring shower is working over time.

Making choice collections of convention delegates is the latest fad.

Many a politician who starts out on a band wagon walks home.

Texas produced 9,000,000 barrels of petroleum in 1911, but still that isn't what they drink in Texas.

Gold bearing coal has been discovered in Wyoming. That's the kind we've been paying for all winter.

Carnegie is now sorry he said that a Pittsburg girl is the "most beautiful" in the world. There are other cities and other girls.

Rudyard Kipling has perpetrated a poem on Irish Home Rule. The penalty for that kind of thing over here is $5.00 for idle and disorderly conduct.

It is proposed to publish the corporation affiliatians of Congressmen, but we feel confident that none of the Sunday schools will be found to be dominating them.

Sir Bertrand Dawson, physician to King George, has been calling at the White house. Mr. Taft should kick if he charges more than $1.50 for his visit.

"How to own the earth" was the theme of a Washington pastor's sermon. The simplest way is to get J. P. Moran to lend it to you, and then keep it.

Boston reports that the marriage license bureau there shows that no Hub ladies propose leap year. Maybe it merely indicates that none of 'em are accepted.

Uncle Sam may be thought rather cool toward Miss Jappy, but neighbors never make themselves popular by setting out to establish a powder magazine in your back yard.

The committee of the New Mexico legislature favors unseating the alleged bribers. What will become of us if these new states keep on making these reckless innovations?

AFTERMATH OF THE TITANIC.

Before the Titanic disaster drops out of the bulletin boards and the headlines, let us hope that it will have made some little impression on the American temperament. The lessons to be learned relate not merely to life boats and wireless and steamship lanes, which affect only about two per cent of our people who are trans-Atlantic sea-goers.

The spirit of the age was well illustrated in the seafaring field by the statement printed some years ago in a magazine of the steamship captain who was some hours late into port.

The owners called him up for an explanation of this criminal negligence.

"There was an awful thick fog off the coast," he said. "Couldn't go ahead and be safe."

"It must have been damned thick" said the owners.

It is not likely that the sailor considered that fogs had anything to do with time-tables after that.

A friend of ours who crossed the ocean last year tells us of a man on the boat who bitterly railed at the management of the line, because a slight delay compelled him to lose the train that he had figured on taking, so that he would be just two hours late in turning up at his home office. "I'll go some other way next time" he said Possibly he went by the Titanic, and is now located in one of the ample offices of Davy Jones' locker.

The same problem of speed is found right on our home streets, and in all the hurry and haste of American city life.

Some months ago we rode with a friend who takes pleasure in driving his automobile in a conservative way. At no time did he run the machine over 20 miles an hour. Much of the time he was not running over 15. We all enjoyed the country sights and jolly conversation.

We were telling another friend about it afterward. "T'would make me crazy to go with him" was his comment. And one day when riding with this second friend, we noticed that whenever he passed groups of little children standing close to the road, any one of whom might heedlessly run in front of his machine, he never slowed down a particle.

Isolated tragedies of speed are being constantly played on our railroads and highways, the aggregrate result of which creates far more sorrow than the Titanic disaster.

SAFETY IN WATER TRAVEL.

The Iroquois theatre fire in Chicago led to an examination of every cross roads hall to see if it was a fire trap. So the Titanic disaster ought to lead, and no doubt will, to a universal effort to remove the dangers of water travel.

The government should see that there are life boats enough to protect every passenger by water. But the need for better protection is felt by many besides those who travel by our trans-Atlantic palaces.

The farmer's boy who has quit the cornfield to become a deck hand has a family of hungry mouths at home, dependent on his safety, and loving hearts whose good cheer depends upon his life. He needs the long arm of a firm government inspection too.

There were 6,000 shipwrecks on the great lakes in 20 years. Every one of them meant a tragedy for some human hearts. The bottom of these lakes is strewn with human bones. Many of these ships disappeared as suddenly and inexplicably as if the Titanic had hit the iceberg in the days before wireless.

And ancient tubs are permitted to carry human freight up and down our coasts and streams, which by all laws of business depreciation and renewals must have much more than paid for themselves, and should be sent to the scrap heap.

Just as it takes two to make a quarrel, so it takes two ships to make a collision. And many of them do not take place in fogs either. A steersman often seems to fear that his dignity would suffer if he turns out so far that the approaching ship would not need to swerve from its course. Nevertheless a good rule in navigation as in automobiling or driving a carriage, is to turn out enough so that you would be all right even if the other fellow did not move.

As shipping increases, harbors grow small, and the steersman who can slip out ahead of a competitor and only scrape off some paint is viewed with admiration as a Jehu of the tiller.

Human hunger for money makes many accidents. The lake freighter that can get in one more trip before ice forms provides an extra dividend for the owner. Too often this means being engulfed in a snow storm that blots out every beacon, with a final and silent tragedy to follow on the cruel rocks of a treacherous coast.

NEW INDUSTRY.

A new industry will be located in Wollaston on May 1st when the Burnes Jewelry Manufacturing company of Valley Falls, Rhode Island, will remove its manufacturing plant to the G. and P. Engraving Company building near the Wollaston depot.

The concern has executive offices in the Lawrence Building, Boston and it is with the idea of bringing the two in closer touch that the transfer is to be made.

The manufacture of rings is the specialty of the company and about 25 operators are employed. The industry will be an addition to those already located in the neighborhood.

The officers are: President—George E. Burnes of Central Falls, Rhode Island, secretary—S. C. Greene of Boston, treasurer—E. S. Frost of Boston, C. A. Gridley, the general manager, has his residence on Beach street, Wollaston.

G. L. Forrest of Boston in the general manager of sales and A. H. Dalrymple of Boston is the advertising manager.

Very Natural.

"Talk about your realism, this play looks very natural to me."

"As to how?"

"Six months have elapsed since the play started, and the housemaid hasn't done any housework yet."

GREAT STRIKE IN ABEYANCE

Government Tenders "Friendly Offices" to Disputants

ENGINEERS AGREE TO HALT

Had Announced That Strike on Fifty Railroads Would Occur Within Thirty-Six Hours—Washington Officials' Argument Appeals to Employes to Extent of Amending Order After Demands Had Been Refused

New York, April 23.—Tender of the "friendly offices" of representatives of the federal government called at least a temporary halt last night to the strike by railroad engineers in all the territory east of Chicago and north of the Potomac river, in which it is estimated that 52 percent of the railroad traffic of the entire country is conducted.

The offer of mediation followed immediately the refusal of the management of the fifty railroads concerned to concede the engineers' demand for an increase in wages of 18 percent, and the announcement by Chief Stone of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers that in consequence of the refusal an engineers' strike would go into effect before another thirty-six hours had elapsed.

Knowing that the situation had reached a critical stage, Martin A. Knapp, presiding justice of the United States commerce court, and Charles P. Neill, United States commissioner of labor, hurried to this city from Washington and as soon as the decisive break between the engineers and railroads occurred, they addressed a letter to both Chief Stone and to J. C. Stuart, chairman of the conference committee of railroad managers, explaining that a grave situation had arisen and that sense of duty compelled them to tender their "friendly offices" to the disputants in the hope that some means might be found of adjusting the matters in controversy without the calamity of a "general strike."

Although Chief Stone had a few minutes before said that his forty-nine associates on the engineers' committee would proceed at once to their headquarters to prepare for a strike within thirty-six hours, he was impressed with the letter of Knapp and Neill to the extent of amending the order and he said that the committee would remain intact here to consider the situation.

He said: "No organization is so strong that it can fail to harken to an appeal from representatives of the federal government." He added that he would place the proposal before the engineers' committee and immediately ordered a meeting of the committee for today to consider the matter.

Thus the contention rests, being still regarded by many observers as critical, but by others as promising some sort of adjustment.

Commissioner Neill was pleased with the reception of the offer of mediation, but he did not outline in just what way he expected to carry it out if both parties were concillatory.

Hiss colleague, Justice Knapp, left for Washington last evening with the intention, it is understood, of returning here today to take up the replies of the parties in controversy.

The list of railroads affected by the strike contains practically all but three of the railroads in the territory roughly described as east of Chicago and north of the Potomac river.

Maine Agent of Insurance Company Charged With Embezzlement

Portland, Me., April 23.—Arthur Eaton, state agent of the Prudential Life Insurance company of New Jersey, was arrested on a charge of embezzlement. The complaint, which was sworn out by an examiner of the company, alleges misappropriation of $16,513 in cash and checks. He did not secure bail.

Eaton is 35 years of age, and has been in the insurance business in Portland for about six years, the past four in his present capacity. Previously he was located in Boston.

STREET RAILWAY IS SOLD FOR OLD JUNK

Had Been In Receiver's Hands For Past Six Months

Portsmouth, N. H., April 23.—The Portsmouth and Exeter Street railway, built twelve years ago, was sold for old junk, bringing $55,000, which will be distributed among the bondholders.

The last car left Portsmouth at 1 p. m., yesterday and half an hour later the United States commissioner, in behalf of Receiver Belden, had sold the road to S. M. Russell.

The road had not met its fixed charges for several years, and six months ago it went into a receiver's hands. The cars and other equipment will be taken away and the rails removed from the streets.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT. POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT.

Voters of Massachusetts

When you enter the voting booth next Tuesday to express your preference for a presidential candidate, remember this:

THEODORE ROOSEVELT IS THE ONLY CANDIDATE FOR THE REPUBLICAN NOMINATION FOR PRESIDENT WHO CAN WIN IN NOVEMBER.

TAFT CAN'T BE RE-ELECTED.

In tones that cannot be misunderstood, the people of the great Republican States of the nation have expressed their disapproval of his candidacy.

ILLINOIS, PENNSYLVANIA, MAINE, WISCONSIN, NORTH DAKOTA, OREGON and NEBRASKA HAVE SPOKEN WITH A SINGLE VOICE.

They do not want Taft.

Wherever the issue has been clearly drawn between Roosevelt and Taft, and the people have had a chance to speak in open primaries, ROOSEVELT HAS WON BY AN OVERWHELMING VOTE.

TAFT IS THE LOGICAL CANDIDATE FOR DEFEAT.

ROOSEVELT IS THE LOGICAL CANDIDATE FOR VICTORY.

Despite the universal respect for his sincerity and patriotism, Taft has been a disappointment to the people.

Even with a united party behind him, the President would be a weak candidate.

BUT TAFT CANNOT HAVE A UNITED PARTY BEHIND HIM.

One of Taft's most valuable inheritances from Roosevelt was the leadership of a party united as it had not been for years.

House and Senate were strongly Republican, and the future looked unusually bright for the party when Roosevelt made way for his successor.

IN TWO YEARS TAFT LOST THE HOUSE AND ALMOST LOST THE SENATE.

Under his vacillating leadership, the Republican party has been brought to the verge of disruption.

THE TAFT ADMINISTRATION HAS BEEN MARKED BY OOZING POPULARITY, FORGOTTEN PLEDGES, EXPANDING DISAFFECTION, LOSS OF CONFIDENCE AND FINALLY, OF SUPPORT.

On every test the people on whom the Republican party must rely in November have placed the stamp of their disapproval upon the Taft administration.

THE PRESIDENT'S RENOMINATION WOULD MEAN CERTAIN DEFEAT FOR THE PARTY THIS FALL.

IT WOULD MEAN NOT ONLY A DEMOCRATIC HOUSE, BUT A DEMOCRATIC PRESIDENT AND A DEMOCRATIC SENATE.

Taft's most active supporters admit privately that the President cannot be re-elected.

HIS CLOSEST FRIENDS ARE NOW CONVINCED THAT HE CANNOT BE NOMINATED.

They see the handwriting on the wall, and are now fighting, not for Taft, but for ANYTHING TO PREVENT ROOSEVELT'S NOMINATION.

The interest-owned and controlled newspapers of the country, which are one and all opposing Roosevelt HAVE ALREADY ELIMINATED TAFT AND ARE SUGGESTING A COMPROMISE CANDIDATE.

The Taft machine, tottering under the weight of an unpopular candidate, is really asking you for delegates to be used for a "dark horse."

THE "DARK HORSE" IS THE LAST RESORT OF THE BOSSES TO THWART THE WILL OF THE PEOPLE.

Voters of Massachusetts, don't be deceived.

THE TAFT HOUSE OF CARDS, BUILT BY THE BOSSES OF HAND-PICKED, STEAM-ROLLED SOUTHERN DELEGATES, HAS COLLAPSED.

A vote for Taft in Massachusetts is a vote for a candidate who is defeated in advance.

A vote for Taft is a vote for the machine, for the bosses, for the corrupt representatives of special privilege.

The interest-owned Democratic newspapers are doing eevrything in their power to nominate Taft because they know he is weak.

A vote for Taft is a vote for a Democratic administration.

This is not a fight between Taft and Roosevelt.

Roosevelt's fight is a fight for human rights against the power of money.

It is the people's fight.

NO BOSS DIRECTS ITS COURSE, TYPIFIES ITS PURPOSES OR CONTROLS ITS DESTINIES.

It is a straight-out struggle between those who would have the people rule and those who would rule the people.

ROOSEVELT STANDS BEFORE THE PEOPLE IN THE HOUR OF THEIR NEED LIKE A TOWER OF TRUST.

VOTE FOR THEODORE ROOSEVELT AND FOR HUMAN RIGHTS.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

All members for the Y. M. C. A. Tennis Team are to report at the local gym on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. There are many members of the local gym who are interested in this line of sport and the outlook is good for teams, both single and double.

The monthly meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Board of Directors was held Monday evening to discuss plans for the coming summer and next fall. Nothing definite was decided upon at present.

Owing to number of applicants for rooms in the dormitories at the Y. M. C. A. results in an addition of two double rooms and one single room, this will accommodate five roomers.

The "gym" class at the Y. M. C. A. will close May 1.

The Journalism class did not meet Monday owing to the death of the mother of George E. Gavin, but will meet on Monday, May 6 at 5 o'clock, at the local Y. M. C. A.

Physical Director L. F. LaRose has issued the following statement in connection with the gym department of the Y. M. C. A:

Enrolled in all classes 291 boys and men. Of these 75 are seniors who carry the bulk of the physical work.

The senior class this year had a total attendance of 1695 men, compared with 1220 the previous year.

The employed boys class had a total of 1701 boys against 1934 last season.

The students had a total of 835 boys against a grand total of 1259 last season. This large decrease is because of basketball at the High school.

In bowling there was a large increase with 6224 strings against 2116 for the previous year. This may not seem large compared to the larger alleys of Quincy and Boston, but one must realize that the alleys are open only from 7 to 10 o'clock in the evening.

The athletic teams were the best that the local gym has ever put out and so good that Hyde Park and Malden failed to keep the meets they had with the local boys.

Base ball took well with the fellows last year and the prospects for a good team are bright. Games have been arranged with Melrose, Cunningham Gym, Clapp Memorial, Newton, Malden, Hyde Park and Arlington.

Basket ball brought forth a new lot of players and although no outside games were played there was much enjoyment in the league games. Prospects for a championship team next year are bright and should prove a winner from the start.

The record holders for the past season are:

100 yard, Chell—12 4-5 seconds.
220 yards, P. Wood—30 2-5 seconds.
440 yards, Trask—64 2-5 seconds.
880 yard, Kingsbury—2.28 2-5 sec.
1000 yards, Porter—2.46 4-5 seconds.
Mile, Kingsbury—5.21 4-5 seconds.
Running High Jump, McArdle—5 feet.
Running High Jump, McArdle—5 feet, 6 inches.
Standing High Jump, McArdle, 4 feet, 8 inches.
Spring Board High Jump, McArdle—6 feet, 9 inches.
Running Broad Jump, Lundin—19 feet, 2 1-2 inches.
Standing Broad Jump, Estey—8 feet, 11 1-2 inches.
Hop, Step and Jump, Lundin—35 feet, 5 inches.
Potato Race, Trask—34 3-4 seconds.
300 yard dash, Estey—40 4-5 seconds.
150 yard dash, Trask and McArdle—19 2-5 seconds.
Short, Bates—39 feet, 10 inches.

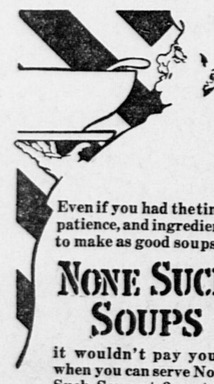
TO GIVE EXHIBITION.

A meeting of the Parents'-Teachers' Association of the Coddington school will be held in the assembly hall of the school on Wednesday evening, April 24, at 8 o'clock.

Dr. J. Gardiner Smith, director of physical education will speak on "Physical Education in our public schools—"What it is and Why."

Demonstrations by pupils of the first and eighth grades will be presented to the public and ought to be well executed as the pupils have worked hard and faithfully.

Music and refreshments will form part of the evening's program. A large attendance of parents and friends is earnestly desired.



PERRY SAW SPANO MURDER

At the trial at Dedham Monday, of the Spano murder case, Lester Perry testified that he saw Spano strike Guiseppe Rucher in the back with a knife. He stated that he was walking near the scene of the murder on Water St., Sunday, Dec. 3, 1911 when he heard a scream and saw a man rush across the street followed by another man. As they reached the opposite side of the street the first man turned and held up his hands but the second man struck him with a knife, causing the victim to fall into the gutter.

The trial has been in progress for several days and it is not expected that it will be finished before the last of the week.

TO MAKE CHANGES.

William A. Bradford who recently purchased the property at the corner of Chestnut and Maple streets is to make several changes, the biggest perhaps being the dropping of the building several feet so that the entrances will be on the street level instead of up a fight of steps as at present. This will make quite a change in the looks of the building and will be much more up-to-date and in keeping with Mr. Bradford's business. The building will be remodeled and will be quite an improvement to the locality.

DANCE AND WHIST.

At the dance and whist given by U. S. W. V. and Ladies Auxiliary at Protection and Electa halls, Monday evening about thirty couples enjoyed dancing and twelve tables were in play at whist. It was a financial success.

The souvenirs were awarded to B. G. Brooks, Mrs. Flora Levangie, Mrs. A. J. Gould, Joe Pitts, Mrs. Sarah C. Williams, Clarence E. Fuller The consolation going to Mrs. Nellie McGue. Ice cream and cake was served during the evening.

SAVINGS BANK INSURANCE.

The Savings Bank Life Insurance movement now has 194 agencies in Massachusetts; there are 35 public agencies and among them are 16 Savings Banks. A list of agenies in factories includes some of the largest and most representative manufacturers in the Commonwealth. The largest agency is at the United Shoe Machinery Co., Beverly, where there are more than 400 policyholders and insurance in force to the amount of nearly $250,000.

A study of the Bank Commissioner's report of 1911 reveals the fact that the Whitman Savings Bank and the people's Savings Bank of Brockton, the first two banks to open Insurance Departments, lead the 144 savings banks of the Commonwealth, having more than a million in deposits, in percentage increase of savings deposits for the year ending October 31, 1911.

For the year ending October 31, 1910, the People's Savings Bank was first and the Whitman Savings Bank was fifth among the savings banks of the Commonwealth in the percentage increase of deposits. The records of these two years make it very evident that the establishment of Insurance Departments by these two Banks has been of great assistance in increasing their savings deposits.

On April 13, 1912, there were 5836 policies in force in the three savings banks having Insurance Departments with insurance to the amount of $2,227,708. The insurance in force shows a steady increase from week to week and the amount of the over-the counter business is also constantly growing.

—When a motor car owner from another State comes into Massachusetts and his car is equipped with an ordinary horn he may get in trouble if the Bay State Solons cling to the idea of compelling owners of cars to use special sirens that make "an abrupt and warning sound." There should be national laws for autos. It is absurd, expensive and a nuisance for owners and chauffeurs to have one set of rules prevalent in one State and perhaps another set in effect a few miles away in the State next by. An autoist who travels much will presently need to carry his own machine shop and law department with him wherever he goes.—Brockton Enterprise.

CITY COUNCIL

the original ordinance of 1905 which provided for 14 permanent men. This was increased by the addition of four men. Then came the new ordinance in 1909. Since then four more men had been added making, with the superintendent of fire alarm 23. It was on this ordinance that he based his claim that there were 23 men in the department.

Councilman Studley however stood by the ruling of the City Solicitor that there were 25 men in the department. This brought the discussion up to the correct interpretation of the ordinance, section one of which, in part, reads as follows:

"The Fire Department shall consist of a Chief Engineer, three assistant engineers, one Superintendent of Fire Alarms, Captain, Lieutenant and such permanent and call men as from time to time may be deemed necessary by the City Council."

Councilman Abele, who was a member of the Ordinance Committee at the time the new ordinance was framed, stated that he distinctly remembered that the committee had no intention of increasing the number of men, and from the fact that the Chief Engineer in his report the following year did not include two extra men, neither did the pay rolls show them, it was clearly evident that the ordinance was not understood as increasing the number of men.

In reply to a question by Councilman J. R. S. Ross, City Solicitor McAnarney gave his ruling on the ordinance. He said that he did not consider himself as infallible. He however gave his opinion in good faith. Either the Council of 1909 did or did not intend to increase the number of men. He would however agree that the ordinance did not name the number of men. If the City Council meant anything then it was that the ordinance should mean something. My construction of the ordinance is that no matter what it thought it was doing, what it did do was to leave the fire department as having 18 men in addition to a superintendent of Fire Alarm, Captain and Lieutenant. Since that time four men have been added making the number now 25 men.

Councilman Richards did not object to giving the department what men it needed but he did object to the ringing in of additional men in this manner.

Councilman Sodergren stated that the Chairman of the Ordinance Committee of 1900 had informed him that the committee did not intend to increase the number of men.

Councilman Cunningham also spoke in favor of the amendment as proposed by Councilman Abele.

The motion to amend was then put and voted down 6 voting yes and 14 no.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

Councilman Cunningham moved to amend the amount for garbage of the Board of Health making the amount $8,000 in place of $6,000. Motion lost.

Councilman Richards moved to increase the amount for contagious diseases from $7,000 to $7,750. Motion lost on a rising vote of 9 yes and 10 no.

STREETS.

Councilman Sandberg moved to make the amount for highways, etc. $45,000 instead of $40,000. This motion was voted 14 yes and 7 no.

The budget was then unanimously passed.

ORDERS IN CALENDAR.

The following orders in the calendar were then taken up and passed under suspension of the rules:

Appropriating $1,200 to repair police signal wires.

Granting the Gas Co., permission to lay mains.

Establishing a system of auditing.

Appropriating $755.09 to pay deficit bills of the Board of Health.

APPOINTMENTS.

CITY HALL DESTROYED

Ten Fires at Waterbury Result In Calling Out Troops

Waterbury, Conn., April 23.—Ten fires, believed to have been of incendiary origin, from 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon until 8:30 last night, culminating with the destruction of the city hall caused great excitement. Late last night Mayor Reeves ordered out Company A, Connecticut national guard, and the militiamen patrolled and drove the crowds home. A number of false alarms added to the excitement.

The city hall fire started in the basement and within a short time the structure was destroyed. The loss is $200,000. Except for the assessors' records, no valuable papers were lost.

All of the fires started in basements, and in some instances oil-soaked rags were found. The firemen were able to control all the fires except that in the city hall.

One of the fires was near a theatre, and in the excitement one woman shouted "Fire!" causing a small panic, in which several women fainted.

The fire has left the city without a lock-up, and Superintendent Beach has arranged with the county commissioners to use the cells in the new county courthouse to confine prisoners.

Still Picking Up Bodies

St. Johns, April 23.—More bodies have been picked up by the cable steamer Mackay-Bennett, which is cruising near the spot where the White Star liner Titanic foundered.

How many bodies have been secured, in addition to the fifty that already have been taken aboard, has not been reported, but twenty-five have been identified. The steamer will proceed to New York with the bodies as soon as her work has been completed.

Terminal Combine Held by Supreme Court to Be Illegal

Washington, April 23.—Railroad terminal associations of many large cities are amenable to the Sherman anti-trust law, the supreme court decided in the government's "trust busting" suit against the Terminal Railroad association of St. Louis.

The court declares such "combinations" for maintenance and operations of union stations are unreasonably in restraint of commerce.

The Advertiser after many years occupancy of the upper floor of the building at the corner of Chestnut and Maple streets is moving out today. The property has reecntly changed hands and the present owner W. A. Bradford is to make some big improvements in the building.

SMALL BUT MIGHTY.

An unusual sight was witnessed Sunday afternoon shortly after the fire at Germantown when the fire chemical went out of commission and was towed to the central fire station by the Chief Engineer's Ford Runabout. There is only a difference of 6400 pounds between the cars, the chemical weighing three and three quarters tons and the runabout eleven hundred and fifty. The chief evidently knew the value of a small parcel when he chose his car.

FRANKLIN ON WITNESS STAND

Vice President of White Star Line Delayed Sad News

AWAITED "AUTHENTIC" STORY

Says Cruel Hoax Messages of Safety of Passengers May Have Come From Some Junior Employed In His Office, but He Denies Own Responsibility—Ismay Tried to Hold Cedric and Return to Europe, but Officers Would Not Permit Transfer—Titanic Was "Full Speed Ahead," According to Firemen—Unknown Steamer Five Miles From Titanic Ignored Call For Aid

Washington, April 23.—Over six hours before the news was made public, the White Star line knew twenty lifeboats filled with passengers of the Titanic had been picked up by the Carpathia. This was admitted by Vice President Franklin of the International Mercantile Marine company before the senate investigating committee.

At noon on Monday, April 15, this was known, Franklin said, but it was not made public "because it was not authentic." Not until 6:20, Franklin said, was a sufficiently authentic message received to announce the Titanic's loss. At 6:30 the public was first told "officially" of the sinking of the ocean liner Titanic.

Franklin declared the message at noon was a relayed wireless from Cape Race saying the Carpathia had picked up the Titanic's boats jammed with passengers. This information, he believed, was "mere rumor."

Franklin did not give it out because he said he "could not believe the Titanic had sunk," and therefore awaited "authentic information." At 6:20 the "authentic" message came with the news of the Titanic disaster. "Then, and not until then, was the public informed."

Franklin admitted that perhaps some one at the White Star offices had given out the cruel hoax that the Titanic's passengers were all safe, but disavowed responsibility for concealing the news of the sea disaster.

Asked point blank whether he or any other official had sent the reassuring telegram to Congressman Hughes of West Virginia that the Titanic was proceeding to Halifax and "all were saved" on Monday afternoon—at a time hours after 1500 lives had been swallowed up in the icy waters off Cape Race—Franklin declared they had not.

"We have a big lot of employes in our office," he added. "It might have been that some one of the juniors who were answering telephones gave out that information, but certainly none of the officers did. It is possible that such a telegram was sent from our office, but I did not know anything about it. It was unauthorized."

Franklin astonished the members of the commitee when he read wireless messages showing how J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the company, planned to flee from America after his rescue by trans-shipping on the Cedric for England.

After Franklin had read the messages telling how Ismay tried to hold up the Cedric for him that he might return to Europe without landing in New York, he read this wireless dispatch:

"Very sorry; the officers will not allow me to make the transfer and I will meet you at dock on arrival of Carpathia."

These messages were signed "Yamsi," which was Ismay's code for Ismay.

Franklin claimed the sole responsibility of the White Star line's affairs in America and said no one shares with him the direction of the line from this side.

"Will you state what jurisdiction or authority you have over the movements and direction of the ships of your company?" Senator Smith asked.

"We have no jurisdiction over the navigation of the ships of our company after they have left any port in the United States or Canada," Franklin replied. He then said he had been with the International Mercantile Marine since 1892 and first was in charge of the transportation line of the company. The examination then turned to the first and last voyage of the Titanic.

The committee was given a new surprise when a New York dispatch said that William McIntyre, one of the Ttanic's firemen, declared that the steam pressure of the boilers was ten pounds above the high limit, or "blood pressure."

"From the time we left Queenstown," he said, "we went the limit."

An unknown steamer was within five miles of the Titanic an hour before she sank; rockets were sent up and distress signals flashed to call her attention, and although the Titanic's lights must have been in plain sight and not a life need have been lost had she answered the call, the stranger kept her course obliquely past the sinking liner and left her to her fate.

CAPTAINS OF CRUISERS

Secretary Meyer Orders Them to Make an Investigation

This phase of the disaster was brought out before the committee when J. E. Boxhall, third officer of the Titanic, described his unsuccessful efforts to attract the stranger's attention.

This steamer, according to Boxhall, could not have been more than five miles away, and was steaming toward the Titanic. So close was she that from the bridge Boxhall plainly saw her masthead lights and then her red side-light.

Both with rockets and with the Morse electric signal did the officer hail the stranger. Captain Smith and several others near the bridge declared at the time their belief that the vessel had seen them and was signaling in reply. Boxhall failed to see such replies, however, and in any case the steamer kept on her course, obliquely past the Titanic, without offering aid.

HOW VICTIMS MET FATE

Story of Man Who Went Down With Ship, but Was Saved

New York, April 23.—"I was still on the Titanic when she sank," declared Ernest Person, a big, robust Swedish immigrant, at the Swedish home.

Person, who is on his way to make a home in the west for the family he has left behind in Sweden, through an interpreter tells a wonderful story of the last scenes on the vessel.

"After the boats were all gone and we were still on the Titanic a calm settled over everyone. The lights had gone out and only the stars indicated what was going on. When the last boats put away there was some panic among a few to get aboard, but the majority were calm and everyone prepared to meet his fate in his own way.

"The band was playing and kept playing while the vessel sank lower and lower into the water. Suddenly there was a rush of water, the deck slipped away from under me like a bullet and I went down, down, down. It seemed as if I never would stop. I came to the surface just as I was giving up all hope.

"The ocean was very calm, but how cold. Fortunately I always did a great deal of swimming at home and did not mind the frightful chill as much as I might have otherwise. As long as I had come to the surface I felt there must be some hope, and I began to swim with others swimming all around me. But I was fast going and several times I was almost ready to give up when my hand struck something.

"I found it would float and just had strength enough to climb aboard. It appeared to me to be a door. I lay on it for a moment to get back strength. Then I felt something tugging at my back. It was a boathook that one of the men in the lifeboat had thrown at me. Another threw an oar and between them they managed to get me on board. How I was ever able to get there I do not know. When they pulled me in a chill came over me and I must have fainted. I knew nothing more until they brought me to on the Carpathia."

MEYER ORDERS INQUIRY

Captains of Chester and Salem Will Report on the Wireless

Washington, April 23.—In order to determine the facts concerning the fruitless efforts of the scout cruisers Chester and Salem to obtain definite information from the Carpathia following the Titanic disaster, Secretary of the Navy Meyer has directed an inquiry into the incident.

The captains of these two ships are directed to forward a complete set of the original messages with a statement of all efforts made by the wireless operators to dispatch messages to the Carpathia or to pick up messages that were being sent from the Carpathia whether to naval stations at sea or on shore to the Marconi or other commercial stations.

This information is desired by the navy department if only to vindicate it of the charges made by the surviving operator of the Titanic that the navy operators were unable to obtain news through their own inefficiency, instead of through refusal by the Carpathia to work with them.

Reports on file in the department show that for some time it has appeared to the authorities that one of the commercial companies has either declined to work with the navy operators in instances where important messages were being sent, or has actually interfered with the transmission of these messages.

These reports also allege that the company in question has practised various means to belittle the naval service and obtain a contract for supplying all instruments used by the navy. It is freely stated by naval authorities that the company has endeavored to obtain a monopoly of the wireless business.

A MILLION FOR RELIEF

Fund on Both Sides of the Atlantic Is Rapidly Growing

New York, April 23.—From the figures that come from England and from the various sources in New York—the mayor's fund, the stock exchange fund and the money that came directly to Mrs. Nelson H. Henry's committee—it is estimated that at least $400,000 is already in hand for the permanent relief of the Titanic's survivors and of those who lost wage earners by the shipwreck. A cable from London says the relief fund there has reached $550,000, which brings the total near the million-dollar mark.

The relief fund committee agreed to pass over its data to the Red Cross as soon as it has done its own work with the figures and names. In the lists which the Red Cross will get will appear simply the names, nationality, the immediate losses and the plans of the survivors, where they are going and what their addresses will be. So the Red Cross can find out later just what help each survivor needs.

THE TITANIC'S CARGO

It Consisted Mainly of What Is Known as High Class Freight

New York, April 23.—The full list of the freight and express cargo on the Titanic was received in New York in the registered mail of the Cunarder Mauretania. The manifest shows a cargo the value of which is conservatively estimated at about $420,000.

The weight of the cargo was about 1400 tons, not a large amount, all things considered, until it is remembered that cargo was a secondary matter so far as the Titanic was concerned. That ship was built for high-priced passengers, and what little cargo she carried was also of the kind that demanded quick transportation. The Titanic's freight was for the most part what is known as high-class package freight.

REFORM ON SEAS

Demanded In Protest of Boston Citizens Against Titanic Disaster

Boston, April 23.—Boston officially paid its tribute to the heroes of the Titanic disaster at a meeting in historic old Faneuil hall. The meeting, which was called by Mayor Fitzgerald, voiced the sentiment of the whole city in extending sympathy to the survivors and bereaved relatives of the Titanic victims, in condemning the steamship copany for its lack of litesaving equipment and in remembering the superb heroism and splendid manhood and womanhood of the men and women who went to their deaths so that others might live.

Resolutions were adopted, expressing this deep feeling of the city and its citizens and urging congress and President Taft to take steps for securing laws which will adequately protect the lives of passengers on the ocean-going steamships. A law is demanded which will provide means of escape for every passenger aboard any ship with a heavy penalty in case of violation of the proposed law.

Continuous wireless, night and day, the use of searchlights, the necessity of having frequent boat drills, were other important points that were brought out in the mtions which were passed.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

USES FOR SPRING LETTUCE.

WE should be truly thankful that lettuce is again abundant and reasonable in price, for lettuce is the basis of most salads and eaten alone with a simple dressing is one of the most delicious foods one could wish. For persons troubled with nerves the soothing properties of lettuce are to be as much recommended as those of fresh green onions.

Lettuce For Insomnia.

Persons who are troubled with sleeplessness, particularly elderly ones, will find an abundant supper dish of lettuce a most effective soporific.

To be good, lettuce must be young and crisp. As soon as it is brought into the house sprinkle it with water and put into an air tight vessel, such as a covered pail, and place in the refrigerator.

When ready to use cut off the stalk, separate the leaves and wash them well, for there are many tiny insects that can hide in the crinkly leaves. Soak in very cold water for a quarter of an hour and then shake dry and wipe with a soft cloth. If the leaves are wet the dressing will not adhere.

A Plain Salad.

If a salad is to be made in which lettuce alone is used arrange the larger leaves around the outside of the dish and make a nest in the center of the whiter leaves of the heart. The salad may be flavored by rubbing the salad bowl with a clove or garlic, or you may place a piece of bread rubbed with the garlic underneath the leaves at the bottom of the bowl. When a French dressing is used toss and turn the leaves so that all may be coated.

Lettuce leaves should never be cut when a salad is being prepared. Cutting causes the lettuce to wilt. Instead tear the leaves. Boiled beets, hard boiled eggs or cold boiled potatoes sliced may be served on a bed of lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing.

Ham and Lettuce.

A novel dish is thus prepared with lettuce. Take two heads of lettuce, wash, soak and tear each leaf into several pieces. Have ready about a quarter of a pound of ham, fried and cut into small squares. While the ham is hot add to it a tablespoonful of vinegar. Take one egg, beat until light and stir a tablespoonful of sour cream into it. Then pour on the ham and stir these over the fire until the sauce thickens. Have the dried pieces of leaves on a dish, pour the ham and sauce over them and stir together with a fork. Serve hot.

RICE AND CHEESE.

RICE and cheese cooked together make a very substantial dish. It may serve as a substitute for ment in vegetarian households.

Boiled Rice and Cheese.—Boil and drain a half cupful of rice, drop into it a tablespoonful of grated cheese, stirring the two ingredients well together.

Dab bits of butter over the rice and sprinkle with grated cheese. Set the baking dish in the oven until the cheese is slightly browned. Serve while hot.

This may be prepared in a fancy casserole dish and served in the dish.

An Italian Dish.

Rice Neapolitan Style.—Rice cooked in this way is a favorite Italian dish. Take a quart of boiling water, add to it a tablespoonful of grated Parmesan cheese and a slice of bacon. Boil these for five minutes, then stir in a cupful of well washed rice and boil. When done take out the bacon, pour the rice into a dish, dot the top with pieces of butter and set in the oven to dry.

Savory Rice.—Take two ounces of rice, boil in salted water until about half done. Drain off the water and replace it with half a pint of milk. Boil the rice in this until it is soft, then stir in an ounce of grated cheese, an egg beaten light and salt and pepper to taste. Pour into individual baking dishes and brown quickly in the oven. Send to the table garnished with sprigs of parsley.

With Puff Paste.

Latticed Rice.—Take two cupfuls of cooked rice, a half cupful of odds and ends of cheese which have been grated fine, two cupfuls of milk, two eggs well beaten, a spoonful of melted butter and a teaspoonful of salt.

Mix these, place in a baking dish and cross the top of the dish with narrow strips of puff paste to form a fine lattice work. Sprinkle the top with fine cheese before and after putting on the lattice. Place bits of butter over the rice. Bake for half an hour.

FIGHTING IN MOROCCO

Battle at Fez Turns Out to Be a Veritable Massacre

Paris, April 23.—The revolution in Fez, the Moroccan capital, in which the populace and a large number of mutinous Moorish soldiers participated, developed into a veritable massacre, accompanied by many atrocities, according to a wireless dispatch received from Fez at the foreign office.

It is now known that fifteen French officers and forty soldiers were killed in the fighting, while thirteen civilians, all of them French citizens, were massacred. Besides these, four French officers and seventy soldiers were wounded and 100 Jews were slain and a large number wounded and mutilated.

CHAPTER XXIX.

The Raft Again.

Yancy and Cavendish threw themselves on the sweeps and worked the raft clear of the keel boat, then the turbulent current seized the smaller craft and whirled it away into the night; as its black bulk receded from before his eyes the Earl of Lambeth spoke with the voice of authority and experience.

"It was a good fight and them fellows done well, but not near well enough." A conclusion that could not be gainsaid. He added, "No one ain't hurt but them that had ought to have got hurt. Mr. Yancy's all right, and so's Mr. Carrington—who's mighty welcome here." The earl's shock of red hair was bristling like the mane of some angry animal and his eyes still flashed with the light of battle, but he managed to summon up an expression of winning friendliness.

"Mr. Carrington's kin to me, Polly," explained Yancy to Mrs. Cavendish. His voice was far from steady, for Hannibal had been gathered into his arms and had all but wrecked the stoic calm with which the Scratch Hiller was seeking to guard his emotions.

Polly smiled and dimpled at the Kentuckian. Trained to a romantic point of view she had a frank liking for handsome, stalwart men. Cavendish was neither, but none knew better than Polly that where he was most lacking in appearance he was richest in substance. He carried scars honorably earned in those differences he had been prone to cultivate with less generous natures; for his scheme of life did not embrace the millennium.

"Thank God, you got here when you did!" said Carrington.

"We was some pushed fo' time, but we done it," responded the earl modestly. He added, "What now?—do we make a landing?"

"No—unless it interferes with your plans not to. I want to get around the next bend before we tie up. Later we'll all go back. Can I count on you?"

"You shorely can. I consider this here as sociable a neighborhood as I ever struck. It pleases me well. Folks are up and doing hereabout."

Carrington looked eagerly around in search of Betty. She was sitting on an upturned tub, a pathetic enough figure as she drooped against the wall of one of the shanties with all her courage quite gone from her. He made his way quickly to her side.

"Lil" whispered Polly in Chills and Fever's ear. "If that pore young thing yonder keeps a widow it won't be because of any encouragement she gets from Mr. Carrington. If I ever seen marriage in a man's eye I seen it in his this minute!"

"Bruce!" cried Betty, starting up as Carrington approached. "Oh, Bruce, I am so glad you have come—you are not hurt?" She accepted his presence without question. She had needed him and he had not failed her.

"We are none of us hurt, Betty," he said gently, as he took her hand.

He saw that the suffering she had undergone during the preceding twenty-four hours had left its record on her tired face and in her heavy eyes. She retained a shuddering consciousness of the unchecked savagery of those last moments on the keel boat; she was still hearing the oaths of the men as they struggled together, the sound of blows, and the dreadful silences that had followed them. She turned from him, and there came the relief of tears.

"I Was Quite Peevish After He Threw Me in the River."

"There, Betty, the danger is over now and you were so brave while it lasted. I can't bear to have you cry!"

"I was wild with fear—all that time on the boat, Bruce—" she faltered between her sobs. "I didn't know but they would find you out. I could only wait and hope—and pray!"

"I was in no danger, dear. Didn't the girl tell you I was to take the place of a man Slosson was expecting? He never doubted that I was that man until a light—a signal it must have been—on the shore at the head of the bayou betrayed me."

"Where are we going now, Bruce? Not the way they went—" and Betty glanced out into the black void where the keel boat had merged into the gloom.

"No, no—out we can't get the raft back up-stream against the current, so the best thing is to land at the Bates' plantation below here; then as soon as you are able we can return to Belle Plain," said Carrington.

There was an interval broken only by the occasional sweep of the great steering oar as Cavendish coaxed the raft out toward the channel. The thought of Charley Norton's murder rested on Carrington like a pall. Scarcely a week had elapsed since he quitted Thicket Point, and in that week the hand of death had dealt with them impartially, and to what end? Then the miles he had traversed in his hopeless journey up-river translated themselves into a division of time as well as space. They were just as much further removed from the past with its blight of tragic terror. He turned and glanced at Betty. He saw that her eyes held their steady look of wistful pity that was for the dead man; yet in spite of this, and in spite of the bounds beyond which he would not let his imagination carry him, the future, enriched with sudden promise, unfolded itself. The deep sense of recovered hope stirred within him. He knew there must come a day when he would dare to speak of his love, and she would listen.

"It's best we should land at Bates' place—we can get teams there," he went on to explain. "And, Betty, wherever we go we'll go together, dear. Cavendish doesn't look as if he had any very urgent business of his own, and I reckon the same is true of Yancy, so I am going to keep them with us. There are some points to be cleared up when we reach Belle Plain—some folks who'll have a lot to explain or else quit this part of the state! And I intend to see that you are not left alone until—until I have the right to take care of you for good and all—that's what you want me to do one of these days, isn't it, darling?" and his eyes, glowing and infinitely tender, dwelt on her upturned face.

But Betty shrank from him in involuntary agitation.

"Oh, not now, Bruce—not now—we mustn't speak of that—it's wrong—it's wicked—you mustn't make me forget him!" she cried brokenly, in protest.

"Forgive me, Betty, I'll not speak of it again," he said.

"Wait, Bruce, and some time—Oh, don't make me say it," she gasped, "or I shall hate myself!" for in his presence she was feeling the horror of her past experience grow strangely remote, only the dull ache of her memories remained, and to these she clung. They were silent for a moment, then Carrington said:

"After I'm sure you'll be safe here perhaps I'll go south into the Choctaw Purchase. I've been thinking of that recently; but I'll find my way back here—don't misunderstand me—I'll not come too soon for even you, Betty. I loved Norton. He was one of my best friends, too," he continued gently. "But you know—and I know—dear, the day will come when no matter where you are I shall find you and not lose you!"

Betty made no answer in words, but a soft and eloquent little hand was slipped into his and allowed to rest there.

Presently a light wind stirred the dead dense atmosphere, the mist lifted and enveloped the shore, showing them the river between piled-up mass of vapor. Apparently it ran for their raft alone. It was just twenty-four hours since Carrington had looked upon such another night, but this was a different world the gray fog was unmasking—a world of hopes, and dreams, and rich content. Then the thought of Norton—poor Norton—who had had his world, too, of hopes and dreams and rich content—

The calm of a highly domestic existence had resumed its interrupted sway on the raft. Mr. Cavendish, associated in Betty's memory with certain ear-splitting manifestations of ferocious rage, became in the bosom of his family low-voiced and genial and hopelessly impotent to deal with his five small sons; while Yancy was again the Bob Yancy of Scratch Hill, violence of any sort apparently had no place in his nature. He was deeply absorbed in Hannibal's account of those vicissitudes which had befallen him during their separation. They were now seated before a cheerful fire that blazed on the hearth, the boy very close to Yancy, with one hand clasped in the Scratch Hiller's, while about them were ranged the six small Cavendishes sedately sharing in the reunion of uncle and nevvy, toward which they felt they had honorably labored.

KEEPING TABS ON BAY STATE

Politicians Deeply Interested In Results of Primaries

CRITICAL WEEK OF CAMPAIGN

May Decide Whether Taft or Roosevelt Will Receive Nomination—President and Congressional Spellbinders to Lend a Hand—Roosevelt Supporters Active In New Hampshire—Large Expenditure of Money

Washington, April 23.—President Taft's decision to visit Massachusetts this week has focused attention more than ever upon the Bay State campaign. There is a conviction among the battle-scarred veterans, who have been warring for Taft or for Roosevelt, as the case may be, that the Massachusetts vote will be of great moment. The Pennsylvania results made Roosevelt's nomination a possibility. If Massachusetts elects Taft delegates, it is believed here that will make the president's renomination a certainty.

So it is that this week is regarded by the president-makers at the Capitol as the critical week of the hard fought campaign. As the Massachusetts folks well understand by this time, there has been active recruiting of spellbinders from congress. Leading insurgent senators have left their seats to take up the cry for Roosevelt in Massachusetts, and with them is ex-Senator Beveridge of Indiana.

There is much eagerness for the president's utterances on his Massachusetts tour. After all the urging he has had to speak right out straight and tell the truth about certain matters which Roosevelt is featuring throughout the west, Washington feels some confidence that the president has yielded and will make addresses which will prove interesting reading.

While the campaign looms so prominently in Massachusetts, where the decision promises to be as vital to the Republican party as any state has had an opportunity to render in a very long time, the struggle is being carried into a half dozen other states.

Washington resounds with the struggle that is under way in West Virginia, and also in Maryland. Orators and workers for both sides are being recruited from Washington and hurried into those states as well as into New Jersey.

Some valiant financing has also been under way in recent days. The Taft managers found it absolutely necessary to raise funds to meet the almost unprecedented expenditures of the Roosevelt managers.

Word has been brought here that in New Hampshire a Roosevelt worker has been sent into every town to talk with the farmers. Another man or two is under employment in every village to keep around the hotels and talk Roosevelt nomination. Many others are employed to discuss Roosevelt doctrines before groups of men as these congregate.

The methods of campaigning are as intensive as have ever been known in our politics, so the veteran politicians say, and call for large expenditures of money, much of which is undoubtedly legitimate, even though to be deplored.

What has happened in New Hampshire is not exceptional, according to the political travelers who come into Washington. In some states the Roosevelt managers have built up a fairly good organization. It has enlisted the interest of many young voters who lend enthusiasm and energy so important to a political cause.

The Democrats are watching Massachusetts eagerly for the outcome of the primary on their candidates.

GARDNER AFTER T. R.

Challenges Ex-President to Joint Debate at Boston Rally

Boston, April 23.—Two thousand men and women attended the Taft rally at Tremont temple last night and heard various speakers explain why President Taft should receive their indorsement at the primaries a week from today.

Congressman Gardner was in rare fettle, and his attack on the ex-president's past record and recent utterances, and a reiterated challenge to a joint debate, brought shouts of approval and prolonged cheers from the crowd.

The rally, presided over by Joseph Walker, was probably the most demonstrative Republican function of the sort held in the temple. There were frequent interruptions from the floor. The police ejected one man.

Judge Hedges of New York, who said he was "at the battle of Saratoga with the colonel," and kept the crowd roaring with laughter by his sarcastic references to "my friend the colonel," got into several arguments with men in the balconies who disapproved of his remarks. But the New Yorker's ready wit only added to the crowd's enthusiasm, and the police quickly sought out the disturbers.

Young Men's Clothing

$10.00 to $16.50

THERE'S an air about the clothes we sell for Young Men that makes you feel at once that money spent in buying them will be the very best possible investment. To begin with they represent the highest achievement in ready-made clothes making—and Ready-To-Wear Clothing is the choice of most young men today. There are many reasons why. With a large number of ready-to-wear suits before him to try on, a young man can make a much more satisfactory choice than he can to go to a tailor's and select the cloth "in the piece" and the style, from a fashion plate. With the ready-to-wear clothing he can see just how the garment is going to look on him—how it fits his own individuality.

We know that we can please the young man who is looking for clothes that are different and classy; we have so many refined, tasteful and becoming styles, yet with plenty of snap and dash in them. Whether you want conservative clothes or those with the athletic lines and novelty touches, we can meet your requirements.

Curious White Island.

What is perhaps the most extraordinary island in the world is that which lies thirty miles to the northeast of New Zealand. White Island is an enormous mass of rock nearly three miles in circumference, rising 900 feet above the sea, and is perpetually enveloped in dark clouds that are visible for nearly 100 miles. This island consists almost entirely of sulphur, with a small percentage of gypsum. Some years ago an attempt was made to float a company to work the sulphur, which is of high quality, but sufficient capital was not subscribed. The export of sulphur from White Island is therefore still very small. In the interior is a lake fully fifty acres in extent, the water of which has a temperature of 110 degrees Fahrenheit, and it is strongly impregnated with acids. On one side of this lake are craters from which steam escapes with great force and noise. This steam and the vapor from the lake form the dark clouds that envelop the island.

Obliging.

"I think," said Mrs. Crumrox, who was arranging a musical program, "that we will have a mezzo-soprano."

"All right," replied her husband. "Don't bother me about it. Go ahead and see an architect."

Helped by Cloudburst

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press)

"I don't care about the bridge, so much," explained Dustan Carmichael, impatiently. "That is annoying and expensive and all that, but unless I can rush these papers to New York in time for the meeting it will cost me pretty close to $2,000,000. I'll give $10,000 to any man who will cross the stream."

"I wouldn't do it for the whole $2,000,000," said Cassidy, the foreman decidedly. "Mebbe some of the boys wants to try. I'll ask 'em."

Dick Breslin looked at the raging flood. During the night there had been a cloudburst up in the mountains. The ordinarily shallow stream was swollen to a width of 300 feet and the temporary railroad bridge had been swept away.

Breslin shared his employer's nervousness and accompanied him in his restless pacing until, from the private car, there stepped a hooded figure.

"Is it still bad?" asked the girl as he approached.

"Worse, Claire. I don't think the water will fall before tomorrow."

"And no one will try for the reward?"

"No one seems anxious to try for a suicide's grave," he laughed. "That's about what it would mean."

"Will you go halves with me?" she demanded suddenly.

"Die together?"

Claire shook her head.

"Father said we could get married when you had earned $5,000. It will take you two years with this construction gang to earn that much. We can hurry it along."

"I'm with you," he cried. "What is the idea?"

"Let's arrange with dad first." They went toward the bank. Mr. Carmichael paused to greet his daughter.

"You had better go back to the car," he said. "This weather is not made for young women."

"It won't hurt me," she said. "I've a proposition to make, dad."

"And that is?"

"You told Dick that we could be married when he had earned $5,000. Then you put him with this construction gang and it will take two years for him to earn it at the salary you pay him."

"And you've just discovered that if I pay him more the time will be shorter? This is a bad time for discoveries." Claire shook her head.

"Will you give us that reward if we get the papers across for you? Dick and I are partners. We'll each take half."

"You ought to help me out anyhow," he declared.

"I won't," she said, "and Dick doesn't know how." Her dimpled chin squared itself determinedly. Mr. Carmichael knew what that meant. She inherited his stubbornness, and he surrendered unconditionally.

She drew Breslin aside and whispered for a moment. Then she went back to their private car while he headed in the direction of the tool car. Some whisper of an attempt to bridge the stream was passed about and both banks were lined with workmen as Breslin returned.

"Going to shoot the box across?" demanded Cassidy, as he noticed that Dick carried a gun.

"Something like that," he admitted, as he proceeded to grease the outside of the gun barrel. Cassidy watched him in surprise. But his surprise was nothing to his amazement when Breslin began to drive stakes into the clay and wind a fishing line about it. Then he drew from his pocket a section of pipe from one of the steam drills and fastened the line to the cap of the pipe.

Claire and her father came down to watch the proceedings, and, with quiet care, Breslin slipped the cap on the gun and rested it in a crotched stick. There was a report, the line whizzed out over the stakes, but the projectile fell short.

"I'll get it yet," he cried, as he drew another cartridge from his pocket.

Slowly he drew back the line. It was a quarter of an hour before the projectile was back on land.

This time there was a heavier report, the black projectile rose in a curve and fell on the opposite bank. There Gillis caught it and raised the line out of the water.

From the telegraph kit, they obtained some light, strong rope and this in turn was drawn across. Then a water tight box containing the papers and a letter of instruction to Gillis was fastened to the line and hauled across. Ten minutes later the puffs of smoke announced the departure of an engine for the junction.

Carmichael watched the smoke until it faded into the distance, then he turned away with a sigh of satisfaction.

After the chill of the morning, the car seemed gratefully warm and Carmichael grew genial.

"Whose scheme was that?" he demanded.

"Dick's" said Claire promptly.

"It was Claire's," corrected Breslin. "I don't want any credit that is not due me."

Carmichael smiled indulgently. "At any rate," he said, "you did your share and you did it well. When I made work a condition of my consent in your marriage I only wanted to make sure that there was good stuff in you."

AN EVENING WITH DICKENS

Pickwick Papers Read at the Quincy Mansion School

IN FIVE PARTS

A pleasant evening with Dickens was the good fortune of those who attended the recital of the "Pickwick Papers" by Frank Speaight at Livermore hall, Quincy Mansion school, Tuesday evening. The reading was given in five parts and was witnessed not only by the teachers and pupils of the school but by a select audience of friends and residents of Wollaston and Quincy.

"Mrs. Bardell's Mistake',' the title of part one, depicted Mr. Pickwick's announcement of the engaging of a man servant being mistaken by his land-lady for a proposal of marriage. The lady in question falls on Pickwick's neck and in this pose they are discovered by Pickwick's friends Toppan, nodgrass and Winkle. The part closes with the appearance of Sam Weller and all being satisfactory he is engaged.

Part two, "A fine example of how to manage horses" shows the Pickwickians about to set out on an expedition. Winkle, on horse back and the rest in the chaise. The subsequent unmounting of Winkle followed by the loss of the saddle horse and the demolition of the chaise were realistically described.

Part there, "Mrs. Bardell sues for breach of promise. Mr. Winkle takes an example of fancy shooting." Pick-

Quincy Lodge Entertains Its Ladies Most Royally

THE PROGRAM

Every detail was carried out most successfully Tuesday evening, in Faxon hall, at the first "Ladies' Night" held under the auspices of Quincy Lodge, No. 413, L. O. O. M. The affair proved to be the best in the history of Quincy's largest fraternal organization and the hall was fully taxed for the occasion. An entertainment of the most appreciative variety was furnished during the early part of the evening.

The talent all of whom performed in a manner that evoked prolonged applause, included the well-known Keith trio of Weymouth, composed of Henry W., Theodore and Marjorie Keith. The first two mentioned played on cornets, while the last named assisted on the piano.

Little Theodora, who is but eleven years of age, conceded to be the youngest and one of the best girl cornetists in the state, made a decided hit with the audience and was forced to respond to repeated enores.

George Boutilier, assisted by Miss Jennie Boutilier, on the piano, sang a number of songs, that caused him to become the recipient of loud applause. Mathew Fay gave a number of whistling solos in his usual captivating way and was accorded well earned applause.

Neil Miller favored those present with a song and rendered solos in a

GEMS OF ART ON EXHIBITION

EXHIBIT CONTINUED

The Art committee of the Quincy Women's club has been requested to keep the clubhouse open Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week as well as upon these afternoons, so that opportunity may be afforded to the public to view the gems of art which they are exhibiting. It has been decided to keep open house on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons from 2 until 5 o'clock and on these evenings from 7. 30 until 9.30.

The art exhibit is not a show for women only. It is an exhibit which will appeal to men. There is one basrelief, the work of H. H. Kitson, which in itself would be worth spending an entire evening upon. The inscription above the face is "my mother." It is the noble face of a gentlewoman and the sculptor has wrought into the stone all the love that he felt for his mother and all that she gave to him; the blending has produced a work of such tenderness that the face seems waiting for the return smile of a loved one.

There is a massive marble study of an old man. This piece of work is also Mr. Kitson's. The figure is powerful and imposing; it seems to represent the "mature man." It not only sets the spectator thinking it also philosophizes

In one end of the room there is a case containing medallions. These are a collection made in Europe. Each medal represents some historical or scientific event or achievement. Many of them were made at the request of royalty. Here also is a miniature cow, exceedingly small but exquisite in its absolute perfection. It is the work of Isadore Bonheur a brother of the famous Rosa Bonheur.

In this case, in an obscure corner, is the medallion which is of most interest to Quincy people. It is a medal upon which are the faces of our two illustrious Quincy forefathers and pioneer presidents of the United States—namely John Adams, second president of our country and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president. The medal is cast upon a piece of copper thrown from the dome of the first church during the recent repairs. This is the work of Mrs. Kitson.

There are two casts representing different postures of "The athlete." These are the work of Dr. McKenzie physical director in Philadelphia. Dr. McKenzie's work has brought him into prominence because of his accuracy in the anatomical line.

The oils and water colors are so beautiful and each has such merit that a brief description seems entirely inadequate. There are two old canvases which are priceless, because of their age and rarity,—one is by Danbigny and the other by Isabey.

Some of the pictures which attracted the most attention were as follows: "Venice," by W. D. Hamilton. This is a large picture; it is hung to great advantage and shows all the richness of Italian coloring. "The Birches," by Ernest Major, is a wonderfully restful, satisfying bit of nature. "Clouds" by Kaula was considered by many a favorite among the landscapes. Melbourne Hardwick's "Afternoon," with the tempered light of softening skies, attracted the attention of all the visitors. The large painting of still life, by Emile Carlson, is in itself study enough for hours. The marine views by Charles Copeland must be seen to be appreciated.

There is a case of miniatures by the celebrated Sally Crosby and Jean Oliver. There are among them likenesses of notable persons.

An oil painting by Thompson, marked "Paris" is one which is full of movement. It breathes and throbs with life.

There is a marvellous "Head" by Mary Macomber which should receive study.

All these works of art together with a collection of expert handicraft makes an exhibit upon which Quincy people may with profit and pleasure expend an afternoon or evening. It is much more satisfying than many of the various entertainments offered.

Many friends of Miss Teresa Keating attended the meeting of the Braintree Teachers' Association, Tuesday evening. The speaker was Prof. Charles Richardson of Dartmouth college. The musical program was under the direction of Miss Keating and consisted of selections by a double quartet from the graduating class. The beautiful quality of tone and the artistic manner with which all the numbers were rendered reflected much credit on their vocal training. Especial mention should be made of the unaccompanied selections which would have been highly praiseworthy in far more matured singers.

WANT SCHOOL LOT FOR PARK

Annual Meeting of Wollaston Congregational Club

OFFICERS ELECTED

The Wollaston Congregational club held its annual meeting in the vestry Tuesday evening and elected the following to serve for the coming year: President, William A. Mann; vice-president, T. C. DuPlessis; secretary, L. L. Titus; treasurer, Fred L. Eastman; chairmar benevolent committee, T. C. Perley.

Upon vote of the club a membership committee was formed and the chair appointed Charles L. Seevey, J. Harry Hooper and Clarence L. Moulton to serve.

Annual reports were read by the secretary, William A. Mann, the treasurer Fred L. Eastman and by George B. Currier, chairman of the benevolent committee.

The disposition to be made of the old Wollaston school lot came up for discussion and a hearty vote was passed in favor of turning it into a public park. A committee of three consisting of Wendell H. Hull, Clarence H. Moulton and A. E. Walker was appointed to look into the matter and communicate with the proper authorities.

The treasurer's report was approved by Charles P. Hutchins, of the auditing committee and the list of nominations read by C. A. Randall chairman of the nominating committee.

A scream in the form of a mirth voking stereopticon lecture on "The Young America baseball league," by R. B. Locke brought down the house.

The address of the evening on "Savings Bank Insurance," was delivered by Harry W. Kimball, field secretary of the Massachusetts Savings Bank Insurance League. The speaker opened his talk with a statement of the condition of industrial insurance in this state. Sometime ago a movement was started by a body of public spirited citizens to permit the public to secure life insurance at the lowest possible cost. With this in view a bill was introduced and passed, authorizing banks to open insurance departments and furnish insurance at cost to the residents of this Commonwealth.

The law provides that the bank shall spend no money in soliciting this business, that there shall be no house to house canvass and that the profits shall be returned to the policy holders in the shape of dividends. A general insurance guarantee fund provides security of the very best. As a result of this movement the industrial insurance companies reduced their rates ten per cent. and upon the opening of the first savings bank insurance department suffered a further reduction of ten per cent. If the movement has accomplished nothing else it has saved the people in Massachusetts a million and a half dollars a year by these reductions.

Mr. Kimball told of the work at Whitman and Brockton where banks had opened departments and of the later addition of the Berkshire County Savings Bank of Pittsfield. Manufacturers are co-operating in this movement for public welfare and over 150 public agencies have been opened in various manufacturing establishments in Massachusetts. At the plant of the United Shoe Machinery Company at Beverly, over $250,000 in insurance is carried with a roll of nearly 600 policy holders. The advance that had been made in the last three years, declared the speaker, assured the success of the movement.

Many other features of the plan were touched upon and at the close of his address the opportunity for questions was had.

The usual roast beef supper was served. The meeting closes the season.

Misses Sarah, Blanche and Rita Gavin are visiting their aunt, Mrs. James Clark, at Larchmont, New York

Young Men's Clothing

$10.00 to $16.50

THERE'S an air about the clothes we sell for Young Men that makes you feel at once that money spent in buying them will be the very best possible investment. To begin with they represent the highest achievement in ready-made clothes making—and Ready-To-Wear Clothing is the choice of most young men today. There are many reasons why. With a large number of ready-to-wear suits before him to try on, a young man can make a much more satisfactory choice than he can to go to a tailor's and select the cloth "in the piece" and the style, from a fashion plate. With the ready-to-wear clothing he can see just how the garment is going to look on him—how it fits his own individuality.

We know that we can please the young man who is looking for clothes that are different and classy; we have so many refined, tasteful and becoming styles, yet with plenty of snap and dash in them. Whether you want conservative clothes or those with the athletic lines and novelty touches, we can meet your requirements.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Wanted, fewer $1000 state rooms, more $10 fisherman's dories.

The D.. A. R—ers have elected ten vice presidents and nobody charged yet with assault and battery.

The steel mills are running at full capacity. Probably Presidential campaigners are wearing the rails all out.

If there is anybody left who isn't getting $10 per day, the only trouble seems to be that he hasn't gone on strike for it.

The thrifty newspapers that saved the cuts of the Republic disaster find they work in handily just now with merely a change of labels.

The substitution of an illuminated dollar sign for the figures of Liberty over the capitol at Washington would be an appropriate symbol of the times and the manners.

One would harly think that young people who would be disposed to attend a religious convention on a holiday would be guilty of mutilating a church for the sake of a few souvenirs, but such was the case in our city when over two hundred of the members of the Norfolk County Christian Endeavor Society visited the historic First church and carried off seventeen white ivory buttons which are set in mahogany at the head of each pew.

These ivory buttons seem to be the target for relic hunters and are fast disappearing from the church, being replaced with painted ones as it is now almost impossible to get them except at great expense. Many relic fiends when they wrench the button off the Adams pew believe they are getting the original button but that is not the case for it went long ago.

If these young people have benefitted by their religious training and no not wish to cast a stigma on all the members of the County C. E., their conscience should dictate to them how to act at the present time. A return of the buttons should be forth-coming and the occurrence be a lesson to others.

We cannot believe any one of the young people deliberately intended any wrong but the mutilating and desecrating of public and private property should stop.

The parish of First church at times feel inclined to close the church to visitors especially large parties, only allowing one or two in at a time under proper supervision. It looks as though it would be a necessary precaution in the future.

Last Saturday Governor Dix of New York vetoed the Full Train Crew Bill calling it arbitrary and unreasonable. It now remains to be seen what will be done here in Massachusetts where a similar bill is before the legislature. Our Railroad Commissioners say the bill is not needed for the safety or convenience of the public or the safety of the employees.

If inforced, the extra brakeman asked for in the bill on all freight trains in the state would cost the railroads $500,000 a year, the interest on which would go a long way toward needed improvements and toward greater safety in other directions. It is for the people of Massachusetts to decide if this bill is necessary to the railroad's equipment for safety or if it will simply be a hardship without being of any real benefit to anybody.

Governor Dix in his veto said: "The Public Service commission was vested with and now has the power to determine and compel safe, adequate and proper service on the part of the railroad. Such powers necessarily includes the power to change the personnel and reduce or increase the number in a train crew. This bill deprives the Public Service commission of the power to reduce a train crew, notwithstanding that without such reduction, an unreasonable burden is placed upon the railroads and a safe, adequate and proper service made impossible. For the reason, therefore, that this bill is absolute in requirement and arbitrary in application, I disapprove this bill."

Voters of Massachusetts

Lest you be deceived by the cry of the Taft machine about laying of "impious hands upon the ark of the constitutional covenant," read these things and ponder:

NEARLY EVERY GREAT POLICY INITIATED AND CARRIED THROUGH BY ROOSEVELT WHEN HE WAS PRESIDENT WAS OPPOSED BY THE MEN WHO ARE NOW LEADING THE ABUSIVE CAMPAIGN AGAINST HIM ON THE GROUND THAT IT WAS AN ASSAULT UPON THE CONSTITUTION.

One of the most beneficent achievements of Roosevelt's administration was the passage of the Dolliver-Hepburn Railroad Act.

In six years of operation it has ended railroad rebates, steadied traffic conditions, put securities on a sounder basis and restored public confidence in railroad management.

AND YET THIS GREAT POPULAR MEASURE WAS DENOUNCED BY THE MEN NOW COMPOSING THE TAFT MACHINE AS UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Roosevelt forced it through against the combined opposition of the Cannon-Aldrich machine, the railroads, Big Business and Wall Street.

Among those who fought most desperately against it were Senators Aldrich of Rhode Island and Crane of Massachusetts and Representative McCall of Massachusetts.

They said it was socialistic and anarchistic and in direct violation of the "express provisions of the constitution which define and protect the judicial powers of the courts."

The fight lasted five years.

Backed by public sentiment, to which he appealed against the interests ROOSEVELT DROVE THE ENEMY FROM ONE POSITION TO ANOTHER, AND WHEN THE SMOKE OF BATTLE CLEARED HIS VICTORY WAS FOUND TO BE COMPLETE AND SWEEPING.

Two years later an attempt was made to starve the Dolliver-Hepburn law to death by refusing appropriations for its enforcement.

Speaker Cannon, bitter enemy of the people, was in fullest sympathy with the plot, and for this Congressman Weeks of Massachusetts lauded him as the "Watchdog of the Treasury."

ROOSEVELT DISCOVERED THE PLOT, TOOK UP AGAIN THE GAGE OF BATTLE AND, AFTER ONE OF THE HARDEST FIGHTS OF HIS CAREER, FORCED FROM THE PEOPLE'S ENEMIES THE APPROPRIATION HE DEMANDED.

Since then the law has proved itself to be all that Roosevelt and his supporters believed it.

In 1905 Roosevelt took up the crusade for pure food legislation.

For 20 years a half-hearted agitation for pure food had been going on, but the patent medicine venders, foodfakers and adulterators, through political bosses, had prevented legislative action.

Roosevelt urged upon Congress the regulation of interstate commerce in misbranded and adulterated foods, drinks and drugs.

THE ENEMIES OF THE PEOPLE AT ONCE RAISED THE CRY OF UNCONSTITUTIONALITY.

They said the thing Roosevelt wanted was not only a usurpation of powers belonging to the states, but a "BETRAYAL OF THE PEOPLE INTO THE HANDS OF THE FOOD POISONERS."

But the law was passed, under the influence of the Big Stick, and today, after five years of enforcement, it commands the unanimous approval and support of the country.

THE CRY OF UNCONSTITUTIONALITY WAS RAISED BY THE CORRUPT POLITICIANS AND THEIR HIRELINGS IN CONGRESS AGAINST ROOSEVELT'S RECOMMENDATION TO PROHIBIT CORPORATIONS FROM CONTRIBUTING TO CAMPAIGN FUNDS.

But the recommendation was enacted into law in 1907, and ONCE AGAIN ROOSEVELT PROVED WISER THAN THE LAWYERS.

Roosevelt secured the passage of a law dealing with accidents to employees of interstate carriers.

It was invoked in a personal injury suit in Connecticut, and Chief Justice Baldwin of that state held the law to be unconstitutional.

Roosevelt denounced the decision as archaic and ridiculous and staked his reputation on the constitutionality of the law.

The matter finally went to the United States Supreme Court. An opinion was handed down a few months ago.

THE SUPREME COURT UNANIMOUSLY DECIDED THAT ROOSEVELT WAS RIGHT AND BALDWIN WAS WRONG!

The policy laid down by Roosevelt in his attack on the Water-Power Trust in 1909 was met with the argument that THE CONSTITUTION WOULD NOT PERMIT THE FEDERAL POWER TO SAFEGUARD THE PUBLIC INTEREST.

Among those who stood with the Water-Power Trust were Crane of Massachusetts, Gallinger of New Hampshire and Penrose of Pennsylvania.

THEY ASSURED THE SENATE THAT THE THING THAT HAS SINCE BECOME THE POLICY OF THE COUNTRY COULD NOT BE DONE!

Men of Massachusetts, think those things over before you cast your ballot on Tuesday next.

THERE ARE SCORES OF SUCH INSTANCES OF THE BLINDNESS WHICH AFFLICTS THE CHRONIC OPPONENTS OF ROOSEVELT AND HIS POLICIES.

REMEMBER THAT EVERY MAN WHOSE NAME IS ON THE VOTING LIST MAY VOTE AT THIS PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY. NO MAN SHOULD FAIL IN THAT DUTY.

VOTE FOR ROOSEVELT AND AGAINST THE MACHINE.

WORSE THAN BILL BOARDS.

As the traveller coming into our New England for the first time gazes out of the window of his car to see how this far-famed Yankeeland looks, he is liable to find one thing even more repelling than the flaunting bill boards. That is the dumps of ashes, tomato cans, old papers and other refuse which seem to gravitate toward the railroad tracks. Exhibits in disorderliness on any of our suburban approaches are shockingly in evidence One fine old colonial mansion at Quincy, formerly picturing a certain New England solidity of character, now presents to the on-looker a catch-all collection that is repelling to the point of disgust. But why specify individual cases? Every daily steam railroad passenger can recall a dozen such blotches on the landscape.

Remedies for this condition are not easy to suggest. The railroads are probably not rich enough to subsidize all abutting landowners into tidiness, or able to persuade them to do their part toward giving the stranger a good impression of the particular community in which they live, and of the section of the country of which it is a part. But here is a field for patriotic appeal. In few ways can the individual, by a little forethought and effort, do more to make the world think well of us all.

The utility of beauty, while defying analysis, is of undoubted reality. Every man's day's work is made easier if he can come to it through scenes of serenity and good taste. What we owe of mind and of character, of industry and of enthusiasm, to such beauty as lies in the environment of our lives, even though vaguely realized, is incomputably great. And, of course, the travellers by the steam railroads are not the only ones who are entitled to consideration on this score. In a new sense the cry should go out "Clear the tracks."—Boston Herald.

Defense Claims That Missing Men Shot Up Hillsville Court

Hillsville, Va., April 24.—Six members of the Allen clan were arraigned here to answer for their part in the Carroll court tragedy of March 14, when judge, prosecutor, sheriff, a juror and a spectator were shot to death. The prisoner, Floyd Allen, upon whom a prison sentence was about to be imposed when the shooting began; his sons, Claude and Victor, and his nephews, Sidna Edwards and Byrd Marion, are charged with murder in the first degree.

Each of the defendants pleaded "not guilty." A change of venue was asked and granted, the court announcing it would hold the trial at Wytheville, beginning April 30.

Democratic Voters Apt to Get Confused by Ballot

MANY CANDIDATES

Sample ballots for the presidential primaries to be held next Tuesday have been received and as they are somewhat complicated, voters should make a careful study of the two ballots before the day of the caucus, in order that they may know just how to vote, otherwise when they get inside of the booths they may become confused. But two kinds of ballots will be used, Democratic and Republican.

On the Democratic ballot there are nine groups of delegates at large and four groups of alternate delegates. Of the delegates at large, four groups are pledged to Eugene N. Foss for President, one for Woodrow Wilson, two pledged to primary preference, one to the candidate chosen by primary and one unpledged. With the exception of group three however, the several groups contain but one name each. Group three has seven names all for Foss. Of the alternate delegates two are for primary preference, one unpledged and one group of eight for Foss. There are two groups for delegates from the tenth district, one pledged to Foss and one unpledged. There is also opportunity on the ballot to express preference for candidate for President, on which two names only appear however, Clark and Wilson. There are no names for preference for Vice President.

The Republican ballot is not quite as complicated as all of the candidates are either pledged to Taft or Roosevelt. For the delegates at large there are three groups. Group one has eight candidates pledged to Roosevelt Group two, one delegate pledged to Taft and group three, eight delegates pledged to Taft.

For alternate delegates there are but two groups, one pledged to Taft and the second pledged to Roosevelt.

For delegates from the tenth district there are two pledged to Taft, two pledged to Roosevelt and one unpledged. For alternate delegates from the tenth district there are two groups two for Roosevelt and two for Taft. Of the alternate delegates appear the names of two Quincy gentlemen, William E. Hingston favoring Roosevelt and Arthur P. Russell favoring Taft. In giving the names above the names of Roosevelt and Taft are given in the order as they appear on the ballot.

There is also a space in which the voter may express his preference for President, and in this space appear the names of Robert M. LaFollette, Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft. No names appear in the space for Vice President.

It might also be well to note that there is no ballot for Progressive Democrats, but they will be enrolled as they vote at this caucus.

All arrangements are completed for the closing meeting of the season of the Quincy Young Women's club, which is to be a gentlemen's night, held at the clubhouse on Presidents hill on Saturday evening. The past has been a most successful season in every way and the closing entertainment promises to be a fitting ending of club work and social gatherings.

Already the question of "Who shall be president?" is agitating the minds of the delegates to the federation of women's clubs at California, in June. Among the most prominent candidates is Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, of Texas, Mrs. Pennybacker first came in to prominence with delegates at the Los Angeles biennial in 1902, when she repeatedly called for "the previous question" when matters were getting too "talky" on the floor. For this businesslike knowledge of parliamentary law she won many friends, and was called "the little woman in big emergencies."

The April meeting of the Hospital Aid Association is to be held tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. Joseph A. Dasha, Washington street, corner of Edison.

Mrs. Perry Lawton of Presidents hill was hostess Monday afternoon for the meeting of the Junior Friday club, in place of Mrs. Russell C. Low, as scheduled on the yearly programs. Alexander Hamilton proved an interesting topic under the leadership of Mrs. Ernest D. Gourd. The next and final meeting of the year will occur May 6 when a business meeting will be held with Miss Georgiana C. Lane of Presidents hill. Miss Lane has invited the club for one o'clock instead of the usual hour.

Next Saturday is the May party or children's festival given annually the last Saturday in April by the Education committee of the Quincy Women's club. Mrs. John W. Sanborn, chairman is sparing no effort to give the children the usual good time, and to realize a goodly sum for summer school work.

The next meeting of the class in parliamentary law will be held at the Women's clubhouse Tuesday morning, April 30 at 10.30.

Much interest is expressed in the May Morning musicales arranged by the Music committee from May 1-15 and 29 at the Quincy Women's Clubhouse from 10.45 to 11.45 o'clock and tickets are selling readily. For those club members in particular who find the clubhouse always a busy hive of industry, it will be a pleasant change to enjoy an hour of music in the attractive audience room at the musicale of May 1. In addition to a delightful program by the Mazah Trio, Roscoe R. Ricker, violin; Miss Marion Moorhouse, 'cello and Miss Grace M. Farrington, piano, there will be an aria and group of songs by Miss Margaret L. Sheppard of Lynn. Miss Sheppard has a wonderfully beautiful contralto voice and sings with much charm in expression and artistic interpretation. Those attending the musicales have surely a real treat in store.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

Quincy Alliance met in the parlor of First church, Monday afternoon, the president, Mrs. Saville in the chair and with a large attendance.

After the devotional exercises, the reports of the secretary and treasurer were read, also the annual reports. Mrs. John W. Sanborn and Mrs. George G. Saville were chosen delegates to the National Alliance meeting in Boston, Wednesday, May 1. The committee, on earning money for coffee urns, reported a whist party had been arranged to be held at the residence of Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann, Goffe street, Wednesday afternoon, May 8.

There was a musical program, consisting of a group of songs by Mrs. Edith Carey Page, with Dr. Pratt of Braintree accompanist. She sang "I think the fragrance of the rose" by Clough Leighton: "Down in the Forest," by Landon Donald, "Most Wondrous it must be," by Franz Rice. Mrs. Page sang in her usual sweet and expressive voice, giving much pleasure to the audience.

Miss Jennie N. Purchase, secretary of the co-operative charitable association gave an outline of her work, she said in part: "I need hardly say it gives me much pleasure to be with you this afternoon, I see so many before me who are deeply interested in this work in which I am engaged. We try to carry out what you have in your creed, the brotherhood of man, assisting the needy regardless of nationality or denomination.

"We feel we have a duty to perform, not only in money and necessities, but to help order their lives as we do our own. People as a rule do not use their common sense. For instance, a man comes to you and says, 'I am in difficulty, just at the present time, if I had a small sum of money to tide me over it would be a great help and convenience.' A small matter you say, why go any farther, so without question you give of your funds. If it were a member of your own family you would go through a process of investigation. We try to put ideas in practise; we feel it is not a simple matter, behind there may be a very serious problem.

"And another thing that has impressed me, people as a rule, don't know what they want themselves. Like a young girl I knew who wanted to be an opera singer, was determined to be an opera singer. She visited a teacher, he told her, it was a very laudable ambition, but she had no voice. She made a most excellent charitable worker.

"We always aim to bring the family to support themselves, the community expects that all shall be self-supporting. When aid is asked, something is wrong, so we do our utmost to thoroughly investigate the circumstances. As an illustration, a young man was earning $19.00 a week, he was not very strong and not very capable, but on the strength of this position he had obtained, he took his father and mother to support. He furnished a home and had them leave their home in Maine and come to Boston. Not being very efficient he lost his job and applied to us. I immediately made inquiry and found that relatives in Maine would gladly have the parents back, so I bought tickets for them and they returned very happily. I visited the president of a club to which the young man belonged and through him the young man was given an opportunity to study with the Y. M. C. A., and is now doing very nicely. This is only one instance of many.

"A word in regard to school children. We frequently have requests for glasses. An unwise gift always injures the family, so we looked into the matter. The very fact that they did not buy the glasses showed something was wrong. I visited the family and found them in a starving, poor condition, but too proud to let their wants be known. Another case of a coachman, who earned $15. a week, he had been sick and got behind, his little girl needed glasses, but he refused to take them as a gift. He paid ten cents a week until they were paid for.

"Then the drunkards' families. We cannot allow women and children to suffer, but in most cases the man does worse and often deserts them. So we try to devote ourselves to the man to reform him if possible. Drunkards have been known to reform and will respond to treatments when they realize their appetities, are willing to go to Foxboro. Some take the pledge. A man in Charlestown addicted to drinking, a friend of mine took his case in charge. She talked with him and he agreed to do better. But the overmastering desire to drink overcame him. She talked with him again and made him promise to send for her when the desire for drink came on. He did and she would go to him with a can of hot, strong coffee and checkberry lozenges. She would talk and talk all of the time the man finally responded to her efforts and the family are now doing well.

"Another case where the husband and father is almost always in prison, the wife however will not take him back, she allows the law to take its course. For widows and children we do all in our power. They should be helped with both hands as a rule and the community responds nobly for them. I have seen so many of them come up to self-support which is very gratifying and an incentive to do for them.

"I was called once to visit a family, a woman with five children, they were very dirty and poverty stricken, food, coal and wood were sent to them. I got the children into Sunday school, but they stopped coming. I asked the reason and I was told they were reminded they were wearing other people's clothes, so even the very poor have pride.

"Since I have come to Quincy, I have been exceedingly busy. I have thirteen new families and I am very glad to receive personal advice and the assistance of all interested in these people. I always ask myself these questions, am I doing the wise thing? am I doing the kind thing?. We keep the record of these cases confidentally. I endeavor to keep in touch with them regardless of nationality or denomination. If they have a certain faith of their own I do not attempt to proselyte them to our church.

"One more word and I will close. Our office expenses are looked out for, but if any one wishes to give personally to any particular case, I will use the money profitably".

Mrs. Isabelle A. Davis who had charge of the afternoon's entertainment apologized for taking part in it herself. She had written to six persons but they were suffering from sore throats or bad colds and were unable to come. As Mrs. Davis is a general favorite, no one was disappointed, and her selections were listened to with a great deal of interest. Mrs Davis gave a sketch of the life of Paul Lawrence Dunbar, who was born of fugitive slaves of Kentucky.

As an example of his versatility, Mrs. Davis read very expressively, the following poems: "The voice of the Banjo," "Angelina" and "When All is Done."

A social hour was enjoyed during which refreshments were served, tea, fancy crackers and dainties. Miss Mary E. Nightingale and Mrs. Edward B. Marsh were the pourers, and Mrs. William B. Nichols and Mrs. Edward Marsh the hostesses.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The meeting of the Quincy Women's club on Tuesday afternoon was a little out of the usual and therefore all the more enjoyable. Instead of the usual lecture or concert the committee for the afternoon, the Art committee of which Mrs. H. H. Kitson is chairman, arranged an art loan collection which included some of the best work of Boston artists.

Palms, rubber plants and jars and vases of spring flowers combined with the grey walls of the clubhouse make a fine setting for the pictures which which were well placed.

The usual business meeting was called to order at half past two by the president, Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard and the regular reports given after which chairmen of committees reported as follows:

Mrs. W. W. Whitcher for the Legislative spoke of the lecture on Tuesday afternoon, April 30 at the clubhouse when Mrs. Glendower Evans of Boston would speak on "The Minimum Wage" and Mrs. Robert E. Park on Child Welfare" and Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell would sing a group of songs. Mrs. Whitcher hoped a large gathering of club women would greet Mrs. Evans.

Mrs. O. S. Blaisdell for the Civic committee said her committee hoped to resurrect Quincy and had started a movement to clean up some of the beauty spots mentioned at the last meeting. She thought all could commence on their own premises and the city would cooperate, furnishing teams etc. Hoped every club woman would cooperate and next year the committee would go at it more systematically. The Civic clean up week would start May 1st and further announcement would be made of date city teams would call.

Mrs. John W. Sanborn of the Education committee announced the children's festival at Music hall on Saturday afternoon and asked for contributions of homemade candy for Mrs. C. M. Bryant's booth.

Mrs. J. B. Worster for the Music committee said she was ready to receive subscriptions to the series of morning musicales to be held at the clubhouse May 1, 15 and 29 for the benefit of the Music committee.

Mrs. G. B. Bates for the Woman's Exchange announced a plant sale at the annual meeting of the club May 14 when those desiring plants for their gardens could make a good selection. The plants would be from the greenhouse of William Patterson the Wollaston florist.

Mrs. Chandler W. Smith for the Philanthropy committee announced that her committee was planning a Jnue breakfast to take place early in the month and hoped all the club members would come and bring their husbands and children.

Mrs. Sheppard said delegates would be appointed at the annual meeting to represent the club at the State Federation meeting at Templeton, Mass., and the biennial of the National Federation at Los Angeles, Cal., in June. She wished any club member intending to go to either of the meetings would let her know as it would help in selecting the delegates.

Mrs. Sheppard at the treasurer's request read the by-laws regarding payment of dues. To retain membership in the club the dues must be paid before the annual meeting.

Following the business meeting Miss Georgianna C. Lane who had so ably assisted Mrs. H. H. Kitson, chairman of the afternoon, in getting and arranging the collection of pictures hung upon the walls of the club rooms gave a brief sketch of each picture, naming the artist and his special line of work. Tea was served during the exhibit by the Hospitality committee the pourers were Mrs. William B. Nichols and Mrs. Edwin E. Davis.

The works are by modern masters of Boston, all of whom are artists of note.

On the large wall is a very representative piece of work by William Kaula whose landscapes with their soft atmosphere are so skillfully

Governor Dix of New York Vetoes the Full Train Crew Bill

CALLS IT ARBITRARY AND UNREASONABLE

A Similar Bill Now Before the Massachusetts Legislature

Governor Dix of New York, last Saturday, vetoed the so-called "FULL TRAIN CREW BILL," passed by the New York legislature, which bill was similar to one now pending in the Massachusetts legislature, WHICH THE RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS OF THIS COMMONWEALTH HAVE SAID IS NOT NEEDED FOR THE SAFETY OR CONVENIENCE OF THE PUBLIC OR THE SAFETY OF THE EMPLOYEES THEMSELVES.

Here is the text of Governor Dix's message:

"This bill without regard to the varying circumstances of different roads or of the same roads, asserts in effect that no freight trains of more than 25 cars in length, and no light engine, can be safely operated on any railroad without specific crews of six and three men, respectively. In so doing it lays down a rule of universal application without regard to the demands of justice in particular cases.

"The PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION* WAS VESTED WITH AND NOW HAS THE POWER TO DETERMINE AND COMPEL SAFE, ADEQUATE AND PROPER SERVICE on the part of the railroad. Such power necessarily includes the POWER TO CHANGE THE PERSONNEL AND REDUCE OR INCREASE THE NUMBER IN A TRAIN CREW. This bill DEPRIVES THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION OF THE POWER TO REDUCE A TRAIN CREW, notwithstanding that without such reduction, AN UNREASONABLE BURDEN IS PLACED UPON THE RAILROADS and a SAFE, ADEQUATE AND PROPER SERVICE MADE IMPOSSIBLE.

"For the reason, therefore, that this bill is absolute in requirement and arbitrary in application, and full jurisdiction is vested in the PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION to determine the number in train crews in accordance with the demands of justice, I DISAPPROVE THIS BILL.

(Signed) JOHN A. DIX, Governor."

Forcing the extra brakeman on all freight trains in Massachusetts will cost the Massachusetts railroads about FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS a year. This sum would pay interest on TWELVE AND ONE-HALF MILLION DOLLARS, which would go far towards making much needed improvements.

EFFICIENT MIDDLE AGE.

Whether or not it is true, as Dr. Sears of New York contends, that a woman is at her best between the ages of 40 and 50, the fact that such a statement is made at all and that it is quite generally accepted as containing possible truth, indicates a new attitude toward the matter of growing old.

As civilization progresses women as well as men gain in the enjoyment of the life that comes beyond the period commonly known as youth. In semi-barbarous countries a woman is old and dejected and worn out at 25. A recent writer on India observed that a girl in that country is either a wife or a widow at 14, and this shows an early maturity and a corresponding early decline.

But as humanity grows older in the ways of civilized society, life is in effect prolonged by this enrichment of the years of middle age and the crowding forward of the efficiency mark toward a ripe maturity. Experience alone can add many pleasures which are impossible to the young. A careful and intelligent mode of living may preserve and refine many of the pleasures of youth. Thus it is logical that men and women should grow steadily more entertaining and more capable of themselves enjoying life by advancing years, which are not allowed to debilitate and bitter. It is a reassuring commentary on the efficiency of civilization if this condition is becoming steadily more common.—Salem News.

LOOKOUT HAD NO SPYGLASSES

One Contributing Cause In Destruction of the Titanic

MIGHT HAVE SAVED STEAMER

Washington, April 24.—Frederick Fleet, one of the lookouts in the Titanic's crow's nest, testified before the senate investigating committee that no marine glasses were furnished the lookouts.

The witness swore he could have sighted the iceberg which sent the Titanic to the bottom soon enough for the ship to have steered out of the way if he had had glasses.

Fleet said that on Sunday night some time after 10 o'clock he reported a black mass of ice ahead to the officers on the bridge. Just how long this was before the collision the lookout could not say.

Major Arthur G. Peuchen, Canadian manufacturer and yachtsman, who was among the rescued passengers, also testified to the much greater sweep of vision afforded by binoculars, and, as a yachtsman, said he believed the presence of the iceberg might have been detected in time to escape the collision had the lookout men been so equipped.

It was made to appear that the blame for being without glasses did not rest with the lookout men. Fleet said they had asked for them at Southampton and were told there were none for them. One glass, in a pinch, would have served in the crow's nest. Other vessels, he asserted, provided their lookouts with glasses.

Major Peuchen criticised in strong terms the lack of experienced sailors on board the Titanic. He said that when the call to quarters was sounded, not enough of the crew responded to undertake the work required in lowering and filling the boats.

Furthermore, he said, no drills had been held from the time the ship left Southampton, although it was customary to hold such drills every Sunday.

Death cries of the Titanic's victims re-echoed throughout the senate building when Third Officer Herbert J. Pittman vividly described the sinking of the great ship.

Prayers, cries and moans—a mighty chorus of woe arose from the trapped victims. The British officers told the pathetic story in an almost stolid manner. But even then he begged the committee not to press him along that line.

Then followed his tale of terror. He said J. B. Ismay met him near a lifeboat and asked that the boats be loaded with women. He said that Captain Smith gave the orders after Ismay made the suggestion.

Pittman said his boat saved forty passengers and six of the crew. He heard four explosions before the Titanic went down, pitching perpendicularly.

Women sucked in their lips nervously and gripped their chairs as Pittman told of the wholesale drownings. A high wind moaning and whistling through window cracks shocked the tense nerves of the crowd.

Before all was the word picture of the Titanic's end in Pittman's brusque, laconic words.

Senator Smith stated that for the present it had been decided not to subpoena additional witnesses until the committee had discovered how much those already held as witnesses knew of the disaster.

"I will not ask Mrs. John Jacob Astor to appear at the present time," Smith said. "Her physical condition necessitates a postponement of her call here.

"Everything will be done by the committee to expedite the hearings.

MAY MAGAZINES.

The WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION for May contains a most interesting account of the recent dramatization and staging of Louisa M. Alcott's "Little Women." It is quite a remarkable story—how Miss Alcott's heirs have objected for years to putting the story on the stage, but how at last they have consented. Among the other articles in the number are the following: "Seeing Europe on $3.50 a Day," "A Mother's Account of the Effect of the Boy Scout Movement on Her Son," "Women Writers as Humorists," How to Attract Birds" and the first of a new series on the American girl by J. Nilsen Laurvik.

In the practical dressmaking, housekeeping and entertainment departments appear many interesting contributions, among which are articles on "Sensible Shoes," "The Healthy Baby," "The Practical Kitchen," "How to Make a Sun-Dial," "How to Make a Summer Shack," "The Appetizing Beefsteak" and "A Dozen Good Desserts."

SUBURBAN LIFE. Hundreds of pointers and suggestions for building the small house make Suburban Life for May of inestimable value to everybody.

"Little-Cost Houses with Individuality" is the opening article, and describes two beautiful homes in a New Jersey town. "A Brick House for a Fifty-Foot Lot" shows what may be done when lot space is limited and the beautiful English type house is desired. "Two Striking Moderate-Cost Stucco Houses" tells of a couple of homes built in the newest fashion over hollow tile walls. Be sure and read "The House that Jack Built." It's teeming with suggestions. Some of the other articles are: "An All-the-Year House in a Resort Town;" "Plumbing for the Modern Home;" "A Talk About Your Floors;" "How We Built Our Bungalow;" "The Beneficial Sleeping Porch;" "Constructing and Maintaining Suburban Highways;" "Bees as a Cure for a Woman's Nerves;" "The Joy of Owning a Dog and How to Care for Him;" "Should Women Have the Ballot? "Tree Gardens for Children;" "Bee-Keeping for the Suburbanite;" What Milady Motorist Will Wear." and two dozen live, timely articles besides.

THE ENGINEERING MAGAZINE—The leading place in The Engineering Magazine for May is devoted to a biographical sketch of Sir David Dale; Ironmaster, Labour Conciliator and Arbitrator. This sketch written by a close friend, Dr. James Douglas, is of much importance during the present labor unrest as it illustrates the better way that can be found for reconciling the interests of employer and employee.

The illustrated articles include the third paper by T. F. J. Maguire on Draft Equipment in which is described the forced mechanical-draft equipment; a paper by Frank P. McKibben on the engineering problems in the development of Alaska's interior, and a pictorial description of the Sulzer Works. Gilbert H. Montague presents the gist of the Dick Patent case from legal standpoints. John B. C. Kershaw in his second article on the labour unrest in Great Britain suggests some remedies and reforms; the fifth instalment of the Benj A. Franklin series on executive business control presents the cost viewpoint of labor. The number also carries the full Review of the Engineering Press, and The Engineering Index.

LIPPINCOTTS. The May Lippincott's is both refreshing and invigorating, well suited to the season of reviving energies. The complete novel (salient feature) is "Their Great Inheritance," a delightful story of Pennsylvania-German life by Elsie Singmaster, who has already made a name for herself along these lines with her clever short stories. The theme of "Their great Inheritance" has to do with a quarrel which divides the inhabitants of Raub's Station, an erstwhile placid and peaceful little village, into two warring factions.

Another important contribution is the first of a series of three hard-hitting articles by Herbert Bruce Fuller, on "How Congress Squanders Our Money." This deals principally with the army and navy expenditures and the pension appropriations. The reader cannot but wonder that such a deplorable condition in the Nation's affairs should be permitted to exist.

Among the short fictions are "The Little Band in the Pines," a war story; "From the Land of the Unborn" a sketch suggested by Maeterlinck's "The Blue-Bird;" "Primavera," dealing with the spring of the year, and of life; "The Bloomsbury's Trip," with its lesson for Bridge-lovers; "The Unexpected Express Package;" "Two Halves of a Check;" etc.

TEXTILE EXHIBIT.

The rhythmic clack of the shuttle, the whir of the loom, the smell of the well oiled machinery, and the silent but ever watchful operator of the great textile producers of the busy mill communities have all been transplanted in perfect detail to the Third National Textile Exhibition which opened, April 22 in Mechanics building, Boston. One has but to step within the radius of this activity to imagine that he is on a tour of inspection of one of New England's greatest industrial centres.

The attendance was very large the opening day, and it is estimated that 8,000 persons visited the exhibition during the day and night. Those that did attend certainly found much to interest them, for it is possible to watch the forming of the fabric from one stage of development to the next, and to watch the operation of machinery which regulates the atmospheric conditions to suit them to the various processes of manufacture. Carding, spinning, and weaving are some of the conspicuous processes, and there are drying machines and conditioning machines, which because of their size and complexity are attracting much attention.

The women visitors to the exhibition also found much to admire in the finished goods department. Some of the largest department stores in Boston have made exhibits, and have arranged with the management to send a large number of their employees handling dry goods to familiarize themselves with the details of manufacturing.

A feature of the evening was an exhibition by the degree team. Time and time again its different movements elicited great applause and as it spelled, "Howdy P. A. P., Quincy 413, L. O. O. M.," in the course of its manoeuvers, the handclapping of the audience became deafening.

After the entertainment, the floor was cleared for dancing, which was enjoyed until midnight to the strains of Thompson's orchestra. Refreshments were served in the lower hall, while the floor was being arranged for dancing.

Frank W. Sampson was floor director, assisted by Carl W. Wexler, and members of the reception committee, who were the following officers of the lodge, Leon C. "And you wa'n't dead, Uncle Bob?" said Hannibal with a deep breath, viewing Yancy unmistakably in the flesh.

"Never once. I been floating peacefully along with these here titled friends of mine; but I was some anxious about you, son."

"And Mr. Slosson, Uncle Bob—did you smack him like you smacked Dave Blount that day when he tried to steal me?" asked Hannibal, whose childish sense of justice demanded reparation for the wrongs they had suffered.

Mr. Yancy extended a big right hand, the knuckle of which was skinned and bruised.

"He were the meanest man I ever felt obliged fo' to hit with my fist, Nevvy; it appeared like he had teeth all over his face."

"Sho'—where's his hide, Uncle Bob?" cried the little Cavendishes in an excited chorus. "Sho'—did you forget that?" They themselves had forgotten the unique enterprise to which Mr. Yancy was committed, but the allusion to Slosson had revived their memory of it.

"Well, he begged so piteous to be allowed fo' to keep his hide, I hadn't the heart to strip it off," explained Mr. Yancy pleasantly. "And the winter's comin' on—at this moment I can feel a chill in the air—don't you-all reckon he's going' to need it fo' to keep the cold out? Sho', you mustn't be bloody-minded!"

"What was it about Mr. Slosson's hide, Uncle Bob?" demanded Hannibal. "What was you a-goin' to do to that?"

"Why, Nevvy, after he beat me up and throwed me in the river, I was some peevish fo' a spell in my feelings fo' him," said Yancy in a tone of gentle regret. He glanced at his bruised hand. "But I'm right pleased to be able to say that I've got over all them oncharitable thoughts of mine."

"And you seen the judge, Uncle Bob?" questioned Hannibal.

"Yes, I've seen the judge. We was together fo' part of a day. Me and him gets on fine?"

"Where is he now, Uncle Bob?"

"I reckon he's back at Belle Plain by this time. You see we left him in Raleigh along after noon to 'tend to some business he had on hand. I never seen a gentleman of his weight so truly spry on his legs—and all about you, Nevvy; while as to mind! Sho'—why, words flowed out of him as naturally as water out of a branch."

Of Hannibal's relationship to the judge he said nothing. He felt that was a secret to be revealed by the judge himself when he should see fit.

"Uncle Bob, who'm I going to live with now?" questioned Hannibal anxiously.

"That p'int's already come up, Nevvy—him and me's decided that there won't be no friction. You-all will just go on living with him."

"But wha' about you, Uncle Bob?" cried Hannibal, lifting a wistful little face to Yancy's.

"Oh, me?—well, you-all will go right on living with me."

"And what will come of Mr. Mahaffy?"

"I reckon you-all will go right on living with him, too."

"Uncle Bob, you mean you reckon we all are going to live in one house?"

"I 'low it will have to be fixed that-a-ways," agreed Yancy.

CHAPTER XXX.

The Judge Receives a Letter.

After he had parted with Solomon Mahaffy the judge applied himself diligently to shaping that miracle-working document which he was preparing as an offset to whatever risk he ran in meeting Fentress. As sanguine as he was sanguinary he confidently expected to survive the encounter, yet it was well to provide for a possible emergency—had he not his grandson's future to consider? While thus occupied he saw the afternoon stage arrive and depart from before the City Tavern.

Half an hour later Mr. Wesley, the postmaster, came sauntering up the street. In his hand he carried a letter.

"Howdy," he drawled, from just beyond the judge's open door.

The judge glanced up, his quill pen poised aloft.

"Good evening, sir; won't you step inside and be seated?" he asked graciously. His dealings with the United States mail service were of the most insignificant description, and in personally delivering a letter, if this was what had brought him there, he felt Mr. Wesley had reached the limit of official courtesy and despatch.

"Well, sir; it looks like you'd never told us more than two-thirds of the truth!" said the postmaster. He surveyed the judge curiously.

"I am complimented by your opinion of my veracity," responded that gentleman promptly. "I consider two-thirds an enormously high per cent. to have achieved."

"There is something in that, too," agreed Mr. Wesley. "Who is Colonel Slocum Price Turberville?"

The judge started up from his chair.

"I have that honor," said he, bowing.

"Well, here's a letter come in addressed like that, and as you've been using part of the name I am willing to assume you're legally entitled to the rest of it. It clears up a point that off and on has troubled me considerable. I can only wonder I wa'n't smarter."

"What point, may I ask?"

"Why, about the time you hung out your shingle here, some one wrote a letter to General Jackson. It was mailed after night, and when I seen it in the morning I was clean beat. I couldn't locate the handwriting, and yet I kept that letter back a couple of days and give it all my spare time. It ain't that I'm one of your spying sort—there's nothing of the Yankee about me!"

"Certainly not," agreed the judge.

"Candid, judge. I reckon you wrote that letter, seeing this one comes under a frank from Washington. No, sir—I couldn't make out who was corresponding with the president, and it worried me, not knowing, more than anything I've had to contend against since I came into office. I calculate there ain't a postmaster in the United States takes a more personal interest in the service than me. I've frequently set patrons right when they was in doubt as to the date they had mailed such and such a letter." As Mr. Wesley sometimes canceled as many as three or four stamps in a single day he might have been pardoned his pride in a brain which thus lightly dealt with the burden of official business. He surrendered the letter with marked reluctance.

"Your surmise is correct," said the judge with dignity. "I had occasion to write my friend, General Jackson, and unless I am greatly mistaken I have my answer here." And with a fine air of indifference he tossed the letter on the table.

WRECKERS ARE FOILED

Train Saved From Destruction After Track Walker Was Clubbed

Shamokin, Pa., April 24.—An attempt to wreck a passenger train on the Pennsylvania railroad two miles east of here was frustrated by Kimber Baskin, a track walker. As he was patrolling the track three unidentified men knocked him down with clubs and probably thinking he was dead threw him over an embankment.

Baskin retained his senses and as he lay in a gully, badly injured, he saw a train approach. He waved a handkerchief and attracted the engineer's attention. The train was stopped and after he told of the assault the train proceeded slowly until it reached a spot where three railroad ties had been placed over the track.

Constantinople, April 24.—The Turkish government has virtually rejected the peace agreement recently proposed by the powers because it recognized Italy's territorial claim to Tripoli.

MEDIATION IS ANTICIPATED

Railroad Men Agree to Discuss Engineers' Demands

10 MEET FEDERAL OFFICERS

New York, April 24.—Mediation in the dispute between the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the eastern railroads, which has threatened to result in a strike on fifty lines east of Chicago and north of the Potomac, is expected to result from the action of the conference committee on railroad managers in agreeing to confer with United States Labor Commissioner Neill and Judge Knapp of the United States commerce court on the subject.

While the answer of the railroads to the letter of Neill and Knapp did not definitely accept mediation, the opinion was expressed by the engineers that in the end this would be the result.

Neill, in an interview given after he had received the railroad men's answer, also indicated that he considered that mediation was intended. In all quarters the opinion is expressed that the possibility of a strike, which appeared imminent, is increasingly remote.

On a series of conferences beginning today will probably depend the definite settlement of the dispute or the arrangement of a plan of arbitration.

The decision of the railroad managers to confer with Knapp and Neill was reached after a conference lasting practically all day. The presidents of several of the railroads involved also were in conference here, and it is understood that they approved of the letter sent to the government representatives.

On behalf of the railroads it was stated that the decision to confer with the government representatives did not mean that they had agreed to mediation. The position of the railroads, it was stated, is that they will hear what Neill has to offer them, but in case his proposals are not satisfactory, the railroads are free to refuse them.

In this eevnt, affairs would return to their former status—the refusal of the railroads to grant the demands of the engineers.

Despite this railroad view, however, the opinion is expressed generally that the pending negotiations will result in arbitration.

From the attitude of the engineers it appears that they will welcome arbitration, believing that a review of the whole question will result in concessions to them.

Two points upon which the engineers say they will insist were made in the letter sent by Grand Chief Stone of the brotherhood to Neill accepting the offer of mediation.

One is that any settlement reached shall be effective from today and the other that any delay due to future negotiations shall be considered an armistice and shall not be utilized by either side to obtain a tactical advantage.

EVENING WITH LICKENS

wicks receipt of the court notice was shown and the party start on a shooting expedition, Mr. Pickwick bringing up the rear being wheeled in a barrow by the faithful Weller.

Part four. "Sam Weller very much in evidence. Mr. Pickwick prepares for the trial. Mr. Weller's father gives some very good advice." In this the amusing scene between Pickwick and the plaintiff's attorneys is given, our friend being rescued none too soon by the ever present Weller. Weller calls on Mrs. Bardell and Sam's visit to his father make this number most interesting.

Part five opens on the great trial of "Bardell versus Pickwick" for breach of promise. All of the Pickwickians appear on the stand and the recital closes with the Senior Weller's observation "Vy want there an alibi? Vy want there an alibi."

Mr. Speaight's faithful delineation of the well-known characters of the English writer called forth naught but praise. Especially pleasing was that of Sam Weller.

The recital was followed by impersonations of other of the Dickens' characters including David Copperfield and Uriah Heep, a selection from "Christmas Carol" showing Scrooge and his nephew, Micawber "waiting for something to turn up" and Grandfather Smalley from Bleakhouse.

In response to encores Mr. Speaight offered to delineate any of Dickens' characters suggested and as a result gave excellent representations of Squeers, Fanny Squeers and Betsey Trotwood.

BANDITS HOLD SWAY IN MEXICO

Lives of Americans Reported to Be In Great Jeopardy

ARE SUBJECTED TO TORTURE

Refugees Arrive at Galveston In Destitution, Having Left About All Their Earthly Possessions Behind—Deliberate Beheading of Man Who Refused to Give Up Money—Woman Brutally Beaten

Galveston, Tex., April 24.—Forty-seven passengers, all but one citizens of the United States, who arrived from Vera Cruz on the steamer Texas, tell of alleged torture and assassination of Americans in the Mexican republic. All the refugees left the lands, homes, furniture and everything they possessed except enough money for passage and the clothes on their backs. Among the entire number there are only four or five trunks.

M. H. Ish, one of the refugees, told of the murder of an American citizen named Wait.

"Mr. Wait was a neighbor to me," said Ish. "He had sold several head of cattle and hidden the money. A band of desperadoes came to his hacienda and demanded money. Failing to get it, they deliberately beheaded him with their machetes, herded his cattle together and drove them off. There are many instances just like this.

"We lived in a little settlement where a colony of eleven American families had founded the town of Sanborn. All these eleven families left because we were afraid to remain longer, knowing we would be killed or tortured. I am 64 years old. I went to Mexico one year ago, put all I had, $1650, in land and improvements there, and today I have only this—showing his two hands—and the clothes on my back. Before leaving we filed our claims for damages with the American consul in Mexico City.

John T. McGee, a wealthy planter who went to Mexico two years ago, returned to American minus more than $20,000 and left behind land and livestock. McGee tells of alleged cruelties practiced on an American woman now in the hospital at Mexico City. "The bandits visited the home of Mr. Shay, one of my neighbors, about a week before I left the settlement," said McGee, and demanded money and guns. He gave them $12 and one gun, saying that was all he had on the place.

"The band then left, but returned to Shay's place and demanded more money and arms. Being refused, they took Mrs. Shay, tied her down and began beating her feet.

"Mr. Shay and his son, to stop the torture, gave four guns and $800 in money to the desperadoes, who, after a final beating of the woman, left the place. Mrs. Shay was carried to the hospital at Mexico City, where it was found that nearly every bone in her feet were broken.

"What has been true of the Shay family has been likewise true of scores of other Americans, and by staying there we took our lives in our hands."

OPEN MEETING LOYAL LADIES

After a short business meeting the Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor, No. 1, opened their hall to the members of the Clan and judging from the attendance there were few who missed the opportunity of listening to Frank Abercrombie in his interesting talk on the up-to-date paper he represents, namely the Boston Scotsman.

Mr. Abercrombie urged his fellow Scotchmen to get together and work shoulder to shoulder for the advancement of the things dear to the heart of every true Scot.

An entertainment was given following Mr. Abercrombie's address. Much pleasure was given by the Clan choir, of which Mr. John Murray is the leader. During the evening Mr. Everett Clark favored them by singing in a most pleasing manner, "Bonnie Mary of Argyle."

The Scotch comedian Mr. Morgan was very funny, and that he was appreciated was evidenced by the hearty encores he received.

After the entertainment the ladies served ice cream and cake, after which the meeting was adjourned with singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

I understand the monument is to cost $10,000. It will be erected close to the gates of the cemetery in West Roxbury, where the Finnegan lot is located.

SOCIETY HAS SMALL DEFICIT

Quincy Choral Society Holds Its Annual Meeting

OFFICERS ELECTED

The annual meeting of the Quincy Choral society at Colonial hall Tuesday evening brought out a representative number of the members as the principal business of the evening was the election of officers. This, together with the interesting reports, brought to a close the most elaborate season's work since the society's formation. Three of the officers, president, Thomas B. Pollard, vice-president, Dr. George H. Ryder and secretary, Mrs. Irene C. Tirrell, who have served the interests of the society faithfully and continuously since its beginning and to whom is due its present high standing in the community, earnestly desired to be relieved of the responsibilities which their offices entailed and this caused several changes in the status of the board members. It was impossible, however to persuade any of the members naturally in line for the presidency to assume the duties of that office and upon vote of the society Mr. Pollard agreed to remain acting president and the Executive Board was empowered to select a successor at its discretion.

The report of the treasurer showed for the first time a small deficit, for which the Executive Board had already provided by authorizing the secretary to read the following statement to the guarantors.

Quincy, April 22, 1912.

The Quincy Choral Society announces an approximate deficit of eighty dollars as a result of the past season's work, this necessitating a contribution of two dollars each from the fifty-four guarantors, which will settle all outstanding bills and leave a small balance for starting next season's program.

At the beginning of this great musical movement in Quincy, it was estimated that it would not become self-supporting for several years; but, contrary to all such expectation, it has never before become necessary for the guarantors to contribute any part of their yearly pledge of five dollars. It is therfor, with the feeling that this work has ben in every respect a success from the beginning, and not with any feeling of present or impending failure that this message comes from the Executive Board. Experience has proven that it will be the unusual and not the usual thing for the society to require financial assistance and the fact that musical productions of so high a standard and of so necessarily great expense can be almost entirely supportd by the public at large, places the Quincy Choral Society in the front rank in regard to progress and raises the musical standing of our city to the level upon which all music lovers wish it to remain.

To the society, in four reasons' work, is accorded the honor of having given the first complete productions in our city of three great oratorios, one cantata of world-wide reputation, one grand opera, and of presenting the first orchestral concert in this city whose program included any part of a great symphony. Six concerts in all, and each one adding another stone to the solid foundation of musical reputation, the establishing of which means so much for the future growth of the society.

Thanking the guarantors one and all for the promise of support which has enabled the Executive Board to so establish this foundation, and asking that remittance be made to the treasurer within ten days that the few remaining bills may be settled at once. Per order, The Executive Board,

Irene Chipman Tirrell, Secretary.

It is doubtful if any Choral Society can show a better record of four years' work than our own and the citizens in general owe a vote of thanks to the retiring officers whose efforts have made this society so fine a part of our civic life and one so full of promise for the future. The present officers are: Thomas B. Pollard, acting president; Wendell H. Luce, vice-president; Louis B. Weston, treasurer; Mrs. Edith Cary Page, secretary; Frank W. Crane, Dr. George H. Ryder. Dr. C. T. Sherman, Miss Sarah E. Thomas and Mrs. Irene Chipman Tirrell, directors.

handled. Near it is the "Blue Butterfly" a bit of figure work by Mrs. Kaula and full of artistic merit as is also a lamplight effect in another of her pictures at the back of the room.

Louis Kronberg whose reputation for figure work has favored us with one of his earlier studies of a "Ballet Girl" also one of a later series of kimono girls; this one being a pastel called "Souvenir of Japan.

Another artist of much ability is Ernest Major ont of the present corps of instructors at the Massachusetts Normal Art School. Mr. Major loans two pictures to our exhibition, one called Her Guardian, a rather free out door sketch, and the other Birch Grove which hangs in the hall.

Leslie Thompson, one of the younger men sends us two studies, one of St. Georges in Venice and one of a wharf in Paris, very broadly treated and interesting in color.

A head by Mary Macomber is most exquisite in feeling and ideality and reminds us strongly of the Pre-Raphaelite influence of sixty-five years ago.

On the Rocks, by Jean Oliver is an attractive summer sketch full of sunshine. Three pictures by Charles Woodbury with their bold color and line composition are most interesting.

Among the gems of the collection are three pictures by Charles Copeland, Coming Shower, Fishing, and October. Mr. Copeland's work has the quality of genuineness with artistic rendering which is most satisfying.

Two pictures by Melbourne Hardwick are very attractive, the one on the north wall called, making friends, is charming in its story telling quality.

A bold still life by Carlson and a characteristically vigorous flower-piece by Abbott Graves, hang at the end of the room.

E. W. D. Hamilton is another artist represented, his bit of Venice is full of color and vibration.

A case of miniatures holds its own with all the other interests. The portrait of Rabbi Fleischer is a wonderfully good likeness, also the portraits of Pauline MacKay and Mrs. Samuel Quincy. These are by Sally Cross whose ability as a miniature painter is reckoned among the first though a large portrait of a child, "Alfreda" on the north wall, attracts much admiration.

The Pink Rose a miniature by Jean Oliver is like her usual dainty work.

A number of important bronzes add much to the collection, one of these being a cow by Isidore Bonheur, a brother of Rosa Bonheur. In the case with this are a number of medals both foreign and American, one of which holds our interest in that it is the most recent work of Theo A. R. Kitson and made for our Historical Church of Quincy Center. A bronze minute-man by the same artist is a strong piece of work making us all proud to feel that the artist's family are prominent residents of our town.

There are two pieces of marble occupying the bay window in the large room; one is a vigorous study of a head done quite recently by Henry H. Kitson. The breadth of treatment with the versatility of technique ranging from the most delicate touch to the boldest sweep proclaim Mr. Kitson as one of the greatest masters of sculpture. Beside it is a portrait head in bas relief of Mr. Kitson's mother.

This one piece of Mr. Kitson's work so tenderly and reverently handled is the poem of the whole collection.

Two large cases contain exquisite embroidery and old silver, the contributors being Mrs. Herbert Lawton Mrs. William Nicholls, Miss Mary Perkins and others.

The whole loan collection of most representative work should be viewed by all; it is one of unusual interest and value and this opportunity afforded the public by the club should be enthusiastically appreciated.

N. E. ASSOCIATE ALLIANCE.

Quincy Alliance is to be the hostess club on Thursday for an all day meeting of the New England Associate Alliance . Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, pastor of First church, will extend the greetings of the Quincy parish at the 10.30 session which will be a business meeting, the president Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, presiding.

At the afternoon session at two o'clock there will be two addresses. E. Ethelred Brown will speak on "Jamaica—Our prospective mission field; the place, the people and our opportunity" and Rev. Charles E. Park on "The art of going to church."

There will be a box luncheon and social hour at noon, the Quincy Alliance providing hot tea and coffee.

GEORGE H. CREED.

The residents of Middle street, Braintree were greatly shocked Tuesday morning to learn of the sudden death of George H. Creed. Mr. Creed had ben suffering from a tooth and could get no relief. He was fifty-four years old and came to this country from England about thirty years ago.

He married Miss Lena Tucker, who with her sister Frances E. Tucker came from England on the same boat with him. They commenced housekeeping in the old Bates homestead on Middle street. Very soon after his arrival he entered the employ of G. H. Arnold as gardener and teamster and remained with him for many years, until he bought his present farm on Middle street and started out for himself.

A new house was built and Mr. and Mrs. Creed and the sister vied with each other in making the homestead attractive. One daughter blessed this union, Miss Lillie, now a successful school teacher.

Miss Frances E. Tucker died eleven years ago and now wife and daughter are again saddened by the passing of this good man into the life beyond.

Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from his late home and the burial will be in the Pond street cemetery, South Braintree.

Mr. Creed traded in Quincy quite extensively and the people here were always glad to buy his large Braintree strawberries, rhubarb, sweet corn, tomatoes, etc. His vegetables were the best and he was a square man to deal with.

Congress never does much in the session before election because the fences have to be repaired, nor in the session after, because it would be forgotten by the next election if they did.

Vol. 27 No. 98 QUINCY, MASS., THURSDAY EVENING, APRIL 25, 1912 PRICE TWO CENTS

LADIES WERE THEIR GUESTS

St. Stephen's Chapter R. A. Masons Ladies' Night

ENJOYABLE EVENING

The annual ladies' night of St. Stephen's Royal Arch Chapter was held Wednesday evening in the Masonic apartments in City Square and was the occasion for the gathering of a goodly number of Companions and their ladies, although the affair was not as largely attended as in some years, owing doubtless to the fact that it was exclusively for Chapter Masons.

The committee in charge included the Most Excellent High Priest, William H. Parry, ex-Com. John H Whitehead and Companions Walter E. Piper, Arthur F. Raymond, Harry P. Furnald, Louis S. Cleaves, and ex.-Com. Roscoe M. Horton assisted by every Companion, who saw to it that the ladies enjoyed themselves.

During the first part of the evening there was an excellent entertainment opening with a selection by Maxim's orchestra, who were followed by the Commandery quartette, of Quincy Commandery, who made their first public appearance on this occasion. The quartete is composed of Edward E. Bullock and Vernon S. Brokaw tenors, Herbert Y. Follett, baritone and George McGowan bass. Their selection was "Gay Hearts" and for an encore they sang "Absent."

Companion Follett then gave two solos "In my Heart's land" and "Creole Lovers' song." Miss Lucy Lee, a well-known elocutionist rendered "Stirrup's Ranch" a dialect story from Colorado, and for an encore "How did you die."

Mrs. Jeannie C. Follett followed with a group of songs, "Gray days" "Four leaf clover" and "Sing, break into song" and Mr. Bullock with a tenor solo "Dreaming." Mr. and Mrs. Follett sang a duet "Passage birds' farewell" and Miss Lee gave a reading "A rag doll" and for her first encore "Obediaha's romance" and then a short sketch.

The program closed with a selection by the quartet "Yachting glee" and they responded to an encore.

The soloists were assisted by Miss Seavey of Wollaston as accompanist.

At the conclusion of the entertainment Ex-Com. Whitehead, at the request of the High Priest presented Mrs. Follett with a bouquet of roses.

An adjournment was then made to the banquet hall where refreshments were served, following which there was dancing until 11.30.

ROOSEVELT CLUB FORMED

John H. Johnson Elected President. Many Enrolled

TONIGHT'S RALLY

The Roosevelt boom in this city was launched in Colonial hall, Wednesday evening, when a large number of citizens formed a club to further the cause of the ex-president. Papers were signed and plans were adopted for the monster rally, to be held this evening in Alpha hall.

John H. Johnson, the well-known cigar dealer, has been elected president and Horace W. Richmond secretary. It is expected that a large number will be enrolled in membership before the primaries.

If you want to hear all about what "Charle Dugan" says you should attend this rally. A number of good speakers are announced to address the meeting.

LITTLE CHILD IS BURNED

The 3-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Recelle of 17 Canal street was seriously burned, Wednesday while playing about a bonfire near Stevenson's grocery store on Washington street. The child had been playing near the fire for some time and had been warned several times to keep away. While the mother's attention was detracted for a minute the child ran and jumped into the fire. Her clothing immediately took fire and she was in danger of being burned to death when Benjamin Hodgkinson of Elm place, a boy scout master, heard the child's cries and rushed to her assistance. Grabbing the child he rolled her on the ground extinguishing the fire but not before her lower limbs had been somewhat burned.

—A Cincinnati woman is publicly advocating a curfew law for men which will require them to be off the streets at night, unless they have a valid excuse for being out. That would be a curfew law that would count for something and mean much to all except those women whose husbands are such a nuisance about the house that peace reigns only during their absence.—Spencer Leader.

CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY

Mt. Wollaston Lodge I. O. O. F. Entertains Its Ladies

PLEASING PROGRAM

Mt. Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., celebrated the 93d anniversary of American Odd Fellowship Wednesday evening at their hall in the Adams building. The affair was very largely attended by brothers of the lodge and other lodges and their ladies.

During the first part of the evening there was a pleasing entertainment, the contributing artists being the Majestic Trio, with banjo, mandolin and guitar trios and solos and minstrel numbers which created a great deal of merriment.

Miss Grace Sandborn Cole of Somerville, a very talented reader, also gave a number of selections each of which called for encores which were freely given.

Arthur H. Dunston, Noble Grand of Mt. Wollaston lodge, after briefly welcoming the brothers and their ladies, introduced Charles H. Barron who announced the several numbers on the program. The program was quite a lengthy one, and thoroughly enjoyed.

At the conclusion of the entertainment light refreshments were served followed by dancing until midnight,.

Mrs. Chandler W. Smith of Wollaston who has served the Associate Alliance so well as president for four years could not be prevailed upon to allow her names to be used again and Mrs. Prescott Keyes of Concord, Mass., who has served as first vice president was elected president.

At noon a box luncheon was? enjoyed by the visiting delegates, the Quincy Alliance serving hot coffee and tea.

"PHYSICAL EDUCATION"

Dr. Smith Talks to Coddington Parents and Teachers

400 PRESENT

The newly formed Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Coddington school held its first meeting in the school assembly hall Wednesday evening and the success of the initial gathering was attested by the fact that over 400 were in attendance. Reports of the work done by the pupils during the past year were read, as were also various other plans under contemplation.

The speaker for the occasion was Dr. J. Gardiner Smith, physical director in the public schools, who gave a most instructive treatise on "Physical Education in our Public Schools—What it is and Why." Dr. Smith has treated of the same subject at meetings of associations connected with other schools of the city, and thus was in a position to handle the topic with still greater versalitility.

The treatise has already appeared in the columns of this paper and has been read with keen interest.

Dr. Smith dealt mainly with the work that has been accomplished during the past year and told of the manner in which the pupils have adapted themselves to the different methods that have been pursued. He also laid down the influence such training has to bear on developing the mind and went at length into a discussion of the principle of Horace's expression "Mens sana in corpore sano." "A sound mind in a sound body."

He spoke of the co-operation that should be forthcoming on the part of the parents and teachers in order to stimulate the pupil in following that pursuit to which he seems best adapted. He also told of the interest parents should take in school work and the beneficial results such interest would have in moulding the character of the child. He was heartily applauded at the conclusion of his remarks and a rising vote of thanks was tendered to him.

This was folowed by gymnastic drills given by pupils of the first and eighth grades. The pupils of the former performed in a manner that proved almost a revelation to the audience. Loud applause greeted the little ones from time to time as they brought out their work in a most effective manner. The pupils of the first grade, who took part in the gymnastice, were Margaret Dolan, Jessie Finney, Eleanor DiPanfilo, Mabel McKinnon, Marie Wood, Constance Yonquist, Sidney Anderson, Daniel Ford, James Kenneborough, Roger Nowland, Thomas Schultz and Raymond Stoddard.

Shirts and Ties Are a Matter of Taste

And, fortunately, men's tastes differ widely in the matter of shirts and ties, and—well, we will let it go at that.

Of course, no single men's wear store can foretell the exact 1000 ties 1000 men will pick, and the only way to satisfy every one of these men is to have such a variety that they cannot fail to be suited.

The same holds true in the matter of all men's furnishings, whether hats or gloves, shoes or collars,—here, at the store "just around the corner" you will find the largest assortment in the city at prices that will appeal to your pocket-book.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The two remaining Allen outlaws seem to have read in the papers about the healthful effect of sleeping out of doors.

Many people who go to Europe once in a lifetime are mad if they lose half a day by the boat's slowing down through a fog.

There seems to be something like reciprocity between Canada and the United States in the "exchange of gentlemen" accused of looting banks.

Secretary Knox said some very persuasive words to the South Americans but there is still a feeling down there that Uncle Sam is an adept at the shell game.

Canadian newspapers are now whooping baseball just like a real rooter. Turned us down on reciprocity, but if we can't get them one way we will another.

They say more pepper is to be put into the campaign, but as the lid of the pepper box was removed some time ago, they will have to throw it in with the coal shovel.

In filling the vacancy in the army made by Gen. Fred Grant's death, the man who worked the longest for Uncle Sam is not necessarily the man who could give the enemy the best licking.

Amateur wireless operators interfered with getting word from the Titanic, but some people will say that boys will be boys and young people must be permitted to amuse themselves.

Efforts are being made to force Justice Hughes into the campaign, but who would shake hands with the crowds from Eastport to San Diego when he can sit up behind the bench in a black nightgown and hear the other fellows talk?

THE PUBLIC DID IT.

A great many severe things are being said about J. Bruce Ismay, and other directors of the White Star line. Many of these things may be justified, but it will be for the courts to pronounce a final verdict according to the laws of human justice.

Meanwhile the responsibility for the production of the Titanic disaster is very much like the responsibility for a yellow newspaper. Just as long as there is a market for a certain kind of service, it will be supplied.

The public demanded palm gardens and ball rooms and railroad time tables in ocean travel. The men who were in the steamship business did their best to supply the demand, just as a newspaper proprietor who is sure that his readers want yellow news does his best to provide yellow news.

All the time that the Titanics have been smashing through the iceberg belt, there have been plenty of slow and sober ocean steamships that jogged along comfortably and safely. But the market for this kind of service was limited. It will be more extended hereafter.

SECRETARY HAS VERY BUSY WEEK

Secretary of Associated Charities Being Kept Busy

RESOLUTIONS

The secretary of the Associated Charities has had another busy week with many new cases and many opportunities of speaking of the work, offering her services in connection with many societies. Monday afternoon she spoke before the Branch Alliances of First Church; Monday evening before Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters at Wollaston; Tuesday morning she met the State Probation Officer and Judge Avery, also the committee of Ministers on Charities at the Y. M. C. A. of the recently organized Ministers' Association. Wednesday afternoon she spoke before the Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Congregational church.

Miss Purchase is glad of these opportunities of becoming acquainted with the organizations already doing good work and appreciates their co-operation with the Associated Charities.

The telephone is now installed and its number 1180 is to serve the needs of the community in calling upon the office at the Women's clubhouse.

The following letter was received by the president of the Associated Charities showing the good fortune of Quincy in securing its secretary:

Milton, April 9, 1912.

President Associated Charities,
Quincy, Mass.

Dear Sir:

Enclosed find resolutions sent by members of the Mattapan Conference of Boston Associated Charities.

Yours very truly,
John W. DeBruyn, Sec. Matt. Con.

RESOLVED:—That the members of the Mattapan Conference of the Associated Charities, highly appreciating the faithful and unselfish effort expended by Miss Jenny M. Purchase, first, in the formation of the Conference, and later in the patient, sympathetic direction of its visitors, desire to extend to her their hearty thanks. Though it is with sorrow that the Conference parts with its devoted Secretary, it desires to congratulate her upon being called to a wider field of usefulness and to wish her a full measure of success.

The Dorchester Conference passed a similar resolution.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

At this season of the year it is appropriate that our attention should be called to gardening and subjects of that nature. In view of this fact, there has been compiled a complete list of the books on gardening now in our library. If one has never had occasion to examine these books it is impossible to realize how attractive they are, many having beautiful colored illustrations. Among others of unusual interest may be noted, "In a Tuscan garden," "Gardens near the sea," by Alice Lounsberry, "Old time gardens" by Alice Morse Earle, and "Our mountain garden," by Mrs. Theodore Thomas.

Likewise a list of books on birds has been printed, and as it is usually hard to identify the different kinds, colored pictures of those common to this section of the country have been placed on the bulletin-board. The books on birds are very comprehensive, and well worth reading.

Both of these lists have recently appeared in the Ledger and copies may be found at the desk.

OVATION AWAITS HIM

Dr. Eliot Promised Fine Reception When He Visits Japan

Pekin, April 25.—Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard university, and William J. Calhoun, United States minister to China, with a number of leading Japanese and American residents, were the guests of Kokichi Midzuno, Japanese charge d'affaires in Pekin, at dinner last night.

Mr. Midzuno said that he was pleased the great American educator was about to visit Japan, where an ovation awaited him. He said he was glad Eliot intended to visit Manchuria and Korea, where, with an open mind, he would form his own judgment of Japanese policies.

Dr. Eliot in reply expressed his thanks and outlined the work of the Carnegie foundation in endeavoring to thwart the malevolent influences which were contributing to ill feeling between the nations.

ATTITUDE OF RAILROAD MEN

Want Nine Arbitors to Settle Dispute With Engineers

BOTH WANT A SETTLEMENT

First Instance In Which the Government Has Offered Its Services Altogether Voluntarily—Neither Party to Controversy Has Availed Itself of Provisions of Erdman Act by Asking Federal Intervention

New York, April 25.—United States Commissioner of Labor Neill and the sub-committee of railroad managers were in conference all day long over the proposal by Neill and Justice Knapp of the United States commerce court that their "kindly offices" be made use of in adjusting the wage controversy which has threatened a strike by engineers on practically all railroads east of Chicago and north of the Potomac river.

"I want to say," Neill said in the course of an interview, "that the railway managers are sincere and so are engineers. Both sides are equally anxious for a settlement."

As to what progress was made in conference with railroad representatives Neill was reticent, insisting that informal discussion of negotiations might lead to embarrassment of the work. He was asked if the railroads insisted upon an arbitration board of nine members, but he declined to discuss the point. From an unofficial source it was learned that the railroads wished such a board rather than to rely upon an adjustment by representatives of the government.

Neill made it plain that neither he nor Knapp was following the Erdman act in the negotiations.

"We are just trying to bring about an adjustment of this dispute, regardless of what course we take," he said.

The Erdman act has been interpreted as requiring one of the parties in controversy to seek its application before action could be taken, but in this case neither party did so, and Neill admits that this is the first instance in which the government has offered its services altogether voluntarily.

He said he and Knapp did not take up the matter at the personal suggestion of President Taft. Knapp came to New York last night and he will probably join Neill in conference with the railway managers. Knapp expressed gratification that both parties to the controversy have accepted action toward mediation.

A meeting of the sub-committee of the railway managers has been called for today.

HAS GIVEN AWAY MILLIONS

Dr. Pearsons, Benefactor of Smaller Colleges, Is on Death Bed

Chicago, April 25.—Dr. D. K. Pearsons, aged philanthropist, who has given to small colleges in the United States a fortune of between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000, is critically ill at his home in Hinsdale, with pneumonia.

Only two weeks ago Dr. Pearsons celebrated his 92d birthday. At that time he was in good health and predicted, as he had frequently, that he would live to be 100 years old.

He said he did not have time to die, as he was too busy watching his "children," as he called the colleges he has aided.

For three nights it has been necessary to administer oxygen hourly.

"Big Lem" Strosnider Goes to Jail In Default of $10,000 Bail

Boston, April 25.—James Strosnider, alias Sterling and "Big Lem," was arraigned in the superior court, and after pleading not guilty to a charge of conspiring to steal $7500 from Samuel Butter by way of a wire tapping scheme, was held in $10,000 for trial. In default of bail Strosnider was taken to the Charles street jail.

Strosnider is alleged by the police to have been a friend of "Big Bill" Keliher and other members of the faro gang which reaped such a harvest through the aid of George W. Coleman.

ALASKA SUFFRAGE LOSES

Measure Favoring It Turned Down In House by a Tie Vote

Washington, April 25.—Woman suffrage for Alaska was defeated in the house by a tie vote. Representative Mann of Illinois, Republican leader, offered an amendment to the Alaskan home rule bill giving women the right to vote.

A rising vote showed a tie, 29 to 29, and a vote by tellers again produced a tie, 41 to 41. The amendment was declared lost.

Robbers Get Away With $8000

Fort Smith, Ark., April 25.—After a two hours' running fight with a posse of citizens, four robbers who had blown open the vault in the bank at Midland escaped with about $8000.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT. POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT.

Voters of Massachusetts

The Crane machine is fighting with its back to the wall.

Spurred by the ghosts of Lorimer and Penrose, its cohorts are battling now with the desperation of despair.

The cry has gone up from the corrupt politicians and the beneficiaries of special privilege: "SAVE MASSACHUSETTS AT ANY COST!"

The Taft campaign has suddenly fallen from the sublime to the ridiculous.

A few short weeks ago the leading lights of the Crane machine and the interest-owned Taft newspapers were pitying Roosevelt and laughing at his supporters.

On March 13, the Washington correspondent of the Boston Advertiser wrote:

"The Roosevelt people in Boston do make a great deal of noise, but they are few in number and mostly people of little consequence. SENATOR CRANE WILL NOT DIGNIFY THEM BY NOTICING THEM."

That was just after Crane had failed in his attempt to defeat the presidential primary bill and thus deprive the people of a voice in the selection of their candidate for President.

The same correspondent wrote: "Congressman Weeks is so confident of the situation that he does not think it worth while to make a canvass and is going for a stay of some weeks at the Panama canal."

THE TAFT NEWSPAPERS TODAY INFORM US THAT CRANE IS RAISING HEAVEN AND EARTH TO PREVENT THE DESTRUCTION OF HIS MACHINE AT THE HANDS OF THE PEOPLE HE WOULD NOT DEIGN TO NOTICE SIX WEEKS AGO!

The same newspapers tell us that CONGRESSMAN WEEKS IS BACK FROM PANAMA AND IS NOW RUNNING THE TAFT CAMPAIGN FROM HIS STOCK BROKERAGE OFFICE IN CONGRESS STREET, BOSTON.

Every standpat congressman and friend of special privilege is now on the stump against Roosevelt and the people in this State.

And to cap the climax, the President of the United States has been DRAGGED FROM THE WHITE HOUSE in the vain effort to stem the tide of defeat.

The "few people of little consequence" have apparently developed into a mighty force!

CRANE, THE FRIEND AND DEFENDER OF THE UNSPEAKABLE LORIMER.

WEEKS, THE REDOUBTABLE CHAMPION OF CANNON AND CANNONISM.

McCALL, WHO FOUGHT WITH THE INTERESTS AGAINST THE GREATEST MEASURES INITIATED BY ROOSEVELT FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE PEOPLE.

ELDER, WHO WROTE THE REACTIONARY PLATFORM WHICH DROVE THOUSANDS OF LOYAL REPUBLICANS OUT OF THE PARTY LAST FALL.

GARDNER, ONE OF WHOSE POLITICAL FIGHTS IN THE SIXTH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT IS STILL A STENCH IN THE NOSTRILS OF DECENT PEOPLE.

Those are some of the men who compose the Crane machine, and THOSE ARE THE MEN WHO ARE NOW TRYING TO CONVINCE THE PEOPLE OF MASSACHUSETTS THAT THEY ARE NOT FIT FOR SELF-GOVERNMENT.

Can you imagine, men of Massachusetts, a more opportune time to rise up in your might and strike a blow for popular government?

Can you imagine a more favorable time to crush the machine once and for all?

STRIKE NOW WHILE THE IRON IS HOT!

The machine is desperate and will stop at nothing to accomplish its purpose.

It controls most of the big newspapers in the State and has forced the supporters of Roosevelt to pay for space in order to get the facts before the voters.

SOME OF THE NEWSPAPERS HAVE REFUSED TO PRINT THE TRUTH ABOUT ROOSEVELT AND THE CAUSE OF THE PEOPLE EVEN IN THEIR ADVERTISING COLUMNS.

Crane and Weeks and Gardner and their allied interests are PREPARED TO GIVE GENEROUSLY OF THEIR MILLIONS TO THWART THE WILL OF THE PEOPLE.

But Col. Roosevelt and his supporters rest secure in the knowledge that THE ELECTORATE OF MASSACHUSETTS IS NOT FOR SALE.

Men of Massachusetts, go to the polls next Tuesday and record your sentiment of such methods by voting for Roosevelt and Roosevelt delegates.

REMEMBER THAT ROOSEVELT HAS FOUGHT THE BOSSES AND THE INTERESTS FOR YEARS AND HAS NEVER SUFFERED DEFEAT AT THEIR HANDS.

He is as certain to defeat them this time as the sun is to rise tomorrow.

SEE THAT YOU HAVE A PART IN THE VICTORY.

You don't have to be enrolled to vote at this primary.

TAKE A REPUBLICAN BALLOT AND VOTE FOR ROOSEVELT AND ROOSEVELT DELEGATES.

Woodward Institute — Parochial School

SCHOOL NOTES.

The final disposition of the annual budget of the school department enables the school committee to proceed with its plans for establishing an industrial school to give training to boys engaged in learning trades to organize additional evening classes for instruction for youths and men engaged in mechanical pursuits and who desire some technical instruction and to organize some pre-vocational classes for boys and girls who desire and who would profit by more manual work than the elementary schools at present provide. Although no definite plans have been formulated yet, it is hoped that some of this work will be undertaken in the Willard school which is the largest building in the city. This school is already equipped with a small printing press with which the boys have done very creditable work as many of the parents have seen. If this work is undertaken at the Willard school, a much larger press will be provided, with which a school paper could be issued and the printing work of the other schools and the school department could be done. The school would also be equipped in all probability with facilities for instruction in manual training as well as in sewing and in cooking. Doubtless similar work will be carried out in one or two other buildings in the city where there is opportunity and demand for it.

At the present time the High school is the only building in the city with any equipment for manual training for boys or for household arts for girls. The result is that boys get no work of this nature except as they get it at the High school building, and girls who are unable to go to the High school get no training in household arts at all.

Incidentally it is interesting to note that the Cranch school is anxious to secure a printing equipment and is endeavoring to secure the necessary funds.

There will be a general teachers' meeting at the Coddington school, next Wednesday afternoon at 4.15 o'clock.

Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead of Boston, widely known as a lecturer and public spirited woman will address the teachers on the New Internationalism and how it may be applied to the teaching of patriotism, history and literature. As May 18 is commonly observed in the schools of the state as Peace Day, Mrs. Mead's address will be very timely.

The annual reports of the School Department were received from the printer and distributed a few days ago. The reports contain six full page cuts, illustrating the new Wollaston school and some of the work at the high school. The reports follow the same plan as in previous years, with the statistics somewhat more complete.

The Quincy Playground Committee have sent a request to the school committee again this year asking permission to use the grounds and basement of the Coddington school for its playground work. This request was granted last year and a very successful playground was conducted.

HIGH SCHOOL.

The annual inter-class meet will be held in Merrymount Park, Thursday afternoon, May 2. The events will be announced later.

Meets have been arranged with Hyde Park and Melrose High schools. Henry Trask, Q. H. S. '13, is captain of the track team and will prove a large point winner. Frank V. Gordon the recent Algebra teacher is managing the team.

Annual High school Senior dramatics will be held in High school hall on Saturday evening, May 18. The play entitled "The Time of his Life" is a very humorous play and will no doubt be well acted, under the personal direction of Miss Mary G. Brown.

GRIDLEY BRYANT SCHOOL.

On Monday, April 29, the Art Exhibit will be held in St. Mary's hall, for the benefit of the Gridley Bryant school, to enable the teachers to purchase pictures for the school room walls. The entertainment to be given in connection with the exhibit will be of high order and combined with the exhibit should furnish a delightful evening for those who attend. The program of the entertainment will be as follows:

WILLARD SCHOOL.

The Art Exhibit to be held in St. Mary's hall, on April 30, furnishes a splendid opportunity for the people of West Quincy to see one of the finest art exhibitions ever presented in this city, while contributing to the worthy purpose of helping the school raise money to purchase pictures for school room decoration. Something will be found to interest each member of the family. The children cannot help but enjoy the subjects pertaining to childlife and farm scenes; students of architecture will find the magnificent cathedrals of Europe intensely fascinating, and the famous pictures of the old and modern masters representing history, poetry, nature, religion and that which is lovely in life, will appeal to all.

The great educational power of the pictures, both in the exhibit and in the permanent decoration of the school wall, can hardly be estimated. A prominent educator says: "The best place to inculcate love of the beautiful is in the school room. To rising generations the most effective lessons can be given, and from the schools millions of children will carry the lesson to millions of homes."

A candy sale will be held in connection with the Exhibit in the afternoon, and an entertainment will be given in the evening followed by an ice cream sale.

VAUDEVILLE ENTERTAINMENT

Y. P. R. U. of First Church Present Fine Program

EXIT MARCH

The Y. P. R. U. of First church gave a vaudeville entertainment in the chapel Wednesday attended by about 100 who enjoyed the following program:

Orchestra overture.
Club swinging.
Slang sketch.
Vocal selection.
Monologue.
Fancy dancing.
Kitchen orchestra.
Orchestra selections.
Moving pictures.
Exit march.

Promptly at 8 o'clock the orchestra consisting of William Weston, Max Pinkham and Thomas Packard broke forth into sweet strains and every one sat up and began to take notice. After several selections the club swinging act was given by W. C. Bennett and so well that it was applauded loudly and had to give a second presentation.

Next was a sketch by Miss Ruth Packard, Catherine Saville and Everett Rhodes. The plot of this play was the trying by Mrs. Forrester to stop her daughter's use of slang. By failing to mail a letter the plot failed in one respect but proved a success in another, as the daughter was horrified by her mother using slang to such an extent.

Vocal selections were rendered by Herbert Kearns who was recalled several times and gave several popular airs to satisfy the audience.

The monologue by Miss Dorothy Packard was the life of an Irish cook and her experiences in answering and not answering the door.

Miss Florence Barker gave a very pretty series of fancy dancing and was recalled several times.

The Kitchen orchestra proved to be the hit of the evening. The instruments were all kitchen utensils and the strange music was rendered as if a magic hand had touched the hearts of the utensils. The orchestra consisted of Misses Ruth Packard, Marie Bass, Dorothy Packard, Catherine Saville, Roberta Smith, Winifred Packard, Bee Morrison, Stella Barker, Alice Arnold and Ethel Hersey.

The orchestra rendered several popular selections being again roundly applauded.

Next were the moving pictures which were young ladies representing the different types of girls of the day.

Lastly was the exit march much to the sorrow of the audience.

The ushers were Albert Parker, Allen Miller and Fred Atwood.

COMMUNICATION.

Editor of the Ledger:

Such wide publicity has been given in the press to the removal of several ivory pew ornaments from the Stone Church last Friday that a few statements regarding the matter will be in order.

First of all it should be remembered that the few vandals were a small percentage of the 550 delegates who attended the convention and it would be unfortunate if any one should get the idea that the Christian Endeavor societies were composed of such people. Many of those attending the meetings were not even members.

Secondly, it should be understood that Bethany church was merely the meeting place for the convention which was attended by people from all parts of the county so those who are blaming this church in any way are manifestly unjust.

No one feels more badly about the matter than the officers of the County Union and they are using every effort to trace the lost button.

Your editorial was a fair statement of conditions. The buttons were undoubtedly taken thoughtlessly but the act was none the less inexsucable and it is hoped that the guilty ones will make suitable apology.

Yours very truly,
Carle R. Hayward.

AUTOMOBILE DAY COURSE

The day course in the Boston Y. M. C. A. Automobile school opened April 17 and the evening school April 15. A large number of Quincy men interested in this line of work took the course and have secured positions in some of the garages in Boston and the vicinity.

Securing accommodations in the classes owing to the numbers in attendance has been poor but other classes are being formed so that people wishing to take this course may enroll.

There is a great demand for chauffeurs owing to the high powered cars and trucks and men employed in this work are few, thus the call for men is larger than ever before. The new classes start within a few weeks under the care of men of experience.

CLOSE OF WHIST TOURNAMENTS

The season's whist tournament that have been held weekly by the Granite City club during the winter months closed with Wednesday evenings games The best scores of the evening were made by Henry F Tilden and James H Penniman. The first monthly prize went to S. T. McQuarry and the second to Nathan Ames while the consolation was awarded to Frank Wharton. The prizes for the two best seasons scores were announced this morning. The first goes to John Curtis with 55.81 per cent. and the second to S. T. McQuarrie with 54.98 per cent. The consolation goes to Nathan Ames with 44.59 per cent.

DIANTHUS CLUB.

The Dianthus club of Atlantic was entertained by Mrs. George A. Deans of Appleton street, and Mrs. Lugene J. Hayford of East Squantum street, at the home of the latter Tuesday afternoon. Three tables of whist were in play, the winners of souvenirs being Mrs. Walter P. Hill of Clive street Mrs. George A. Deans of Appleton street, and Mrs. H. G. Larsen of Walker street.

The decorations were violets and marguerites which were very pretty indeed. Besides the presence of the natural flowers their representations were found wherever they could be made use of, such as on tally cards, napkins, etc.

Mrs. Hayford makes a charming hostess and the same is true of Mrs. Deans. They have both proven this fact individually on previous occasions so the results of their combined efforts did not come as a great surprise to the members. It only went to prove the saying:—"In union there is strength."

Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served by the hostesses, after which the club adjourned with the anticipation of meeting next time at the home of Mrs. W. F. Harden of Hunt street.

TODAY'S COURT.

Harry Anderson was fined $10 and Jeremiah J. O'Leary $15 for drunkenness at Quincy.

William C. Conway was fined $25 for assault on his wife at Quincy and $15 for drunkenness.

BRAINTREE GRANGE.

At the regular meeting of the grange held Monday evening there was a fine program carried out under the direction of the lecturer Joseph E. Hayden. There was a sale at which handsome May baskets, also ice cream, cake and candy, found many purchasers. During the lecturer's hour there was a very interesting entertainment, consisting of piano solos by Miss Bertelle Bennett and songs by Miss Lillian Devine. Wesley Butler rendered some fine cornet solos and was ably accompanied at the piano by Miss Bennett. Mrs. Abbie Hayden was especially pleasing in recitations and Miss Sadie Nelson contributed to the enjoyment by her vocal solos. These little affairs are a great source of pleasure to the members and are a great inducement to all to attend the meetings. At this meeting Miss Sadie Stevenson was elected lady assistant steward in place of Mrs. Alice Rogers who recently resigned because of change of residence to another part of the state.

"No you don't," replied Mr. Growcher. "You want me to think you want my advice, so I'll think you are a fine, sensible man and feel like doing you favors. That's what you want."

Progress.

"Women are now making great strides," remarked Mrs. Baring-Banners.

"Yes," replied the husband; "only you can't notice it when you see one of 'em in a hobble skirt going after a street car."

FULL TRAIN CREW BILL IS ENGROSSED

Railroads Opposed Measure in Massachusetts Legislature

Boston, April 25.—The "full train crew bill," which has been bitterly opposed by the New Haven and Boston and Maine railroads and the New York Central and Boston and Albany, was passed to be engrossed by the house of representatives by an overwhelming voice vote. The bill has passed the senate.

The bill, among other things, provides that no freight train of thirty or more cars, exclusive of locomotive and caboose, shall be operated with a crew of less than six persons, consisting of an engineer and firemen, conductor, flagman and two brakemen, adding another brakeman to the present force.

AUTO KILLS A BABY

Shoppers on Crowded Lawrence Street Witness a Tragedy

Lawrence, Mass., April 25.—Thousands of mid-afternoon shoppers, standing horror-stricken on Essex street, saw Samuel Kaplan, aged 2 years and 9 months, run down and almost instantly killed by an automobile owned by William F. McCarthy of Nashua, N. H., and driven by his son, Henry S. McCarthy.

The baby was going across the street, amid the maze of traffic, to a market to buy a cookie. In his hand the ambulance surgeon found a penny still tightly clutched. The baby was accompanied by a little playmate, Jacob Kaplan, aged 6 years.

It was the opinion of police officials that the driver of the car was not responsible for the accident.

TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

The members of the Braintree Teachers' Association entertained the townspeople last Tuesday evening at a most interesting and instructive meeting in the assembly hall of the Jonas Perkins school. The guest of honor was Charles Richardson, professor emeritus of English at Dartmouth College, and for six years editor of "The Independent."

Professor Richardson is an author and a poet and a man of great ability in educational lines. He addressed the meeting on the subject of "Gains and losses in modern education," holding the attention of his auditors and driving home his major points by the aid of timely witticisms. His discourse was illuminated with flashes of wit and humor which served to light up the more serious parts and make the evening one of thorough enjoyment. Professor Richardson's final summing up of the matter was to the effect that we have gained much in building. equipment, teaching, supervision, management and general organization.

As to losses, the professor thought that the children of today are too willing to be helped over the hard places and lack power to make efforts for their own advancement. He said the self-reliant spirit of thirty years ago was lacking in these days and in this connection cited some of his own college experiences.

At the close of the lecture, Professor Richardson was plied with questions by many of the audience and the courteous and pertinent answers were a pleasant feature of the evening. There were about 200 people present and the opinion was practically unanimous that this was one of the finest educational meetings that they had ever attended.

BOULEVARD BILL REPORTED

As was predicted in the Ledger of last Saturday, the legislative committe on Metropolitan Affairs Wednesday reported an omnibus bill, recommending the appropriation of $1,000,000 to be expended on certain parks and boulevards in the metropolitan district.

Prominent among the items specified in the bill, is mentioned the sum of $100,000 for the Furnace Brook Parkway completion. This is the measure advocated earlier in the session by Rep. Leslie's bill and calls for the connection of the present boulevards in Quincy. While the amount is not as much as was asked for in the original petition, it will provide for some work being done along the lines outlined in Mr. Leslie's bill, and will lay the foundation for a strong argument for entire completion in another year.

Other items in the bill just reported provide $600,000 for the Old Colony Boulevard in Boston, and $8000 for a bathing beach and shelter at the Lower Mills in Milton.

The bill was reported in the Senate Wednesday and will appear for debate in that body before going to the House.

LINER NAMED AS DESERTER

Mount Temple Said to Have Been Near the Titanic

IGNORED DISTRESS SIGNALS

Assertion of Passengers on Steamer Now at St. John Inquired Into by Investigating Committee—Officer of Titanic Testifies to Swearing at Ismay, Who Appeared Very Anxious to Get Off Sinking Ship—Says He Fired Shots to Frighten Italians When He Feared They Would Jump Into Lifeboat Being Lowered

Washington, April 25.—Eclipsing even the senate inquiry into the Titanic dsaster in interest came assertions that passengers on the steamer Mount Temple saw the Titanic sink and that, in fact, the Mount Temple, which docked yesterday at St. John, was the unknown vessel that officers of the Titanic declare passed within five miles of the doomed liner, but ignored wireless and rocket distress signals.

The interest grew after the interchange of telegrams between Senator Smith, chairman, and the acting premier of Canada, George E. Foster.

The latter mentioned the docking of the steamer Mount Temple at St. John with passengers aboard who professed to have seen the Titanic sink.

Senator Smith has requested that the depositions of the officers and crew of the Mount Temple be sent to him. In addition, he accepted the offer of Dr. E. C. Qnitzman of Toronto to appear before the committee. Dr. Quitzman was one of the passengers who say they saw the Titanic sink.

Acting Premier Foster's telegram follows:

"Captain Mount Temple reports he received the C. Q. D. message from the Titanic at 12:30 a. m., ship's time, Monday. He was then fifty miles west and south of the position sent out by the Titanic. He immediately altered his course to reach the Titanic, but did not arrive at her position until 4:30 a. m., when he could not see Titanic's lights. Saw no sign of ship nor boats. He cruised around position until he received messages from the Carpathia at 8:44 a. m., that she had picked up twenty boatloads and that the Titanic had sunk. He received another message at 8:50 from the Carpathia; no need to stand by as nothing more could be done. Under these circumstances it does not seem necessary to detain the boat, due to sail Friday evening. If considered necessary, a commission could be appointed to take the captain's evidence. He will no doubt be examined later by British commission."

In reply, Senator Smith dispatched the following:

"Telegram received. I will greatly appreciate if the deposition of the captain of the Mount Temple, which is scheduled to sail from St. John tomorrow (Friday), could be taken by commissioners, as suggested by you, and forwarded to me at Washington, relative to the movements of his ship on Sunday evening, April 14, stating relative positions to Titanic and Carpathia, together with a detailed report of wireless messages sent and received."

The committee also received a telegram signed by J. H. Moore, master of the Mount Temple; A. H. Sargent, chief officer; H. Heald, second officer, and J. Durrant, the Marconi operator, dated at West St. John, N. B., practically repeating the information contained in the premier's message, and adding that the Mount Temple did not see the Titanic's lights.

At 6:30 a. m. the Mount Temple sighted the Carpathia and later the Californian, they assert. At 8 o'clock she sighted the Russian steamer Birma coming from the south and west. The names of the passengers who claimed they saw the lights of the Titanic, the message said, were not known.

How J. Bruce Ismay, millionaire and managing director of the White Star line, was ordered by one of his own employes to "Get to hell out of that," when he tried personally to supervise the loading of one of the lifeboats, was related to the committee by Herbert J. Lowe, fifth officer on the Titanic.

Lowe was the officer who so roughly addressed the managing director. He declared that Ismay was "very much excited and appeared very anxious to get off the Titanic."

"I didn't know who he was," the witness explained. "I used some strong language—it was in the heat of the moment."

Lowe was considerably embarrassed and refused to repeat his "strong language," but wrote the words on a piece of paper. Ismay gave his consent to Lowe's repeating the "cuss words."

"Mr. Ismay was over-anxious and a trifle excited," testified Lowe. He said: 'Lower away! Lower away! Lower away!'"

FACED DEATH TOGETHER

Mr. and Mrs. Straus, Who Died Clasped In Each Other's Arms

No two victims of the Titanic horror have aroused more public interest and excited more admiration and honor than Mr. and Mrs. Isidor Straus of New York. Mrs. Straus climbed out of a lifeboat when she saw that her husband would not follow her because there were other women to be saved and stood by his side while the liner slowly went to her doom. His manliness and her self sacrifice form as touching a story as any of the whole disaster.

Senator Smith insisted, and Lowe reluctantly admitted that he said to the manager of the White Star line:

"If you get to hell out of here I'll be able to do something."

Ismay made no reply, Lowe testified, and after the managing director had been ordered away the officer said Ismay went to aid in lowering another lifeboat.

Lowe fired the pistol shots heard when the lifeboats were leaving the sinking ship, he told the committee. He was asked:

"Did you hear any pistol shots fired?" He replied: "I did, and I fired them. It was when our boat, No. 14, was being lowered. I feared the boat would buckle in two. I feared anybody else getting in. I saw a lot of Italians glaring at me as the boat was being moved down. We were three feet from the side of the ship. I thought the men would jump into the boat and we would all go to the bottom. I fired three shots to frighten off those men."

The officer explained he was "careful not to hurt anybody and was absolutely certain he did not." He fired at the side of the ship.

Frederick Fleet, the lookout, was another witness. He reiterated his assertion that he had no glasses. Never before had he gone without them when on such duty. He told also about seeing a bright light after the wreck. "I could not say whether it was one mile off or ten," he testified.

TWO TITANIC WAIFS

They Were Kidnapped by Father Pending Divorce Proceedings

New York, April 25.—Identification of the two little French boys saved in the Titanic disaster was made certain on the receipt of a description from Mme. Navratil at Nice, giving marks on the body of the younger. The marks were found as indicated and the general description tallied exactly.

The father, who took passage in the second cabin as "Mr. Hoffman," had fled with the children pending divorce proceedings with his wife. He disappeared on Easter day and Mme. Navratil believed he had gone to America. He had a large tailoring establishment at Nice and is supposed to have taken about $8000 with him.

While this tragic last act in a domestic drama involving the kidnapping of his own children by a father, his flight across the sea and his death in the great marine disaster, another tragedy is being played, because another mother is speeding across the Atlantic in the vain hope that the two children may be those whom she has lost.

NEEDS BUT 129 VOTES TO WIN

Taft Bureau Gives Out Figures on the Nomination

LEADS ROOSEVELT BY 200

Given Boost by Securing Delegates From New Hampshire and Rhode Island—Supporters Express Confidence In Carrying Massachusetts Primaries—Claim That Uninstructed Delegates From the South Are For the President

Washington, April 25.—President Taft and his advisers are confident that the president will carry Massachusetts in the primaries next Tuesday, and that the victory for Taft in New Hampshire will be duplicated in the Bay State.

The extraordinary action of the president in calling a cabinet meeting, which lasted until 2 o'clock in the morning, was not for the purpose of discussing the Mexican situation, but to consider the speech which Taft will make in Massachusetts, attacking former President Roosevelt.

It was stated by a cabinet member that the attack on Roosevelt is to be every bit as vigorous as has been reported. Every member of the cabinet went over the charges with President Taft and promised to stand by them.

The president has determined that whatever statements he makes in his speeches in Massachusetts regarding Mr. Roosevelt shall be susceptible of proof to the last degree, and he is unwilling to appear before the people of the Bay State in the role of denunciator until he has ascertained from every possible official and personal source that his statements will be found correct.

According to the Taft management, the president now has 410 delegates, either instructed for him or pledged to vote for him for renomination. He added twelve to his list Tuesday—eight from New Hampshire, two from the First Michigan and two from the Fifth Iowa. Yesterday he gathered the ten delegates from Rhode Island. According to the bureau's figures the president is today within 129 votes of the number required to nominate. He has a lead of a little over 200 over Roosevelt. That he will be able to maintain a relative lead of this strength his managers now confidently assert.

The Roosevelt national campaign committee refused to concede that Taft has as many as 410 delegates which he can count. It has been the policy of the Roosevelt managers to count against the president something like 200 delegates in the south that are contested and most of the uninstructed delegates. It is claimed here, however, the uninstructed delegates are pledged for Taft and are for him, and as to the contests from the southern states, it will be for the national committee to say who is right and who is wrong.

THE GRANITE STATE VOTE

Taft Wins Presidential Preference Primaries by About 3000

Concord, N. H., April 25.—A revision of the figures in Tuesday's Republican primary election for delegates to the state and district convention on April 30 was attempted by both the Taft and Roosevelt campaign managers, but in each political camp they only served to emphasize the victory of the president.

Besides electing 811 delegates to the state convention, 384 to the First district and 427 to the Second district conventions, the Republican voters expressed their presidential preferences, and in this vote the tabulation at the Roosevelt headquarters showed a Taft lead of about 3000 in a total vote of about 30,000.

Governor Bass said that he was not at all discouraged at the result, for he felt that the campaign had consolidated the movement in New Hampshire.

The Taft supporters were jubilant over the victory and said it would have a direct effect upon the Massachusetts primaries next week.

DELEGATES FROM RHODY

Instructed to Support Candidacy of Taft Until Released

Providence, April 25.—Delegates-at-large to the Republican national convention from Rhode Island, chosen at the state convention, were instructed for Mr. Taft. Congressman Utter in accepting the chairmanship, said:

"The Theodore Roosevelt that we stood by two years ago is not the Theodore Roosevelt of today. Knowing the things that we know now, the time has come for the American people to say that while we had an idol we have no idol now."

Resolutions instructing the delegates to support the candidacy of President Taft "as the nominee of the Republican party for president and that such support be steadfast and continued until released," were adopted.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SPAGHETTI RECIPES.

SPAGHETTI is very much like macaroni. It is made of a paste in which glutinous flour is one of the chief ingredients. The paste is forced through the openings in a machine that gives spaghetti the cord like form which distinguishes it from macaroni. Macaroni is always a tube.

Good spaghetti is yellowish in color and rough. It should be brittle when broken. It may be cooked in any of the ways suggested for macaroni. A favorite method of serving it is with tomato sauce.

Softening and Shaping.

Hold the sticks of spaghetti together, letting the ends stand in hot water until they soften and can be bent and coiled around in the pan in which they are to be cooked.

In this way the sticks may be shaped without breaking.

For plain spaghetti, boil for about twenty minutes or until soft. Drain and rinse with cold water. Season and pour tomato sauce over it.

Spaghetti Savories.—Take two ounces of fresh boiled spaghetti, half an ounce of butter, a half cupful of milk, half an ounce of flour, two ounces of grated cheese and seasoning to taste. Melt the butter in a saucepan, stir in the flour smoothly, add the milk and stir this sauce until it boils and thickens.

Next mix in the cheese and seasoning. Heat the mixture and add the spaghetti. Make all very hot and serve in neat heaps on rounds of toast the size of the top of a sherry glass. These should be hot and lightly buttered.

Dust the top of each with a little red Hungarian pepper.

With Eggs and Bacon.

Spaghetti and Eggs.—Cook spaghetti with a cupful of grated cheese, then place in a bowl and let it brown in the oven. Garnish with slices of hard boiled eggs and sprigs of parsley.

Spaghetti and Bacon.—Take a small package of spaghetti and half a dozen slices of bacon. Cut up the bacon and fry until crisp. Put the spaghetti into about two quarts of well salted boiling water, add a half teaspoonful of red pepper and let it boil for twenty minutes. Then drain in a colander and rinse in cold water. Add the bacon and about half a can of tomatoes. Let it boil for about thirty minutes, season and serve.

Spaghetti and Beef.—Take a half package of spaghetti, pour boiling water over it. Then let it cook twenty minutes, drain and drench with cold water. Take a half pound of chopped lean beef, a quart of canned tomatoes, a small bunch of white celery, two sliced onions, a tablespoonful of ground chili pepper, a pinch of cayenne and salt to taste. Cook these together for about three hours then add to the spaghetti and simmer together for ten minutes. Serve hot.

FAVORITE FRUIT MERINGUES.

MERINGUES are mixtures of white of egg and sugar slightly browned in the oven.

The eggs must be beaten to a foam, but should not be stiff. Powdered sugar should be used. It must be added little by little, one tablespoonful to each egg in the meringue.

Pudding, pies or tarts covered with meringue are often called meringues.

Meringue may be served with almost any fruit which you choose to bake.

An Apple Pudding.

Apple Meringue Pudding.—Take a half dozen nice apples. Pare, core and bake.

Make a custard, using a pint of scalded milk, the yolks of three eggs, three tablespoonfuls of sugar and a little salt.

Pour the custard over the baked apples and put into the oven and bake until firm.

Make a meringue of the whites of three eggs, three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and a dash of lemon for flavoring. The eggs must be beaten to a froth, the sugar added little by little and then the lemon, the whole being whipped until stiff.

The meringue should then be dropped on the pudding, the pudding dish set in a moderate oven and the meringue browned.

With Fresh Oranges.

Orange Pudding. — Take a cupful of breadcrumbs, a pint of sweet milk, yolks of two eggs well beaten, the juice of an orange, an ounce of butter and some sugar beaten to a cream. Mix these together, adding the grated rind of an orange. Pour into a buttered pudding dish. Bake until firm.

Now take the whites of the eggs, beaten as required for a meringue, add a little orange juice and sugar. Whisk until stiff and cover the pudding with meringue. Place in the oven until the meringue is set. Garnish with quartered sections of orange.

Canned Fruit Available.

Peach Meringue. — Canned peaches may be used for this. Take about a dozen peaches and press through a colander. Sweeten to taste. Line a pudding dish with puff paste and fill with the peaches. Bake for from twenty to thirty minutes in a quick oven.

Make a meringue with the whites of six eggs and six tablespoonfuls of sugar. Flavor with peach.

Cover the pudding thickly with this meringue and brown in the oven.

NO REASON FOR IT

You are Shown the Way Out.

There can be no just reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders the dangers of serious kidney ills when relief is so near at hand and the most positive proof given that these ills can be cured. The following is convincing proof.

Calvin Porter, 150 Beaulah street, Whitman, Mass., says: "I am sorry that Doan's Kidney Pills did not come to my attention sooner for if they had, I would have been spared a great deal of suffering and expense. I suffered from a weak back for years and there was a constant, dull pain in my loins. I had to pass the kidney secretions too frequently, especially at night. As soon as I began to take Doan's Kidney Pills, I felt better and by the time I finished the contents of four boxes, I was entirely free from my troubles." (Statement given Oct. 6, 1908.)

A CONFIRMED ENDORSEMENT

Mr. Porter was interviewed by our representative on June 27, 1911 and he said: "I am always pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and you are welcome to continue the use of my former statement. I know that this remedy can be relied upon."

Hello Girls' Demands Refused

Boston, April 25.—Notices posted in different offices of the company inform the telephone girls, who have organized themselves into a union, that their demands on the New England Telephone and Telegraph company cannot now be granted. These demands were for more pay and for a revision of the rules of employment.

"And do you know Old Hickory?" cried Mr. Wesley.

"Why not? Does it surprise you?" inquired the judge. It was only his innate courtesy which restrained him from kicking the postmaster into the street, so intense was his desire to be rid of him.

"No, I don't know as it does, judge. Naturally a public man like him is in the way of meeting with all sorts. A politician can't afford to be too blame particular. Well, next time you write you might just send him my regards—G. W. M. de L. Wesley's regards—there was considerable contention over my getting this office; I reckon he ain't forgot. There was speeches made, I understand the lie was passed between two United States senators, and that a quid of tobacco was throwed in anger." Having thus clearly established the fact that he was a more or less national character, Mr. Wesley took himself off.

When he had disappeared from sight down the street, the judge closed the door. Then he picked up the letter. For a long minute he held it in his hand, uncertain, fearful, while his mind slipped back into the past until his inward searching vision ferreted out a handsome soldierly figure—his own.

"That's what Jackson remembers if he remembers anything!" he muttered, as with trembling fingers he broke the seal. Almost instantly a smile overspread his battered features. He hitched his chin higher and squared his ponderous shoulders. "I am not forgotten—no, damn it—no!" he exulted under his breath. "Recalls me with sincere esteem and considers my services to the country as well worthy of recognition—" the judge breathed deep. What would Mahaffy find to say now! Certainly this was well calculated to disturb the scurr cynicism of his friend. His bleared eyes brimmed. After all his groping he had touched hands with the realities at last! Even a federal judgeship, though not an office of first repute in the south, had its dignity—it signified something! He would make Solomon his clerk! The judge reached for his hat. Mahaffy must know at once that fortune had mended for them. Why, at that moment he was actually in receipt of an income!

He sat down, the better to enjoy the unique sensation. Taxes were being levied and collected with no other end in view than his stipend—his ardent fancy saw the whole machinery of government in operation for his benefit. It was a singular feeling he experienced. Then promptly his spendthrift brain became active. He needed clothes—so did Mahaffy—so did his grandson; they must take a larger house; he would buy himself a man servant; these were pressing necessities as he now viewed them.

Once again he reached for his hat; the desire to rush off to Belle Plain was overmastering.

"I reckon I'd be justified in hiring a conveyance from Pegloe," he thought, but just here he had a saving memory of his unfinished task; that claimed precedence and he resumed his pen.

* * * * * *

An hour later Pegloe's black boy presented himself to the judge. He came bearing a gift, and the gift appropriately enough was a square case bottle of respectable size. The judge was greatly touched by this attention, but he began by making a most temperate use of the tavern-keeper's offering; then as the formidable document he was preparing took shape under his hand he more and more lost that feeling of Spartan fortitude which had at first sustained him in the presence of temptation. He wrote and sipped in complete and quiet luxury, and when at last he had exhausted the contents of the bottle it occurred to him that it would be only proper personally to convey his thanks to Pegloe. Perhaps he was not uninspired in this by ulterior hopes; if so, they were richly rewarded. The resources of the City Tavern were suddenly placed at his disposal. He attributed this to a variety of causes all good and sufficient, but the real reason never suggested itself; indeed it was of such a perfidious nature that the judge, open and generous-minded could not have grasped it.

By six o'clock he was undeniably drunk; at eight he was sounding still deeper depths of inebriety, with only the most confused memory of impending events; at ten he collapsed and was borne upstairs by Pegloe and his black boy to a remote chamber in the kitchen wing. Here he was undressed and put to bed, and the tavern-keeper, making a bundle of his clothes, retired from the room, locking the door after him, and the judge was doubly a prisoner.

Rousing at last from a heavy dreamless sleep the judge was aware of a faint impalpable light in his room the ashen light of a dull October dawn. He was aware, too, of a feeling of profound depression. He knew this was the aftermath of indulgence and that he might look forward to forty eight hours of utter misery of soul and, groaning aloud, he closed his eyes. Sleep was the thing if he could compass it. Instead, his memory quickened. Something was to happen at sun-up—he could not recall what it was to be, though he distinctly remembered that Mahaffy had spoken of this very matter—Mahaffy the austere and implacable, the disembodied conscience whose fealty to duty had somehow survived his own spiritual ruin, so that he had become a sort of moral sign-post, ever pointing the way yet never going it himself.

The judge lay still and thought deeply as the light intensified itself. What was it that Mahaffy had said he was to do at sun-up? The very hour accented his suspicions. Probably it was no more than some cheerless obligation to be met, or Mahaffy would not have been so concerned about it. Eventually he decided to refer everything to Mahaffy. He spoke his friend's name weakly and in a shaking voice, but received no answer.

"Solomon!" he repeated, and shifting his position, looked in what should have been the direction of the shakedown bed his friend occupied. Neither the bed nor Mahaffy were there. The judge gasped—he wondered if this were not a premonition of certain hallucinations to which he was not a stranger. Then all in a flash he remembered Fentress and the meeting at Boggs', something of how the evening had been spent, and a spasm of regret shook him.

NORRIS IS ACQUITTED

Members of His Congregation Sing Hymns In the Courtroom

Fort Worth, Tex., April 25.—Rev. Dr. Frank J. Norris was acquitted here of the charge of perjury and the announcement of the verdict brought a demonstration by many of his parishioners in the courtroom. About 100 women joined in singing "The Old-Time Religion." Norris is still under indictment for arson.

Charges against the minister grew out of a series of events cuiminating in the burning of the First Baptist church, of which he was pastor, the preacher's home, and Norris' statement that some one shot at him while he sat in his study. It was charged he wrote threatening letters to himself and that he set fire to his church and home.

HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Tendons In Jack Johnson's Back Are Seriously Wrenched

Pittsburg, April 25.—Jack Johnson was severely injured when a big auto truck crashed into his automobile on a heavy grade here. Johnson and his valet were hurled from their car.

An examination by physicians showed that several tendons in the champion's back had been wrenched. He will probably not be able to start training for his bout with Fireman Flynn for several weeks.

Johnson was enroute to a roadhouse to begin his training when the accident occurred. The valet was injured about the head and back.

HUSBAND KEPT HER BUSY

Milkman's Wife Is Granted Divorce For Cruel Treatment

Cambridge, Mass., April 25.—"The defendant will have to go a long way before he will find a second wife as capable as she," said Judge Crosby in the divorce court in granting a decree nisi to Mrs. Julia H. Pearson, a comely young woman, from her husband, Willis E. Pearson, a milk dealer in Waltham, on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

Mrs. Pearson, who is 27 years of age and the mother of four children, declared that she had to do all the housework, take care of the four children, attend to their sewing and mending, clean out the pigpen, feed the pigs, feed and water the horses and cows, clean out the barn, wash and clean the buggy, and get out of bed late at night and help her husband load the milk wagons for delivery.

SIZZLERS

Can you forget those early days of last July, when the mercury boiled up almost through the end of the tube?

Those days when everything dried up and it was so hot you couldn't work days nor sleep nights. And you envied the fellow who had the place at the beach, where, after getting home at night, tired and hot, he could plunge into the good old ocean and cool his burning body.

The weather is cool now, but those days are coming again.

BACK BROKEN BY HORSE KICK

Rafaelle Riccarcalli, of 86 Canal street, was seriously injured this morning at about 11.30 o'clock, at Houghs Neck, as a result of being kicked by a horse. He was removed to the City Hospital in an ambulance and it is feared that he has sustained a broken back, in addition to multiple injuries.

Riccarcalli is engaged as a general workman for Louis Jacobs who resides on Babcock street during the summer season. The injured man just finished a job and was about to give the horse a pail of water. Instead of taking the water, the animal started to kick the man with its front feet.

Riccarcalli was soon under the horse's feet. The horse finally kicked the man out of the stall. Riccarcalli was picked up in a semi-conscious condition by a fellow workman. Dr. William H. Ferris was summoned and ordered the removal of the injured man to the hospital.

The police auto was quickly despatched. It was driven by Officer James Whelan who was accompanied by Officer Henry Thorne. The auto arrived at the hospital about noon.

TO ARRANGE THE BASE BALL DATES

The Park Commissioners are to hold a meeting next week with the representatives of the several base ball teams and arrange for the use of the diamond at Merrymount park the coming season. As there are a number of these teams and it is desired to avoid confusion in dates the Commissioners will arrange the dates so that all teams will be equally well taken care of. It is thought that the meeting will be held in the Council Chamber at City Hall, Monday evening.

SEVERELY INJURED.

While in the act of making ice cream shortly after eight o'clock Wednesday evening, Lorenzo Caravaglio, of 191 Willard street, proprietor of the Puritan Spring Bottling Company, had his hand caught in one of the gears of the machine, with the result that he lost one finger and badly crushed three others. Only for his wonderful presence of mind, which prompted him to shut off the machine, his arm might have been torn from its socket.

The injured man suffered terribly from the effects of the accident. A workman, who happened to be near Mr. Caravaglio at the time, realized the predicament of the latter, lost no time in summoning Dr. Thomas J. Dion, who administered treatment.

Trouble

It was evident that the young man was worried. Indeed, it was so evident that Loretta could not well ignore the fact. So after a few commonplaces she asked him what was the matter.

"It isn't often that my friends are so evidently thinking of something else when I try my best to be entertaining," she said. "You have something on your mind and it might be a good idea to tell me about it."

"I don't see how you guessed it," returned the young man. "But the truth is that I am just about as worried as anybody can be. I don't see how the thing can come out right."

"It may not be as bad as it seems," Loretta told him, comfortingly. "Girls overlook a good deal. Besides, a girl who takes the trouble to get angry at you is not often perfectly indifferent."

"You're right again—it is a girl," the young man said, sheepishly. "If you had told me a few weeks ago that I'd ever be so silly as to worry over such a thing I'd have said you were away off the track."

"One never can tell," declared Loretta sagely. "Go on."

"You see," the young man began, "we live in a neighborhood that is half city and half country and not quite select enough to be fashionable. It's just as nice as it can be and we certainly enjoy our garden and our porch to beat the band. My mother almost lives out of doors. Well, there was a house built next door with a fine chicken yard and by and by the people moved in."

"It's a way people have of doing," murmured Loretta.

"There was a man and his wife and after a while a girl came home from college, having been graduated with honors. Gee, she's as smart as a whip! And, honest, it doesn't keep her from being pretty, either."

"I am really surprised," said Loretta.

"Well, somehow we got to be good friends," the young man went on, dolefully. "Too good friends for my comfort, it seems. Anyhow, I got interested in her chickens—which are really fine ones, you know, not the common kind at all. I could understand how proud she was of them. She was fond of any kind of pets and she had a cat that was a dream. It had a long, plumed tail and had taken a prize at every cat show for several years. She positively worshipped that cat.

"After a while mother's vegetables came up and a lot of flowers, for she's a master hand at growing things. Then, just as ill luck would have it, something came and dug up her growing things. It certainly was the limit. Mother got so discouraged that she almost cried. I declared that I'd kill the creature that did it on sight, whatever it was."

"Reckless!"

"Well, I never thought of the chickens," he proceeded, "till I found Lida Flanders kind of chilly toward me. I asked her over the fence one morning what the trouble was and she said very pointedly that her most valuable chickens were disappearing at the rate of one a night."

"Why didn't you tell her that you didn't know anything about her chickens?"

"Tell her!" repeated the young man. "As if I didn't tell her! If I said it once I said it a thousand times. But do you think she would believe me with that chicken's head lying at my feet? Not much! And you wouldn't have either, not after my silly threat to kill watever it was that tore up mother's garden."

"What did you do about it after that?"

"At first I didn't think there was a thing I could do," he sighed. "Lida wouldn't let me come near enough to speak to her. It made me wild to see her smiling at everybody else."

"I wouldn't have given her a second thought since she was so unjust."

"Oh, yes, you would," the young man assured her. "It would have been all very well to talk like that in the spring, but it was too late for me to quit thinking of her then. Why, I lay awake nights trying to fix it up and it was not until last week that I had an idea.

"It was the very day she bowed to me as she was going out with young Saunders. You know, he squints or something. Well, bowing to me was more than she had done for so long that I sort of took heart and sharpened my wits. I had been so downhearted that I hadn't really tried before.

"As a result of that inspiration I made the finest trap you ever saw—neat, too, by Jove! It was sort of original, because I had to fit it against the side of the chicken house and make it large enough to squeeze a man's arm as well as kill a rat.

"I had it there two nights before it caught a thing and then when I went to look at it before going down to the office I found it had worked. There was a cat in it caught just as securely as you please and dead as a doornail."

"Oh, how splendid!" Loretta cried. "That surely will please your fair neighbor."

The young man looked at her sorrowfully. "Do you think so?" he asked. "You see, it was her cat!"—Chicago Daily News.

TODAY'S RALLIES

About seventy-five men and two women were in attendance at the Roosevelt rally in Alpha hall Thursday evening. Today noon-day meetings will be held in Wollaston and at the Fore River.

TO BEAUTIFY WEST QUINCY

Improvement Asso. Discusses Some of Ward's Needs

MANY PRESENT

A lively session was held by the Ward 4 Improvement society Thursday evening in St. Jean's hall. The president, Stephen B. Little, was in the chair and the development and welfare of the west section of the city was discussed. An invitation was extended William H. Teasdale, chairman of the Board of Health, to give a talk May 9, on the "Duties of the Board of Health Department."

The matter of co-operating in a movement to have buildings, tenements and stores erected and vacant lots made use of, consumed much time occasioning animated debate. The needs of the district were laid down forcibly. Overseer of the Poor, James H. Elcock said there were not half enough stores in West Quincy.

A vote was taken on the matter of a five cent fare from Quincy to Milton Lower Mills, where a number of West Quincy people are employed,and indicated that those present thought the railroad officials should grant the request. This discussion concerned two cars, the one in the morning and the other carrying them home in the evening.

It was voted that May first be set aside as general clean-up day. It was also voted to call it to the attention of the principals of the schools in the district, in order that the school children might help in fostering sanitary conditions. It was urged that plants and flowers be set out on that day, in order to beautify the trict.

It was announced that Seigel & Co., of Boston were giving trees away to those who asked for them and it was thought that as many West Quincy residents as possible should avail themselves of this opportunity.

The gathering dispersed shortly after ten o'clock, after one of the most enjoyable and interesting meetings in the history of the society.

REBEKAHS' WHIST PARTY.

At the whist party held by George L. Gill Rebekah Lodge, Thursday evening in I. O. O. F. hall under the management of Miss M. Lizzie Furnald, assisted by Mrs. Lottie C. Barron and Mrs. Sadie Wood, several tables were in play and a general good time was had by all. Souvenirs were received by W. F. Carmen, Mrs. W. F. Carmen, C. F. Harlow, Mrs. Sarah C. Williams, Robert Wood and a consolation was given to Mrs. Mary F. Jones.

MURRAY CLUB WERE IN CHARGE

Supper, Sale and Entertainment at Universalist Church

THE PROGRAM

Over 125 people enjoyed the supper and entertainment held Thursday evening in the vestry of the First Universalist church. The supper, which was given under the direction of a committee composed of Lester Sprague and Bartlett Spooner consisted of cold meats, beans, pickles, fancy pies, rolls, cake and coffee.

A number of young men connected with the church acted in the capacity of waiters, attired in regular servant's regalia. The music for the occasion was furnished by the Quincy High school orchestra, composed of Elton Chase, William Roache and Clarence Lundin.

After the supper an enjoyable entertainment was in order, arranged by the committee, consisting of E. C. Andrews, J. Irving Hyland, and E. Sprague.

A violin solo by Miss Marion White, accompanied on the piano by her mother, was received with great appreciation. George Gragg assisted by Edward Adams and Elmer Sprague, presented "Uncle John's Visit to New York" and suffice it to say that their remarkable production kept the audience in a state of continual mirth and laughter.

A four-act sketch furnished by Lester Sprague and Bartlett Spooner, was the occasion for great applause and proved a decided hit. Mr. Sprague impersonated an old maid in typical style while Mr. Spooner proved an able partner in the role of a manly wooer.

The various booths furnished attraction for the remainder of the evening and the entire affair met with great success. The Murray club was in charge of the May basket booth. These young ladies included Harriet Lombard, Mildred Smith, Edith Hyland, Marion Wright, Anna Wright, Bessie Grant, Catherine Reed and Elizabeth Reed. The same club was also in charge of the ice cream, candy and cake booths. The event was pronounced the best of its kind ever held under the auspices of the church.

"TIS A PIG NOT A BEAR"

"See that crowd of people over there,
What can it be that's givi'n them a scare,
It's a pig, it's a pig and not a bear."

Yes it was nothing more than a little pig, whose mysterious advent to the vicinity of the Auditorium about nine o'clock last evening, caused great confusion among the hundreds of people who were just coming from the house of amusement. Nothing in the show indicated that the little four footed animal was to cause excitement outdoors, but such was really the case for the little pig was the centre of attraction for fully fifteen minutes, before taken into captivity.

Three young men, Arthur Bavin, Thomas Mullaney and Joseph Kenley, evidently enflamed by the remembrance of the motion pictures, which showed cowboys in the art of capturing animals in the wild west, took it upon themselves to take into custody the little species of the genus Sus, but before their endeavors had been crowned with success, a most amusing drawing card had been furnished.

The pig would first be seen to dart one direction, then in another in an effort to thwart the movements of the onrushing capturers. Kenley had the pig once in his clutches, only to see it emerge from his hands and start anew on another pace.

For a time it seemed as if the pig was greased and the affair had a tendency to resemble a greasy pig contest. But no, the undaunted Mullaney seems to have the pig in his possession. But such possession continues but a short time and the pig has now released itself to furnish the third and last act of this impromptu entertainment. The three men gathered together and set out to catch their prey in earnest. Hardly had the third attempt been started, when the pig sucedded in tripping Bavin, only to find itself held down by the weight of the latter. Bavin managed to keep the pig in captivity and still has it under his care.

Climax—The place from which the pig made its entrance is unknown, the owner of the pig is still unknown but it is definitely known that any one who claims ownership to it may present his case to Arthur Bavin, of 38 Elm street where the pig is now in recluses. The consensus of opinion seemed to be that the pig fell out of one of the market teams coming from one of the neighboring towns.

—An estimate of what Dr. Wiley is worth for advertising purposes is seen in a department store manager's offer of $12,000 to serve as pure food expert for his enterprises. Undoubtedly a perfectly competent man for the actual work could be had for a quarter of the money.—New Bedford Standard.

FANCY VEAL — "It's as fine a piece of veal as I ever ate." That's what one woman said concerning a leg of veal bought at our store last Saturday. Tender, sweet veal at low cost of living prices.

Foy's Hams are in a little class by themselves. They're always good. They always please. They are not oversalted nor overcured, because they are prepared for the local market and do not need it. HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The Arizona Senate has defeated woman suffrage. Perhaps the muffins were soggy that morning.

The Kansas City Star says Massachusetts is the "crux of the political situation." O shux!

Harriet Quimby has flown over the English channel, but for all that she may be afraid of a mouse.

It is reported that although the college teams are playing ball, a few belated lectures are still being given in the class rooms.

We verily believe if the ministers would go on strike they could get their average salary raised to $300, rent of a three-room apartment, and three pairs of slippers per year.

These are times when the presidential candidate who merely says "you are not absolutely accurate" to his opponents will never kick many hats out of the ring.

It is of course too much to ask citizens to vote at the caucuses but if they have a spark of patriotism in their breasts they will bepresent at the ball games.

People leave the city to escape the smoke nuisance, and when they get out into the country they complain of tramps, but they might as well die by the sword as by the pestilence.

When our neighbor starts out in his automobile at 7 a. m. Sunday, we assume of course that he must be attending church 50 miles away and we applaud his piety.

AMERICAN JOURNALISM.

Notwithsanding all the faults of our newspapers, there is one thing that can be said in behalf of American journalism. It stands for unselfish work for community betterment.

It is manifestly suicidal when a newspaper permits personal spites to govern its policy. Hence a conviction and tradition has grown up in the newspaper fraternity, that considerations of public welfare alone must govern newspaper policy, according to the best intelligence of the editor.

Who can measure the good accomplished by the American newspaper as a righter of wrongs, as a proclaimer of hidden evils, as a persuader in campaigns of public enterprise,and business advancement?

Wherever a road needs to be improved, wherever a charitable or religious society needs help, wherever a scamp is to be ousted from office, the public instinctively turns to the newspaper for help. Here and there a newspaper shows the yellow streak and fails to assist, but is it often?

In view of these services, there is a growing recognition of the honorable character of journalism as a profession a growing disposition to co-operate with the newspaper by helping it obtain all legitimate news and a growing tendency to extend adequate financial support through subscriptions and advertising.

—A retail dealer in Providence says one reason for the high cost of living is because so many ordinary citizens have cut out the pot roast and insist on porterhouse steaks. In a tour of Brockton restaurants says the Brockton Enterprise we have ourselves struck with that same fact—everybody eating porterhouse steaks, pate de foie gras, strawberries and Nesselrode pudding for breakfast, lunch and dinner.

IGNORED CALLS OF THE TITANIC

Charges Against the Steamers Mount Temple and California

CAPTAINS ENTER A DENIAL

Each Said to Have Been Close to Sinking Ship and When Distress Signals Were Sent Out—Charges and Counter-Charges Heap Themselves In Confused Mass Before Senate Investigating Committee—Marconi Gave Wireless Operators Permission to Sell Stories, but Denies Suppression of News

Washington, April 26.—The senate committee inquiring into the Titanic disaster will attempt to unravel the tangled web of evidence surrounding the location of the Canadian Pacific steamer Mount Temple and of the liner Californian, concerning which statements have been made declaring that each was the unknown steamer which, though within five miles of the sinking Titanic, failed to heed the most urgent calls of the sea, the wireless "C. Q. D." and the red and blue flare of distress rockets.

Charges and counter-charges have heaped themselves in a confused mass. Several passengers and part of the crew of the Mount Temple tell of witnessing the sinking of the great liner, but the captain, J. H. Moore, declares his craft was more than fifty miles distant and that such statements as his ignoring the distress call are absurd.

The Californian's captain, Stanley Lord, now in Boston, declares he was lying almost as far away, with his engines shut down, waiting for dawn before attempting to navigate among the ice fields. Among his sailors is one that declares the captain received, but ignored, the calls.

Captain Moore of the Mount Temple, Captain Lord of the Californian and Wireless Operator Evans of the latter liner will appear before the committee here, when it is expected some of the passengers of the Mount Temple will attend, and depositions taken by order of the acting premier of Canada will be read from sailors and firemen of the Mount Temple's crew.

Captain Lord of the Californian has been ordered to bring with him his ship's log, to decide where he was and at what time his craft gave to the Titanic its first ice warning.

William Marconi, the wireless inventor, was on the witness stand, having come over from New York at Senator Smith's request.

That Bride and Cottam, the two wireless operators who sold the stories of the Titanic disaster, did so with the full permission of Marconi and that Marconi did not, by giving this permission, suppress any general news of the collision and the subsequent rescue of the survivors, were the two salient points brought out by the close questioning of Marconi. It was also disclosed that the business arrangements for the wireless men did not actually result in keeping the public in the dark.

All that the wireless men were allowed to do was to sell the personal stories when they reached land, for disclosing any information contained in messages sent by the officers of the ship or by passengers the operators were, by the rules of the company, forbidden. They kept, according to Marconi's testimony, strictly to the law. Over these points Smith and Marconi wrangled for nearly an hour.

In summing up the evidence at the close of argument Smith's tone was apologetic to the Italian inventor. "I am not seeking to impute to you any motive that is unworthy," said Senator Smith. "The telegram signed Salmis was the justification for my suspicions." Marconi briefly thanked the senator for what he said.

SEA STREWN WITH BODIES

Victims on Cable Ship Now Number Two Hundred and Five

New York, April 26.—Two hundred and five bodies of the victims of the Titanic disaster have been picked up at sea by the cable steamer Mackay-Bennett. The captain of the Mackay-Bennett confirms the identification of George D. Widener, son of P. A. B. Widener of Philadelphia, in a wireless dispatch to the White Star line and gives the further information that the majority of the bodies will never come to the surface of the sea.

Captain Lardner does not indicate when he will reach Halifax. Bodies are floating upon the sea many miles east and west in latitude 41.35 north and longitude 48.37 west, says the wireless.

AFFIDAVIT OF DONKEYMAN

Says Captain of Californian Refused to Risk His Ship

Boston, April 26.—The American says: The Californian of the Leyland line was the ship which was sighted by the Titanic, but which refused to respond to her signals of distress. Captain Lord of the Californian thought it was some small vessel and refused to risk his ship by sending her through the ice at night to the rescue.

These charges are made in affidavits by Ernest Gill, second donkeyman on board, who is on his way to Washington to testify before the senate investigating committee. They were repeated in the presence of four members of the crew and a notary public, and by an officer of the ship, who affirmed them in a confidential communication to the Boston American.

Captain Lord is alleged to have forced the second officer, Mr. Stone, to sign a statement in which he denied having seen any signals of distress. He is also charged with having persuaded the quartermaster on duty between midnight and 4 a. m. Monday, April 15, to deny having seen signals.

EVEN OFFICERS WEEP

Steamship Passes Bodies and Wreckage From the Titanic

New York, April 26.—In latitude 41.46 north and longitude 50.14 west nineteen huge icebergs are slowly drifting like silent sentinels among the floating bodies and wreckage of the sunken Titanic.

The grewsome sight was witnessed by passengers on the steamer Bremen at dusk last Sunday. Some of the women fainted when they saw body after body floating on the waters. As the body of a woman with a baby frozen tightly to her breast was brought to view on the crest of a wave a girl passenger swooned and was confined to her cabin for the rest of the trip.

Captain Wilhelm, stout-hearted skipper that he is, sickened as his vessel continued its course at reduced speed through the ocean field of death. The officers also turned their heads away and brushed their eyes with the back of their hands. The flag of the German empire was hauled down to halfmast and without orders the band ceased to play. Every one on board attended divine service in the evening.

HAYS' MEMORY HONORED

Fifty Thousand Grand Trunk Employes Cease Work For a Time

Montreal, April 26.—When 50,000 employes of the Grand Trunk Railway and Steamship system ceased work from 11:30 to 11:35 in silent tribute to the late Charles M. Hays, the deceased president of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific railways, who went down with the Titanic, the great systems sacrificed a total of 250,000 minutes, or 4166 hours. In the impressive tribute 1525 miles were laid aside by the railway's system and 24,000 horsepower os its steamship lines temporarily suspended.

There were approximately 240 passenger and 370 freight trains on the Grand Trunk railway extending from Portland, Me., to Chicago, and including various branch lines. There was an average of 150 passengers to a train, which totals approximately 36,000 people. The propellers of six steamers also stopped.

Never before since the first engine ran over the Grand Trunk rails has there been a time, night or day, when every wheel was simultaneously silent. In the railroad shops here 8000 employes stood silent with heads bared.

FALLS FROM APPLE TREE

Member of New Hampshire Legislature Instantly Killed

Nashua, N. H., April 26.—George F. Shedd, aged 73, chairman of the Nashua delegation of the New Hampshire legislature, fell twenty feet from an apple tree in his yard, breaking his neck and dying instantly. He was for forty-five years an overseer in cotton mills in Nashua, and in Georgia and South Carolina.

His wife stood within twenty feet of where he fell, she having just thrown him a rope with which he was working trimming the tree.

THE LINE-UP

This is a straight line-up. On the one side are those who are fighting for justice and decency to be achieved through genuine popular rule and who believe that the American people can rule themselves much better than any one else can rule them.

On the other side are the well-meaning persons who distrust the power of the people to rule, and the by no means well-meaning people, the bosses and the big crooked financiers, who heartily agree with the theoretical doctrine thus advanced and who translate it into the very practical form of substituting for the rule of the people in primary and in legislative body alike the rule of special interests, which finds expression in the combination between crooked politics and the crooked business that has favors to ask from crooked politicians.

Friends, this is no small contest. This is as great a contest for principle as has been waged since the close of the Civil War. It goes right down to the heart of things in this republic. This republic cannot permanently endure if conducted along the lines that our opponents are seeking to conduct it.

We fight for the principles for which Abraham Lincoln stood, and we apply them to the special needs of our time. We fight for truth as against a sham; we fight for honesty as against trickery; we fight for the plain people against the bosses. We fight for the great cause of industrial and social justice, achieved through the free rule of American people.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Republicans of Massachusetts

ON Tuesday next, FOR THE FIRST TIME IN YOUR LIFE, you will have a voice in the selection of your candidate for President of the United States.

For the first time in the history of the State THE VOICE OF THE PARTY BOSS WILL BE NO MORE POWERFUL THAN YOUR VOICE.

That voice was given you through the inspired leadership and influence of Theodore Roosevelt.

The primary law had to be DRAGGED FROM THE TAFT-CRANE MACHINE in the Legislature by those who took their stand beneath the Roosevelt banner.

It was fought in every stage with the bitterness of desperation.

WHY ?

Because Senator Crane felt that HIS candidate was strong with the people? Because he felt that HIS candidate was so strongly identified with the people's interests that everybody favored his renomination?

Was that why the Taft-Crane machine fought the presidential primary?

Or was the primary opposed by Senator Crane because HE KNEW HIS candidate was NOT the choice of the people?

Because he knew that if the people were given an opportunity to express their will they would NOT favor Mr. Taft?

Just as Lorimer knew he could NOT "deliver" Illinois if the people voted, just as Penrose knew he could NOT "deliver" Pennsylvania if the people voted, so Crane knew HE COULD NOT "DELIVER" MASSACHUSETTS if the people voted!

The struggle over the primary bill typified the only issue of this campaign—SHALL THE BOSSES OR THE PEOPLE RULE?

Mr. Taft has taken his stand with the bosses. He has made his own choice. No one forced him.

Mr. Roosevelt, too, has made his own choice. HE stands with the people and for the rule of the people.

WHERE DO YOU STAND ?

Go to the polls on Tuesday and VOTE YOUR ANSWER.

That is both your right and your duty.

Whether you stand with Taft and the bosses or with Roosevelt and the people, you cannot afford to remain neutral in this contest.

The DUTY of every patriotic citizen is to VOTE. DON'T SHIRK.

Those who fought under Roosevelt's flag to win victories for the people during the glorious term of his presidency NEVER HAD TO BEG HIM FOR SUPPORT.

He led them in the fight. He encouraged them, inspired them, cheered them in every charge.

WHERE THEY STRUCK ONE BLOW FOR HIM, HE STRUCK TEN BLOWS FOR THEM.

Roosevelt has given the best years of his life in the service of the people. The least YOU can do is to give ten minutes of YOUR time to aid him in his work.

Remember, every man whose name is on the voting list is entitled to vote. YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE ENROLLED.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

Not for many years has a play caused more widespread discussion than "Alias Jimmy Valentine," Paul Armstrong's great play which begins the fourth week of its engagement at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston, next Monday night. Moreover H. B. Warner, the star of the play, who appears in the title role, adds to the play's wonderful success by his remarkable interpretation of the reformed bank robber. The story of the play is fascinating as well as interesting and throughout the entire production as an undercurrent runs a delicate and absorbing love story. "Alias Jimmy Valentine" is just one of those plays that appeals to all classes. It grips your attention from the rise of the curtain and gradually increases it as the play progresses and only relieves the suspense in the final act, the the most thrilling scene of the play, when Jimmy, in an effort to save his sweetheart's little sister from suffocation, opens a bank vault by the sense of his finger touch. This last scene is unquestionably one of the most realistic ever staged. It is a thriller of the most approved pattern, and is watched with almost painful interest through the few tense moments, with a happy finale to relieve the anxious spectators.

ABORN OPERA COMPANY.

Massenet's famous opera, "Thais," which was given its first American performance in English by the Aborn English Grand Opera Company at the Boston Opera House last spring, will be presented again by that popular organization as the offering for its fourth week, beginning next Monday night. "Thais" has been one of the greatest operatic sensations of recent years in both Europe and America, and its first presentation in this country in French by Hammerstein's company at the Manhattan Opera House, New York, was one of the foremost successes of that company's entire four seasons. The original novel of "Thais," by Anatole France, which formed the basis of the libretto of this famous opera, has furnished the plot of a successful play of the same name. The heroine is the historic courtesan, Thais, of Alexandria, who is converted and redeemed by a cenobite monk from the desert.

The Aborn forces at the Boston Opera House, as usual, will undergo a change of leading artists in its double cast, another notable array of artists coming from other cities to replace those appearing during the present week. Lulta Helena, who appeared in the title role of "Thais" last season, returns to divide the eight performances of the week in the title role with Johanna Kristoffy. Two baritones, Morton Adkins and Joseph Royer, who have won favor with the Aborn forces in other cities, will make their first appearance at the Boston Opera House, sharing the performances as Athanael.

BOSTON THEATRE.

Everybody is interested in the announcement that the famous Julian Eltinge, the one and only actor on the American stage who has dignified the impersonation of beautiful women by artistic methods, is to return to the Boston Theatre as the star of "The Fascinating Widow," for a limited engagement beginning April 29.

Many theatregoers will remember Julian Eltinge when he was seen at the same theatre here last season in the same piece in which the popular actor plays both the leading man and the leading woman in the characters of Hal Blake, a college boy, and Mrs. Monte, the "fascinating widow."

This season the production is new in every detail. There are many new and catchy songs, numerous new dancing features, and the musical score has been enlivened and brightened throughout. Special interest will be aroused by Julian Eltinge's Parisian wardrobe of marvelous new gowns, to secure which the actor made a special trip to Paris last summer.

The story of "The Fascinating Widow" is decidedly funny. It is full of amusing situations, laughable complications and uproarious climaxes, and concerns the pranks of a college man who is handsome enough to be able to disguise himself as a beautiful woman and win a rival away from a girl with whom the practical joker is himself in love. The deceit is practiced even to the altar, where Julian Eltinge as the exquisitely gowned "bride" is seen surrounded by eight lovely bridesmaids. Then comes the revelation and consternation. The imposter pulls off his crown of lustrous hair and confronts the false bridegroom, after which he disappears, returning to the stage two minutes later in masculine evening attire, prepared to marry the girl himself.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Something decidedly new and original in the way of farce comedy is promised for B. F. Keith's Theatre this week. Hazel Weston and company will present one of the funniest and most pretentious travesties ever staged in vaudeville or anywhere else, for that matter. This piece is a take-off on the old time melodrama, such as "No Mother to Guide Her," "Bertha, The Sewing Machine Girl," and the like, and is called "More Sinned Against Than Usual." The author, Everett Shinn, terms his offering "a laughing freak in four scenes." The characters are an old farmer, his wife, two sons, a sheriff, a villian, and his accomplice, and a very much mis-judged young woman. Between each act the county sheriff sings a funny song, illustrated by pictures, each of which is a big laugh getter. "More Sinner Against Than Usual" is described by those who have seen it as one long continued riot of laughter. Surrounding this elaborate offering will be a splendid vaudeville bill, headed by B. A. Rolfe, the famous cornet virtuoso, and his "Rolfonians." This is the largest and finest of the many companies of musicians Mr. Rolfe has given vaudeville, and will offer a splendid programme of popular selections. Other big features will be the Three Leightons, in "A One Night Stand In Minstrelsy," Howard and Lawrence, Norman and Toomey, Rosaire and Doretto, the Two Jolly Tars; and Wartenburg Brothers, the double footed jugglers.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The Prince Chap" is a play that is designed to appeal to theatre-goers of all ages. Its author is Edward Peple, who also wrote "The Spitfire" and "The Littlest Rebel," and in it he has brought out the spirit of childhood in all its simplicity. Its plot is delightfully simple and continuously entertaining. A little girl five years of age is left in the care of a young American artist who is struggling in London to make his way towards fame and fortune. She is the daughter of a respectable woman who has been his model, and who has died begging him to protect her child. This he does, taking her into his own home, and acting the father to her. The years pass, until in the last act she is a woman of eighteen, and the love between adopted child and adopted father becomes a stronger passion. They are romantically happy, become husband and wife, and the play ends amid general scenes of rejoicing.

The strongest quality of "The Prince Chap" lies in its humanity. Its pathos rings true, and its humor is ever present. The cast at the Castle Square next week will be of unusual excellence, Mr. Craig taking the part of the young artist who finally succeeds in love and art. The child in the first act will be acted by Miss Henrietta McDannel of "End of the Bridge" fame, and Mary Young will represent her during the rest of the play. The run of "The Prince Chap" on the Castle Square stage will be for only one week.

ODYSSEY PICTURES.

Homer's Odyssey has come, has seen, and has conquered Boston. As performed in the latest motion pictures it has apparently reached the Tremont Temple to stay. The third week begins Monday, and there it may be witnessed twice a day at 2.30 and 8.15. To write indefinitely of these pictures would be to say too much. They are the very latest thing, perfect in production and in action. They represent real people, real things and real scenery, and they tell the entire tale of the adventures of Ulysses of Ithaca on his way to and from the siege of Troy. They are genuinely dramatic, and they are of especial interest to teachers and pupils who are reading or who have read the great epic poem of the Odyssey. Secure seats early at the Tremont Temple box office.

DEGREE STAFF WERE GUESTS

The last meeting of Wollaston Lodge, 174 American Benefit society was a gala night for that society. The degree staff of Loyal lodge, Brockton were guests of the evening. The initiatory degree was performed by them on three candidates in a most commendable amnner and received the hearty applause it deserved.

The paraphranilla worn by the staff made up of the colors of our country's flag which are also the colors of the society added greatly to the effectiveness of the scene. The floor work was thorough and showed careful training on the part of Brother John Dana Snow, the degree master. Wollaston Lodge is growing in members and it is the aim of the members to make it one of the leading social societies of Wollaston, being a fraternal as well as a beneficial order. many pleasant evenings are thus passed. Refreshments closed a most enjoyable evening.

ROOSEVELT EXTOLLED

the first speaker. In opening he said that he had served in the United States secret service. No man loves an ingrate. What the people want is a man who will carry out their policies. He then went on to enumerate the many positions in public life that had been held by Roosevelt in all of which he had made good. He is a man who gets oud and does things. He is the greatest Simon pure Democrat that stands today.

Senator Charles H. Brown of Medford spoke for nearly three-fourth of an hour hammering home his arguments why Taft should be turned down and Roosevelt nominated. We are now, said the speaker having one of the greatest campaigns ever waged in this country. It has reached a point where all parties are laid on the table and the people are rising up to say what they want. He said Taft was speaking in Boston tonight not to repudiate himself but to save the machine. This is a campaign of men and measures. You have two candidates. The time has come when we must stop shackling the honest and dishonest. It is the consumer that pays the bill always. The Republican platform at Chicago said that the Sherman act was not meeting the trusts. We must realize that the centralization of business is here to stay but we must give some one in the government the power to control.

The small business man must be protected and the large business must not be retarded, but must be controlled. We are at a point where we realize if anything is going to be accomplished we have got to have the right man at the helm. Taft has surrounded himself with men who are not what they ought to be. We want a fearless fighter who never met defeat. The men who today hope to carry Taft through are the very men, with one exception, who opposed him four years ago. Taft was the candidate of President Roosevelt. He was in touch with the policies of the administration in regard to the control of the monoplies. Roosevelt went to Africa, that it might not be said that he hampered the President. He came back and found men intrusted, not in sympathy with his policies, but the men who today are going down to defeat in every state.

The visit of the eight Governors and representatives of 28 states to Oyster Bay was to demand that Roosevelt should lead, what is the greatest fight in the history of the union. His reply was, "If you put it that way. That I am sulking in my camp and afraid to do it, I will do it." That is the man who is going to carry Massachusetts next Tuesday.

For the first time you have the privilege of going to the polls and voting for the man you want for your President.

Rev. Dr. George L. Cady of Dorchester said that the great struggle today was the struggle of the people against the special privileges of the few. There was never a page in American history as important as this struggle against the special privilege. A struggle where few have advantages which the people do not possess. Today we are the kings of finance. In this great struggle never has there been a man of the common people like Theodore Roosevelt.

He never betrayed the interests of the people. He has made mistakes, but they were on the side of the interests and not the monopolies. The man who has not made mistakes is the man today who is keping books for him who does make mistakes. The speaker said that he would admit that Roosevelt played to the grand stand at times, but he never played in the grand stand. He was down in the field playing the game.

He then enumerated some of the many things Roosevelt had done, such as settling the coal strike, enforcing the law in New York, the round robin written in Cuba, etc., after each of which it had been said "He is dead." When he put his hat in the ring, people said "He is absolutely dead." There has never been a man so many times killed and laid on the shelf as Roosevelt.

Taft is an honest and innocent man, so far as we know, but he does not know men and the interests of the mon people. Any man who leads the people today must know your feelings and know the interest of the common people. Taft carried out the Republican policies, but on a stretcher. The speaker then scored Taft for placing McKinley to head the National committee, for he was hand and glove with the notorious traction interests of Illinois. He also flayed Senator Crane for voting to seat Senator Lorimer.

The last speaker was Edward J. Slattery who said that if Taft was elected there would be no hope for the poor people. He then referred to Roosevelt, who when but 23 years of age refused to accept a legacy of $100,000, as he knew it was the wish of his uncle that it should go to found a hospital. He then spoke of Roosevelt's seven years as President and the administration he gave to the people and the measures he put on the statute books for the benefit of the people. He recognized Taft as the man who should succeed him. Every leading man in the country today, who is with Taft, was lined up against him then, because he represented the progressive measures of Theodore Roosevelt. The result of his administration has been that the Republican party is shattered.

The man who tells you that you are not intelligent enough to vote for the man you want for United States Senator insults your very intelligence. The speaker then told of some of the measures given the people by Roosevelt and how they had been nullified by measures enacted under Taft. People today must rise up and demand control of the industries that effect our daily lives. We must have restricting laws to govern the railroads, flour mills, etc. In closing he said that if Taft was elected there was no hope for the workingman but to study the principles of socialism and revolution.

ALL DAY SESSION

tiring president, presided and spoke a few words of appreciation for the kind and able assistance she had received during her term of office and knew the same would be extended to her successor, Mrs. Keyes. A rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. Smith.

E. Ethelred Brown gave an address, subject, "Jamaica, Our prospective mission field; the place, the people and our opportunity." Mr. Brown said in part: "Jamaica, as you all know, is an island, four thousand square miles area, and about 740,000 population. It has every variety of climate and a glorious range of scenery. From its easy communication with the United States, it is a favorite winter resort for many Americans. Jamaica is under the rule of England. Kingston the capital city is noted for its innate love of cleanliness, and has improved wonderfully within a few years. There is doubtless a great future for Jamaica lying as it does right in the direct route of steamers between the Isthmus and all Atlantic ports of the United States. The United States buys 60 per cent of her sugar, bananas, etc., from Jamaica.

"The recent earthquake, paralyzed the people of Jamaica, but they are beginning to recover from the disaster, and it is admitted generally that conditions will continue to improve with the completion of the Panama canal.

"There are one thousand public and private schools in Jamaica, a few preparatory colleges and many churches. The schools are doing a good work in advancing and uplifting the people. The church of England predominates.

"Do things happen by chance? In 1908, I decided to become a minister and became a Unitarian minister. I wrote a letter directed to 'any Unitarian minister in New York.' I got a reply, and found good friends who have helped me. In January 1909 we started a society in a hall, some sympathized with me, some otherwise. We met with a great deal of opposition, but today we have a good society and the Sunday school is flourishing. There was need for the work I have undertaken. We need a church. The people are prejudiced against worshipping in a hall and prejudiced against a layman. After my course in Meadville, Penn., that objection will be removed for I shall return a minister. One man who had not been to church for thirty-five years, comes regularly every Sunday; rain or shine, he is in his place.

"We must have a church as soon as possible. I appeal to you to help us plant a Unitarian church in Jamaica."

Rev. Charles E. Park of First church, Boston spoke on, "The Art of Going to Church" Mr.. Park said in part: "In the contemplation of this subject we are grateful for the gracious and acceptable service to God.

"In the country people go to church from force of habit, the church is a social centre, the practise is simply a change in the routine of their lives. They will boast they have not missed three Sundays in twenty years. Their faces in the congregation are as familiar to the ministers as the clock and steeple. The church is an indispensable institution to them, they have formed the habit of going to church and giving their offering to the Kingdom of God. Incidentally they deserve the gratitude of pastor and people.

"Then there is another class that go for entertainment. A very interesting class! We wish we had a Dickens among us to write up their characteristics. They occupy the gallery at weddings and funerals. They join no regular church, go from one to another. More than one minister has been demoralized by them, by trying to preach on sensational subjects.

"What is the church for? The true function of the church is worship. Bonded together by true ideals of God and the great central fact that God is love. If you go to church with feelings of turbulence and jealousy it impairs the worship, you must go to church with peace in your heart to your fellow-men. At the same time it is absolutely true that the people who have the deepest intelligence can enter into the Divine spirit of worship more reverently and deeply than others not so endowed.

"I have been asked by different people, to omit the reading of the hymns, by others to omit the scripture lesson: a shorter sermon, another one says omit the sermon and have all reading. The ungenerous obstinacy of self, without regard to what another person likes. Take what you care for and leave the rest for others to enjoy. Be thoroughly at peace toward all: practise love and good-will to your fellow-men then you will have mastered the art of going to church.

"If you were invited out to dine and certain kinds of food were on the table you would not throw it out of the window. Why can't you use the same courtesy in church? The art of going to church is having due regard for others. When you have mastered the art of going to church you will make the pastor a very happy man."

The meeting closed very happily about four o'clock. The attendance throughout the day had been unusually large, over four hundred attending.

Shirts and Ties Are a Matter of Taste

And, fortunately, men's tastes differ widely in the matter of shirts and ties, and—well, we will let it go at that.

Of course, no single men's wear store can foretell the exact 1000 ties 1000 men will pick, and the only way to satisfy every one of these men is to have such a variety that they cannot fail to be suited.

The same holds true in the matter of all men's furnishings, whether hats or gloves, shoes or collars,—here, at the store "just around the corner" you will find the largest assortment in the city at prices that will appeal to your pocket-book.

Why not come in and be convinced?

DR. WILEY FOR TAFT

Declares President His Real Friend

Says Roosevelt Used Pure Food Fund Illegally to Balk War on Adulterations

From Boston Herald, April 23, 1912.

Herald Bureau,
Washington, April 22

"Yes, I said it. Why shouldn't I have said it Would I not be an ingrate from my toes up to my head—from my head to my toes—if I did not say it?"

Thus did Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, pure food champion, until recently chief chemist of the department of agriculture, reiterate today his hope that President Taft would be re-elected. He reiterated when shown a copy of a statement, which he had been represented as making in Cincinnati a few days ago. That statement ran as follows:

"PRESIDENT TAFT IS THE ONE MAN WHO STOOD BETWEEN ME AND DESTRUCTION AT WASHINGTON. WHEN EFFORTS WERE BEING MADE TO ASSASSINATE ME, TAFT PROVED MY ONLY PROTECTOR. HE STOOD BY ME AND I AM GRATEFUL TO HIM. I HOPE HE WILL BE RE-ELECTED."

Dr. Wiley was at his desk in a corner office of one of Washington's new skyscrapers as he took off his spectacles and declared anew his friendship for President Taft.

"I couple my statement," said he, "with the expectation that the President will clean those Augean stables in the Department of Agriculture. He said in his letter exonerating me that there were other conditions in the department which must be remedied. It is not too late yet for him to do that."

"WILL YOU TELL ABOUT THE ORIGIN OF THE REMSEN BOARD?" was asked.

"WHY, I GUESS SO," CAME THE ANSWER PROMPTLY. "I WORE A MUZZLE BECOMINGLY FOR A LONG TIME. PERHAPS THE TRUTH OUGHT TO BE TOLD ABOUT THAT BOARD RIGHT NOW.

"IT WAS APPOINTED BY MR. ROOSEVELT AS PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, EITHER ON THE SUGGESTION TO HIM OF THE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE OR BY HIS OWN SUGGESTION TO THE SECRETARY. The actual announcement was made by the secretary of agriculture. I was told that Mr. Roosevelt selected Dr. Remsen and that Dr. Remsen selected his associates.

"One morning I was asked by the Secretary of Agriculture to go with him and Solicitor McCabe and Mr. Dunlap to President Roosevelt's office at the White House. When we arrived there we met several gentlemen, one from Rochester, N. Y., who used benzoate of soda in his goods, a representative of a Detroit concern that used benzoate in its goods, and a New York member of Congress (since elected to another Federal office.)

"After we had been seated President Roosevelt announced that the gentlemen I have referred to (from New York and Michigan) had protested against Dr. Wiley's findings on benzoate of soda and against other substances added to food products, notably sulphur dioxide and saccharine, and he gave a summary of the representations they had made to him. After he had made this summary he appealed to the gentlemen (from New York and Michigan) to know if he had stated their case fairly, to which they replied in the affirmative.

"He then turned to the secretary of agriculture and asked him if he (Secretary Wilson) thought the use of benzoate of soda in food products was harmful. The secretary promptly answered in the affirmative. HE THEN ASKED ME IF I THOUGHT THE USE OF BENZOATE OF SODA IN FOOD PRODUCTS WAS HARMFUL. TO THIS I REPLIED THAT I DID NOT 'THINK' SO, THAT I KNEW SO BECAUSE I HAD CARRIED ON EXPERIMENTS FOR TWO YEARS WITH HEALTHY YOUNG MEN AND FOUND IN EVERY INSTANCE THAT SOONER OR LATER INJURIOUS EFFECTS HAD BEEN PRODUCED.

"President Roosevelt then asked the same question of Mr. McCabe and Mr. Dunlap, to which they replied in the affirmative. Turning then to the protagonists of benzoate and striking the table with his fist President Roosevelt said:

" 'Gentlemen, if this substance is injurious to health, you shall not use it in your foods.'

"Thereupon the then Republican representative from a New York district introduced the saccharine question, and stated that his firm—meaning, I suppose, the firm of his brothers—HAD SAVED $4000 THE PREVIOUS YEAR BY USING SACCHARINE INSTEAD OF SUGAR.

"I interjected the remark: 'Yes, Mr. President, and every person who ate the goods was deceived, thinking he was using sugar when, in fact, he was using a SWEETISH COAL TAR PRODUCT WHICH WAS NOT ONLY DECEPTIVE BUT INJURIOUS TO HEALTH.'

"This remark of mine seemed to arouse President Roosevelt, who made A PASSIONATE DEFENSE OF SACCHARINE, saying that Dr. Rixey gave it to him every day.

"What about appropriations for the support of the board and the authority of law for its appointment?" was asked.

"THE APPOINTMENT WAS BY THE EXECUTIVE ORDER OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT," REPLIED DR. WILEY. "EVERY DOLLAR PAID TO THE REMSEN BOARD FOR ALL OF ITS WORK, INCLUDING SEVERAL TRIPS TO INFLUENCE PEOPLE IN THE STATES TO USE BENZOATE OF SODA IN THEIR FOOD, HAS BEEN PAID FROM APPROPRIATIONS MADE TO THE BUREAU OF CHEMISTRY FOR THE PURPOSE OF ENFORCING THE FOOD AND DRUGS ACT. THAT WAS A LUMP SUM APPROPRIATION, AND EVERY DOLLAR DISBURSED FOR THE REMSEN BOARD WAS NOT ONLY ILLEGALLY SPENT, BUT WAS USED TO PREVENT THE ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAW.

"The Remsen board was appointed in 1908," continued Dr. Wiley. "In a little less than a year, on Jan. 23, 1909 (well toward the end of President Roosevelt's administration,) the Remsen board rendered its verdict favorable to the use of benzoate of soda in food products. The opinion was publicly promulgated some two or three months later. The Remsen board has been investigating sulphur dioxide all the years since then and has not made its report yet.

"THE MONEY USED FOR THIS REMSEN BOARD," ASSERTED DR. WILEY, "WAS TURNED RIGHT AROUND AGAINST THE LAW. I DO NOT KNOW OF A MORE CRAVEN SURRENDER TO DEPRAVED INTERESTS IN ALL THE HISTORY OF MANKIND."

The first alarm sounded from Box 171 at 7.55 and was for a slight fire in a house on Baxter place occupied by Augustine Purpora. Mr. Purpora hung his coat over the foot of the bed and lay down for a rest. A few minutes later he discovered the coat to be on fire. It made quite a smoke but there was but little fire.

The second alarm was from Box 31 at 9.34 and was for a slight fire in a house at the corner of Payne and Phipps street, occupied by a family named Sullivan. The fire started from some cause in a pot of paint. It did but little damage.

MAKES ANSWER TO ROOSEVELT

President Declares That Stern Duty Fills Him With Anguish

DOCTRINE OF SQUARE DEAL

Crowd Shouts "No" When Asked If Roosevelt Has Lived Up to It—Colonel Accused of Wilfully Spreading Broadcast Wrongful Impressions of Taft's Conduct and Actions In White House—Seventy Percent of Present Federal Officeholders Are Men Appointed by Roosevelt

Boston, April 26.—Straight from the shoulder, and without mincing words, President Taft last night in the Boston Arena attacked Theodore Roosevelt.

Ten thousand people packed within the great auditorium heard the President of the United States break his long silence and bitterly arraign the only living ex-president of the nation—the man who he himself declared had placed him in his great office. After the Arena meeting President Taft was hurried to Symphony hall, where he was greeted by an enthusiastic audience of 3000.

While drops of perspiration streamed down his face, and voice and manner betrayed the deep emotion which gripped him, the president declared he was filled with anguish that the stern duty should come to him of saying such things of his friend and benefactor—of one whom he had loved above all others and held in the highest esteem.

He declared that his gratitude to Roosevelt is so great he would yet have kept silent were it not for the great danger he believes is threatened the nation through his predecessor in office.

Charges Misrepresentation

He charged that Roosevelt is guilty of the most audacious effrontery, of knowingly misrepresenting him, of falsely distorting his public utterances, and he declared that the ex-president has not only failed to live up to his own doctrine of a square deal, but that he has violated his most solemn promise to the American people not to be a candidate for a third term.

"That promise and his treatment of it," said the president, "threw an informing light on the value that ought to be attached to any promise of this kind he may make for the future."

His voice trembling with indignation the president declared Roosevelt has likened himself to Abraham Lincoln, and asked: "I would like to ask the fair people of Massachusetts if you think he is giving me a square deal; or if Abraham Lincoln would do what he is doing to me?'

From all over the great auditorium came loud shouts of "No," "No."

It was a dramatic scene, and the very atmosphere seemed tense with the deep emotion so plainly manifested by the big man standing there on the platform before the thousands of eager men and women.

It was not until it was all over that the great throng realized the tremendous significance of what they had heard and seen.

Abandons Manuscript

So deeply was the president moved that he repeatedly abandoned the printed manuscript of his address to appeal to the multitude "Do you think it is fair?" or "Do you thing that is giving me a square deal?"

Categorically, the president took up the recent charges made against him and his record by Roosevelt. In some instances he declared Roosevelt is now accusing him of doing the very things which he—Roosevelt—did when he was president.

He read a letter he had sent Roosevelt during the attempt to oust Senator Lorimer because of alleged corruption in which he plainly stated he believed the senator from Illinois was guilty and should be thrown out of the United States senate.

Then he charged that with this letter and with telephone conversations to inform him of the president's true attitude toward Lorimer, Roosevelt had wilfully spread broadcast the impression that Lorimer and the president were hand in glove, so that the antipathy of the people of Illinois to Lorimer would cause them to support him—Roosevelt—in his candidacy against Taft.

As to Officeholders

President Taft declared that the charge that he is using his great federal patronage to further his own interests is ridiculous in that 70 percent of the officeholders are men appointed by Roosevelt during the last administration.

He declared that not one office holder has been, nor will be, dismissed because of support given Roosevelt.

And so in turn he took up the so-called "eleven Roosevelt charges," either denying the accusations absolutely or trying to show that he was the victim of misrepresentation.

Concerning reciprocity with Canada he declared Roosevelt had himself urged him to support the measure, and now, in order to get the farmer vote, the president charged Roosevelt has swung around and said reciprocity would not be a "square deal for the farmer."

There was laughter when the president dropped the manuscript from which he was reading, and said, in the tone of a hurt child: "Mr. Roosevelt intimates that I'm puzzle-witted."

Referring to his Toledo address, upon which Roosevelt has based the charge that Taft favors an oligarchy in that he said: "Our government should be a government of all the people by a representative part of the people," he declared that Roosevelt has deliberately garbled the quotation to give the words a false meaning.

Explains Toledo Speech

What he did say, explained the president, was that the government was by popular vote, that the voters did not include women and children, so that constitutional restrictions are necessary to protect the non-voters from the possible aggression of the voting males.

"Do you think that is fair?" again appealed the president.

"No," shouted the crowd.

"Would Abraham Lincoln have done it?"

"No, no," was the answer roared back by the 10,000, and followed by a volley of cheers.

Long before the president arrived thousands were storming the Arena, and the police guarding the entrances were nearly swept from their feet. Again and again the officers at the main entrance were shoved out of the way and groups of men forced their way in.

Except for a few blocks of seats reserved for special guests and friends of the various committees there was not even standing space left.

The period of waiting for the president to arrive was enlivened by the Harvard Taft club, the Beverly Taft club and other organizations whose transparencies, banners, odd songs and cheers were cleverly planned by the campaign committees.

"Mr. Roosevelt drags in the name of Senator Crane of your state in an unfriendly way," said the president. "With respect to Crane, I may be permitted to say that I feel proud to be associated with him. He is a man whom Roosevelt has frequently himself said Massachusetts ought to be congratulated for choosing as its representative. He was three times elected governor of Massachusetts, and three times invited by Roosevelt into his cabinet. Roosevelt invited him to manage his presidential campaign in 1904. But Crane does not now support Roosevelt and must be condemned.

Concerning Support

"The truth with respect to me," continued the president, "is the same as it is with respect to Roosevelt. When I am running for the presidency I gratefully accept such support as comes to me. Roosevelt has done so in the past; he is doing so now. I am making no bargain. I am agreeing to no conditions that would embarrass or hamper me in the administration of the government should I be re-elected. I do not say that Roosevelt has done so, or is doing so.

"But when I consider the eagerness with which Roosevelt has accepted in his various campaigns the assistance of Messrs. Aldrich, Cannon, Penrose, Quay, Platt, Foraker, and many other men prominent and influential in congress and politics, whatever their proper designation, whether leaders or bosses, I do not hesitate to say that it involves the most audacious effrontery on his part to attack me because men he characterizes as bosses are now supporting me, and to charge me on that account with helping machine politics.

"I had other things to think of. This must never happen again!" he told himself remorsefully.

He was wide-awake now. Doubtless Pegloe had put him to bed. Well, that had been thoughtful of Pegloe—he would not forget him—the City Tavern should continue to enjoy his patronage. It would be something for Pegloe to boast of that Judge Slocum Price Turberville always made his place headquarters when in Raleigh. Feeling that he had already conferred wealth and distinction on the fortunate Pegloe the judge thrust his fat legs over the side of his bed and stood erect. Stooping he reached for his clothes. He confidently expected to find them on the floor, but his hand merely swept an uncarpeted waste. The judge was profoundly astonished.

"Maybe I've got 'em on. I don't recall taking them off!" he thought hopefully. He moved uncertainly in the direction of the window, where the light showed him his own bare extremities. He reverted to his original idea that his clothes were scattered about the floor.

He was beginning to experience a great sense of haste; it was two miles to Boggs' and Fentress would be there at sun-up. Finally he abandoned his quest of the missing garments and turned to the door. To say that he was amazed when he found it locked would have most inadequately described his emotions. Breathing deep he fell back a step or two, and then with all the vigor he could muster launched himself at the door. But it resisted him.

"It's bolted on the other side!" he muttered, the full measure of Pegloe's perfidy revealing itself to his mind. He was aghast. It was a plot to discredit him. Pegloe's hospitality had been inspired by his enemy, for Pegloe was Fentress' tenant.

Again he attacked the door; he believed it might be possible to force it from its hinges, but Pegloe had done his work too well for that, and at last, spent and breathless, the judge dropped down on the edge of his bed to consider the situation. He was without clothes and he was a prisoner, yet his mind rose splendidly to meet the difficulties that beset him. His greatest activities were reserved for what appeared to be only a season of despair. He armed himself with a three-legged stool he had found and turned once more to the door, but the stout planks stood firm under his blows.

"Unless I get out of here in time I'm a ruined man!" thought the judge. "After this Fentress will refuse to meet me!"

The window next engaged his attention. That, too, Pegloe had taken the precaution to fasten, but a single savage blow of the stool shattered glass and sash and left an empty space that framed the dawn's red glow. The judge looked out and shook his head dubiously. It was twelve feet or more to the ground, a risky drop for a gentleman of his years and build. The judge considered making a rope of his bedding and lowering himself to the ground by means of it; he remembered to have read of captives in that interesting French prison, the Bastille, who did this. However, an equally ingenious but much more simple use for his bedding occurred to him; it would form a soft and yielding substance on which to alight. He gathered it up into his arms, feather-tick and all, and pushed it through the window, then he wriggled out across the ledge, feet first, and lowering himself to the full length of his arms dropped.

He landed squarely on the rolled-up bed with a jar that shook him to his center. Almost gaily he snatched up a quilt, draping it about him after the manner of a Roman toga, and thus lightly habited, started across Mr. Pegloe's truck-patch, his one thought Boggs' and the sun. It would have served no purpose to have gone home since his entire wardrobe, except for the shirt on his back, was in the tavern-keeper's possession, besides he had not a moment to lose, for the sun was peeping at him over the horizon.

Unobserved he gained the edge of the town and the highroad that led past Boggs' and stole a fearful glance over his shoulder. The sun was clear of the treetops, he could even feel the lifeless dust grow warm beneath his feet; and wrapping the quilt closer about him he broke into a labored run.

Some twenty minutes later Boggs came in sight. He experienced a moment of doubt—doubtless Fentress had been there and gone! It was a hideous thought and the judge groaned. Then at the other end of the meadow near the woods he distinguished several men. Fentress and his friends beyond question. The judge laughed aloud. In spite of everything he was keeping his engagement, he was plucking his triumph out of the very dregs of failure. The judge threw himself over the fence, a corner of the quilt caught on one of the rails; he turned to release it, and in that instant two pistol shots rang out sharply in the morning air.

AGREEMENT IN COAL STRIKE

Miners and Operators Reach a Satisfactory Conclusion

TEN PERCENT WAGE ADVANCE

Sliding Scale Abolished and Concession Which Practically Amounts to Recognition of Union—To Be Given Consideration by Full Committee on May 2—Contract Drawn Up by Sub-Committee Will Be Signed

New York, April 26.—The threatened strike of 180,000 anthracite miners, which has been pending for two months, has been practically settled with victory for the miners, it was announced by representatives of the strike committee of the miners, who are in conference at the Hotel Victoria here.

The mine managers, it is said, have accepted a tentative agreement, presented to them by the miners' committee, and all that now remains to ratify the agreement is the vote of the mine workers. Its acceptance is practically certain, the union officials declare.

The miners, under this proposed agreement, will get a 10 percent increase in wages. They asked for 20 percent.

The sliding scale will be abolished and the right to have committees in each colliery to adjust differences will be granted.

The miners claim this last concession practically amounts to recognition of their union by the mine owners.

A contract embodying all these points is being drawn up. It will be effective for four years. The miners asked for a one-year arrangement.

On May 2 members of the general committee of miners and managers will meet in this city and receive the reports of the vote of the miners. If the agreement is accepted the contract will be signed.

Confirmed at Baer's Office

Philadelphia, April 26.—Confirmation of a report that the anthracite miners and operators had reached an agreement in settlement of their dispute as to wages and hours of labor was had at the office of President Baer in this city. It was announced that the terms and conditions of the sub-committee's report, however, will not be made public until after the meeting of the general committee on May 2.

The report that the sub-committee had reached an agreement and that the new pact includes a 10 percent increase in wages was received with satisfaction in all parts of the anthracite regions.

MAY WARN MEXICO AGAIN

Washington Takes Notice of Tales of American Refugees

Washington, April 26.—It is predicted that the tales of Mexican atrocities against American citizens brought to Galveston by refugees from Vera Cruz and to San Francisco by refugees from the west coast of Mexico will force the state department into making a rejoinder to Mexico's recent answer to the American ultimatum so severe and certain in tone that depredations against American life and property will cease at once or the United States will be committed to a grave step.

From all quarters of Mexico the Americans are reported by consular officials to be alarmed over the intervention talk which continues to appear in nearly all the Mexican papers and in many American papers received there. This talk is cited as one of the most dangerous elements of the entire situation in Mexico from the American point of view.

MARIANO'S TRIAL BEGINS

Providence Boy Is Accused of Having Murdered His Playmate

Providence, April 26.—Antonio Mariano, alleged slayer of little Willie Mathers on Moses Angell hill, North Providence, went on trial in the juvenile division of the Sixth district court in spite of the efforts of his counsel to have the case continued.

Mr. Pettine argued that the court should wait until after Coroner Fenner announced his findings and had filed his report, so that the defense could know what the state alleged.

Judge Ruecker decided that no further continuance was warranted and the trial started. There were frequent clashes of counsel.

Pittsburg Brokers Suspend

Pittsburg, April 26.—The announcement of the suspension of the stock exchange house of Scully, Painter & Beech was made on the floor of the stock exchange, following the filing of an application for a receiver.

Speaker Clark Ill

Washington, April 26.—Soon after the house convened Speaker Champ Clark was stricken with an attack of lumbago, and found it necessary to give up his duties.

SING SING CONVICTS GO ON FOOD STRIKE

Refuse to Work Unless They Are Given Better Rations

New York, April 26.—More than 200 convicts in Sing Sing prison went on strike, refusing to work unless they received more and better food. Warden Kennedy was called upon to argue the point with the sullen prisoners, and after half an hour's talk, in which he promised the prisoners what they demanded, 80 of the convicts returned to their duties.

Eighty more, however, refused to accept Kennedy's promises of more and better food, saying they had received promises before, and when they laid down their tools were taken back to their cells, getting only bread and water. Precautions will be taken to prevent a possible outbreak among the men.

WAS PROLIFIC WRITER

Death of Justin McCarthy, One of Ireland's Most Noted Men

London, April 25.—Justin McCarthy, famous as a novelist and historian, and for many years a member of parliament, died at Folkstone, after a long illness.

Though Justin McCarthy has often been called the greatest novelist that Ireland has produced since Charles O'Malley, it is his historical work and not his fiction that will bring him enduring fame. McCarthy was a most prolific writer, and for twenty-five years "did politics" for one of the London daily papers. And, withal, he was an ardent home ruler.

Justin McCarthy was born in Cork, Nov. 12, 1830, and received a short though excellent education, for he came of a very ancient family, which for centuries held sway over great estates in the south of Ireland. He was a frequent visitor to the United States.

Coal Prices Going Down

Boston, April 26.—It is announced that the price of coal at retail in Greater Boston will be cut soon, following the usual custom for reductions during the summer, and despite the fact that no coal has been mined in the hard coal mines since April 1.

MURDERED AND ROBBED

Prominent Tailor of Lewiston Shot Down In Front of His Home

Lewiston, Me., April 26.—Both city and county officials here are scouring this vicinity in an endeavor to locate the unknown man who shot and killed John W. Bibber, a prominent merchant tailor of this city, in front of his home on Oak street, after 10 o'clock at night.

Although his watch and money were missing, a valuable diamond ring and scarf pin were found on him, and even though this appears to make it a case of robbery, the officials are inclined to believe the theft was only a ruse to cover up the real motive.

Bibber had been in the tailoring business for the past thirty-seven years in this city and it is known that at times he carried a large amount of money. He was 55 years of age and unmarried.

WEST QUINCY VS. ATLANTIC

All the employees of the Tubular Rivet and Stud Co., are taking a great interest in the 100 yard run between Thomas Paradise, a West Quincy runner and Thomas Dean, the pride of Atlantic, which is scheduled for next Monday at the conclusion of the day's work.

The competitors have for a long time been arguing over their respective abilities as century yard runners but the discussion reached a climax Thursday, when Joseph P. Mullin, a man well known in sporting circles offered to back Paradise to the extent of $25. The defy was accepted and the Atlantic man's supporters came to his assistance.

The enthusiasm of the West Quincy and Atlantic employees of the Tubular Company has grown to such a degree that from now until the day of the race the keenest anxiety will be entertained by both sides.

The race gives every promise of being close and interesting and will decide which of the two men has the right to lay claim to the championship of the company.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

POTPIES.

If you do not know how to make potpies before trying wait until you can see one prepared by a competent cook, for a spoiled potpie is about as tragic a failure as it is possible to make in cooking.

One secret of success is to boil the dough in as little liquid as possible. The meat with which it is done should be cooked until almost ready to serve. After it is in, the dough should boil for about a half hour.

Some Timely Hints.

Chicken, veal and beef make the best potpies.

Before laying the dough for the potpie in the cooking vessel remove all but a pint of the broth from the meat. Then over the meat, which should be left in the bottom of the kettle, lay the dough very loosely.

Cover the vessel and let it boil, then move farther back on the fire and let it boil very slowly for a half hour.

The broth taken out should be slightly thickened with flour and used to pour over the potpie when it is served.

Chicken Potpie.—The chicken should first be cooked as for a fricassee. Thicken the gravy and then drop into it, a spoonful at a time, a dough made as follows:

Sift together a pint of flour, a teaspoonful of baking powder, a little salt and mix with enough milk to make a stiff dough. Boil for twenty minutes after the dough is in the pot.

Do not lift the cover while the pot is boiling or the crust may be heavy.

A Fine Veal Pie.

Veal Potpie.—Cut into small pieces two pounds of veal and boil in two quarts of water for an hour and a half. When the meat begins to get tender season by putting in a teaspoonful of salt and a bit of red pepper pod.

Just before taking off the fire a half cupful of cream should be added, together with a tablespoonful of butter.

If you like onions or potatoes with the pie they should be cut up and dropped in when the meat is half done.

Make a biscuit dough, roll and bake in the oven. Split the biscuit when baked and put them on a platter. After thickening the gravy pour it and the meat over the biscuit.

Anna Thompson.

ROOSEVELT TO SPEAK AT QUINCY DEPOT AT 5 O'CLOCK TONIGHT

Wires Regrets That Conductor Refused to Allow Special Train to Stop This Morning

Arrangements Made Later for Him to Speak Tonight

Ex-President Roosevelt was considerably provoked this morning when his train arrived at Brockton, that the conductor of the special train refused to allow it to stop at Quincy that he might greet the large crowd gathered at the depot, hoping not only to see the wielder of the big stick, but to hear him speak.

He expressed a wish to have the special run back to Quincy but was deterred on account of his engagement at Brockton. He however sent the Ledger the telegram below.

He expressed a desire to meet the citizens of Quincy, the birthplace of two Presidents, and arrangements were at once started that he might not be disappointed.

Chairman John H. Johnson, of the local Roosevelt club was communicated with and it was arranged that the special train should be stopped at Quincy on its return to Boston

The train is due to arrive in Quincy 5 o'clock and the only Teddy will speak to the citizens for about ten minutes. A large crowd is expected to be at the depot to greet him.

A crowd of several hundred men, women and children gathered at the Quincy depot this morning to see ex-President Roosevelt but came away disappointed as he did not even look out of the window as the special train flew by. It had been announced that he would stop at Quincy, on his way to Brockton and deliver a ten minute speech. The time of his arrival was variously stated from 9.30 to 10.30. Not to be disappointed the crowd gathered at 9.30 At a minute of 10 a whistle sounded and a train of two cars, composed of a parlor and observation car flew by at the rate of forty miles an hour.

On his arrival in Brockton Teddy evidently heard of the disappointment he had caused to the crowd in Quincy for shortly after his arrival the Ledger received the following telegram from him dated at Brockton at 10.32.

Daily Ledger, Quincy.

"Please tell Mr .William E. Hingston and my other friends in Quincy that it was with deepest regret that I discovered at the last minute that the train as scheduled, prevented my stopping at Quincy. I deeply appreciate their support and thank them for their kindness."

(Signed) Theodore Roosevelt.

COMMISSIONERS FAVOR THE BILL

John F. Merrill, of Quincy, county commissioner of Norfolk County appeared before the committee on counties at the State House Friday in favor of the bill which classifies the different counties in the State according to population, and adjusts the salaries of the county commissioners on that basis.

Under the provisions of the bill, the county commissioners of Norfolk county would each receive an increase of $200 per year, making the salaries $1400 instead of $1200 as they are at present.

Mr. Merrill said he thought the increase asked was a fair one and that eight years ago, the commissioners received $1400 but were subsequently reduced to $1200. Since then, the duties of the commisioners have been increased and the population of the county has increased and Mr. Merrill thought the adjustment as contemplated in the bill an equitable one, and one which would meet with very little opposition.

Representatives from almost every county in the State were in attendance and all spoke favorably of the bill. No opposition developed and the committee took the matter under advisement.

TO OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

At the official board meeting Friday evening at the Hall Place M. E. church it was voted to conform with the other churches and have the mid week service on Thursday evening instead of Friday. The board gave the Epworth League permission to lay out a walk and beautify the grounds in front of the church

Sunday morning the pastor will refer to the anniversary of the church as it was just 40 years ago, April 28, 1872, in Doble's hall the first Methodist sermon in West Quincy was preached. The society was formed later. After the service a meeting will be held to consider a suitable observance of the anniversary.

In the evening at 6.15 Miss Elizabeth Springham of the Deaconess association of Boston will speak at the Epworth League meeting and also at seven o'clock, when the annual offering for the cause will be taken

Friday evening the Epworth League will give an art exhibit in the vestry.

Emery L. Crane Lectures on "American Wit and Humor"

SOME WRITERS

It was a select audience, and a large one, which greeted Emery L. Crane last evening in the chapel of First Church, to hear his lecture on "American Wit and Humor." Every seat in the chapel was taken and the audience consisted of what may fairly be called the leading people of Quincy.

Preceding the lecture was a musical program. The songs which were sung were some of Eugene Field's poems put to music . "Sleep, little Tulip," was rendered by Mrs. Frank A. Page, with great expression and sweetness. Then came a quintette composed of Mrs. James H. Slade, Mrs. F. A. Page, Mrs. N. S. Hunting, Mrs. Turner and Miss Litchfield. They sang the old favorite "Wynken, Blynken and Nod" and received such applause that it was repeated, much to the delight of the audience.

Mrs. Chandler W. Smith and William E. Weston opened the evening's entertainment with a piano solo. This was a masterly performance and showed to advantage the technique which both of the musicians possess.

After the musical program the lecturer was introduced by the Hon. Brooks Adams, who said that he personally felt under obligations to Mr. Crane for his unceasing good-nature, patience and helpfulness toward the interests of the Quincy Historical Society, under whose auspices the lecwas delivered.

Mr. Crane disclaimed any intention of dealing with all the American humorists, but rather a few of those "whose shining wit sets all the world ablaze."

After declaring that the authors of certain humorous works which appeared previous to 1850 were now as dead as the ladies of the Quincy Women's club claim Quincy to be, the lecturer took up Artemus Ward, whose success came more from his manner of telling a story than from the story itself. He then discussed Mark Twain and gave an abridged account of the celebrated "Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," causing a great deal of merriment in the audience. Mr. Crane proceeded in part as follows, giving brief selections from each author as he went along:

"About all that Josh Billings ever wrote was his almanacs. Here are some of his proverbs: 'The sassiest man I ever met is a hen-pecked husband when he is away from home.'

'You'd better not know so much than know so many things that are not so.'

"When we take up James Russell Lowell we feel that we are in the presence of a genius. The Bigelow Papers will continue to stand as the best examples of Yankee dialect ever written. His verses, largely political, reek with wit.

"Newspaper humor pertains peculiarly to the United States. Every paper from Zion's Herald to the Boston American has a jokesmith on his staff.

"George W. Peck's Bad Boy was funny, but his pranks if played in Massachusetts, would have brought him into the juvenile court.

"Eugene Field was a man whom every one liked but he is called a 'jolliler.'

"Genial Bob Burdette drew tears as well as compelled laughter. He has given up writing funny paragraphs and is preaching in California.

"Mr. Dooley has become a national character. He says 'that it is a good thing that funeral sermons are not composed in the confessional' and 'a fanatic is a man who does what he thinks the Lord would do if he knew all the facts in the case.'

George Ade and others writers were dealt with in passing and Mr. Crane ended with selections from the ex-

DECORATIONS WERE PROFUSE

St. Mary's Hall a Scene of Splendor at Ave Maria Ball

THE COMMITTEES

Amid decorations of a variegated nature with every arrangement provided that could possibly add to a most charming spectacle, the members of Ave Maria Council, 1535, Knights of Columbus, held forth in their second annual grand ball in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, last evening. The affair was a pronounced success and attended by a number that taxed the dance hall to its capacity.

Members of other divisions of the Knights of Columbus were present in large numbers and the occasion was graced by the presence of many city officials and representative citizens, including Mayor Eugene R. Stone, Exmayor William T. Shea, Councilman Charles A. Ross, William H. Teasdale, chairman of the Board of Health, Michael B. Geary chairman of the Board of Registrars, Councilmen Harry T. Boyd and Daniel F. Forde, School Committeeman, Joseph F. McPherson and Rev. Henry T. Grady and Rev. William J. Duffy, pastor and assistant respectively of St. Mary's church.

The decorations were of a most unique nature. In the centre of the hall was suspended the banner of the council, while everywhere the stars and stripes were conspicuously displayed. The walls were decorated in a manner symbolic of the four seasons of the year and adornments, typical of the age of Columbus added great lustre to the artistic arrangement of the decorations.

The platform was strewn with potted plants, ferns and floral designs while the pictures of Grand Knight McGilvray and Chaplain Rev. Fr. Grady stood out in prominent positions

The music for the occasion was furnished by Scully's orchestra, which furnished a most pleasing repertoire from eight until nine o'clock consisting of the following numbers.

Dancing then took place and was enjoyed till early morning There were twenty regular numbers on the program, with four extras. Most of the dances called for repeated encores

At midnight an intermission took place, during which a most appetizing menu was partaken off, which was prepared by Burleigh and Martin.

The floor marshal wearing purple colors was Grand Knight Charles J. McGilvray. Deputy Grand Knight John J. Mahoney, who wore blue colors, was floor director while the assistants designated by red colors were Henry M. Hughes, Leo A. Garrity and George A. McDonald

The aids all of whom wore heliotropes included J. Edward Reinhalter, James E. Geary, Edward E. Monahan, Robert J. Teasdale, James B. Buzzi, John J. Joyce and Frank J. Hebert.

The pages, who attracted considerable attention during the evening, attired as they were in costumes such as were worn in the days of Ferdinand and Isabella were Miss Katherine Ash, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John H. Ash and Master Edward Sarto Minihan. The pages distributed the dance orders while the grand march was in progress. The reception committee was William H. Teasdale, chairman, Dr. John H. Ash, John P. Minihan, Charles C. McCue, Thomas J. Shortle, Arthur L. McGilvray, Thomas F. O'Brien, Dr. John T. Reynolds, Bernard M. O'Neil, William J. Corcoran, Joseph A. Barry, George E. HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Today is all right for Arbor Day so far as vegetation goes even if a litfle moist for the one doing the planting. It is to be hoped a good many trees have been set out in Quincy in observance of the day,

Children in Cleveland, Ohio, are earning goodly sums of money and incidentally doing a good work along sanitary lines. The city offered the youngsters a cent for every ten flies delivered dead at City Hall and needless to say the "Swatting the fly" campaign is being vigorously waged in Cleveland. Now is the time of year to do active work, for every fly killed now means nine less in the summer and thousands later.

PONY EXPRESS LICENSES.

Just think of it Brockton a city of 50,000 and only seven pony express licenses granted, and Quincy with a population of less than 35,000 and fifteen granted and the committee on licenses reports favorably on twenty-one. Over twice as many in Quincy as in Brockton and Quincy next door to Boston where much liquor is to be had that isn't carted into the city on wheels. Quincy reduced the permits this year two as seventeen were granted last year.

The position taken by the committee on licenses is right so far as it goes. They say they do not believe in a monopoly and that a few express companies should not have the right to bring liquor into our city. Some of them would doubtless make too much money judging by the great quantity brought in, but are all those licensed by the City Council legitimate express companies? Could their names be found in the list of expresses or in the city directory as expressmen before the pony express law went into effect? What merchandise except liquor do some of them cart even now? That we think is the proper view to take of the situation.

We think that only a few permits should be granted and those few carefully inspected. Names should be noted to see if the recipients of the liquor are receiving enough to run a kitchen bar room as frequent deliveries and large quantities would indicate.

A city that is no-license surely does not show in the granting of fifteen pony express permits a very strong leaning toward being a temperance city only in name. Why make it so easy to get liquor?

The new court house building on Coddington street is to be opened for public inspection next Saturday afternoon. The building is about ready for occupancy. All of the furnishings have arrived and will be in place by that time. County Commissioner Merrill said Friday that the building was an exceptionally fine one and that the public would have an opportunity to see how their money had been expended.

The building will be occupied for court purposes probably the following Monday, May 6.

It was thought that there would be some dedicatory exercises at the completion of the building and there will be later. This ceremony however, will be deferred until some time in June, when the fortieth anniversary of the opening of court in Quincy, and the dedicatory exercises will be held at one and the same time.

RALPH WEYMOUTH.

Friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Weymouth, were shocked to hear of the death of their son Ralph, on Wednesday of typhoid fever. He was a popular student at the Quincy High school, a most lovable and beautiful character and also a gifted musician. He has played first violin in the High school orchestra for three yearts and has appeared as soloist in many musicales and recitals. A brilliant career would have been his could he have lived. The world can ill afford to lose such young men as he. Funeral services were held Friday afternoon at his late home on Glover avenue, which were largely attended. There was a magnificent display of beautiful flowers.

—In Middleboro the school board has granted the request of the D. A. R. that they be allowed to insert a page in the histories studied in the schools containing the history of the United States flag. This is a movement that might be copied with good result in other towns says the Rockland Standard.

Republicans of Massachusetts

President Taft's much-exploited "exposure" of Col. Roosevelt (prepared at a five hours' conference at the White House) has settled down to the grave charge that the Colonel, after electing Taft President, left him to handle the job in his own way.

Mr. Taft seems to feel that Col. Roosevelt should not have gone to Africa, leaving him alone in the White House; should not have retired to Oyster Bay on his return, but should have established himself in Washington as guide and advisor!

Promptly Mr. Taft fell into the arms of the bosses. Roosevelt was no longer at his elbow. Taft HAD to have someone to lean on, and he truly said at Springfield, he turned to Cannon, Crane, Aldrich, Penrose et al.

Mr. Taft pleads: "How could I help it?" The answer is: By doing as Roosevelt did when he was in the White House—displaying the qualities of real leadership and command.

"He told me to do it," declares Mr. Taft—of his conferences with Joe Cannon.

Perhaps Col. Roosevelt did tell Mr. Taft to talk with Cannon; but he did not tell him to surrender to Cannon.

"Cannon promised me he would be for downward tariff revision," pleads President Taft. Who changed, then—Cannon or Taft? One of the two men did. As the tariff was NOT revised downward, it is apparent that Cannon had his way with Taft.

Roosevelt undoubtedly said: "Talk with Cannon—talk with everyone, in fact; BUT HAVE YOUR OWN IDEAS, YOUR OWN POLICIES."

Cannon passed his own kind of a tariff bill, persuaded Taft to sign it and afterwards to indorse it in his Winona speech as "the best tariff ever made."

Col. Roosevelt never told Taft to do that!

On Mr. Taft's own statements, made here in Massachusetts, his success as President stopped whenever he went beyond the line Col. Roosevelt suggested to him.

Mr. Taft, in his Springfield speech, says he couldn't help it; he had to have the support of the bosses in Congress—Cannon, Aldrich, Lorimer, Penrose and Crane.

DID HE GET THEIR SUPPORT, OR DID THEY GET HIS ? The tariff (especially Schedule K) shows that he surrendered to them!

Mr. Taft's mistake was in not distinguishing between "conference," which Col. Roosevelt advised, and "surrender"—a word with which Col Roosevelt is unfamiliar.

Of course, Roosevelt conferred (with Cannon, Penrose, Crane and others), BUT HE NEVER SURRENDERED! That was always done by the other side. When Taft confers HE ALWAYS SURRENDERS.

There's the difference between Taft and Roosevelt.

Roosevelt leads; he never follows. He directs; he never surrenders.

Roosevelt has the courage to say "I did it," and to accept responsibility. Taft pleads that he cannot do things himself and, as he on longer has Roosevelt, he must have the support and guidance of the party bosses.

One man DOES things, the other excuses and explains.

Which do YOU want to handle YOUR affairs—to be YOUR President—the next four years?

THANKS TO ROOSEVELT'S BATTLE FOR A PRIMARY LAW IN THIS STATE, IT IS IN YOUR POWER NEXT TUESDAY TO DECIDE.

Shirts and Ties Are a Matter of Taste

And, fortunately, men's tastes differ widely in the matter of shirts and ties, and—well, we will let it go at that.

Of course, no single men's wear store can foretell the exact 1000 ties 1000 men will pick, and the only way to satisfy every one of these men is to have such a variety that they cannot fail to be suited.

The same holds true in the matter of all men's furnishings, whether hats or gloves, shoes or ars,—here, at the store "just around the corner" you will find the largest assortment in the city at prices that will appeal to your pocket-book.

Why not come in and be convinced?

—In a town, while a ladies' card club was playing for a $2 book as a prize, the sons of these same ladies, small boys, were arrested in a hay mow, while playing for a 50c prize. They had organized a club like their mothers. The mothers cried and said: "What a terrible place this town is to raise boys, anyhow!" Served them right. They might have known the difference between a haymow and a parlor, and a $2 and a 50c prize.—Ex.

THAW SEEKING HIS LIBERTY

Hearing on His Present Mental State Has Begun

A TRIP TO NEW ROCHELLE

First Time He Has Been Outside Matteawan Hospital In Three Years —Mother of Slayer Accompanies Him—Prisoner Is Still Insane and Should Not Be Released, According to Superintendent of Hospital

New York, April 27.—Harry K. Thaw saw some of the world outside of Matteawan hospital today for the first time in three years, but at the end of the preliminary hearing at New Rochelle he probably will go back to the hospital. An adjournment for several days, at least, is expected by those who will represent the state in the proceedings before Justice Keogh.

Thaw started from Matteawan for New Rochelle this morning in custody of a keeper and accompanied by his mother. If Thaw's daily attendance is required before Justice Keogh, however, he may be committed temporarily to the county prison at White Plains.

Mr. Kellogg, who will have charge of the New Rochelle hearing as representative of the attorney general, was in conference with Charles C. Nott, Jr., of the district attorney's office.

A consultation between Keogh, Kellogg and Clarence Shearn, representing Thaw, is expected at New Rochelle, at which the method of the inquiry will be determined. The hearing began at noon, but no witnesses have been subpoenaed for today.

Dr. John Russell, the newly appointed superintendent of Matteawan hospital, has made his return to the writ of habeas corpus. Dr. Russell says Thaw is now insane, according to his opinion, and should not be released; and further he submits the order of commitment of Judge Dowling as his authority for holding Thaw a prisoner. Russell has been at Matteawan less than one month.

STEAMER TELEGRAPH SINKS

Seattle Dock Wrecked at the Same Time

Seattle, April 27.—Several persons were injured, the sound steamer Telegraph was sunk, and the Coleman dock, one of the finest passenger piers on the Pacific coast, was wrecked when the Alaska Steamship company's big steel steamship Alameda got beyond control as she was being taken into her berth at Pier No. 2 and plowed through the dock. As far as known no lives were lost.

The Alameda, in command of Captain O'Brien, Puget sound pilot for the Alaska Steamship company, was returning to her berth on the south side of Pier No. 2 from the Standard Oil wharf, where she had gone to take on fuel oil.

NOTED FIREMAN KILLED

"Dare Devil Rush" Meets His End When Buggy Tips Over

New York, April 27.—While trying to avoid striking a group of school children who were crossing Hudson street, Battalion Chief John Rush of the fire department swung the department buggy, in which he was riding, sharply to one side, the vehicle tipped over and Rush was thrown violently to the pavement, receiving injuries from which he died shortly afterwards.

Rush was a well known figure in the fire department. His driving feats had gained for him the nickname of "Dare Devil" Rush. The battalion chief's skull was fractured by the fall. He was 41 years old.

EXTERMINATION IS BEGUN

Thibetans Have Begun the Wholesale Slaughter of Chinese

Shanghai, April 27.—Wholesale slaughter of Chinese throughout Thibet is reported, following the promulgation of a Thibetan declaration of independence. Advices from Pekin say official reports tell of a general campaign of extermination of all the Chinese in Thibet.

President Yuan Shi Kai has ordered a strong force of troops rushed to Thibet, and he has announced his determination of putting down the revolt at any cost.

Raise to Machinists Refused

Lowell, Mass., April 27.—A demand for a 15 percent increase was asked by 1200 employes of the Lowell machineshop. The superintendent refused the increase, but informed the employes, who are men, that a revision of the wage schedule was in progress.

Italy Embarrassing Shipping

Paris, April 27.—It is understood here that the powers are considering the matter of advising Italy either to try to force the Dardanelles or definitely abandon the plan, as her present indecision greatly embarrasses international shipping.

LECTURE ON WIT AND HUMOR

periences and sayings of "My Brother Bill," which kept the audience in a continual state of laughter.

Judge Shute's diary of a Real Boy was alluded to and the newer writer, Paul West, who wrote the doings of Samuel Torry, Jr., of Brookdale came next in order. The story of "How Sam Torry played Noah's Ark," was read in Mr. Crane's inimitable style and convulsed the audience with laughter.

In closing he said: "In olden times the jester sat at the feet of the king. Today he sits on the throne. A good joke is immortal and never changes.

Mr. Crane's ability as a reader is a great asset to him on the lecture platform. He gets all the fun that there is in a joke and he can tell a story so that it is impossible to miss the point; he can draw a laugh from his audience if it is there to come.

It would not be fair to Mr. Crane to repeat his jokes and witticisms, because this lecture should be given over and over before it is exhausted.

For a number of years in the past Mr. Crane has given a great deal of pleasure to Quincy people. It was to him, as the entertainer, they have turned, when it was necessary to raise money for the various philanthropic purposes. Quincy people are glad to see him undertaking work of more ambitious character and they are predicting that there is a place for him upon the lecture platform.

BRIEFS

Charles H. Johnson superintendent of First Church Sunday school was re-elected on Monday evening to the presidency for two more years of the Boston Sunday School Union. He has given much attention to the work and has had some especially good speakers at the meetings and was the unanimous choice for re-election.

The annual party of First Church Sunday school is to be held Friday evening May 3d. The younger children will be entertained in the chapel from 4 until 5 with games followed at 5.30 by refreshments which in turn will be followed by a dance at Colonial hall until 7.30. There will be a dance at 8 at Colonial hall for the young people of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Wood have moved from Beach street to Hancock street corner of Wayland.

CREW WILL TESTIFY

Summoned to Appear Before Court of Inquiry In England

London, April 27.—Every survivor of the crew of the Titanic who returned to this country on the steamer Lapland was served with a subpoena to appear before the court of inquiry when the vessel arrived at Plymouth today. The court, the head of which will be Lord Mersey, will begin its investigation of the Titanic disaster early next week.

A great congregation attended a memorial service held at St. Margaret's in Westminster for Howard B. Case and "all who perished in the Titanic disaster."

The service, which was choral, was conducted by Canon Henson and included the psalm "Lord, Thou Hast Been Our Refuge and Our Strength" and hymns "Nearer, My God, to Thee" and "On the Resurrection Morn." It concluded with the "Dead March from Saul" on the organ.

RENOMINATE

PRESIDENT TAFT

Here is Theodore Roosevelt's real opinion of William H. Taft, given after years of intimate knowledge and acquaintance:

"I do not believe there can be found in the whole country a man so well fitted to be President. He is not only absolutely fearless, absolutely disinterested and upright, but he has the widest acquaintance with the nation's needs, without and within, and the broadest sympathies with all our citizens; as emphatically a President of the plain people as Lincoln was, yet not Lincoln himself would be freer from the least taint of demagogy, the least tendency to appeal to class hatred of any kind. To no one class does William H. Taft appeal so strongly as to the workingman. There is nothing he will not do to improve his condition and advance his interests, except to do that which is wrong; and he will not do wrong for anybody."

MASSACHUSETTS KNOWS THAT THIS OPINION IS RIGHT.

TRIP IS ABANDONED

Seamen on Olympic Desert In Sympathy With Firemen

Southampton, Eng., April 27.—The White Star liner Olympic, which had been held off Rye, Isle of Wight, since Wednesday by a strike of her firemen, who balked at the ship's collapsible boats, has abandoned the scheduled trip to New York and returned to port. This course was made necessary by the desertion of her seamen when the line attempted to replace the striking firemen with non-union men.

Yesterday afternoon the striking seamen, who included six quartermasters, were arraigned in the police court at Portsmouth charged with mutiny. They pleaded not guilty and were remanded for trial next Monday. The court accepted bail for their appearance.

The saloon passengers of the Olympic proceeded by train to Liverpool, where they embarked upon the Lusitania, which sailed for New York today.

BRIEFS

The sad news of the terrible ocean disaster came very near to Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Read of East Squantum street who went over to Europe on the same steamer the first of the year with Mr. and Mrs. Isidor Straus. They sat at the same table, walked the deck with them day after day and enjoyed their genial companionship throughout the voyage. As Mrs. Read said words fail to express her esteem of the wife who scorned the deliverance her chivalrous husband declined to share.

William C. Bamburgh, Publicity Manager of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, has accepted an invitation to give an illustrated talk on the "Telephone" before the Walther and Rand class of the First Baptist church, Wollaston, Monday evening at 8 o'clock. Those who have heard Mr. Bamburgh state that the talk is exceedingly interesting and that the speaker gives a comprehensive idea of many features of this public utility. A cordial invitation is extended to all men desiring to be present. No charge or collection.

The baseball team of the Quincy school defeated the Massachusetts Fields school, Wednesday afternoon score 5 to 2. The girls baseball team also defeated the girls team of the Massachusets Fields school in a larger score.

Miss Celina Beleveau is to be assisted at her recital at Alpha hall, Tuesday evening by Anna Louise Walker, pianist, Elmer Crawford violinist and William W. Walker, vocalist.

George Geekie of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, visited his parents at their home on Atlantic street Wednesday night and started Thursday morning for San Francisco.

The Votes for Women's lecture at Colonial hall Monday night has been postponed owing to the speaker, Dr. Shaw, being unable to get home from Ohio where she is lecturing.

The Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Quincy school has arranged for a lecture on historic Quincy for Tuesday May seventh.

A rumor which is not heralded with any degree of pleasure by residents of the Park, is that there is to be a moving picture show and bowling alley in operation at Wollaston beach this summer. It is earnestly hoped that the proper authorities will prohibit anything of the kind from getting a foothold in the locality.

The Walther Men's class will meet Sunday at 12.15 in the Wollaston Baptist church, Rev. Joseph Walther will lead the Discussions, subject "The Beatitudes" and "The Wreck of the Titanic." All men not in other similar classes invited.

Quincy Young People's Religious union is to entertain the Boston Federation on Sunday; business session at 4 P. M., supper at 6 and an address at 7 by Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, pastor of the church.

William H. Mears is slowly recovering at his home 45 Parker street, Chelsea, where he is always pleased to meet his friends. Mr. Mears was seriously injured in a head on collision at Holliston Dec. 20 and has had a slow convalescence.

Christian Endeavorers of Memorial church are to hold their meeting after the evening service Sunday instead of at six o'clock. Dr. Richards of the Phillips Congregational church South Boston outlined such a plan at the Ministers' conference, April 19th and Mr. Davison advised the young people to make the experiment.

Joseph Halbert, a former pupil of the Quincy High school, class 1913, but now a junior at the West Roxbury High school, was one of the individual prize winners at the annual drill of the Boston High school Cadets, Mechanics' building on Wednesday. This is the second prize Joe has captured this year for drilling.

CAMPAIGN IN TEXTILE TOWNS

Taft and Roosevelt Will Make Whirlwind Tour

GRAVITY OF THE SITUATION

It Is Sensed by Both Candidates, Who Will Put Forth Utmost Efforts to Carry Bay State on Tuesday—History Making Development, as Primaries Will Have Decided Effect on Other States to Vote

Boston, April 27.—The extreme importance of Massachusetts in the primaries to be held next Tuesday has resulted in the decision of the two Republican candidates for the presidency to make their last stand here.

Following the announcement from the progressive headquarters that Mr. Roosevelt will spend today and next Monday in touring the state, with special efforts to cover the textile centres, comes the announcement from the headquarters of the Taft league that President Taft has been prevailed upon to visit Massachusetts Monday and devote all the time that is possible during the day to the thousands of mill and factory operatives in Lawrence, Lowell, New Bedford, Fall River, Taunton, Brockton and Haverhill, who have not heard him during the visits that he has made.

President Taft was in consultation with many of his Bay State leaders Thursday from the time that he entered the state at Springfield and by nightfall he had sensed the gravity of the situation here. He was unable to prolong his visit because of the importance of his presence at the funeral of General Grant at New York and the meeting of the Union league of Philadelphia Saturday evening in honor of the birthday of U. S. Grant.

Before he took the train at the South station at midnight, however, he had given his promise to return on Monday and make the whirlwind tour of the textile districts that have been urgently demanding his presence.

Mr. Roosevelt will go to New Bedford, Fall River, Taunton and Brockton today and will be heard in Lawrence and Lowell on Monday. President Taft, it is expected, will follow practically the same course and cross Roosevelt's tracks on the same day in Lawrence and Lowell.

Thus the waning hours of the campaign for the presidential nomination will find both candidates making their last stand in Massachusetts, a history-making development for the state. All over the country Republican eyes are turned to Massachusetts. What the primaries will show Tuesday night will have a decided effect on the other states to vote in the next few weeks.

The strategic value of Saturday as a campaign day is understood on both sides. It will afford Roosevelt a great advantage in the mill and factory centres, for with places of business closed during the afternoon he will be able to reach a larger number of operatives than would be possible on any other day of the week. Then, also, must be considered the advantage of his presence and his arguments for voters to consider in the quiet and inactivity of the Sabbath.

Clever politicians of both Republican and Democratic ranks are free to admit that "day-before" campaigning is not so effective as it might have been years ago.

WILL SUPPORT NOMINEE

Wilson's Promise In Address to Large Crowd at Boston

Boston, April 27.—Before a crowd that packed Tremont temple to the doors Governor Wilson of New Jersey last night announced the principles of his Democracy. He pledged himself to lay aside all personal ambition, and to support the nominee of the Democratic party, whoever he may be.

Solemnly he voiced a warning to the people of Massachusetts that whichever party wins this fall, if that party does not redeem its pledges to the citizens of the nation and bring about the social, economic and political reforms sorely needed, it will mean that the next President of the United States will be elected by the Socialists.

He scathingly arraigned William R. Hearst for attempting to disrupt the Democratic party on the eve of its greatest opportunity for a generation.

TAFT MEN SURRENDER

Missouri Delegates to National Convention Instructed For Roosevelt

St. Louis, April 27.—Governor Hadley and his friends swung the Missouri state Republican convention for Roosevelt, after a twenty-four-hour deadlock, in which the Taft leaders finally surrendered.

Eight delegates at large to the national Republican convention, all Roosevelt men and all instructed for him, were elected after two Taft leaders had been elected and then had resigned their places on the Missouri delegation when the convention voted instructions for Roosevelt.

FUNERAL OF GRANT

President Taft and Other Distinguished Persons Attend

New York, April 27.—The body of Major General Frederick D. Grant was taken from the chapel of Cornelius the Centurion on Governor's island, three miles through the streets of New York to a special train over the West Shore, which bore it to its last resting place at West Point.

Between thousands of persons, fringing the line of march, the funeral train walked, led by the beat of muffled drums and extending nearly drums and extending nearly a mile along the streets.

A caisson beside which marched eight non-commissioned officers, the active pallbearers, bore the body from the south ferry to the railroad station.

President Taft, Vice President Sherman, members of congress, officers high in the army and navy and men of note in a dozen callings gathered with the family at the chapel where the Episcopal services for the burial of the dead were read.

MAGDELENA CONCESSIONS

Japanese Scientists Said to Be Making Elaborate Surveys

San Francisco, April 27.—Present conditions at Magdalena bay, Mex., are reported in a special dispatch to The Examiner as follows:

An extensive concession of timber and agricultural lands, accompanied by a grant of fishing rights for 700 miles from Manzanillo to Salina Cruz, was obtained through the Japanese ambassador to Mexico last year.

Thirty Japanese scientists now on the ground are making elaborate surveys, among them Katsuce Tago, official representative of the Japanese government.

The concession was made to a private company backed by Soichiro Asano, president of the Oriental Steamship company and a wealthy banker.

START FOR ALLEGED MURDERER OF MARSH

Inspectors Said to Be Armed With Strong Evidence

Lynn, Mass., April 27.—Inspectors Burckes and Kane of the Lynn police started for Stockton, Cal., with extradition papers for the return of William A. Dorr, wanted for the murder of George E. Marsh. The officers will arrive in Stockton Wednesday and spend several days looking up evidence there.

The inspectors took with them a lengthy summary of the statements of witnesses who saw Dorr in Lynn, tending to show that he carefully planned the murder, and acted as a sane man while in the east. This will be used, if necessary, to combat an insanity plea by Dorr.

District Attorney Attwill declared that he has secured sufficient evidence to convict Dorr of murder in the first degree.

FOR KILLING MATHER

Young Mariano Is Held on the Charge of Manslaughter

Providence, April 27.—After evidence had been introduced to show that 12-year-old William Mather, Jr., of Marieville had been killed Feb. 28, by fracture of the skull, probably caused by a stone, Antonio Mariano, aged 13, was held on the charge of manslaughter for the grand jury by Judge Reuckert in the district court.

In default of bail the boy was remanded to the reform school.

Testimony was offered by the prosecution that an alleged confession had been made to the police in which the boy is alleged to have declared he killed the Mather lad, but "did not mean to do it."

Wonderful Hat Attracts Attention and Leads to an Arrest

New York, April 27.—A woman's vanity was the undoing of Harvey Kelsey. He robbed Quinn's millinery store April 9, and gave "his girl" some ostrich plumes. She made a wonderful hat. It had nine plumes all sticking straight up. Naturally this aroused suspicion.

The two were questioned by the police. Kelsey confessed to the police that he stole the plumes.

MYSTERY ENSHROUDS THE BIBBER MURDER

Question Whether He Was Slain For Money or Revenge

Lewiston, Me., April 27.—The mystery of the murder of John W. Bibber in front of his home on Oak street deepens as the hours pass. Both city and county authorities have followed up all possible clues. The questions which the police are asking are: "Was Bibber shot down for money or was he the victim of some revengeful rival?"

In quiet tones people are asking: "Is there a woman in the case?"

That Bibber was shot down within a few feet of his own home and within a few feet of an arc light which cast such a ray as to enable Mr. Eaton, at whose home Bibber roomed, to see the glimmer of a revolver as he looked from his window, is considered to be another reason to lead the authorities to believe that robbery was not the motive.

THREATENS TO RESIGN

Goethals Wants Trained Force to Undertake Opening of Canal

Washington, April 27.—Colonel Goethals, in charge of the construction of the Panama canal, may resign rather than remain to undertake the opening of the canal without a properly trained administration force, according to John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American union, who has just returned to Washington after a visit to the canal zone.

Barrett says that Goethals has made it plain to him that he and the men who are with him would not be willing to bear the brunt of the responsibility of operating the canal without a trained force behind them.

NAGGING IS NO EXCUSE

Husband Cannot Abandon His Wife on That Account

New York, April 27.—A woman has a perfect right to nag her husband, according to the decision of Supreme Court Justice Marean, who granted a separation to Mrs. Amelia Kahler from William Kahler.

Mrs. Kahler charged her husband with abandoning her and he retorted that she had driven him to this step through constant nagging.

"A man has to stand such treatment from his wife," said the court. "That is no excuse for abandonment."

CHAPTER XXXI.

Solomon's Last Night.

It had been with no little reluctance that Solomon Mahaffy accompanied Yancy and Cavendish to Belle Plain; he would have preferred to remain in Raleigh in attendance upon Judge Price. Intimately acquainted with the judge's mental processes, he could follow all the devious workings of that magnificent mind; he could fathom the simply hellish ingenuity he was capable of putting forth to accomplish temporary benefits. Permitting his thoughts to dwell upon the mingled strength and weakness which was so curiously blended in Slocum Price's character, he had horrid visions of that great soul, freed from the trammels of restraint, confiding his melancholy history to Mr. Pegloe in the hope of bolstering his fallen credit at the City Tavern.

Always where the judge was concerned he fluctuated between extremes of doubt and confidence. He felt that under the urgent spur of occasion his friend could rise to any emergency, while a sustained activity made demands which he could not satisfy; then his efforts were discounted by his insane desire to realize at once on his opportunities; in his haste he was for ever plucking unripe fruit; and though he might keep one eye on the main chance the other was fixed just as resolutely on the nearest tavern.

With the great stake which fate had suddenly introduced into their losing game, he wished earnestly to believe that the judge would stay quietly in his office and complete the task he had set himself; that with this off his hands the promise of excitement at Belle Plain would compel his presence there, when he would pass somewhat under the restraining influence which he was determined to exert; in short, to Solomon, life embraced just the one vital consideration, which was to maintain the judge in a state of sobriety until after his meeting with Fentress.

The purple of twilight was stealing over the land when he and his two companions reached Belle Plain. They learned that Tom Ware had returned from Memphis, that the bayou had been dragged but without results, and that as yet nothing had been heard from Carrington or the dogs he had gone for.

Presently Cavendish and Yancy set off across the fields. They were going on to the raft, to Polly and the six little Cavendishes, whom they had not seen since early morning; but they promised to be back at Belle Plain within an hour.

By very nature an alien, Mahaffy sought out a dark corner on the wide porch that overlooked the river to await their return. The house had been thrown open, and supper was being served to whoever cared to stay and partake of it. The murmur of idle purposeless talk drifted out to him; he was irritated and offended by it. There was something garish in this indiscriminate hospitality in the very home of tragedy. As the moments slipped by his sense of displeasure increased, with mankind in general, with himself, and with the judge—principally with the judge—who was to make a foolish target of himself in the morning. He was going to give the man who had wrecked his life a chance to take it as well. Mahaffy's cold logic dealt cynically with the preposterous situation his friend had created.

In the midst of his angry meditations he heard a clock strike in the hall and counted the strokes. It was nine o'clock. Surely Yancy and Cavendish had been gone their hour! He quitted his seat and strolled restlessly about the house. He felt deeply indignant with everybody and everything. Human intelligence seemed but a pitiable advance on brute instinct. A whole day had passed and what had been accomplished? Carrington, the judge, Yancy, Cavendish—the four men who might have worked together to some purpose—had widely separated themselves; and here was the duel, the very climax of absurdity. He resumed his dark corner and waited another hour. Still no Carrington, and Yancy and Cavendish had not come up from the raft.

"Fools!" thought Mahaffy bitterly. "All of them fools!"

At last he decided to go back to the judge; and a moment later was hurrying down the lane in the direction of the highroad, but, jaded as he was by the effort he had already put for that day, the walk to Raleigh made tremendous demands on him, and it was midnight when he entered the little town.

It cannot be said that he was altogether surprised when he found their cottage dark and apparently deserted. He had half expected this. Entering and not stopping to secure a candle, he groped his way upstairs to the room on the second floor which he and the judge shared.

"Price!" he called, but this gained him no response, and he cursed softly under his breath.

He hastily descended to the kitchen, lighted a candle, and stepped into the adjoining room. On the table was a neat pile of papers, and topping the pile was the president's letter. Being burdened by no false scruples, and thinking it might afford some clue to the judge's whereabouts, Mahaffy took it up and read it. Having mastered its contents he instantly glanced in the direction of the City Tavern, but it was wrapped in darkness.

"Price is drunk somewhere," was his definite conclusion. "But he'll be at Boggs' the first thing in the morning—most likely so far gone he can hardly stand!"

The letter, with its striking news, made little or no impression on him just then; it merely furnished the clue he had sought. The judge was off somewhere marketing his prospects.

After a time Mahaffy went upstairs, and, without removing his clothes, threw himself on the bed. He was worn down to the point of exhaustion, yet he could not sleep, though the deep silence warned him that day was not far off. What if—but he would not let the thought shape itself in his mind. He had witnessed the judge's skill with the pistol, and he had even a certain irrational faith in that gentleman's destiny. He prayed God that Fentress might die quickly and decently with the judge's bullet through his brain. Over and over in savage supplication he muttered his prayer that Fentress might die.

Mahaffy watched for the coming of the dawn, but before the darkness lifted he had risen from the bed and gone downstairs, where he made himself a cup of wretched coffee. Then he blew out his candle and watched the gray light spread. He was impatient now to be off, and fully an hour before the sun, set out for Boggs', a tall, gaunt figure in the shadowy uncertainty of that October morning. He was the first to reach the place of meeting, but he had scarcely entered the meadow when Fentress rode up, attended by Tom Ware. They dismounted, and the colonel lifted his hat. Mahaffy barely acknowledged the salute; he was in no mood for courtesies that meant nothing. Ware was clearly of the same mind.

There was an awkward pause, then Fentress and Ware spoke together in a low tone. The planter's speech was broken and hoarse, and his heavy, blood-shot eyes were the eyes of a haunted man; this was all a part of Fentress' scheme to face the world, and Ware still believed that the fires Hicks had kindled had served his desperate need.

When the first long shadows stole out from the edge of the woods Fentress turned to Mahaffy, whose glance was directed toward the distant corner of the field, where he knew his friend must first appear.

"Why are we waiting, sir?" he demanded, his tone cold and formal.

"Something has occurred to detain Price," answered Mahaffy.

The colonel and Ware exchanged looks. Again they spoke together, while Mahaffy watched the road. Ten minutes slipped by in this manner, and once more Fentress addressed Mahaffy.

"Do you know what could have detained him?" he inquired, the ghost of a smile curling his thin lips.

"I don't," said Mahaffy, and relapsed into a moody and anxious silence. He held dueling in very proper abhorrence, and only his feeling of intense but never-declared loyalty to his friend had brought him there.

LORD DENIES STORY OF GILL

But California's Commander Admits Seeing White Rockets

WERE NOT DISTRESS SIGNALS

Says He Did Not Inquire Concerning Them and Went to Bed While His Boat Was Nineteen and a Half Miles From Position of Titanic—Wireless Operator Testifies That Crew Were Critical of Captain's Course—Donkeyman Repeats His Story That Lord Saw Signals of Distress—Franklin Denies Suppression of News

Washington, April 27.—Captain Stanley Lord of the Leyland liner Californian yesterday afternoon told the senate committee investigating the Titanic disaster that on the night of the wreck, while his boat lay in the ice floe 19½ miles from the position of the Titanic, a large steamer came up a few miles off and sent up rockets.

They were white rockets, he said, and not distress signals, and he didn't inquire concerning them and went to bed.

Captain Lord's statement was made as part of his denial of the charge made by Ernest Gill, a donkey engineman on the Californian, that the captain had refused to go to the aid of the Titanic after seeing and also being told of the rockets.

Cyril Evans, the Californian's wireless operator, said he saw the rockets and testified to hearing much talk among the crew, who were critical of the captain's course. Gill, he said, told him he expected to get $500 for his story when the ship reached Boston.

Captain Lord entered a sweeping denial of Ernest Gill's accusations and read from the Californian's log to support his contention.

Evans testified to having warned the Titanic only a short time before the great vessel dashed into the berg that the sea was crowded with ice. The Titanic's operators, he said, were at the time working with the wireless station at Cape Race, and they told him to "shut up" and "keep out." Within a half hour the pride of the sea was sinking.

Less than twenty miles away from the Titanic when she went down with 1600 souls rode the Californian, heedless of the rockets that told the death story of the great ship, according to the sworn testimony of Ernest Gill, second donkey engineman of the Californian.

Rockets from the Titanic told the story of her distress to the Californian, testified Gill. At four minutes before 12 o'clock he saw the lights of the Titanic. Thirty-five minutes later he saw her rockets ascending.

"You estimate that the rockets were not as much as twenty miles away?" asked Senator Smith.

"It couldn't have been that far, or I wouldn't have seen it at all," declared Gill. He said others of the Californian's crew had seen the Titanic's distress signals, but were withheld from volunteering testimony by fear of "losing their jobs."

Senator Smith, chairman of the senate investigating committee, produced a telegram showing that the White Star line had prevented two important witnesses from coming to Washington and testifying. These witnesses were Captain Lord of the Californian and his wireless operator, Evans.

The charge that the White Star line had detained these men at Boston was made in a telegram from the United States marshal at Boston. In the midst of the sensation that followed the production of the telegram Vice President Franklin took the stand and explained he had ordered both witnesses to Washington and that they would soon appear.

P. A. S. Franklin, vice president of the International Mercantile Marine, was called to the stand and was questioned further in an effort to learn whether news of the disaster was held back by the White Star line. Franklin insisted there was no suppression.

Franklin reiterated that the first information he received of the Titanic hitting the iceberg was when a newspaper reporter awakened him at his home at 2 o'clock Monday morning. Senator Smith had the witness read a cable mesage which he sent to the line's Liverpool office telling of the accident and declaring that the Virginian was on the way to the Titanic's assistance. The cablegram was sent at 6:15 Monday morning.

"Do you think," asked the senator, "that if the information you cabled abroad was worth reporting to Liverpool it certainly was important enough to give to the public?"

Franklin said he based his report entirely on a telephone communication with the line's agent in Montreal and on reports received by The Associated Press and the newspapers. He said he lost no time after receiving telephonic reports from Montreal informing Liverpool of the "rumors."

Senator Smith suggested Franklin had received the information from Montreal at 3:30 and did not send a dispatch until 6:15.

"I had to wait until I got to the office before I cabled," said Franklin. "It was a matter of expediency."

The President on his way from Brockton to Boston on Monday afternoon will stop in Quincy about ten minutes, just about two o'clock.

TWO MURDERERS ARE SENTENCED

Spano from 10 to 12 Years, Cassetti from 7 to 9 Years

MANSLAUGHTER

Saverio Spano of Quincy who has been on trial at Dedham for the past two weeks for the murder of Giuseppe Rucher at Quincy December 11, 1911 was convicted Friday and sentenced to from 10 to 12 years.

The murder was the outcome of a Sunday fracas in a boarding house on Water street. It is said that there were some words in the house over the payment of beer. Words led to blows and blows to shooting. As the argument grew warm it is alleged that Spano drew a revolver and begun to shoot. One man got a shot through the eye and there were several bullet holes found in the walls of the room later by the police.

Rucher, the man killed, ran out of the house across the street with Spano in hot pursuit. It was alleged that Spano had a bread knife in his hand which he plunged into the back of Rucher, inflicting wounds from which he died. When the police arrived several men were taken into custody as during the excitement no connected story of the affair could be learned.

The trial was commenced April 15. When sentence was pronounced yesterday Spano's wife who was in court went into hysterics and clung to him until the officers took her away. For some time afterward she sat wailing on the court house steps with her 13 months' baby in her arms.

Spano was charged with murder in the first degree but was only convicted of manslaughter.

Another murder case was also disposed of yesterday at Dedham when Peter Cassetti of Weymouth received a sentence of from seven to nine years for the murder of his brother at Weymouth, Oct. 1, 1911. This was another Sunday row during which it was alleged that Peter struck his brother Nicola down, by stabbing him in the face with a pitchfork. After the deed, which was commited during a fit of anger, it was thought that Nicola was only stuned. Efforts to revive him were unavailing however, and when Peter realized that he was dead he made his escape but was capturd in Boston. He pleaded guilty to the charge of manslaughter.

LADIES' NIGHT.

The second Ladies' night observed gym, Friday evening was attended by over forty couple. The gym was a pretty spectacle decorated with bunting by the College club in the Y. M. C. A. ing and colllege pennants.

The party was matronized by Mrs. John F. Hunt, and Mrs. George W. Abele and Delcevare King had charge of the games which were heartily enjoyed by all.

Kip Young, well known at the High school and among the younger set caused much mirth by his jococity of manner.

Refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake and frappe were served.

Some of the fellows including Roland Estey, Henry Trask and Raymond Hall proceeded to entertain themselves and kept the crowd in continual laughter.

The party broke up about eleven o'clock. The committee in charge were: Fred Ward, chairman, Sturgis Hunt and George Daniels.

MRS. CAROLINE C. HARRIS.

Funeral services for the late Mrs. Caroline C. Harris were held Friday afternoon at half past two at her home on Edwards street, Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson of First church officiating. WAS SWINDLED OUT OF $600

A despatch in a morning paper from Chicago says that Joseph Casno of Quincy, Mass., a guest at the Morrisor house, complained to the police last night that he had been swindled of $600 by members of a gang of wire tappers, who sold him fake "inside information" on race tracks. The name of Joseph Casno does not appear in the last Quincy directory. There are several by the name of Casno however but no Joseph.

A clean hit to right field made by Bary the brilliant left fielder of the Quincy High nine, at a most opportune moment, enabled the Granite City players to annex two runs and incidentally defeat Weymouth High 2 to 1, in the game played yesterday afternoon at Merrymount park. BOARD OF TRADE.

Associated Boards of Trade Norfolk County held a meeting Thursday evening at the United States hotel, Boston. Mr. Rane, State Forester, was present and gave a very interesting talk on the protection and extinquishment of forest fires.

He emphasized very strongly the importance of securing proper persons for Tree Wardens and the necessity of retaining in office an experienced and competent man. He said that there was great difficulty in the towns of the State in securing the promotion of the right kind of man. He also emphasised the fact that there was a great need of proper equipment in the way of fire extinguishers and shovels to extinguish fires in early stages. He gave an interesting account of the establishment by the State of observation towers and the arrangements for telephonic communication between those towers and town officials in various sections. By means of observation from those towers very many fires had been quickly observed and extinguished by means of the rapidity of sending definite information.

His talk occupied some three-quarters of an hour and was very instructive. It would seem advisable that the towns in Norfolk County should be in close touch with the State Forestry Department and avail themselves of the information and recommendations made by that department. The necessity for that is not shown so particularly in Quincy, as it is in the towns of Norfolk County, and he stated that his department was only too glad to meet representatives and officials from those towns and furnish every assistance in their power.

The main facts which he emphasized were the necessity of the towns providing some apparatus to immediately be on the ground of an incipient forest fire, thus making it possible for an early extinquishment.

That equipment was simply a horse and wagon with a supply of fire extinguishers, pails for water and a supply of soda.

There were representatives from many of the towns in Norfolk County at that meeting, and his talk was very interesting, and if his recommendations would be accepted and carried out by town officials would result in great saving of pecuniary loss and would also add very much to the attractiveness in value of land in the towns.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 27 No. 101 QUINCY, MASS., MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 29, 1912 PRICE TWO CENTS

COUNTRY'S TWO FOREMOST MEN VISIT QUINCY

EX-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT PAYS QUINCY FLYING VISIT SATURDAY

Makes a Ten-Minute Speech in City Square to the Thousands Who Had Gathered to Greet Him

Is Given Rousing Cheer as Auto Leaves for South Quincy

Ex-President Theodore Roosevelt, who has been honored by the citizens of United States as no other citizen has and who is seeking the presidential nomination paid Quincy a flying visit on his return from a speaking tour of the South Shore. As stated in Saturday's Ledger there were many that were disappointed when his special train sped through Quincy without stopping.

Arrangements were made for him to stop on his return trip to Boston. But here again some one blundered and although he came to Quincy part of the crowd were assembled at Alpha hall and the remainder at the depot. It had been announced by flyers that he would speak near the Quincy depot and the larger crowd were there.

As it was impossible to hold the train and Quincy and there were no facilities for sidetracking it here the train was sidetracked at Quincy Adams. Here he was met by John H. Johnson, chairman of the local Roosevelt committee, William E. Hingston an alternate delegate candidate from the tenth district. Col. Kincaide was also in waiting with his automobile.

Shortly before the train arrived however Chairman Johnson told some of the crowd at the depot that the ex-President would speak at Alpha hall.

Chief Burrell sent several officers there and the hall was made ready. Quite a crowd went to the hall and a few minutes later the automobile with the ex-President aboard drew up to the hall. A stop of scarcely a minute was made for it was seen that the crowd there was small. Taking off his hat to those there the auto started toward City Square leaving the impression that he was simply going to ride through the square and then return to the hall.

Such was not the case however and those who remained at the hall got left.

When the auto reached City Square it turned into depot street and came to a stop in the centre of a large crowd of men, women and children that had gathered to see at close hand the man of whom so much has been said.

As soon as the auto stopped, several reached out their hands and shook hands with Teddy who then stood up and addressed the crowd briefly telling them he was for the common people and against the trusts.

No one seemed to take the initiative in cheering until Chairman Johnson called for cheers which were given.

The auto then turned about and went as far as the corner of Hancock and Saville streets where it stopped for a minute. Here more cheers were given after which the auto started for Quincy Adams with Teddy waving his hat in the air as it disappeared.

Thus did the citizens have an opportunity to see the famous ex-President.

The ex-president lost no time in getting down to action, as soon as the depot was reached. When the applause subsided, he outlined the policies he had always followed in the past and the ideals which he intended to foster in the future.

He paid a high tribute to the historic city of Quincy and commended the excellent type of citizenship to be found here. He attacked what he called the "silk stocking element," composed of people who seemed to think that they were far beyond the ordinary class and therefore assumed they had the right to dictate. Such men as these, Roosevelt declared were against him. He also asserted that 95 percent of the vested interests in the country were against him, that95 per cent of the moneyed and influential corporations were against him, but that the verdict of the voters in this state would show that his candidacy is based upon sound principles. He added that eventually even the interests would be forced to submit to the will of the people.

Concluding he said: "I am for the protective tariff," "so long as it gets by the office and into the pay envelopes. We should have a bureau to investigate the conditions and wages of labor in protected industries, so as to be sure that the protection resulted for the benefit of the man for whom it is primarily intended.

"I mean to make the tariff a square deal," said the colonel.

"I stand," he shouted, "for the basic principles of popular government, the right of the people to rule and for social and industrial justice for every man and woman within the borders of the nation."

"And I ask you people of Massachusetts, you men of Quincy, on next Tuesday to put yourselves beside Illinois and Pennsylvania and Maine in the lead of the movement.

PRESIDENT WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT GIVEN A TREMENDOUS OVATION

Thousands Gather in City Square to Greet and Welcome the Chief Executive of the Nation

Air is Rent With Deafening Cheers as He Finishes Ten-Minute Speech

Seldom has it been that the citizens have had an opportunity to honor the President, much less to hear him speak and the thousands of men, women and children gathered in City Square was in itself evidence of the loyalty of the citizens to the President and it is safe to say that no man ever received a more hearty reception than did President Taft when he stepped from his special train a few minutes past 2 o'clock this afternoon.

When it was made known Saturday night that the President had consented to speak to the citizens of Quincy, the reception committee headed by Eben W. Sheppard immediately got at work to see to it that the Chief Executive of these United States should be given a reception such as would leave no doubt in his mind of the loyalty of our citizens.

It was not the first visit of President Taft to Quincy for he was present two years ago at one of the aviation meets. The great mass of the people however did not have an opportunity to see him at that time. It was not surprising therefore that a vast multitude gathered in and about City Square today.

The committee in whose hands the reception was given, and who saw to it that nothing was left undone to assure the President a hearty welcome, was as stated above, headed by Eben E. Sheppard. Others on the committee were Hon. Eugene R. Stone, Admiral Francis T. Bowles, William H. Teasdale, Harry G. Studley, Dr. Fred E. Jones, Fred Drake, Alfred LaBrecque, Felix Favorite, Frank Shay, Arthur W. Loud, Albert Bruff, Leo J. McMaster, John D. Mackay, Charles W. Bailey, A. N. Murray, C. E. Barker, John L. Hamilton, Representative Walter E. Piper, Representative William J. Leslie, Senator George L. Barnes, T. Clifford Gallagher of Milton, Edward J. Sandberg, Arthur Rohn, Louis F. R. Langelier, Charles C. Hearn, Anthony J. Thompson, John O. Hall, John A. Gautheir, Charles A. Ross, John R. Richards, Joseph Walker, George T. Magee, E. C. Sargent, Herbert S. Child, S. T. MacQuarrie, John W. McAnarney, Charles H. Penniman, Charles P. Gould, Frederic E. Tupper, Henry T. Tilden, Peter T. Fallon, Joseph Carruthers, Warren H. Rideout, Ex-Councilman Murdock Campbell, Alfred O. Diak, William H. Deacon, Arthur Pinel, Emery L. Crane, Theophilus King, Delcevare King, Col. Henry L. Kincaide, William R. Thomas G. O. Miller, J. A. Sedgwick, T L. Williams, Frank H. Crane, Henry O. Fairbanks, George H. Brown, William P. Thompson, Clarence Burgin, Arthur Russell, Andrew Johnson, Frank F. Crane, T. Willard Burke, John R. S. Ross, Hon. E. C. Hutlman, Fred H. Smith, Frank F. Prescott, Herbert T. Whitman,, H. Gerrish Smith.

Early this morning boys were out bright and early distributing flyers announcing the fact that the President would speak in City Square near the depot at 2 o'clock. In addition to this, The Finnish band left the West Quincy depot at noon and marched to City Square, accompanied by men bearing aloft banners announcing that the President was to be here.

At 11.30 the Wollaston band escorting similar banner bearers left the Atlantic depot and marched to City Square.

Erected in front of the depot was one of the launching stands from the Fore River yard which was used as a speaking stand for the President.

Mayor Stone and Admiral Bowles of the Fore River Co., went to Brockton and met the President, and accompanied him to Quincy. As the train pulled into the depot 21 blows, the President's salute was sounded on the fire alarm bells and whistles, while the whistles at the granite yards throughout the city shrieked forth their welcome to the Chief Executive which also served to announce that the President was the guest of the city Flags were also displayed on all public buildings and on many of the private residences of the city.

Long before the train had arrived the crowd began to gather in and about the depot, seeking advantage points. Just outside of the speakers' stand was an inclosure, which was reserved for the reception committee. Admittance to this enclosure was by ticket. Here there were gathered a hundred or more ladies and gentlemen wearing blue ribbons, and badges, upon which gold letters were the words, "Taft Committee."

While the crowd was waiting the arrival of the train, there were short addresses by Congressman Manning of Birmingham, Ala., and Hon. Guy Ham both of whom were introduced by Hon. E. C. Hultman. Both confined themselves to the issues although Mr. Ham paid special attention to the third term phase.

It was just 2.28 when the special train pulled into the depot and as it came to a stop the band played "Hail to the Chief" and the fire alarm bells struck 21 blows. A mighty cheer arose as the President, accompanied by Mayor Stone, Admiral Bowles and the President's personal aid and a half dozen secret service men. As the President mounted the speaker's platform another cheer resounded and there was the sharp click of half a hundred cameras as his picture was

SORRY SCHOOLS DID NOT CLOSE

Mayor Stone was greatly disappointed when he learned that the children of the public schools were not to be given the opportunity of seeing President Taft. His Honor little thought that this privilege would be withheld from the pupils and when he tried to get in communication with the Superintendent Barbour, in order to use his influence in the matter and thus gladden the hearts of hundreds of youngsters, he was informed that the latter had gone away for the day and was not to return until this evening. The Mayor expressed his regrets to a Ledger reporter as follows: "I deeply regret that the opportunity to see President Taft has not been afforded the children of the public schools. To them, his visit will mean much and their failure to hear him speak will no doubt prove a serious loss to them, for perhaps the chance to see another president may never be again offered. I was sorry to learn that Superintendent Barbour had left town, for his absence has placed matters in such a state that the thought of the children greeting the president was not noticed until it became too late. The children have my sincerest sentiments of regret in being prevented from meeting the Chief Executive of the nation."

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

No presidential candidate has yet adopted the violet as symbol of his modesty.

The Topeka Journel says that a girl has no difficulty in dancing in shoes that almost kill her while washing dishes, but our exchange seems to ignore the power of sustaining arms.

Col. Roosevelt arrived at the Quincy station Saturday afternoon in an automobile with our own Colonel Henry L. Kincaide at the wheel, who saw to it that the ex-president was safely conveyed.

Fifteen million people to vote next fall. With only 150,000 offices to distribute, 200 rivers and harbors to be improved, 200 post office buildings to go up, there will be 14,849,600 to feel that popular government is a failure.

The steamship companies complain that every editor thinks he knows how to run a liner, but in our opinion there are a number of points in which our printer's devil could make some valuable suggestions for improvements.

We are mighty sorry, there is a lot of good stuff crowded out of today's Ledger—but then you know it isn't every day the President of the United States comes to town, and that smile got us. You will find the church news, sports, etc., and a lot more in the Tuesday Ledger.

Quincy's clean-up week starts in on Wednesday, May 1st. So many people are being interested, we should present a very tidy appearance as to front and back yards ere long. The Quincy Women's club is active in every ward and the West Quincy Improvement Society is to do some strenuous work which surely means much will be accomplished. It is hoped the children will also get busy.

MRS. ANNIE F. KELLEY.

The funeral of Mrs. Annie F. Kelley, of 49 Crescent street, took place from her late home Sunday afternoon. Prayers were offered in St. Mary's church at two o'clock by Rev. William J. Duffy, and burial was at St. Mary's cemetery. The deceased was for many years one of the best known residents of the West Quincy district and her death was a great sorrow to a large number. A requiem mass for the repose of her soul was celebrated in St. Mary's church this morning at nine o'clock by Rev. Henry T. Grady.

OLD SETTLERS TO MOVE.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hersey, who are not old in years, yet may be called old settlers because of their long residence, are moving to Medford this week, having sold their place on Coddington street. They go to Medford to be near their only son, Walter Hersey.

Mr. Hersey is a G. A. R. man and active in all the work of the Veterans. Mrs. Hersey is an active worker at Christ church and interested in many local affairs.

They have been good neighbors and friends and will be missed by many lifelong friends, who wish them Godspeed and every happiness in their new home.

GIVES DINNER AND CONCERT

Under Auspices of Young Men's Club of Lutheran Church

GRAND TIME

A dinner and entertainment was given Saturday evening at Electa hall, under the auspices of the Young Men's club of the Lutheran church.

The turkey dinner, which was especially fine and substantial, was provided by the following committee: August Viden, Carl Thorne, Andrew Nelson, Ivon Anderson, ably assisted by Arthur Peterson, Victor Erickson, Henry Nordell, Hilding Larson, Rudolph Nelson, Arvid Amnelius, Victor Johnson, Ernest Johnson, Edward Swanson, Carl Friberg, George Friberg, Alfred Nelson, Andrew Nelson, who acted as waiters.

Following the dinner, a fine program was presented which was varied and interesting, pleasing the audience which evinced its delight by prolonged applause. The orchestra composed of members of the Young Men's club were Carl Carlson, pianist; Rudolph Nelson and Arvid Amnelius, violins; John Johnson, cornet; Charles Chilbleg trombone and Carl Thorne, mandolin.

Several fine selections were rendered, both vocal and instrumental. Swedes are noted for their glee clubs. Particularly well-known, and of wide reputation are their student and college songs. At the recent Paris exposition, the Swedes carried off first prize in an international contest of male voices.

Those who contributed to the evening's entertainment were: Clarence Lundin, Arthur and Edwin Swanson, Fritz Swanson, John F. Johnson, Nels Carlson, Jacob Bugcall, Oscar Hallquist, Hilma Viden, Esther Viden, Nellie Loddengard, Esther Thorne.

Anna Bjorkman gave humorous recitations, which elicited much applause to which she responded. Ruth Murray gave very pleasing piano selections, Miss Emma Witting, organist at the Lutheran church accompanying at the piano.

The star number was a vocal duet by Arthur and Edwin Swanson, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Swanson of Bryant street. They are very clever singers, the elder having a wonderful falsetto voice of rare quality. They received loud and prolonged applause.

John L. Larson a graduate of Harvard, and now instructor in history at the Allen school in Newton was master of ceremonies, and created much merriment by his ready wit and repartee.

Obert Slettens of the Harvard Law school spoke on the present political situation. Mr. Sletten said in part: "Members of the Young Men's club, ladies and gentlemen, permit me to direct your attention to the three great tests of a public speaker, who desires to be successful. The first is, to stand up; the second, to speak up; the third and greatest of all, is to shut up. In these days of political discussion, this latter virtue is frequently disregarded.

"This evening is not an ordinary one. It is a great one in numbers and great in achievement, a triumph for the young men's club, which has taken the initiative and have carried to a successful execution the plans and arrangements for the evening's banquet and entertainment. It is upon these young men today that the future of the state depends. It is upon them that the church is builded. It is through them that the church and state shall find inspiration for a wider and greater service. The church ought to be the dynamo wherein men and women are charged with the love of fellow man and the spirit of universal brotherhood.

"Our Declaration of Independence rests squarely upon the proposition that 'All men are created equal,' rendering service under all conditions and to all people without distinction. We know our globe from pole to pole, its farthest plains, its highest peaks, its beasts and birds even to the heart of darkest Africa. And yet our dreams are not dreamed out. Engrossed in the past in the desire for material gain, we have been blind to that greater and nobler purpose in life to live in imitation of Him who came not to be ministered unto but to minister. We as a nation are hoarding wealth and gaining acquisition of power by a few. The gospel of state socialism is growing rapidly and industrial conditions are so abominable and atrociously bad that riot has run loose, but we must admire those men who so love liberty, a fair chance to live that they are willing to organize and fight when they find themselves ground down and crushed without other means of redress for their grievances. I don't believe in peace, unless we have peace upon a basis of justice. It was extremely gratifying to hear early in the evening with what enthusiasm this audience cheered the name, Theodore Roosevelt and the mention of his policies. We are agreed upon the great vital questions which confront us: We recognize that we face a problem of intellectual evolution or physical revolution.

"Who in this great nation is fitted, by training and by environment to solve these great problems than you and your people? Every man and woman of Scandinavian descent is by nature progressive. The three kingdoms which lie in the far north of Europe have maintained unbroken for a period of over one thousand years absolute freedom and independence. Their citizens have been impressed for centuries with the sense of equality of men.

"I call your attention to the fact that in the United States Congress there are at least a dozen men, some born in Scandinavia, others direct descendant therefrom, and all in the ranks of the Progressives, with one possible exception, and the large majority stand with Senator La Follette. Have you no vision of the possibilities which lie before you? Does not the example of your fellow-citizens in the middle west inspire you to take an active part in this great struggle? Is it not time that you devoted some of your men and some of your talents to the cause of good government in New England?

"Shall we sit wild eyed before this splendid opportunity to be of service, with this splendid heritage behind us, shall we sit and see its lustre fade, or shall we square our shoulders under our obligations and lift the world along? What right have we to the fruits and toil of the past? What right have we to the protection we enjoy, to the homes and property and pride of blood and conscience? What have we done to deserve so great an inheritance, what are we doing to preserve for future generations these rights and privileges we have received? Shall we not take heed to the woes that yet oppress mankind and by opposing, end them? Shall we not share our strength with the weak, our intelligence with the ignorant, and our substance with the poor? That is true democracy. Tonight I want you to consider a new, old subject. I want you take it home with you, talk over it, dream over it, and I am convinced it will find friends, those who will, toil for it; suffer for it; if need be, die for it."

Mr. Sletten concluded with a discussion of the general principles underlying the Single Tax. He pointed out the inequalities and the injustice of the present system, its relation to poverty and privilege. Mr. Sletten is an ardent advocate of the single tax and it is his firm conviction that its adoption would materially increase the industrial and economic welfare of the nation. Among other things of interest to the public is Mr. Sletten's assertion that it would not increase taxes except in a few instances and then only in those cases where the owner would be fully able to bear the added burden.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

One of the pleasantest affairs of last week was a party given by Colonel and Mrs. Henry L. Kincaide, Saturday afternoon. There was a surprise in store for the young people present and two large hearts upon the cake prepared the guests for the announcement of the engagement of Colonel Kincaide's niece, Miss Grace E. Perry, to Mr. Frederick A. Cole, M. I. T. '08. Miss Perry will be remembered as a former Cranch School teacher; she is, at present, upon Newton's teaching staff. Mr. Cole is contracting engineer for the firm of J. M. Moore & Co., Boston.

"I appeal to what I believe to be the genuine American hatred of the boss and of special privilege. Is it this hatred to which Mr. Taft objects?

"Now, as to Mr. Taft's statement about the bosses; It is a little difficult to define a boss. My own definition is that in his fully developed form he is to go-between between the money power and the politicians; that he is the man responsible for the alliance between crooked politics and crooked business, which has been responsible for nine-tenths of the corruption in American political life. If there is any such man among my supporters, I do not know him.

"There were elected from Illinois just two Taft delegates, and both of these were the delegates from the district Mr. Lorimer has always controlled, and now controls. Mr. Taft speaks against Mr. Lorimer, makes public his opposition to Mr. Lorimer, now when he comes to Massachusetts, where there are no Lorimer votes. But he never ventured to raise his voice against Mr. Lorimer in Illinois or before the Illinois primary. He accepted Mr. Lorimer's support in Illinois.

"I have spoken against Mr. Lorimer again and again, from September, 1910, until the present day.

"I denounced Lorimer when there was danger in denouncing him. I assailed him when the cause of decency could be benefitted by assailing him. I think Mr. Taft acted badly in accepting Lorimer's support in silence. But I think he has acted much worse in coming to the front to repudiate Lorimer here in Massachusetts, where he thinks such repudiation can help him, after he has thus kept silent about it when repudiation might have hurt him.

"Mr. Taft states that I advised him to have a meeting with Cannon. I advised him to meet everyone, to consult with everyone, to try to get on with everyone. But no less emphatically I advised him to follow my example, to consult freely with the politicians, and to try to get on with them, BUT WHERE THE POLITICIANS SPLIT OFF FROM THE PEOPLE, THEN TO STAND WITH THE PEOPLE AND NOT WITH THE POLITICIANS; AND IT IS PRECISELY THIS THAT HE FAILED TO DO.

"The people know I have not, and have never had, and never can have, any strength save what they of their own free volition give me. They know that the big corporation magnate, that the big trust lawyer, the trust-serving editor, the trust-serving politician, are insincere when they raise the clamor of the third term; that they only call me a would-be dictator because they fear that through me the will of the people can be made genuinely effective.

"Mr. Taft served under me through my seven and a half years. He did not then discover that I had any of the faults which he now finds in me. He eagerly praised me, he eagerly followed my lead, he eagerly supported me and sought my support, he thankfully accepted whatever I had to give him, and he only discovered that I was dangerous to the people WHEN I DISCOVERED THAT HE WAS USE LESS TO THE PEOPLE.

"No other man in this country was as much interested as I was in having Mr. Taft succeed. I eagerly sought every opportunity to stand by him, and long after I felt deep in my heart that he was unfit to lead this people I refused to acknowledge the fact to myself, and struggled to convince myself that he was fit, and clutched at every opportunity to back him up.

"I do not think Mr. Taft means ill; I think he means well. But he means well feebly, and during his administration he has been under the influence of men who are neither well-meaning nor feeble.

"Mr. Taft's position is strikingly like the positions of these two predecessors of his—Buchanan and Pierce. In his own person he offers little upon which to base either hope or apprehension. But back of him loom the sinister figures of those who stand foremost in the alliance between predatory politics and predatory wealth. Against these men and their powerful influence for evil Mr. Taft is helplessly unable to protect the people.

"I believe that we should go forward, step by step, cautiously testing each step. I have never been an advocate of what was either hasty or excessive; but I do most earnestly feel that we should be travelling in the right direction; and in this contest our opponents are either travelling nowhere or are travelling in an utterly wrong direction.

"Only a limited number of professionl politicians and trust magnates read Emersoon; but the timid good people of the silk stocking type who are behind them in this contest do real Emerson. I suppose the entire Back Bay would approve if as an abstract matter I quoted Emerson to show that our country had been founded so that 'fishers and choppers and ploughmen should constitute a State.' But when I propose to make these fishers, choppers and ploughmen, these farmers, railroad hands, factory hands, retail merchants, small professional men the real power in the State, and to give them real and effective control, my worthy silk stocking friends have a spasm, and say that I am an anarchist and a socialist, and that I wish to destroy the independence of the judiciary, and to put the lives and fortunes at the mercy of the gusty and momentary passion of a mob. Every one of the above sentences is quoted directly from the speeches of my opponents at this time.

"I never wanted any gratitude from Taft, any more than Lincoln wanted gratitude from McClellan when he put him at the head of the Army of the Potomac. Lincoln wanted victory from McClellan, and when he could not get victory from him he ceased to support him. I wanted from President Taft a square deal for the people of the United States. If he had given the people a square deal, he could have counted on my enthusiastic support. I DO NOT BELIEVE HE HAS GIVEN THE PEOPLE A SQUARE DEAL."

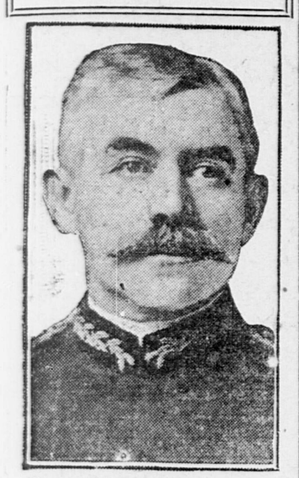
THOMAS H. BARRY

General Who Commanded Our Forces In Cuba



PROMOTION FOR BARRY

Head of West Point Will Probably Be Successor of General Grant

Washington, April 29.—Following his return from New England President Taft, according to a high military authority, will name Major General Thomas H. Barry, superintendent of the West Point military academy, as the successor to the late Major General Frederick D. Grant as commander of the department of the east.

General Barry commanded the American forces in Cuba during the war with Spain.

FIERCE BATTLE OVER BANDITS

Witnessed by Thousands of People In Parisian Suburb

Paris, April 29.—Bonnot, the leader of an organized gang of bandits, who have been terrorizing Paris and the surrounding district for months past, and Dubois, a notorious anarchist, were shot to death in the most thrilling encounter in the annals of French crime.

A garage at Choisy-le-Roy, six miles south of Paris, in which the bandits had taken refuge, was blown up with dynamite after these two men had kept at bay for hours a large part of the police force of Paris, a contingent of gendarmes, two companies of Republican guards and a company of engineers.

Bonnot and Dubois, after wounding two policemen yesterday, took refuge in the garage. They were trapped in the building, which was at once surrounded. Bonnot was captured alive. He was riddled with bullets and died on the way to a hospital. The great crowd which had gathered, with cries of "Death to Bonnot!" almost tore the bandit from the soldiers, several of whom were injured.

Parisians, particularly automobilists, have been in a state of terror because of the reckless crimes of the automobile bandits, which reached a climax in the murder of Assistant Superintendent Jouin of the detective department and the wounding of Chief Inspector Colmar by Bonnot on April 24.

The government then ordered all the available police to hunt the assassins day and night. Yesterday M. Guichard, superintendent of detectives, tracked Bonnot to the isolated garage at Choisy-le-Roi.

As Guichard and his men approached Dubois was preparing to mount a motorcycle. He answered the summons to surrender by opening fire, while he retreated to the garage. At the same moment there was a hail of bullets from a window, and two detectives fell, one with two bullets in his abdomen. It was Bonnot shooting from the first floor.

The detectives retired and a general alarm was sent out. Police, gendarmes and all classes of people came quickly. They were armed with muskets and revolvers, and directed hundreds of bullets at the garage, from which came a steady stream of lead in reply. Finally it was decided to use dynamite. A cart was rigged up with thick mattresses as a barricade, and the attacking party backed it slowly toward the garage.

When the cart reached the wall, Lieutenant Forteau emerged and coolly placed two huge sticks of dynamite against the building and ignited the fuse. The horse galloped out of range, and the spectators waited. But no explosion followed. The operation was repeated twice. Then came a terrific report, and column of smoke and debris shot skyward.

All the while the bandits were firing steadily, but no one was hit. As the front wall collapsed with a crash, police and Republican guards rushed up up. On the ground floor they found Dubois, dead. They mounted a narrow stairway and observed a man streaming with blood, his left arm in a sling, crouched behind a mattress.

MAYOR SPEAKS ON CITIZENSHIP

The new Finnish hall on Suomi Road, West Quincy, was opened up Saturday evening under most favorable auspices by the Vljas Koitto R. S. Temperance Society. An entertainment was provided and refreshments were served.

Mayor Stone delivered a masterly address on "Citizenship" and touched also on the objects of the society. Other speakers who discoursed on the virtue of temperance included William H. Teasdale, chairman of the Board of Health, A. J. Davis, of the Anti-Saloon league, and Rev. J. E. Lillback of the Finnish Congregational church.

BRIEFS

T. O'Connell of Summer street has been in Baltimore for a few days on a business trip.

Tupper Miller, salesman for the firm of J. L. Miller has been in New York for a few days.

Miss Caroline Picard has severed her connection with D. E. Wadsworth & Co., and is now assistant clerk in the sub-station at South Quincy.

Friends of Mrs. May Flowers, of Newcomb place will be sorry to learn that after suffering several weeks in the Quincy Hospital last summer she had to undergo critical operation in the Massachusetts General Hospital last Tuesday from which she is improving very slowly.

It is rumored that the plans for a theatre to be erected on Hancock street, on the site previously occupied by the Dr. Jones house, have fallen through. The erection of a building of this size is not the simplest thing in the world today, as there is so much red tape in the shape of fire laws, etc., to be complied with.

FARMERS' BALL.

There was a jolly time on Pond street, South Braintree Saturday evening at the Farmers' ball held by the Pond Street Social and Athletic Association in their club house. Music was furnished by Edward Dennehy, violin, Fred Goodnow, cornet and Ida Burville, piano. There were about forty couples present and much merriment was caused by the costumes of the dancers. The grand march was led by Harry Burrill and Mrs. Guy E. Wood, followed by about twenty-five couples. As rewards for the best rural "rigs" Miss Rose Donnelly and Mr. Harry Burrill were each presented with a trip ticket to Boston. Ice cream and cake were served and it was an all round good time.

ALEX BIRNIE.

Word was received Sunday morning that Alex Birnie son of Mr. and Mrs. William Birnie of Franklin street had passed away in Illinois, where he has been working for several years. James Birnie a brother of the deceased was with him at the last, and accompanied the body to the home of his parents where the services will be held on Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs Birnie have the sympathy of their friends in their great sorrow.

AGANST THE MACHINE.

Matthew Hale, manager of the Roosevelt campaign in Massachusetts, issued a statement today, in which he sharply critized the methods which the Taft leaders are employing in this State.

Manager Hale said: "The machine now has its back to the wall. Its leaders realize that it looks virtually certain that Col. Roosevelt will carry Massachusetts and that the cause of the people wil ltriumph over the cause of the machine.

"The Taft men are desperate. They are resorting to the anonymous circular and the 'gag.' The State is being flooded with unsigned political literature teeming with false statements. To these no responsible man apparently dares to put his name. They are doing this in open defiance of the laws of this State, which not only prohibit this kind of cowardly campaigning, but make the offenders liable to a jail sentence.

"In certain sections of the State, particularly the towns, no provision has been made for registration for the primaries.

"The Taft men would narrow the contest down to as few voters as possible, with the hope that the machine-controlled men may be able to dominate the coming primaries.

"In some cities they have provided that the voting shall be done in a single polling place, instead of by precincts. This is another method by which they would make it as hard as possible for the voters to avail themselves of their right of franchise.

"The machine has from the outset been fighting a free expression of the preference of the rank and file of the voters of the Republican party at the coming presidential primaries. Its leaders fought the primary bill from the start. They surely can't be charged with being inconsistent in this respect.

"But their fight is a hopless one. The great majority of the rank and file of the party in this State, I feel confident, will stand with the Republicans of Maine, Illinois, Pennsylvania and other States, and vote for the nomination of Col. Roosevelt and the defeat of the machine.

"The voters of this State realize that they do not have to be enrolled in either party to go into the coming primaries and cast their ballot for Theodore Roosevelt.

"The machine may do its worst. The people are aroused to the situation. They have confidence in Col. Roosevelt as a man who really knows their needs and who accomplishes things. From the outset the members of the Roosevelt committee felt that President Taft could not be elected if nominated. It is safe to say that a large majority of the voters of this State now feel this way. They realize also that Taft cannot now even be nominated and that Col. Roosevelt not only can be nominated but elected."

PRES. TAFT GIVEN OVATION

taken. The President was frequently interrupted by shouts of approval and cheers. He said in part:

Ladies and Gentlemen of Quincy:—"If you had been talking as much as I have today, you would readily realize the condition of my voice. I am very glad to be here and I feel deeply honored by your cordial welcome: I am glad to meet the people of a city in which are buried two of my most distinguished predecessors in office, two presidents from Massachusetts. (Loud applause) I am glad to be here where their memories—memories of two men who did so much to preserve that constitution which has lasted for more than one hundred and twenty-five years. (Loud applause)

"I think I represent the Republican party on a platform that stands for the progress of all American people in the pursuit of happiness, under the wisest restrictions of our federal constitution. (Here a voice in the crowd yelled 'We know you do Mr . Taft.') The president quickly answered by adding, 'I thank you sir.'

"Had it not been for the cause I represent and for fear of the abuse it is liable to suffer, I do not think I would be here today. But my hide has been battered enough with experiences in the past so that I feel that when a good cause is endangered, I must lay aside the usually propriety which accompanies the office and come out and fight. (Loud cheers greeted this announcement and it was some seconds before the deafening applause had subsided) I don't think that I have been given a square deal. (Shouts of "Right you are" were poured forth in volumes)

"In a recent speech I said that I stood for a government of the people, for the people and by a representative body of the people. I meant exactly what I said but my opponent in his wisdom has seen fit to change the contents of that statement to his own liking. When I said a government of the people, I meant that every man, woman and child was a part of the government. When I said for the people I meant for the benefit of all, both the tottering old, the child at the breast and the adult male—each is an American citizen and as such is entitled to his or her rights. Neither hapipness nor prosperity can be denied any who so constitutes a part of the government and it has been duly declared that the rights of no individual will be infringed upon without due process of the law.

The adult male and by that I mean the voter is the one to whom this selection of men to represent the government is applied in special manner. My opponent took one sentence and declared that I meant to establish a government of an aristocracy, of an oligarchy, to be ruled by oligarchial bosses. And he made this all up out of his own head and calls this giving me a square deal. (Here much laughter was caused.)

"I could go on enumerating many other instances of the square deal but I give you this as a sample owing to the fact that my time is limited." (Here the Mayor told President Taft that his time was up, but the chief executive said: "Oh wait a minute.")

Concluding he added "I leave the case in your hands and ask you to do what you think is just."

SPECTACLE IS UNPRECEDENTED

Taft and Roosevelt on Whirlwind Tour of Massachusetts

PRESIDENT FOLLOWS COLONEL

Latter's Itinerary Will Carry Him All the Way Across the State—Fate of Whole Campaign For Renomination of Taft May Be Settled In Tomorrow's Primaries—All Campaign Leaders Sure of Victory

Boston, April 29.—Massachusetts is today witnessing an occurrence absolutely unique in the history of not only this state, but any state in the union—a President of the United States and an ex-president, each in a special train and attended by political supporters and a crowd of newspaper men, canvassing the state for the votes of the people; and not for election to the presidency, but merely in an effort to secure the nomination of one of the great political parties.

This extraordinary spectacle indicates better than anything that has happened heretofore the importance that is attached to the result of tomorrow's primary election in Massachusetts by the politicians.

By a peculiar set of circumstances Massachusetts becomes the centre of political interest for the country. The great fight going on is regarded as of critical importance for both sides. The president's friends, to redeem a situation which they knew to be desperate, urged upon him the desperate move of coming into the state to lead the fight. In so doing they acknowledged that the fate of the whole campaign for the renomination of the president may be settled by the voters of Massachusetts.

An indication of the national importance of the struggle here is the gathering of the correspondents of the great newspapers of the country. The word has gone forth that the whole future of the campaign of both contestants is dependent upon the voting in this state on Tuesday.

President Taft will visit the southeastern part of the state, where Roosevelt traveled Saturday, and then will follow the colonel's train part way up the state. North of the city, he speaks only in Lawrence, Haverhill and Lowell. Roosevelt will go all the way across to Pittsfield.

President Taft started in from Providence, where he boarded his special train. He spoke from the rear platform in Taunton and Attleboro, but at Fall River he stayed an hour.

At New Bedford the mills were closed and a holiday was declared. Abbott P. Smith headed the reception committee, and Major Hennigan presided at the meeting.

At Brockton a parade was scheduled, with a company of coast artillery and a band, the president riding in an automobile with Mayor Howard.

Admiral Bowles introduced the president to the people at Quincy.

The first stop north of the city this afternoon will be at Lawrence, where the president has three-quarters of an hour. At Haverhill Postmaster Hoyt and ex-Mayor Carleton will meet the president, and the latter will introduce him to the people.

At Lowell Congressman Ames has charge of the arrangements.

Colonel Roosevelt started from Boston at 8 o'clock this morning and carried with him Senator Nason and the candidates for delegates in the Fifth, Sixth and Seventh districts. He spoke from his car platform at every stop until Salem was reached, and then went into Town House square. At Newburyport he spoke from an automobile, and again in Haverhill his speech was from a motor car. At Lawrence he left the train again, and spoke from the band stand on the common. Once clear of Middlesex county, the colonel went right across the state, his final speech in Massachusetts being at Pittsfield.

Taft, Roosevelt, Wilson and Clark forces all express confidence of victory in the Massachusetts primary. Taft men say the situation has improved since last Tuesday, when they felt certain that the president would secure all thirty-six delegates. A clean sweep is expected by Roosevelt's managers. Champ Clark's leaders announced the result of a straw ballot, on which they base their opinion that the speaker will defeat Wilson, 2 to 1. The great crowd at the Wilson rally Friday night has led his friends to expect victory.

"There has been no change in the situation since the statement of last Tuesday, except a general improvement from state-line to state-line," said Edgar R. Champlin, chairman of the executive committee of the Taft league.

Matthew Hale, manager of the Roosevelt campaign, issued this statement: "Reports from our volunteer workers in every section of the state would indicate a clean sweep for Theodore Roosevelt. Even in Senator Crane's own district, where we are handicapped by having to run our delegate on 'stickers,' we are confident of winning by a handsome majority."

William S. McNary, in charge of Wilson headquarters, said: "The candidacy of Woodrow Wilson for the Democratic presidential preference vote in Massachusetts has steadily grown in strength. During the present week it has been coming with a rush."

Champ Clark headquarters issued this statement:

"The Champ Clark league of Massachusetts has been in touch with its members in every section of the commonwealth, and from information it received from its members it is confident that Clark will carry Massachusetts by a vote of not less than 2 to 1 over Governor Woodrow Wilson."

PEACE IS LOOKED FOR

Engineers and Railroad Managers Have Agreed to Arbitration

New York, April 29.—Belief that the strike threatened by 28,000 locomotive engineers employed by railroads east of the Mississippi and north of the Potomac and Ohio rivers has been averted through the mediatory efforts of Judge Knapp of the court of commerce and Commissioner of Labor Neill is expressed by participants in the conferences with the government representatives.

The question of arbitration has now been agreed to by both sides, it is said, but with some modification of the original proposal made to the mediators by the railway managers.

It is expected than an understanding as to the method of procedure and as to the number of arbitrators who are to give a final decision as to the dispute over wages will be reached at a meeting today.

ROBBERS GET $1000 IN LEWISTON HOME

Woman Assaulted Near Scene of the Bibber Murder

Lewiston, Me., April 29.—For the second time within a week this city has been thrown into a frenzy of excitement over one of the most daring robberies and violent assaults, which was committed within 200 feet of the spot where John W. Bibber waas shot down and killed last Wednesday evening.

This crime was the breaking into the residence of Wallace H. White, Jr., a grandson of the late Senator William P. Frye, at 499 Main street, when Mrs. White was murderously assaulted and loot aggregating approximately $1000 was taken.

This, following so closely upon the murder of Bibber, in the same neighborhood, has caused a reign of terror, and as in the Bibber case, the perpetrators of this crime have disappeared as quickly as they came, leaving absolutely no trace behind them.

A REFUGEE'S VIEW

Says Intervention Will Mean the Slaying of Whites In Mexico

Mobile, Ala., April 29.—"If the United States intervenes in Mexico every person of white skin—irrespective of his nationality—will be killed or tortured," declared J. Hromadka, an American citizen, who arrived here from Chapachala, a town on the Guatemalan border, by way of Guatemala.

Hromadka said he had a drug store in Chapachala. He said that when Mexican bandits found he was an American citizen they threw his goods in the street and broke up his store. He said he lost $5000.

The American consul advised him and other Americans to leave at once, warning them not to try to get to the Texas border, but to leave by way of Guatemala.

Navy Department Cannot Give Rose Pitonof an Escort

Washington, April 29.—Setting forth that it would be impossible to furnish a torpedo boat or other craft, the navy department directed a letter to Representative Curley of Massachusetts, declining to take part in the attempt of Miss Rose Pitonof of Boston to swim across the English channel next July.

The matter was brought up by a Boston lawyer, who suggested that the government take official cognizance of the event and assist by having a torpedo boat or "a small battleship" follow her across the channel. The reply of the navy department was simply that the desired boat would not be available.

MADE AN ERROR IN SEEKING AID

Ill-Fated Titanic Did Not Give Her Position Correctly

CAPTAIN MOORE SO TESTIFIES

Nearby Ships Were Also Hindered From Making Speed to Rescue by Fields of Ice—Schooner Was Near Big Liner at Time of Disaster—Mount Temple Arrived at Titanic's Grave About Two Hours Too Late

Washington, April 29.—Failure to give her exact position, a great field of floating ice which set up a frigid barrier to ships hurrying to the rescue and her own captain's mistake in rushing at top speed through an ice-covered sea—all these combined to send the Titanic and her 1600 victims to their watery grave in the North Atlantic.

This was made clear in testimony before the senate investigating committee of Captain James H. Moore of the steamship Mount Temple, which hurried to the Titanic in response to wireless calls for help.

The witness was emphatic in his declaration that the position sent out by the Titanic was wrong. That the huge ship was eight miles further eastward than her operators reported, he said, he proved by observations taken the first thing the day after the disaster.

With what was virtually a fleet of steamships within a radius of fifty miles of the Titanic the captain said that this mistake in fixing accurately her position was fatal.

Captain Moore told of a desperate battle through icefields to reach the Titanic. He denied the Mount Temple passengers' story that they saw distress rockets of the sinking giant liner.

The Mount Temple's wireless log also removed the cloud of suspicion from the North German Lloyd liner Frankfurt, that the Frankfurt had ignored the Titanic's distress call.

The log showed the Frankfurt asked for details of the Titanic's trouble, got a second reply and promised immediate help.

Light on the identity of the "phantom ship," whose lights were seen from the Titanic's lifeboats was also thrown by Moore. He told of seeing a tramp steamer near the Titanic's ocean grave Monday morning and before, during the night, an unknown schooner. He said the schooner's lights disappeared queerly after a time. The lights of this schooner, he thought, were probably those seen by the anxious survivors of the Titanic, which they frantically tried to reach.

Senator Smith asked Moore if glasses for lookouts were useful in detecting the presence of danger. The witness was not sure that they would be of extraordinary value. Neither did he think the use of searchlights during fog and at night would lessen the danger.

"It would be like throwing it against a blank wall. If the light was equipped with a powerful projector it might be of some use at night," he said.

Captain Moore told of arriving at the scene of the Titanic's burial about 4:30 in the morning, two hours after the liner went down.

"I saw no wreckage and no bodies, sir," he said. "There was nothing but ice and the tramp steamer. The ice was so thick that I was compelled to hoist men to the mastheads to seek a lane out of the field.

"There were no passengers on the deck of the Mount Temple when we started for the Titanic," said Moore. "I got all the officers on deck, got out the twenty lifeboats, had all the life belts out and was ready for any emergency. I reckoned we could accommodate 1000 people in those lifeboats."

J. B. Ismay, managing director of the International Mercantile Marine company, was much cheered by the testimony of the afternoon.

Second Officer Lightoller of the Titanic was recalled for examination regarding the identity of a Louis Klien, one of the witnesses who disappeared after being brought here.

It developed during Lightoller's examination that he had seen Klein in Senator Smith's office and denounced him as an impostor.

New laws requiring wireless operators on ships to be on duty day and night—every minute—fixing stringent qualifications to secure mature men with judgment and changing the system of their employment and supervision, will be the first and immediate results of the senate inquiry, Senator Smith said.

Fatally Hurt by Hose Wagon

Cambridge, Mass., April 29.—Charles O'Connor, aged 10, is dying, and two other boys and a young man are suffering with cuts and bruises as a result of the horses of a hose wagon taking fright at escaping steam from a fire engine and running wildly into a crowd in a narrow driveway, following a slight fire in one of the outhouses of the Riverside Press.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

How to be a "Feminine Study in Geometric Attraction"—A Harvard Apotheosis of Scrubbing, Sweeping and Dish Washing—Tanned Workmen, Erecting Copley Square Statuary, Rouse Rhapsodies of the Literati—Leader of Arts and Crafts Movement to Leave New England—Copley Society Honors Edmund C. Tarbell, Painter.

Much interest and considerable speculation on the part of the uninformed has been manifested in activities under way in front of Boston's Public Library. The great bare marble blocks which have caused more or less unfavorable criticism since they were installed one on either side of the entrance to the otherwise architecturally pleasing building have been undergoing a mysterious upheaval and shifting from their positions. Workmen screened from the public by gauze cages, busily chop and chip all day long, day in and day out. These mysterious disturbances of the Library's sacred precincts, however, are only the preparations for the installation of Bela Pratt's long awaited sculptures, soon to take the place of the unsightly blocks of stupid stone. Meantime, the public watches with curiosity the proceedings in the cages, and one well-known literary man even bursts into poetic eulogies of the sculpturesque and picturesque aspects of the laborers at their toil rhapsodizing the raised arm, the strongly bent back, the keen eye guiding the stroke of the hammer, and so on. He even suggests clothing them in suits of natural tan trimmed with the skins of wild beasts, that those of the general public who cannot see sculpture hidden under overalls and jumpers may have the benefit of the animated reproduction of "The Hewer."

If you would be a "feminine study in geometric attraction"—whatever that means—just get busy and sweep, scrub, wash, run up and down stairs to answer doorbells, the baby's wail, the telephone, the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, run the lawnmower, and then, if you can't find anything else to do, come in and knead bread for a while. This, at least, is the impression one gets from reading reports of Dr. Dudley A. Sargent's remarks anent the possibilities of reducing the over plump woman to an ideal "Juno type" of beauty and good form. A little closer reading, however, discloses that these various activities are to be indulged in in moderation, and that every woman should retire to her room in quiet for an hour each day, and lie down, relaxing physically and mentally, whether she sleeps or not. Housework, in short, when regulated wisely and not overdone, is the very best form of exercise that woman can take. During the day's work every muscle of the body will be brought into action and developed. Therefore girls, go ahead and revel in soapsuds and other forms of housework, and rest assured that soon you will have the world at your feet.

Sincere and heartfelt eulogies were the principal features of a banquet given by the Society of Arts and Crafts at the Architectural Club in honor of secretary Frederic Allen Whiting, who has been appointed to the directorship of the John Herron Art Institute at Indianapolis. The occasion was a farewell tribute to the resigning officer, who has for twelve years guided the affairs of the society with an enthusiasm and faith that has made it not only the first but the largest and most influential in the country. Not only has Mr. Whiting devoted his time and strength to the Boston society but he has been constantly helpful in building up and encouraging smaller organizations in many other localities. Something more than a hundred members of the society gathered to wish him success in the new undertaking and to express their esteem in a substantial token of appreciation. Boston will miss Mr. Whiting's effective work in furthering the aims and raising the standards of the arts and crafts movement, and those interested in the society are trusting that his policies will be carried on under the new manager.

New England's best known painter—the superlative may be used without fear or favor—is about to be honored by the Copley Society of Boston. Edmund C. Tarbell, of Boston and Newmarket, N. H., born in Groton and reared in South Boston, coiner of the "making-it-like" phrase in popular usage in the studios, instructor of a whole generation of young artists at the Museum school, crack golf and base ball player, much sought after portrait painter, regarded by many critics as certain to have brought as much fame to artistic Boston as Lowell or Holmes with their literary achievements—the incomparable Tarbell whom everyone likes and admires, personally the most modest and unassuming of little men, is to have Copely Hall all to himself during May with an exhibition commemorative of the long series of his works that began with the three brilliant and well remembered contributions at the Chicago Fair and that happily bids fair to continue to issue for years to come. This is the second great exhibition offered to the public by the Copley Society in a single season. The fame of the Tarbell pictures will assuredly bring to the Hub at least a tenth as many New Englanders as might be attracted by a particularly spectacular ball game at Fenway Park. The occasion, beginning May 1, is worthy of more than passing note in one's calendar. Some discriminating connoisseurs there are who assert that in no city anywhere is better painting being done than in Boston today; by general consent Mr. Tarbell represents in a peculiar sense what is best among the so-called "Boston Impressionists."

HELPED SMALL COLLEGES

Dr. Pearsons Gave Away Upwards of Five Million Dollars

Chicago, April 29.—Dr. Daniel Kimball Pearsons, aged 92, who in recent years gave more than $5,000,000 to small colleges, chiefly in the middle west, died in a sanitarium at Hinsdale, a suburb, comparatively a poor man. Pneumonia with complications due to old age was the cause.

It was Pearsons who declared that "giving away money is a greater sport than baseball and more fun than any other form of entertainment." He began giving money to needy colleges in 1888.

Most of Pearsons gifts were on condition that an amount equal to his should be provided by others.

The hearing on a writ of habeas corpus was preliminary in character and no witnesses were examined or exhibits produced. After a brief discussion, Keogh adjourned the hearing until May 6 and Thaw returned to Matteawan.

Another interval of waiting succeeded.

"I have about reached the end of my patience; I shall wait just ten minutes longer," said Fentress, and drew out his watch.

"Something has happened—" began Mahaffy.

"I have kept my engagement; he should have kept his," Fentress continued, addressing Ware. "I am sorry to have brought you here for nothing, Tom."

"Wait!" said Mahaffy, planting himself squarely before Fentress.

"I consider this comic episode at an end," and Fentress pocketed his watch.

"Scarcely!" rejoined Mahaffy. His long arm shot out and the open palm of his hand descended on the colonel's face. "I am here for my friend," he said grimly.

The colonel's face paled and colored by turns.

"Have you a weapon?" he asked, when he could command his voice. Mahaffy exhibited the pistol he had carried to Belle Plain the day before.

"Step off the ground, Tom." Fentress spoke quietly. When Ware had done as requested, the colonel spoke again. "You are my witness that I was the victim of an unprovoked attack."

Mr. Ware accepted this statement with equanimity, not to say indifference.

"Are you ready?" he asked; he glanced at Mahaffy, who by a slight inclination of the head signified that he was. "I reckon you're a green hand at this sort of thing?" commented Tom evilly.

"Yes," said Mahaffy tersely.

"Well, listen: I shall count, one, two, three; at the word three you will fire. Now take your positions."

Mahaffy and the colonel stood facing each other, a distance of twelve paces separating them. Mahaffy was pale but dogged; he eyed Fentress unflinchingly. Quick on the word Fentress fired, an instant later Mahaffy's pistol exploded; apparently neither bullet had taken effect, the two men maintained the rigid attitude they had assumed; then Mahaffy was seen to turn on his heels, next his arm dropped to his side and the pistol slipped from his fingers, a look of astonishment passed over his face and left it vacant and staring while his right hand stole up toward his heart; he raised it slowly, with difficulty, as though it were held down by some invisible weight.

A hush spread across the field. It was like one of nature's invisible transitions. Along the edge of the woods the song of birds was stricken into silence. Ware, heavy-eyed—Fentress, his lips twisted by a tortured smile, watched Mahaffy as he panted for breath, with his hand clenched against his breast. That dead, oppressive silence lasted but a moment; from out of it came a cry that smote on the wounded man's ears and reached his consciousness.

"It's Price—" he gasped, his words bathed in blood, and he pitched forward on his face.

Ware and Fentress had heard the cry, too, and running to their horses threw themselves into the saddle and galloped off. The judge midway of the meadow roared out a furious protest, but the mounted men turned into the highroad and vanished from sight, and the judge's shaking legs bore him swiftly in the direction of the gaunt figure on the ground.

Mahaffy struggled to rise, for he was hearing his friend's voice now, the voice of utter anguish, calling his name. At last painful effort brought him to his knees. He saw the judge, clothed principally in a gaily colored bed-quilt, hatless and shoeless, his face sodden and bleary from his night's debauch. Mahaffy stood erect and staggered toward him, his hand over his wound, his features drawn and livid, then with a cry he dropped at his friend's feet.

"Solomon! Solomon!" And the judge knelt beside him.

"It's all right, Price; I kept your appointment," whispered Mahaffy; a bloody spume was gathering on his lips, and he stared up at his friend with glassy eyes.

In very shame the judge hid his face in his hands, while sobs shook him.

"Solomon—Solomon, why did you do this?" he cried miserably.

The harsh lines on the dying man's face erased themselves.

"You're the only friend I've known in twenty years of loneliness, Price. I've loved you like a brother," he panted, with a pause between each word.

Again the judge buried his face in his hands.

"I know it, Solomon—I know it!" he moaned wretchedly.

"Price, you are still a man to be reckoned with. There's the boy; take your place for his sake and keep it—you can."

"I will—by God, I will!" gasped the judge. "You hear me? You hear me, Solomon? By God's good help, I will!"

"You have the president's letter—I saw it—" said Mahaffy in a whisper.

"Yes!" cried the judge. "Solomon, the world is changing for us!"

"For me most of all," murmured Mahaffy, and there was a bleak instant when the judge's ashen countenance held the full pathos of age and failure. "Remember your oath, Price," gasped the dying man. A moment of silence succeeded. Mahaffy's eyes closed, then the heavy lids slid back. He looked up at the judge while the harsh lines of his sour old face softened wonderfully. "Kiss me, Price," he whispered, and as the judge bent to touch him on the brow, the softened lines fixed themselves in death, while on his lips lingered a smile that was neither bitter nor sneering.

DELICATE SURGICAL FEAT

Removal of Diseased Nerves Cures Dangerous Stomach Ailment

Philadelphia, April 29.—Opening the spinal column of a man afflicted with a dangerous stomach ailment and removing the nerve fibres that had succumbed to the disease, an operation which is believed the most delicate ever attempted, has been performed successfully by Dr. Charles H. Frasier, dean of the medical school of the University hospital.

As soon as the diseased nerves had been removed from the spine the stomach trouble ceased and the patient began to regain strength.

WOMAN'S TALE LEADS TO MURDER WARRANTS

Tells of Plans of Her Husband to Plunder Veterans

Augusta, Me., April 29.—At a special session of the coroner's jury hurriedly called, Ella Levere gave testimony which has caused County Attorney Williamson to seek to have warrants charging her husband, Fred Lever, and Henry Gazette, with murder instead of robbery, as they do now, and to have Mrs. Levere held only as a material witness, when they are arraigned in the municipal court.

While the details of Mrs. Levere's testimony are guarded carefully the substance of it is that he revealed the connection the two men had with the case and made it plain that Alexander J. Turner, who was found dead in the Levere house, was only the first of many Togus veterans they planned to entice into the place and plunder.

Mrs. Levere has occupied the woman's cell in the Augusta police station since Wednesday night. This confinement, it is said, preyed upon her mind until she told one of the officers that she was ready to tell her story.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. LABORERS DIG UP CAN FULL OF MONEY

Senator Who Owns Farm Allows Them to Keep Great Prize

Plainfield, N. J., April 29.—Two laborers cutting a street through the farm of United States Senator Martine, known as the Cedar Brook farm, near here, found a tin can which contained $1000. The finders were William Myers, a negro, and Pasquale Delato, who equally divided the prize between them.

The money was discolored with age and the can looked as though it had been buried for years. There was nothing to show who buried the money and the finders were allowed to keep it.

LEAVES FOR ITALY TODAY

Manuel Perry to Install Turbines in Italian Warship

AN EXPERT

Manuel Perry of Quincy, one of the turbine engine experts at the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, leaves today for Naples, Italy, where he will assist in the installation of turbines in battleships of the Italian navy. The engines were sent across several months ago in charge of Chief Engineer Page.

Although Mr. Perry is only a few years past his majority, he has made great progress in the study of turbines, and is one of the most competent men in the employ of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. He has just returned from Philadelphia, where he superintended the installation of the big engines in the Argentine Republic battleship in the process of construction at the New York Ship Building Company

Two years ago he went to Japan with Chief Engineer Page to install Quincy-built engines in Japanese battleships, and remained in the Orient for a year

Mr. Perry came to Quincy from Provincetown and learned the trade of a machinist at the Fore River works.

ICE WAGON BREAKS DOWN

Stphen Fraser, of Weymouth, escaped serious and probably fatal injuries shortly before ten o'clock this morning near the corner of Grante and Hancock streets, when he was thrown from the seat of one of the Lakeview Park Company's ice teams, falling between the horses which he was driving. He was in the act of delivering three tons and a half of ice in a City Square store when one of the rear wheels of the wagon collapsed and only for the transom bolt the team would have turned completely over.

As soon as the wheel collapsed, the horses came to a standstill. Fraser was thrown over the shaft and onto the ground, striking on his back. He sustained injuries to his back and shoulders, but considered himself fortunate that he was not badly injured. The street car tracks were blocked for an hour.

KATHERINE M. WHELAN.

The funeral of Miss Katherine M. Whelan, of 243 Fayette street, Wollaston, was held from her late home this morning. The cortege proceeded to the church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic, where a high mass of requiem was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. John P. Cuffe. The edifice was crowded with relatives and friends, who came to pay their final respects to one who had endeared herself to them in a special manner.

The musical portion of the mass was the Gregorian chant, by the regular choir, under the direction of organist Miss Louise Costello. Burial was at St. Mary's cemetery.

The deceased was the daughter of Thomas and the late Mrs. Mary T. Whelan and was in her 25th year. She enjoyed the acquaintance of a wide circle of friends. Her death is a serious blow to her father who has the sympathy of many friends.

W. B. Tourtillot, L. F. LaRose and H. C. Hallowell are three rivals and three such players should be able to hold their own and bring honor to the local organization. A. H. Blanchard, Ed. Tournaments are to be arranged with Newton, Melrose, Arlington, Clapp Memorial and Presidents Hill Tennis club.

SILVER WEDDING.

A social event of much pleasure to all concerned occurred last Saturday evening at South Braintree, at the "surprise" celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. Tirrell's twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Mrs. Tirrell is a member of both the Matrons' and the Afternoon whist clubs and the ladies of these two clubs escorted by their husbands marched to the Tirrell home 832 Washington street, were admitted by a very much surprised couple and proceeded at once to assist in celebrating the silver wedding in the most approved style.

In behalf of the assembled guests, Mrs. George W. Stevens in a very graceful and happy speech presented Mr. and Mrs. Tirrell with a handsome silver service of Colonial design. Mrs. Stevens said in part:

"That they are more than content with their condition is evident from the fact that we are all here this evening and that they are ready to confirm their vows of a quarter of a century ago by repeating them. Such a long and pleasant journey in double harness certainly deserves the plate. No doubt the credit of making the distance without a bolt or break is due principally to Mary, the gentler of the connubial team, although her mate is of course entitled to a fair share of applause for his steady going. More beautiful than 'apples of gold in pictures of silver' is the affection of so true a wife and her sterling worth calls for a sterling recognition from her sterling friends. The bridegroom, however, must not consider himself neglected if our best compliments are reserved for the bride. In fact they are indirectly compliments to him, for do we not congratulate her on having so excellent a husband? Speaking for all who have assembled this evening to enjoy the occasion I wish you all the happiness that the world can bestow."

The speech was heartily applauded and a loving cup filled with grape juice was passed from one to another, each guest proposing a toast and drinking to the health of the "happy couple." Some of the toasts were especially clever and apt, and caused much merriment.

The invaders had come provided with sandwiches, cake, candy and punch and there was a bountiful supply of delicious refreshments. Everyone was in happy mood and appreciative of the vocal duet finely rendered by Mrs. F. W. Brett and Mr. H. A. Simonds. Mrs. Mabel Townsend was an able accompanist. A feature was the delightful music discoursed by the "comb quartette," Mrs. H. A. Simonds, Mrs. F. W. Brett, Mrs. B. H. Woodsum, Jr., and Mrs. John P. Witherell. The vocal solo of Mr. M. A. Minchin received vigorous applause. Mrs. W. J. Loring created great laughter by her character studies. After this came story telling, singing of college songs and a general social time. The guests departed at a late hour after wishing Mr. and Mrs. Tirrell many more anniversaries.

Louis Henry Tirrell of Salem was united in marriage to Mary Helen Clayton of Cotuit, April 28, 1887 in Fall River by the Rev. H. D. Kimball, pastor of the Bank street Methodist church of that city. Coming to Braintree the following August, they have lived here since. Two children came to bless them, Mrs. George Dallas Willis, Jr., of Washington street and Miss B. Mabelle Tirrell who lives with her parents and is a student at Boston University.

For the past twenty-five years Mr. Tirrell has been a trusted and capable engineer on the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad, starting in as fireman on what was then the Old Colony road. Mr. and Mrs. Tirrell have hosts of friends here and they are esteemed and respected by all. They and their guests will always remember with pleasure the celebration of their silver wedding.

MAKARIA WINS INITIAL GAME

"Charlie" Ganzel's Boys Defeat Y.M.C.A. Team 8 to 5

LISTLESS GAME

A batting rally in the first half of the ninth inning, which neted four runs, allowed "Charlie" Ganzel's Makaria nine to wrest an 8 to 5 victory from the Quincy Y. M. C. A team in a listless game, played Saturday afternoon at Merrymount Park. It was the first game of the season for both teams and many new faces were seen in the lineup. The Association players took the lead in the early part of the game but were unable to maintain it at opportune moments.

Birmingham was on the mound for the Makarias and while he succeeded in holding his opponents to four hits as well as retiring ten of them by the aerial route, he was quite free with his passes and allowed no fewer than eight of the Y. M. C. A. boys to walk to the initial sack. Many errors were made on both sides and it was only in the last two innings that the Makaria team displayed its usual form. Jenkins was the only player who hit for extra bases. The Chapman brothers, Jenkins and Nicoll excelled for Makaria, while Croucher, Holmes and Physical Director LaRose played best for the losers.

The score:—

ENTHUSIASTIC TAFT RALLY MONDAY AT PROTECTION HALL

Mayor Stone, Guy Ham, Axel Jacobson and Others Speak

Sound Arguments Why President Taft Should Win

The severe storm Monday night prevented the outdoor rally, scheduled to be held in City Square in favor of President Taft, from being held. In addition to this rally it was proposed to hold rallies in Protection and Colonial halls. But one rally was held however. That was in Protection hall and this was largely attended and very enthusiastic.

Councilman Edward J. Sandberg presided and in opening said, "We meet here tonight for a common purpose, to see that a square deal is given the splendid man you saw at the Quincy depot. We want to keep the Republican party together and we can only do it through a square deal. I have worked for the party since I came to this country, but never did I have so much feeling in any campaign as in this. I feel that our President has been abused and we have arranged to have certain gentlemen tell you why he should receive your support tomorrow."

MAYOR STONE.

He then introduced as the first speaker Mayor Stone who said that he had the pleasure of meeting, this noon, the President of the United States. It was not the first time, for he had met him at Beverly last summer and found that he knew almost as much about Quincy as he did. He then called the attention of the audience to the difference between the speeches of Mr. Roosevelt Saturday and that of the President. President Taft is a conservative man, he has run his office as such and no man can say that he has not carried on the business of the government of the country as it should be. His position on the tariff is a sound one. Roosevelt said Saturday that he did not expect the vote of the silk stockings. We have not got that class of people here in Quincy. Here we are sensible and vote regardless of whether a man wears a silk stocking or not. Massachusetts has always been noted for its fairness and President Taft is one of the fairest men the country has ever had. President Taft said today that he was sorry to have to be obliged to go about the country speaking but when he was attacked he was ready to fight.

WILLIAM R. THOMAS.

Ex-Representative Thomas said he had been voting for 35 years and had always been a Republican. When a small boy he had seen ex-President, and General Grant. Since that time President Taft was the first President to pay Quincy a visit. The assemblage today must have impressed the President and the speaker firmly believed that he would be the next President. Taft has done more in four years in accomplishing things than Roosevelt did in seven years.

FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF FIRST METHODIST EPISCOPAL SERMON

Rev. T. C. Martin Speaks of Conditions Existing at That Time and Building of Church

Church Organized From Sunday School of Bethany Church

Sunday, was the fortieth anniversary of the first sermon preached under the Methodist Episcopal church at West Quincy. The present pastor, Rev. T. C. Martin spoke of the conditions existing at that time and of the building of the church later and also read the following document:

"We, the undersigned, feeling the necessity of having Religous Worship in West Quincy, do hereby agree to pay the sum's affixed to our respective names for the purpose of supporting Methodist preaching in said place for the current year, April 28th. 1872."

The following thirteen names are signed: Mayo P. Fuller, E. H. Doble, A. G. Davis, Jonas Shackley, T. J. Fuller, H. Farnham, C. A. Goucher, Elonzo Glines, N. H. Beals, Richard Williams, D. Gage, C. D. Collins, Columbus Lary.

This church was organized from the Sunday school, started by people from the Orthodox church, now known as the Bethany Congregational church at Quincy center. Three of the teachers mentioned in the records of the school are Miss Rideout, Miss Hardwick and R. D. Chase, the last named still being a resident of Quincy.

After fruitless efforts in trying to establish a union church, owing to the disagreement of doctrines, they decided that they could agree with a Methodist Episcopal church and a committee consisting of Jonas Shackley and Mayo P. Fuller waited on "Father" Kelley, then chaplain of the National Sailors' Home, and invited him to become the preacher for that year, and the sums subscribed in the above document were for this purpose. Services were held over the West Quincy schoolhouse, then called Doble's hall, and now occupied by E. H. Doble & Co., as a store.

Jan. 1, 1873, the Sunday school then being conducted by the Orthodox church was formally transferred to the care of the preacher and the congregation of the Methodist Episcopal church. The records read "the school has much increased and at the present time numbers 150, the average attendance being from 90 to 100."

A record also appears under date of Sept. 6, 1872 relating to the forming of a class and the following twelve names appear as comprising the class: Jonas Shackley, Rachel Doble, Martha Loud, Mayo P. Fuller, Mary Jane Fuller, Jane V. Doble, William Raleigh, Richard Pillage, Mary Ann Rickard, J. P. Bartlett, Hiram Glines, George Kidder.

Henry H. Faxon and E. H. Doble are mentioned as aiding materially in the finances of the church.

The present church building was dedicated Tuesday, Dec. 15, 1874, Rev. S. F. Upham of Lynn, preaching the dedication sermon. Among those present were Bishop Wiley; David Sherman, Presiding Elder; F. K. Pierce, Editor of Zion's Herald; and Rev. S. F. Rogers of Milton, now at the Dorchester First Church. The bell and clock were put in at the same time, the clock being "regulated and warranted to keep time to within one minute a month."

At the time of dedication the property was considered worth $8,370 and was dedicated with a debt of $1,538. The church stands practically the same today as when built with the exception that the choir platform was originally at the back of the church and has now been walled in, the present choir platform being at the left of the pulpit; also two doors formerly led into the auditorium in place of the one central door now, there being then no center isle.

Some years later churches of other denominations and various movements

GENTLEMEN ARE GUESTS OF CLUB

There was a large attendance at the Gentlemen's night held Saturday evening, under ahe auspices of the Quincy Young Women's club at the clubhouse on Goffe street. The officers of the club received and many guests were numbered among those present. The affair was very enjoyable and the most successful of any that has been held by the club.

During the evening, a short play the "Fair Encounter" was presented in a most creditable manner by Miss Mabel Lovejoy and Miss Mabel Pratt.

Refreshments were served at the close of the entertainment and dancing concluded the affair shortly before midnight.

DEATH BEING INVESTIGATED

Fore River Workman Dies Suddenly in Boarding House

JOHN McGREGOR

Chief Burrell is investigating the death of John McGregor who died suddenly at the Parker house at 500 South street. According to the police McGregor was suddenly seized with cramps in the stomach. Home remedies were applied without relief and Dr. Bushnell was called. When the doctor arrived however the man was dead. Dr. Bushnell notified Medical Examiner Jones who ordered the body removed to Hall's undertaking rooms.

McGregor was about 38 years of age and employed at the Fore River ship yard. The Chief of Police is making an investigation of the man's death and if his investigation warrants an autopsy will be held. It is thought however that his death was due to natural causes. Chief Burrell said this morning that he had found nothing as yet that would indicate foul play.

It is reported that the man has relatives residing in South Boston.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

While the labor troubles are pretty well settled, the customary May-day disturbances of house cleaning will shake the social fabric.

The spell-binders are thrilling the patriotic heart by mentioning the number of offices that their candidate will distribute.

The "Houn dawg" song was sung by the Vikings in the year 1200, but we are not informed whether they voted for Champ Clark.

All the presidential candidates claim to be successors of Lincoln, but some are more effective at hair splitting than rail splitting.

What a misfortune it would have been to Wall street if the usual crop damage had not been reported this year.

It is gradually dawning on people that the dominant party in Congress has for years been selling legislation over the counter to the trusts.

Tis said that Mona Lisa is in this country, but if our millionaires do not get along with her better than they do with their wives she will soon get her freedom.

A man who isn't old enough to get married and take care of one wife is hardly old enough to be a wireless operator and take care of thousands of lives.

Well both of the candidates for the presidency have come and gone,—the has been—is——, and the hopes to be, and today is the great day to decide which will be the "to be."

The celerity with which the Senators nailed the steamship officials must have surprised the slow going Britishers. Uncle Sam can do quite a day's work if you can persuade him to get up in the morning.

"TOWN BOOSTING."

The town boosting movement has become so general that one town gains little more in this way from its surroundings than it loses to other competitiors.

Of course this makes it doubly necessary to keep hutsling for new business, if we would play the game and keep up with our rivals.

But while we are soliciting new industries to come here, while one town is wearing "booster buttons" and another is stamping its mail matter with "booster tags," let us see to it that we are not lacking in certain fundamental substantials of community development.

The most solid growth comes when we can encourage our own young and ambitious men to start in business and stay here instead of going away. Every town has, and we have, such ambitious and promising young men, of good business capacity.

The city that gets ahead is the city where the men who have already won out are willing to help younger men get a foothold.

If just as soon as our business men are successful, they should settle down idly to enjoy their money, indifferent to the advancement of the town, we should progress but slowly. But if they will interest themselves in our younger men and newer enterprises, serve on boards of directors, invest what they can afford in home undertakings, give the benefit of their experience, no power on earth can stop this place from growing very fast.

The returns from planting shade trees and developing parks and keeping home grounds in fine order may seem remote, and not of much assistance commercially. But in a place where these things are carefully looked after, the town acquires a wide reputation as a residence town. Every travelling man who comes here, every visitor, scatters the report that this is a mighty agreeable place to live in.

The returns from this source may be slow, but they are very sure. Any business man hesitating between two places for a location always chooses the attractive residence place. And there is a constant tendency of people to move in from the country to educate children and enjoy town life, and they always pick attractive residence places to move to.

THE HARVESTER TRUST.

The future standing of the Harvester Trust, now a storm center of politics, depends on the way in which it is answering and shall answer this question:

Will it show and is it showing the same generous foresight in dealing with the public that it has maintained in dealing with its employees?

The International Harvester Company is famous for having carried, perhaps further than any other corporation, the idea of "welfare work." In the company restaurants the employes can get nourishing and appetizing meals for fifteen cents. There is dancing after luncheon.

There are nurses in attendance to feel your pulse, infirmaries where everything from a scratch to an amputation is cared for.

After supper there are club houses with dances, classes, athletics—and so on in an endless story.

The company would be the first to deny that this is philanthropy. They simply have brains enough to see that it is good business. It developes a loyalty that enforces discipline. When you can jack up a shirker by the disapproval of his shopmates, instead of by an order from a foreman, you increase the dividends.

It is not a complete answer to our question to say that the price of binders has dropped from $325 to $125 since 1880. The use of machinery has greatly reduced costs of production. When you can get an ignorant Hungarian to dip 400 binder frames in a vat of paint in a day, it is obvious that somebody has made an enormous profit over the cost of hand painting.

When the first reapers were built many years ago, bolts cost 4 1-2 cents each. Now you can get fifty made for a cent. While many of these savings were made before the trust was formed, the advantages of labor saving machinery have placed about eighty five per cent of the business in the hands of this great combination.

Has the public got its fair share of these economies? Here is the final test, for public opinion will not tolerate indefinitely an inordinate return on capital.

ENTHUSIASTIC RALLY

briefly. He said this meeting was to give you gentlemen a few facts, that may guide you tomorrow. He considered it a personal duty and responsibility to be counted at this time. If there was ever a time when the issues were presented now was the time. We have come to the parting of the ways, brought by a man under greater obligations to the party than any living man. Mr. McKay then spoke of the judicial phase of the issues in the present campaign. Taft has done more for the permanent good of the nation than Roosevelt did during his seven years in office. Now he says do me the customary honor. Is there any more a man can say? The great lion hunter says get out of here you have not followed my policies. The duty of the citizens of Quincy is clear.

GUY HAM.

Hon. Guy Ham the next speaker congratulated the Mayor on the stand which he had taken in coming out for President Taft. Continuing he said if we were to slect a man for our business we would go to some one acquainted with him. Go to the men who represent us in Washington and ask them if Mr. Taft has been square and above board and they will tell you yes. You will find every congressman supporting Taft. Go to anyone who has served in congress under both Roosevelt and Taft and ask them if Taft is what Roosevelt calls him. If you are to consider political ambition alone there in only one thing to do. If you are going to consider service and a well established precedent then your duty is plain to nominate Taft, for a second term.

Roosevelt tells one story in one part of the country and another in another section. He would not dare to come to Massachusetts and assail Senator Crane as he has done in other states. Here is a man whom Roosevelt, three times invited to become a member of his cabinet and who in the western states he calls a pernicious boss. But in Massachusetts he cautions his lieutenants to say nothing about Crane. How can we indorse a man who makes such assertions about the Chief Executive as Roosevelt has?

The speaker then spoke of the trusts and of the judiciary recall and told in a clear manner why the arguments of Mr. Roosevelt on the recall of decisions would be a bad thing for the country. As it was now, Massachusetts was the only state where judges were appointed for life so that the recall of judges was aimed at this state. His attempt to array class against class deserves the condemnation of all fair minded voters. This is a progressive age and the people will govern in spite of the demagogues. The eyes of the nation are on Massachusetts today. The old Bay State was the first to respond to the call in the time of peril and let the word go forth tomorrow night that Massachusetts has heard the call to preserve the constitution.

AXEL JOSEPHINE.

A well-known New York attorney spoke at length on the issues of the campaign. He criticised severely the speech of Mr. Roosevelt at Worcester. Mr. Taft has been in office for thirty years. Everywhere he has been put he has made good. First he was Solicitor General then Governor of the Philippines, Secretary of War and when the insurrection started in Cuba he it was who was sent by Roosevelt to bring order about. For the past three years he had been President and he could not understand how anyone could make the statement Roosevelt had. The speaker then went into some of the achievements Taft had accomplished during his three years as President. If we find these were worthy it is our duty to support him and vote for him. The speaker also referred to the tariff question and said the only way to handle it was to remove the tariff from politics. This was what Taft was trying to do with his tariff board. He also spoke of the prosecutions of corporations, the stopping of smuggling, corporation tax and other things taken up by Mr. Taft, including the post office department which was now on a paying basis for the first time.

JOHN McDONALD.

John McDonald one of the alternate delegates was then introduced and spoke briefly.

The next speaker was Lloyd VanDaLinda, a pupil of the Weymouth High school who read an able essay, giving review of the Taft administration. The young men's statements were such as permitted of no argument and he was given well deserved applause as he finished.

CHARLES H. JOHNSON.

The last speaker was Charles H. Johnson who arraigned Roosevelt for trying to win at the expense of his friend Taft, which he called disloyalty to an old friendship. Does anyone think such a man should be nominated? A man who will assail his bosom friend as Roosevelt has assailed Taft? The speaker then spoke of the visit of President Taft and said the Presidents first words were about the two Presidents who remains were beneath the steps of the First church near where the President stood. It was a noble tribute to his character, when he will lay aside the issues of the campaign at the very start of his address to pay tribute to such men as President John Adams and John Quincy Adams. In closing the speaker urged all to vote for and work for Taft and see to it that all of their friends voted.

No Suppression or Delay Sought by Inventor, Who Tells of Message Urging Operator on Carpathia to Communicate With Siasconset Station or Naval Vessels—Sammis Fixed Matters So the "Boys" Could Sell Personal Stories to Newspapers

Washington, April 30.—Endeavoring further to repudiate any intimations that he had sought in any way to suppress or delay news of the sinking of the Titanic, Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of wireless telegraphy, appeared before the senate committee on inquiry into the disaster.

Marconi had discovered after leaving Washington last week that he had sent a message to the operator of the steamship Carpathia urging him to send news of the disaster to the wireless station at Siasconset, Mass., or to vessels of the United States navy. He had copies of these messages and declared that when he was examined by the committee he had forgotten about that message. Marconi also produced copies of many other messages sent to the Carpathia in an endeavor to get definite information of the wreck.

Marconi said he knew nothing of the equipment of the scout cruisers Salem or Chester. "I heard the naval operators worked slow and were not well acquainted with the code," said Marconi. "We use the international Morse code."

The difference in the code used by the Marconi operators and that employed by the United States cruiser Chester, said Marconi, rendered almost impossible the transmission of messages between the Carpathia and the warship. He said his company used the international code, while the United States navy had a code of its own.

F. M. Sammis, chief engineer of the American Marconi company, also testified, explaining what had actuated him in sending messages to Operators Bride and Cottam on the Carpathia to hold their stories for "four figures." He said he had made an arrangement with a New York paper for them to sell their personal stories and had sent the message to the "boys" informing them of that fact.

Sammis resented bitterly the imputation that he had been the cause of suppressing the news from the Carpathia, which he said had resulted in neighbors "pointing the finger of scorn" at him. He said he told the Carpathia's wireless operators to hold their personal stories for sale, in order to furnish a reward for them.

"I did not send the messages directly," said Sammis. "I telephoned to Mr. Davidson, in charge of the wireless station, and instructed him to tell the boys that arrangements were made to care for them. I thought it would brace them up."

Sammis said the arrangement to "care for the operators" was made by Marconi and Bottomley, the general manager, and that he merely had carried out the plan as described. He said he went to the Strand hotel to meet Operator Cottam, but failed to get in touch with him. The operators, he said, each got $750 for the stories.

"Did you get any part of that?" asked Senator Smith.

"Absolutely nothing," replied the witness, who added that no other official of the American Marconi company received anything.

Sammis said the international telegraph convention had already gone on record as putting news dispatches last on the list of wireless business as to precedence, putting ship positions first, general business, passenger business and others anead. Sammis declared that Bride and Cottam, operators on the Carpathia, should not be blamed for not sending news of the ship.

"If there is any blame," said Sammis, "it should be upon the captain of the Carpathia. The captain of a ship is censor for all wireless messages sent from the ship. The operators are there to send and receive. They send nothing that the captain does not pass on."

Sammis said that American wireless operators on board ship receive $45 a month. The English operators get £4 a month. The senator led Sammis into a long discussion of the rate of operators' wages.

CONVENTION PLANS HALT

Republican Officers' Slate Is Not Yet Made Up

Washington, April 30.—No steps looking to what the politicans call the "manning" of the Republican national convention have yet been taken. The convention will meet seven weeks from today. Who will be the temporary chairman, who will be called to serve as permanent chairman, who will head the committee on platform, and the character of platform to be adopted, are questions that have received but scant consideration up to this time.

The committee on convention arrangements, of which Harry S. New is chairman, will in due time perfect convention plans. This committee will not be in a hurry to make the final arrangements because it desires to know, if possible, whether Taft or Roosevelt will control the convention.

The members of this sub-committee of the national committee are now confident that the president will be in control of the convention, but they want to be certain of this before proceeding to provide for the placing of Taft men in all the responsible places that are to be filled.

It has always been the custom of the party to permit a president seeking a renomination to name the chief officers of the convention. In 1904, for instance, Roosevelt picked the temporary chairman of the national convention, the permanent chairman, designated the man to head the committee on resolutions, and really dominated the work of the convention from beginning to end.

President Taft is not inclined that way, and the probability is that he would waive aside an invitation from the sub-committee of the national committee to pick the officers of the convention. However, the courtesy of inviting him to name these officers will be extended by the committee on arrangements in case he shall have a clear majority of the delegates.

In case the convention should come on with the president and the former president in a neck-and-neck race for the nomination, the committee on arrangements would exercise its authority in providing for the temporary organization. This is to say this committee would, under such circumstances, provide for a temporary chairman, a temporary secretary, temporary sergeant-at-arms, etc. Whichever faction of the party controlled the convention would then choose the permanent officers. This whole situation is of importance to the party because, in the estimation of party men, the character of the keynote speech delivered by the permanent chairman of the convention has much to do with the success or failure of the campaign that is to follow the convention.

A situation like the present never before existed in the Republican party. There have been spirited contests in the past for the presidential nomination, but these contests did not involve the principles for which the party stood. In other words, the party, through its chosen representatives—the delegates to the convention—could make a platform on which any of the candidates for the nomination would run.

The present situation is unique. If, perchance, Roosevelt should be in control of convention he would, of course, have to have a platform that would fit his case. In the very nature of things his platform could not indorse the Republican national administration.

The prevailing view here now is that it will be a Taft convention from start to finish; that a Taft men will be temporary chairman, a Taft man permanent chairman and a Taft man at the head of the platform committee.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

MEMORIAL CHURCH.

At Memorial church, Sunday morning Rev. T. W. Davison spoke on the "Revolutionary Element in Christianity," saying in part:

The Founder of Christianity had divine intuition and saw the world in sunlight clearness. He saw it as it was with all the sin and selfishness as it existed. And He put His divine way of looking at things into the disciples and they saw the world as it was and also what it ought to be.

Christ sent those disciples into the world to change it, to revolutionize it and bring it to God's ideal. That task is ever before the Church of Christ.

"Be as modern as you will, as old fashioned as you please in theology the fact of a changed life exists. It is a revolution of character—a new purpose, a higher principle, a better way of living, and back of it has been God's Word and Spirit.

"But we find neutralizing influences that have to be overcome. Christian character is not ready-made, it means a struggle. Often we say—The good I would that I do not, and the evil I would not that I do.' Reformers, teachers and parents find the neutralizing influences at every turn. Look at things squarely and we find sentiment takes the place of the deed. We are satisfied by deceiving ourselves that we would if need be carry out the brotherhood idea. We put in place of temporal power today—social standing, and let liturgy take the place of life, and often neutralize the spiritual effect we hope to produce.

"I intend to speak tenderly when I use the name of mother, but fathers and mothers how often we neutralize all the teachings we give our children by our own carelessness, and lack of Christian and moral aggressiveness.

"Has Christianity lifted woman to be the equal and companion of man? Has it made our homes more sacred, and emphasized the sancity of marriage. Has Christianity changed parents from selfish despots to loving protectors? Has the Church warred against vice, slavery and sin? Is it too much to say that where men are redeemed from sin, Christianity has been their redemption?

"Our little systems have their day, but God is the God and father of all and will yet turn multitudes to the right way of life."

The Sunday school is beginning early to think of its picnic. Mr. Cummings has appointed a committee to see if cars may be had on the 17th of June. A committee has also been chosen to decide where the picnic will be held. These committees will report Sunday. Mr. Blake's idea in making the plans so early is so that a larger number may go. It is expected 400 will enjoy the picnic this year.

Sunday, May 12th is to be observed as Mothers' day in Memorial church. The monthly concert of the Sunday school will be held on that Sunday instead of the first Sunday of the month, as usual. Miss Margaret Read, Miss Mabel Cheney and Miss Marion Newcombe, are in charge of this concert.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL

A large audience attended service Sunday morning at the Wollaston Congregational, the weather and other conditions being the best. The music was thoroughly good. Miss Ruth Hardy, the regular soprano rendered the solo, and chose "Jerusalem thou that killest the Prophets" which she gave in good voice and excellent taste.

The Rev. Edward Norton chose as the theme for his direct and searching discourse at the Wollaston Congregational church on Sunday morning, "The Tendency of Life to Fixity," drawn from the text, "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? Then may ye also do good, that are accustomed to do evil."Jeremiah 13-23. He said in brief:—"Out of the experience of life as I have found it to be, across the years, I am urged to speak to you concerning the vivid picture presented by the Prophet, of the fixity of Life, the bondage of habit. Life is a bundle of habits; the thing that has been, is likely to be. Man's thoughts form a trunk line of action, and man's life becomes settled within its course. It were well then to take heed to the apostle's admonition, whatsoever things are true whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

"It should startle one into serious thought to contemplate how history, observation, experience, logic, all teach the almost impossible task of changing that which has become fixed in its course or habit. Men who have been trained step by step from boyhood in one business, cannot change in later life into another. The frontiers—men of the early years of our national growth were recruited almost wholly from men of 40 years and younger; the older men could not uproot the fixed habits of years and transplant them to new surroundings. The manners and customes inherent in a race or people exist through centuries.

Hence the lesson arises—point your life as you want it to go in the beginning. Lay your rails as you wish your life to run,—there is no allusion more fatal than to imagine that you can change them at will. Character cannot be changed as easily as a coat. For the few who have done so there are thousands who have failed. And yet there is hope for those who realize that the rails are not laid right. Christ stood before Saul of Tarsus and transformed the fixed Pharisee to the humble disciple. He stands before every soul and points the way to better living.

A large number gathered at the Christian Endeavor service at 6 o'clock which was in charge of Miss Marion Farwell, subject "A Bird's Eye View of Home Missions." Mrs. Ida Vose Woodbury gave a very interesting talk on the work of the American Missionary Association from Alaska to Porto Rico saying in part:

"Wherever there is a depressed American anywhere in this great country there goes the American Missionary Association. It follows the flag. It is always necessary to send a missionary to a new country because the white trader gets there first with his whiskey, That was what caused Thornton's death in Alaska.

She also spoke of the wonderful work and sacrifice of Frank Cross, whose name, she said, should be placed high on the roll of martyrs. She told of work among the Indians and vividly described a sewing and missionary meeting held by the women of the Sioux and sang "The Morning Light is Breaking" in the language of the Dakota Indians.

She said the Congregationalists are trying to solve the problem of the negro in the South by Christian education which leads to salvation.

The Sunday school attendance is constantly increasing under the direction of C. A. Randall. Miss Helen Seavey presides at the piano.

The Men's club has held its last meeting for the winter season and elected the following officers to guide their affairs for the fall and winter: President—W. A. Mann; vice president—Theodore C. DuPlessis; secretary,—L. L. Titus; treasurer—F. L Eastman. The club members number nearly 75. President Mann intends to increase this to 100 before 1913 arrives.

FIRST UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

The pastor spoke from the words found in John VI:38, and showed the clear conception which Christ had of the work which the Father had given him to do. Attendance fair.

There was a large attendance at the Sabbath school.

The Young People had a good meeting just before the regular evening service.

At the evening service the pastor spoke on:—"The Quarrel between Jacob and Laban, and how it was settled." The choir did their part well and the attendance was very good. Next Sabbath the evening service will begin at 7.30.

WOLLASTON M. E.

At the First Methodist Episcopal church Rev. Wesley Wiggin, the pastor spoke on "Chosen Vessels." He said in part: "The christian man shall be a vessel unto honor if he meets the conditions specified in Paul's instruction to Timothy. Christians are God's chosen vessels to bear his message of salvation to the unsaved world. Paul is setting forth to Timothy the conditions on which one may live a useful life; the characteristics necessary that God may use us to the best advantage.

"Paul's instructions to Timothy were wisely given. He exhorts him to be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. To endure hardness as a good soldier. He urged him to study to show himself approved of God, a workman that needeth not be ashamed rightly dividing the word of truth. He says: 'The Lord knoweth them that are his. And let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from unrighteousness.'

"Now in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and silver, but also of wood and of earch, and some to honor and some to dishonor; If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honor, sanctified, and meet for the master's use and prepared unto every good work. But flee youthful lust and follow after righteousness, faith, love, peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart.

"The first essential for a vessel of honor is that it be clean and ready for use. That it be clean, is of more importance than anything else. If we were to give a drink of water to a traveller or a caller we would see to it that the vessel we took from the shelf was clean. We would pass over the beautiful chased cup for a common earthen mug or even a tin dipper if it were clean and the other were unclean..

"So Christ will gladly use us for his service though we be but common ware if we are clean in heart and life and ready for service. 'Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God.' Purity of heart and life are essential if we would be our best for God. If we only try to do our part though it is small we shall not be without His skill and infinite help."

The Sunday school hour found a large number present for the study of the lesson on the Beatitudes. The Royal Daughters had the largest number present and the Wiggin class was well attended. Quite a number of new names were added to the roll. The Junior League was in charge of Miss Marion Nevers the Deaconess and as usual was full of interest with new members to be added. Walter Sutermeister led the Epworth League service at 6 o'clock at the close of which Miss Rena M. Chamberlin, the first vice president gave a very helpful and instructive talk on Church history. A. F. Bromley, secretary of the Y. M. C. A led the praise service at 7 o'clock which was greatly enjoyed by all present. The soloist was also enjoyed. The pastor spoke on Things Spiritual.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

The Sunday school met at 12.15 with Elford L. Durgan superintendent in charge. 297 were in the main school and 79 in the primary department. The adult men and women's classes were well attended.

At 7 o'clock the pastor preached to a good audience in the auditorium subject "Things upon which to place Emphasis."

Wednesday afternoon at 4, the pastor's second class in the Fundamental Principles of the Christian Faith, will meet at the home of Mr and Mrs. H. J. Grass, 52 Ardell street Montclair.

Friday evening at 7.45 the monthly Covenant meeting of the church will be held in the chapel. Subject: "The Christian's Walk," Eph. chapters 4 and 5.

THE TELEPHONE AND ITS GROWTH

Interesting Talk Before Walther and Rand Classes

ITS OPERATION

At a joint social meeting of the Walther and Rand Men's classes in the chapel of the Wollaston Baptist church Monday evening, William C. Bamburgh, publicity manager of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company delivered an illustrated talk on the "Telephone."

An interesting introduction was given the speaker by John L. Miller, president of the Walther class. Mr. Miller told of a visit to the home and laboratory of Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, at Badeck, Cape Breton, and of the interesting conversation he had with the great discoverer.

Mr. Bamburgh opened his lecture with a review of the life and work of Alexander Graham Bell. The inventor was a teacher of acoustics and a student of electricity. The only telephone line in the world in 1876 was between the Charles Williams' workshop in Boston to Mr. Williams' home in Somerville. From this small beginning the telephone has grown in favor until there are now over 10 million telephones in the world.

The investment in the telephone business in the United States amounts to over a billion dollars and half a billion in Europe, Canada and elsewhere. Fourteen billion messages are sent annually over seventeen and one-half million miles of wire, the longest distance at present available being from New York to Omaha, New York to San Francisco being a near possibility.

The speaker's talk dealt intimately with the company's work and the process in use, from the time one takes the receiver off the hook until the call is completed, was related. Difficult telephone construction was touched on and interesting views shown of this.

The various plants and buildings of the company were shown and the speaker closed with a description of conditions in Quincy and exterior and interior views of the local exchange.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

At the morning service Rev. Carl G. Horst read Helen Hunt Jackson's exquisite little poems entitled "One Day at a Time" and took for his text "Be sure your sin will find you out."—Numbers 32, 33, his theme being "The Punishment of Sin." He said: We shall reap what we sow. We need not expect the harvest to be better or different than the seed sown. The harvest always answers to the kind of seed planted and we need not look for a harvest in fall where no planting was done in the spring. Whatsoever a man soweth, that and not something else, he must also reap. This is true of the moral as well as the material world. God's rewards and punishments are never arbitrary. In fact there are no such things as reward or punishment for anything in the arbitrary sense in which these words are ordinarily used. There are only results good or bad. If I obey the laws of health I am not arbitrarily rewarded by God by being well. Obeying the laws of health naturally results in my being well. The old theology said you will be damned for your sins, modern science says "Your sins kill your body and soul here and now, and will blight the bodies and souls of your descendants."What a man does instantly reacts upon his nature. The effect of sin is not something which happens to a man but in a man. The moral and spiritual condition of a man determine most accurately what he is and whether he is tending toward or away from salvation. It is our privilege here and now to lay up treasures which moth and rust cannot corrupt and which thieves cannot steal. When we pass through the gate of death it will matter little to us whether or not our name had a place in Bradstreet's, but it will be of the utmost importance to us whether or not our name is in the great book of life. God grant that we may be found worthy of a place in the Kingdom of God.

NATION'S EYES ON BAY STATE

Politicians Are Anxiously Awaiting Result of Primaries

CONTEST CONSIDERED CLOSE

Nomination of Taft or Roosevelt May Be Decided by Today's Vote—Tremendous Crowds Turn Out to Meet Both Candidates In Their Whirlwind Ending of Campaign—Wilson Shows Gains Over Clark by His Appearance Upon the Stump—Democratic Ballot Confusing

Boston, April 30.—Massachusetts is holding its first presidential primary today. The attention of the entire country is focussed on the results in this state.

The choice of the Republican voters as expressed in the preferential vote for President Taft and Theodore Roosevelt will be considered to have a decisive effect on the great contest.

Not in the history of American politics has such a unique spectacle been presented as yesterday, when Taft and Roosevelt toured the state in a final appeal to the voters. Tremendous crowds turned out to meet both candidates.

Both Taft and Roosevelt attacked each other bitterly. Roosevelt referred to the president as a "progressive who is dead," and Taft warned his audiences to "beware the man who in seeking votes seeks to array class against class."

No such desperate fight has been conducted in any other state. It is generally conceded that should Taft lose Massachusetts, representing all that it does in the nation, that either he cannot be nominated at the Chicago convention or that his nomination will be worthless.

Of the thirty-six delegates to be chosen to each of the two conventions, eight will be chosen at large and two from each of the fourteen congressional districts.

The appearance of Governor Wilson on the stump in this state in the closing days of the campaign had added interest to the Democratic contest, which threatened to be completely overshadowed by the fight between Taft and Roosevelt. The Democrats of the state will have an opportunity to express a preference for president as between Wilson and Champ Clark.

Both the big contests are close. There is no question but that Roosevelt has developed great strength in the state during the past two weeks of the campaign. His strength grew to such proportions that the Taft supporters called the president into the state twice in four days to stem the tide. Both sides express the utmost confidence in the results.

The fight for Wilson was made in the last week of the campaign, and there is no question but that he made tremendous gains throughout the state. The Clark forces have been working hard in the state for over three weeks.

At the state election last November 491,692 Democrats and Republicans voted, 214,897 of the former and 206,793 of the latter. About 50 percent of the Republicans and 20 percent of the Democrats are enrolled on the city and town lists for the primaries and unless they have given previous notice they cannot change their political alliegance today.

But of the 214,897 Democrats who voted for Governor Foss, 36,160 were Progressive Democrats and under a bill which became a law on last Saturday they have no enrollment and may vote either Republican or Democratic ticket today.

The same applies to those who did not attend the party primaries last fall which nominated Foss. But if they vote for either Taft or Roosevelt today they will become enrolled Republicans. Under the Masachusettts presidential preferential primary law, the state may show a preference for Roosevelt and yet choose a pledged Taft delegation.

The Taft ticket for delegates-at-large is headed by Senator Crane and numbers such prominent men as former Governor Bates, Lucius Tuttle, former president of the Boston and Maine; Congressman Weeks and Samuel J. Elder, a member of the fisheries commission to The Hague.

Politically, Charles S. Baxter, who heads the Roosevelt ticket, is very prominent, since he has been actively in the gubernatorial fights of the last few years, having managed the campaigns of former Lieutenant Governor Frothingham. Professor Albert B. Hart of Harvard is also on the Roosevelt ticket, as is George W. Coleman and Senator Nason.

In practically every district in the state the candidates on the Taft ticket are better known than the candidates on the Roosevelt. For this reason there is a possibility of a preference vote for Roosevelt and a majority of Tafe delegates.

Should this happen it would raise an interesting question as to the course to be pursued at the convention by the delegates.

The Democratic ballot is rather confusing. Although the names of Wilson and Clark are on the ballot to be voted upon, with the exception of Henry F. Burt of Taunton, who is pledged to Governor Wilson, none of the other candidates is pledged to either candidate for president.

The ticket supported by the Democratic state organization is headed by National Committeeman Coughlin of Fall River. Prominent with him on the slate are David I. Walsh of Clinton and Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston.

The organization ticket, headed by Coughlan, is pledged to Governor Foss. Since Foss withdrew his name from the ballot, however, if elected this pledge will have no force. Under the law it was found impossible to remove the pledge when Foss withdrew.

Practically every candidate on the Democratic end has stated that he will abide by the decision expressed by the voters, as between Clark and Wilson.

The Democratic state organization and the Wilson forces have concentrated in an effort to defeat George F. Williams, who is running independent, but favors Clark. The vote received by Williams will consequently be of great interest, as compared with that received by Coughlin, who is heading the organization ticket.

The vote which ex-Congressman Keliher will receive in Boston as compared with the vote received by Fitzgerald will also be of interest, in view of the former's mayoralty aspirations.

About 80 percent of the 353 cities and towns will hold evening caucuses, so that the result may not be definitely decided until Wednesday.

STROSNIDER FREED ON $13,500 BONDS

He Pleads Not Guilty to Conspiracy to Defraud

Boston, April 30.—James, alias "Big Lem," Strosnider, alias Sterling, has been released on $13,500 bail. This amount was furnished by the National Security company and includes $10,500 furnished on two indictments against him in the superior court and $2500 in the municipal court, where he is charged with being a fugitive from justice.

Strosnider is under indictment for conspiracy to defraud Samuel Buttner, a dealer in metals, out of $7500.

In the second indictment Strosnider, together with two other men, is charged with conspiracy to defraud Rockwood D. Snow of Pelham, N. H., out of $6000 by means of a wire tapping scheme. On this charge he was held in $500. He pleaded not guilty to all the charges.

THE MONEY TRUST INQUIRY

Committee Has Lost No Time In Getting Down to Business

Washington, April 30.—The "money trust" inquiry has begun in earnest. This fact is testified to by the score of girls and boys who fill the rooms of the house committee on banking and currency, folding and mailing to nearly 30,000 banks and trust companies the sheets devised by Representative Pujo and his assistants to obtain financial information. These blanks, it is expected, will be filled out and returned by May 15, tabulated immediately on adding machines, and a comprehensive preliminary report based thereon.

The treasury department, with various officials of which the investigating committee has been in consultation, is co-operating with the expectation that information will be collected which will supplement that concerning the national banks now on file.

When the eight blank forms are filled out the committee expects to be able to know—what has never been known before—exactly the kind of control which the reserve banks exercise over the little country banks.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGED

Chauffeur Who Ran Down and Killed Two Men Held In $10,000

Boston, April 30.—John A. Malloy, a chauffeur, of Cambridge, was arraigned in the municipal court, charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Thomas Donohue and John Connolly early Saturday morning. The case was continued until May 7 and Malloy was held in $10,000.

It was charged that while Malloy was driving his automobile at a high rate of speed along Boylston street he struck Donohue and Connolly, who were employed by the Elevated road in repairing the tracks, with the result that both men died shortly afterward.

Donohue leaves a wife and seven children. Connolly was unmarried.

Death of Admiral Prime

Huntington, N. Y., April 30.—Rear Admiral Ebenezer S. Prime, U. S. N., retired, died at his home here, at the age of 65, from a complication of diseases. He was born in this village.

Tap Lines Not Common Carriers

Washington, April 30.—Tap lines are not common carriers. That, in general effect, is the decision of the interstate commerce commission, handed down after an investigation of more than a year.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

BREAKFAST GEMS.

THESE hot breads are served for breakfast, baked in special gem pans. They are made very much like muffins.

Graham flour, rice flour, oatmeal, rye and gluten flour may all be used. The gem pans should be heated and well greased before pouring the batter into them.

Health Gems.

Oatmeal Gems.—Soak a cupful of oatmeal in water overnight or for several hours. When you are ready to mix the gems sift together a cupful of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a little salt. Then mix flour and oatmeal together, using sweet milk to form a batter. Drop into gem pans and bake.

Rye Gems.—Sift together three-quarters of a cupful of rye flour with a quarter of a cupful of wheat flour and a saltspoonful of salt. Beat the yolks of two eggs. Add to them a cupful of milk and a tablespoonful of sugar. Stir this with the flour and turn in the whites of the eggs beaten stiff. Bake in cups or iron gem pans. These proportions are for six gems.

Whole Wheat Gems.—Mix two cupfuls of whole wheat flour, half a teaspoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of sugar. Stir into a cupful of sweet milk the beaten yolks of two eggs and a cupful of water. Add these to the flour, stirring all together. Beat the whites of two eggs until they are stiff and add to the batter. Drop into very hot gem pans which have been well greased and bake for thirty minutes.

With Chopped Fruit.

Cornmeal Gems.—Measure two cupfuls of cornmeal into a bowl. Make a hole in the center of the meal and put two ounces of butter there. Pour over the butter a cupful of boiling milk. Stir these together and then add a cupful of cold milk, three eggs well beaten, salt to taste and a cupful of flour. Beat these ingredients well and then add two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Drop into greased gem pans and bake in a hot oven for half an hour.

Graham and Date Gems.—These delicious little gems are made as follows: Beat the yolks of three eggs and add them to a pint of milk. Then stir in a cupful of boiled rice, a teaspoonful of salt, three cupfuls of graham flour and a tablespoonful of melted butter. Beat all these well together. Then mix with the batter half a cupful of chopped dates, the whites of three eggs beaten light and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in gem pans in a quick oven. Thirty minutes are required.

SOME DELICIOUS CORN BREADS.

LIKE all corn foods, corn bread is rich in nitrogen and in fats. That is why we eat it in cold weather or in the spring.

Cornmeal, as you know, does not keep very well and is therefore best bought in small quantities and kept in an air tight vessel until used.

Persons with weak digestions should avoid corn bread. It is only for those with robust digestions.

It is served hot from the oven, and if you wish to add to the attractiveness of its appearance it may be baked in small, square pans about the size of the pieces served to each person. Then the cake need not be cut when it comes to the table.

Pour the batter in the pans to the depth of about an inch and a half.

Crisp and Golden.

Good corn bread is a rich golden brown. It has a crust which is sweet and crisp yet not hard.

Every cook has her own idea of the proper way of making corn bread, but the methods are all about the same. Some cooks think it should be baked only with buttermilk. Others vow allegiance to sour milk. It is pretty safe where a corn bread recipe calls for one of these liquids to substitute the other if it is more convenient.

Buttermilk Corn Bread.—Take a pint of sifted flour, a quart of white cornmeal, a quart of buttermilk, a cupful of butter, three eggs, a teaspoonful of soda and two teaspoonfuls of salt.

Sift flour, salt and soda together. Mix with the cornmeal and after beating the eggs stir them in. Then add the buttermilk. Melt the butter, and just before pouring the batter into well heated bread pans add it to the batter. Bake in a moderate oven for half an hour.

Nice and Light.

Sweet Milk Corn Bread.—Take a cupful of sifted cornmeal, a cupful and a half of milk, a tablespoonful of butter, two eggs, a teaspoonful of baking powder, a teaspoonful of sugar and a little salt.

Scald the milk. Pour it on the cornmeal, stirring the two together. When cool add the melted butter, sugar, salt, baking powder and the yolks of the eggs. Stir together quickly, and then fold in the whites of the eggs, which have been well beaten.

Bake for a half hour in a hot oven. Use a flat pan for this.

FEARED ELECTRIC CHAIR

Musician Takes Own Life After Murdering His Wife

New York, April 30.—Albert de Brahms, a restaurant orchestra leader, after killing his wife in jealous anger on Saturday and apparently making every preparation to dismember the body and ship it away in a trunk, which he had ordered the same day, committed suicide in his apartments.

"I don't want to die in the electric chair, so I take my own life," he wrote in one of three farewell notes, confessing his crime.

The body of his wife, a handsome woman of 30, was found in a bathtub in the apartments, packed in sawdust and plaster of paris, a bullet hole through the temple, and knife wounds in the throat and other parts of the body.

De Brahms' body was found, still warm, hanging in a closet with a cord around the neck and a bullet in the head.

NO FURTHER LENIENCY

France Intends to Drive All Anarchists From Her Boundaries

Paris, April 30.—The police department is amazed at the recent discovery of the large number of anarchists who have taken refuge in Paris from all the countries of Europe. These will now be arrested and driven from France as enemies of society.

The funeral of Assistant Superintendent Jouin of the Paris detective department, who was shot dead while endeavoring to arrest Bonnot, the "demon chauffeur," took place yesterday.

Louis Lepine, prefect of police, at the graveside delivered a remarkable appeal for the more severe punishment of criminals. He declared that there was a tendency throughout the world to treat youthful wrongdoers leniently on the grounds that they were not responsible for their acts and this tendency was creating a great menace to the security of the people.

"In the sinkholes of Paris we have masses of criminals who have been punished enough to make them the enemies of law and order and not punished enough to keep them from warring against the authorities. We must choose between the sacrifice of the liberty of the criminal and the blood of men valiantly laboring for the protection of society."

CHAPTER XXXII.

The Judge's Grandson.

In that bare upper room they had shared, the judge, crushed and broken, watched beside the bed on which the dead man lay; unconscious of the flight of time he sat with his head bowed in his hands, having scarcely altered his position since he begged those who carried Mahaffy up the narrow stairs to leave him alone with his friend.

He was living over the past. He recalled his first meeting with Mahaffy in the stuffy cabin of the small river packet from which they had later gone ashore at Pleasantville; he thanked God that it had been given him to see beneath Solomon's forbidding exterior and into that starved heart! He reviewed each phase of the almost insensible growth of their intimacy; he remembered Mahaffy's fine true loyalty at the time of his arrest—he thought of Damon and Pythias—Mahaffy had reached the heights of a sublime devotion; he could only feel ennobled that he had inspired it.

At last the dusk of twilight invaded the room. He lighted the candles on the chimneypiece, then he resumed his seat and his former attitude. Suddenly he became aware of a small hand that was resting on his arm and glanced up; Hannibal had stolen quietly into the room. The boy pointed to the still figure on the bed.

"Judge, what makes Mr. Mahaffy lie so quiet—is he dead?" he asked in a whisper.

"Yes, dear lad," began the judge in a shaking voice, as he drew Hannibal toward him, "your friend and mine is dead—we have lost him." He lifted the boy into his lap, and Hannibal pressed a tear-stained face against the judge's shoulder. "How did you get here?" the judge questioned gently.

"Uncle Bob fetched me," said Hannibal. "He's down-stairs, but he didn't tell me Mr. Mahaffy was dead."

"We have sustained a great loss, Hannibal, and we must never forget the moral grandeur of the man. Some day, when you are older, and I can bring myself to speak of it, I will tell you of his last moments." The judge's voice broke, a thick sob rose chokingly in his throat. "Poor Solomon! A man of such tender feeling that he hid it from the world, for his was a rare nature which only revealed itself to the chosen few he honored with his love." The judge lapsed into a momentary brooding silence, in which his great arms drew the boy closer against his heart. "Dear lad, since I left you at Belle Plain a very astonishing knowledge has come to me. It was the Hand of Providence—I see it now—that first brought us together. You must not call me judge any more; I am your grandfather—your mother was my daughter."

"Do You Mean We Ain't Going to Be Pore Any Longer, Grandfather?"

Hannibal instantly sat erect and looked up at the judge, his blue eyes wide with amazement at this extraordinary statement.

"It is a very strange story, Hannibal, and its links are not all in my hands, but I am sure because of what I already know. I, who thought that not a drop of my blood flowed in any veins but my own, live again in you. Do you understand what I am telling you? You are my own dear little grandson—" and the judge looked down with no uncertain love and pride into the small face upturned to his.

"I am glad if you are my grandfather, judge," said Hannibal very gravely. "I always liked you."

"Thank you, dear lad," responded the judge with equal gravity, and then as Hannibal nestled back in his grandfather's arms a single big tear dropped from the end of that gentleman's prominent nose.

"There will be many and great changes in store for us," continued the judge. "But as we met adversity with dignity, I am sure we shall be able to endure prosperity with equanimity—only unworthy natures are affected by what is at best superficial and accidental. I mean that the blight of poverty is about to be lifted from our lives."

"Do you mean we ain't going to be pore any longer, grandfather?" asked Hannibal.

The judge regarded him with infinite tenderness of expression; he was profoundly moved.

"Would you mind saying that again, dear lad?"

"Do you mean we ain't going to be pore any longer, grandfather?" repeated Hannibal.

"I shall enjoy an adequate competency which I am about to recover. It will be sufficient for the indulgence of those simple and intellectual tastes I propose to cultivate for the future." In spite of himself the judge sighed. This was hardly in line with his ideals, but the right to choose was no longer his. "You will be very rich, Hannibal. The Quintard lands—your grandmother was a Quintard—will be yours; they run up into the hundred of thousands of acres hereabout; this land will be yours as soon as I can establish your identity."

"Will Uncle Bob be rich too?" inquired Hannibal.

"Certainly. How can he be poor when we possess wealth?" answered the judge.

"You reckon he will always live with us, don't you, grandfather?"

"I would not have it otherwise. I admire Mr. Yancy—he is simple and direct, and fit for any company under heaven except that of fools. His treatment of you has placed me under everlasting obligations; he shall share what we have. My one bitter, unavailing regret is that Solomon Mahaffy will not be here to partake of our altered fortunes." And the judge sighed deeply.

"Uncle Bob told me Mr. Mahaffy got hurt in a duel, grandfather?" said Hannibal.

"He was as inexperienced as a child in the use of firearms, and he had to deal with scoundrels who had neither mercy nor generous feeling—but his courage was magnificent."

Presently Hannibal was deep in his account of those adventures he had shared with Miss Betty.

"And Miss Malroy—where is she now?" asked the judge, in the first pause of the boy's narrative.

"She's at Mr. Bowen's house. Mr. Carrington and Mr. Cavendish are here too. Mrs. Cavendish stayed down yonder at the Bates' plantation. Grandfather, it were Captain Murrell who had me stole—do you reckon he was going to take me back to Mr. Bladen?"

"I will see Miss Malroy in the morning. We must combine—our interests are identical. There should be hemp in this for more than one scoundrel! I can see now how criminal my disinclination to push myself to the front has been!" said the judge, with conviction. "Never again will I shrink from what I know to be a public duty."

A little later they went down-stairs, where the judge had Yancy make up a bed for himself and Hannibal on the floor. He would watch alone beside Mahaffy, he was certain this would have been the dead man's wish; then he said good night and mounted heavily to the floor above to resume his vigil and his musings.

BEEF AT TOP NOTCH

At Highest Price in New York In More Than Thirty Years

New York, April 30.—The wholesale price of beef advanced here a cent a pound to a higher record than any year since 1881. A carcass of native corn-fed beef was quoted at Wallabout market in Brooklyn at a top figure of 13 cents, which old-timers agreed was the highest price in over thirty years.

The wholesalers' explanation of the cause of high prices is the scarcity of cattle, the cost of feed and the fact that it is a between-season period.

It is also asserted that 10 percent of the stock in the west was killed by the incessant cold of the past winter. The wholesalers anticipate a still further advance in prices and retailers declare themselves much alarmed over the situation.

JUMPS FROM BIPLANE

Morton Sails 2600 Feet In Hair-Raising Parachute Performance

Los Angeles, Cal., April 30.—William M. Morton made a parachute jump from an aeroplane at a height of 2600 feet at Venice. Morton was carried aloft by Phil Parmalee in a biplane.

When the proper height was attained Morton jumped from the swiftly-moving biplane with the parachute bar in his hands.

He dropped 300 feet before the parachute opened. The parachute larded in electric wires. Morton dropped ten feet to the ground, slightly injuring himself.

LAUNCH OF THE JENKINS

New Destroyer Takes the Water on the Kennebec River

Bath, Me., April 30.—The torpedo boat destroyer Jenkins was launched here. The destroyer was christened with champagne by Miss Alice T. Jenkins of Washington, daughter of the late Rear Admiral Jenkins, in whose honor the ship was named.

The principal dimensions of the Jenkins are: Length over all, 293 feet 10½ inches; extreme beam, 26 feet 4½ inches; mean trial displacement, 742 tons, and mean trial draft, 8 feet 4 inches. The machinery will be capable of developing 10,000 shaft horsepower at a steam pressure of 240 pounds. The contract speed requirement is 29½ knots.

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

DEADLOCK WILL BE BROKEN THIS WEEK

Belief That Coal Miners and Operators Will Agree

Philadelphia, April 30.—The deadlock between the anthracite coal mine workers and the operators is expected to end with the close of the present week. The full committee of ten operators and ten miners will meet in New York on Thursday to receive the report of the sub-committee, which has reached an agreement on all grievances.

This report is expected to be approved by the general committee, as it is not believed the sub-committee would reach an agreement on differences that it did not know the general committe would accept. While the details of the agreement have not been made public, it is known that the men have been granted a 10 percent increase in wages in addition to other concessions.

Yesterday marked the beginning of the fifth week of the suspension, and the 170,000 men are said to be anxious to get back to work.

RIGHTS OF WOMAN.

The Rights of Women, what are they?
The Right to labor, love and pray;
The Right to weep with those that weep;
The Right to wake when others sleep.

The Right to dry the falling tear,
The Right to quell the rising fear;
The Right to smooth the brow of care,
And whisper comfort in despair.

The Right to watch the parting breath,
To soothe and cheer the bed of death;
The Right, when earthly hopes all fall,
To point to that within the Veil.

The Right the wanderer to reclaim,
And win the lost from paths of shame;
The Right to comfort and to bless;
The widow and the fatherless!

The Right the little ones to guide,
In simple faith, to Him who died;
With earnest love and gentle praise
To bless and cheer their youthful days.

The Right the intellect to train
And guide the soul to noble aim;
Teach it to rise above earth's toys,
And wing its flights to heavenly joys.

The Right to live for those we love,
The Right to die, that love to prove;
The Right to brighten earthly homes
With pleasant smiles and gentle tones.

Are these thy Rights? Then use them well.
Their holy influence none can tell.
If these are thine, why ask for more?
Thou hast enough to answer for!

Are these thy Rights? Then murmur not
That woman's mission is thy lot,
Improve the talents God has given,
Life's duties done—thy rest in Heaven.
—Lawrence.

USES OF THE BIBLE.

A wee miss was visiting her young aunt who had just got married and gone to housekeeping in Boston. The little girl wandered over the new home, examining everything, and finally came back to her aunt, who was waiting for her report.

"Well, auntie, you seem to have about everything," she said. "But I have found one thing that is missing."

"What is it?" asked the aunt.

"A Bible," the little girl replied, soberly.

"A Bible?" questioned the aunt, to test the child's answer. "What would I want of a Bible?"

The little girl looked at her in wonder for a moment and then replied in a sober tone:

"To press flowers in, of course!"

HAS ENJOYABLE BIRTHDAY PARTY

One of the prettiest and most enjoyable birthday parties of the season was that of Miss Esther Helen Dasha of 372 Washington street on Saturday evening in observance of her eighteenth birthday. Miss Dasha entertained several of her friends at her home, vocal selections, games, dancing and refreshments being enjoyed. She received many gifts, among them being many bouquets of flowers.

Among the vocal selections was one by Miss Dasha and Ryder Gay which was well rendered,—it had to be repeated several times.

Fancy dancing by Miss Dasha, Miss Elsie Burrell, Starret White and Ryder Gay were enjoyable features of the evening.

Among those present were: Miss Dorothy Lowe, Miss Esther Beckford, Miss Elsie Burrell, Raymond Hall, Starret White, Ryder Gay and Roland Estey.

FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY

were made in other parts of the city thus drawing from the mother church. The half acre of land on which the church property stands was given by Joseph W. Robertson on condition that "it be forever used for religious purposes and upon ceasing to be used for said purpose it shall revert back to the original owner or his heirs."

The text of Father Kelley's first sermon was "And I, if I be lifted up, shall draw all men unto me."

The following pastors have held pastorates in the church during the forty years, from April 28, 1872 to April 28, 1912:

1872-1877—Samuel Kelley.
1878-1879—R. W. Harlow.
1880—S. W. Trousdale.
1881-1882—C. M. Westlate.
1883-1885—Franklin Furber.
1886-1888—Henry Dorr.
1889-1890—W. J. Pomfret.
1891—W. F. Lawford.
1892-1893—J. H. Humphrey.
1894—W. W. Baldwin.
1895-1896—E. W. Virgin.
1896-1898—A. A. Brown.
1899-1901—C. W. Wilder.
1902—John Peterson.
1903—D. L. Martin.
1904-1905—W. A. Mayo.
1906-1907—A. B. Tyler.
1908—G. O. Crosby.
1908-1911—C. H. Raupach.
1911-1912—Thomas C. Martin.

During the past year considerable money has been raised and several improvements made. The parsonage was painted in the spring of 1911, the men of the church giving their services. A debt of $370.00 was paid Oct. 1, 1911, at which time the "Mortgage Note" was burned. Since then a new bath room, a cement cellar and gas lights have been placed in the parsonage, and new curtains and song books have been purchased for the Sunday school room. Beside these improvements and outside of the regular current expenses, $102.00 have been contributed to benevolent purposes.

Sunday evening, Miss Elizabeth E. Springham, Reception Deaconess at the Deaconess Hospital, Boston, spoke to the young people at the Epworth League devotional services on the work of the Deaconess Training school, and at the regular evening service presented the cause of the Deaconess work. Miss Springham very ably presented this work and was thoroughly enjoyed, by all, and especially by those who have been privileged to hear her before when she has visited this church. A better knowledge of the greatness of this noble work has come to those who listened because of the practical knowledge of Miss Springham as a Deaconess and also because of the strong Christian personality of the speaker.

Commencing this week the prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening hereafter instead of Friday evening as before, in order to conform with the other Evangelical churches of the city.

Presesentation of Titanic Disaster Is Not Allowed In Boston

Boston, April 30.—Motion pictures of the Titanic disaster are taboped in the Boston motion picture theatres, according to an official announcement made by Mayor Fitzgerald.

The announcement was made after information reached the mayor's office that one of the motion picture houses had advertised pictures of the steamship Titanic striking an iceburg in mid-ocean, as well as the drowning of hundreds of its passengers who were unable to reach the lifeboats.

The mayor said that he would not tolerate the production of any pictures of the Titanic disaster in Boston, because the pictures are largely faked, and because no public good can be derived from the presentation of such a gruesome disaster.
